Doralie Lucas, Lucy Lee, Emily la Chapelle, Winifred Langlands, Alexandra M. Lindsay, Maureen Linehan, Ellen M. Looney, Thelma Livingstone, Roland Lewis, Florrie M. K. McMahon, Hubert H. Morris, Molly McCullough, Walter McIntyre, Elsie E. Mackie, Agnes F. Maxwell, Rotha M. Maiden, Elizabeth A. Motterhead, George E. Mason, Marjorie A. Mavecock, Annie M. Machon, Kitty M. Maher, Jean L. M. Mathieson, John Milne, Cecilia L. Mount, Edith S. Marshall, Teresa H. Morgan, Haydn C. Meredith, Katie L. Martin, Kathleen Mann, May M. Mills, Edith M. Mackrell, May I. Milne, Milly E. Munslow, Marjorie B. Morton, Edith Martin, Khys E. Morgan, Lorna Morris, Mollie McGoldrick, Alice F. Michael, Cecily Maher, Muriel Mitchell, Agnes G. Minchin, Gwendoline McLeod, Kathleen McDonald, Alice M. Marshall, Eileen MacLaren, Alice Martin, Nancie Monahan, Verna L. McGuffie, Olga Morgan, Ismay Mackey, Jessie R. McMichael, Myra Mertens, Helena McMahon, Vera McIntyre, Herbert W. Middleton, Vera Murray, Alma Moore, Jessie Marks, Sybil I. K. McIlvory, Violet McArthur, Gladys Macsord, Betty Miller, Olga Mills, Gladys Napper, Allen Noon, Elsie Nixon, Gwendoline I. Naismith, Mary E. V. Numan, Brighta L. Norman, Clara Nicholls, Charles Nobbs, Jessie M. Nobbs, Edna M. O'Brien, Ruby E. B. Orchard, Gerty Ogden, Lily Owen, Arthur J. Oakeley, Jane Y. Oswald, Margaret M. O'Byrne, Mary I. O'Dwyer, Bert Oxden, Frances O'Sullivan, Kathleen O'Rourke, Mary O'Donnell, Dorothy Olney, Eileen K. O'Callaghan, Alice O'Rourke, Kathleen O'Connor, Thelma Omant, Beryl O'Brien, Bertie Pierce, Alice Pictou, Daisy I. Peckham, Doris M. Parker, Dorothy K. Poole, Emily M. Parker, Lily M. Price, Annie B. A. Price, Gertrude Parry, Edith M. Plumb, Ruth E. Prince, Frederick Pilling, Elsie Parker, Kate Pullan, John S. Peacock, Evelyn Parnell, Lucy A. Pitt, Annie Price, Isabella Paterson, Elsie Pavne, Hilda F. Pointon, George A. Phillips, Isobel Pinnett, Mary F. Page, Agnes V. Pilkington, Helen Pitt, Norah Porter, Samuel J. Parkes, Douglas A. Powell, Gladys M. Peach, Vera C. Parroni, Thelma Powell, Philomena Pigott, Alice Pantou, Lily V. A. Purcell, Esther E. Philpott, Emily M. Plaisted, Margaret Page, Dorothy Pendergast, Hilda Passell, Annie Pola, Zelma Paynter, Dorothy Phillin, Doris A. Parker, Esme E. Paull, Isabel Peak, Marjorie Quigley, Marion D. Quick, Dorothea L. Reynolds, Gladys L. Rawle, Jennie G. Roberts, Alma P. Ruse, Ada M. Roscoe, Eleanor M. Robertson, Cicely Radford, Mary J. Robertson, Margaret H. Rees, Nellie Ridge-Reeves, Walter W. B. Roads, Gladys Rapley, Queenie Rochester, Clyde F. Rathbone, Doris Rowley, Lillian Robbins, Kathleen Ross, Ernest Roberts, Eunice Ross, Mona Redmond, Ivy M. Richards, Sarah Rayner, Hilda Rowe, Ida M. Rowley, Cissie Reid, Alfreda A. Randall, Olive E. Roe, Florence A. Rienits, Zilda L. Reilly, Catherine E. Rochester, Charles Stephens, Winifred A. Scott, Adelaide Swales, Irene M. Shoenack, Gladys Schofield, Gladys Sinkinson, Clara Stott, Harry Stone, Dorothy M. Sambrook, Marjory D. A. Smith, Jenny Stevenson, Milly Solomon, Harold Smers, Cecily F. M. Sibeon, Lavinia M. Stickings, Lena Staveley, Olive M. Symonds, Herbert O. Smetam, Ethel Stansfield, Phyllis, Starkie, Clara Sheldon, Doris Y. Stafford, Elizabeth H. Smith, Charlotte A. Sharpen, Frank Smith, Ethel R. Shakespeare, Thelma F. Sinclair, Agnes J. Stubbs, Agnes Shortill, Nora Scanlan, Kathleen Shortt, Amy Sergeant, Maggie Smythe, Mollie Smythe, Sadie Scott, Lucy Smith, Ethel P. Stephens, Thelma Seale, Grace Stanway, Mary E. Speedie, Thelma Shaw, Edna Sinclair, Eileen Salan, Doris Smith, Eva Stewart, Florence C. Stuart, Veronica M. Sheehan, Rose M. Savage, Harold A. Stead, Charles Smith, Bessie Stephen, Florence Schofield, Kathleen M. Strickland, Edith Stone, Ruth M. Stephens, Violet Tedd, Agnes Turner, Nancy Taylor, Gladys Tabiner, Agnes W. Todd, Sarah A. Turner, Eva B. Tomkinson, Enid Todd, Eugenie M. Truche, Eileen M. Tighe, Sadie Thomas, Marie Tomlinson, Grace Tallentire, Hilda Tomlinson, Hannah M. Thirlwell, Mabel Turner, Lorna Trist, Veronica Thomson, Nellie Travill, Lily Taylor, Rita Tassie, Doris J. Thomas, Maud M. Trahar, Jeanne Teychenne, Mary Trezise, Irene H. Thornton, Annie Taylor, Grace Tye, Iris Tyler, Allan Turner, Doris Upton, Wilfred R. Vaughan, Dorothea Vinnicombe, Marjorie Vale, Constance A. Warburton, Amy White, Albert Whittaker, Dorothy A. Walley, Dorothy M. Wootton, Edna V. M. Woodcock, Alice Ward, Lillian Williams, Thomas B. Wild, John W. Whittingham, Dorothy E. Warren, Arthur C. Watson, Mabel Weaver, Mary Vaughn, Enid M. Willson, Clarice Williams, Ienau Williams, Gladys Wilson, Margaret S. Waugh, Queenie V. M. Wightman, Edith M. Worboys, Ethel Walker, Bessie D. Whitelaw, Doris L. Wilson, Mary Weston, Freda I. Webb, John T. Wise, Joshua Warburton, Eva Wells, Myrtle Watson, Maude Wayman, Marguerite H. Wendt, Sheila Wallis, Thelma White, Violette C. Wade, Eva Woolf, Emily M. Webb, Ivy Watson, Jeanne Ward, Ermina R. Wildfong, Henrietta B. Watkin, Mary Wickes, Elsie E. Wadsworth, Ula V. Wenban, Nellie Wallace, Dorothy Westphall, Ellen Young, Mildred Young, Myrtle D. Young.

VIOLIN PLAYING.—Frederick W. C. Barker, William G. Brooks, Winifred A. Borland, Frank E. I. Bilbe, Jack Brinkler, Herma C. Barton, Jua Nita Carroll, George Clyde, Nellie Cowmeadow, Maisie B. Copeland, Myra A. Elliott, George Edwards, Albert E. Ford, Molly Fahey, Doris L. Grove, Vera Goldsworthy, Walter Howe, Gladys E. Hughes, May Jackson, Harry B. Knudson, Mabel B. Lipscombe, Norman Macfarlane, Eleanor E. Perkin, Jack Proudman, Thomas J. Riddell, Joseph Reilly, Thomas M. Ryan, Ellen N. Ross, Arthur J. Sindrey, Walter Stones, James Terry, Douglas Valentine, Robert H. Whitford.

SINGING.—Florence A. Allsopp, Frances E. Beattie, Hannah R. Bawden, Lottie H. Binney, Florence K. Bellairs, Nellie Basnett, Nellie Cookson, Margaret E. Crewther, Norah M. Fell, Annie F. E. Frost, Florence I. Fairmaner, Myra Godfrey, Mary O. R. Holmes, Thelma Hunter, Margaret M. Houlihan, Annie M. Ireland, Sarah J. Jones, Hilda M. Johnson, Margaret E. Jones, Marion C. Judson, Dorothy E. Jones, Ida W. Kelley, Ruth E. Lloyd, Theodore G. M. Leeson, Margaret M. McManamy, Minnie McDonald, Thelma C. Mann, Helene Morris, Nellie Nicholson, Gwendoline L. Naismith, Viola B. Parry, Doreen Poplar, William Roberts, Margaret Rowe, Maisie R. Ramsay, Gladys M. Street, Alicia Sullivan, Ruby C. H. Stevens, Beryl A. J. Stevens, Edwin J. Sansom, Winifred C. Samuels, Grace Tooby, Claude Williams, Eileen Waterston, Muriel E. G. White, Agnes M. E. Webb, Elizabeth Winfield, Lois M. E. Watson.

ORGAN PLAYING.—Gertrude L. Baden, John H. Collins, Charles H. Crawford, Leonard A. Dobson, Muriel A. Gale, Ellen N. Jeffrey James P. Mennie, Nettie Poole, William Shakespeare, Francis W. Turner, Thomas Woollett, Ernest H. Wright.

ELOCUTION.—Tom Atkinson, Florence N. H. Attack, Ida M. Blamey, May Beard, Gladys M. Brooks, Eva G. Blues, Eloise Bartels, Ellen P. Colclough, Lillian I. Coward, Maurya O. Deegan, Dorothy Dwyer, Alice Dawson, Lillian Evans, Blanche Edwards, Elizabeth B. Graham, Marie Garson, Edith A. Hall, Jeanne Hunter, William D. Harrup, Gladys G. Johnson, Gladys M. Jones, Hilda N. Jobling, Eunice K. Kennan, Edith T. Kerdell, Mabel Kitching, Isabel Lees, Nancie G. Millard, Elsie McLeod, Jean W. McEwen, Rita Mauger, Jessie M. Melvin, Lena E. Orchard, Mary Robinson, Verna I. Roennfeldt, Muriel Riley, Ivy W. Shields, Jane Stoker, Muriel Saxon, Hilda A. Sherwin, Lewis S. Saunders, Enid A. Torloff, Dorothy Turnbull, Amy E. Vickerman, Irene M. Veitch, Mabel F. Woodruff, Gertrude E. Weatherhead, Annie E. Wheelhouse, Mary R. White.

CLARINET PLAYING.—Hugh Carlo B. Roden. HARP PLAYING.—Elizabeth E. Parry. VIOLONCELLO PLAYING.—Doris Stonham.

DIPLOMAS IN THEORETICAL MUSIC.

FELLOWSHIP (F.L.C.M.)

Wilkinson Townsend.

LICENTIATES IN MUSIC (L. Mus. L.C.M.).

Ernest Edwin Huck, Nicholas Robins.

ASSOCIATES IN MUSIC (A. Mus. L.C.M.).

Henry D. Alexander, John W. Foulkes, Frederick Greenall, Isaac D. Loo, Dorothy Simpson, Sarah E. Wright.

* Gold Medalists.

† Silver Medalists.

The examiners were: Horton Allison, Esq., Mus. Doc. Dublin, Mus. Bac. Cantab., F.R.A.M.; Alfred W. Abdey, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.; Edward R. G. Andrews, Esq., Algenon Ashton, Esq., S. Bath, Esq., Mus. Doc. Dublin, Mus. Bac. Oxon., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.; Percy S. Bright, Esq., Mus. Bac. Lond., F.R.C.O.; Chas. T. Corke, Esq., Mus. Bac. Cantab., A.R.A.M.; H. Bromley Derry, Esq., Mus. Doc. Dublin, Mus. Bac. Oxon. et Dunelm., F.R.C.O.; Herbert J. Dawson, Esq., Mus. Bac. Cantab., L.R.A.M.; R. A. Ebdon, Esq., Mus. Bac. Oxon., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.; Frank Ellerton, Esq., Mus. Bac. Oxon., F.R.C.O.; W. O. Forsyth, Esq.; Leonard N. Fowles, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon.; David Gillam, Esq.; A. H. Howell, Esq.; Thomas Hassard, Esq., Mus. Bac. Oxon., F.R.C.O.; H. F. Henniker, Esq., Mus. Doc. Cantuar., A.R.A.M.; G. Augustus Holmes, Esq., Director of Examinations; George Herbert, Esq.; George Hooper, Esq., A.R.A.M.; D. J. Jennings, Esq., Mus. Doc. T.C.T.; Charles E. Jolley, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon.; F. J. Karn, Esq., Mus. Doc. F.R.C.O., A.R.A.M., Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Geo. F. King, Esq.; M. Kingston, Esq., Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Thomas W. Lardner, Esq., Mus. Bac. Oxon., A.R.A.M.; P. Planche-W. R. J. McLean, Esq., Mus. Bac. Dunelm.; D. J. Montague, Esq.; Thos. R. Mayne, Esq., Mus. Doc. R.U.I., M.A., L.R.A.M.; P. Plancher-Plummer, Esq.; G. D. Rawle, Esq., Mus. Bac. Lond.; Roland Rogers, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon.; J. Howlett Ross, Esq.; Reginald J. Shanks, Esq.; Percy L. Scaife, Esq., Mus. Bac. Dunelm., A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O.; Sydney Scott, Esq., Mus. Doc. Dublin, Mus. Bac. Oxon., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.; G. Gilbert Stocks, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.; C. Reginald Toms, Esq.; John Thornton, Esq.; W. E. Thomas, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon.; D. W. Vaughan, Esq.; Purcell Webb, Esq.; Harold E. Watts, Esq., Mus. Doc. Oxon.

There were 187 Candidates for Diplomas, of which number 1024 passed, 760 failed, and 33 were absent.

The HIGHER EXAMINATIONS for the DIPLOMAS of ASSOCIATE (A.L.C.M.) and LICENTIATE (L.L.C.M.) are held in London and at certain Provincial and Colonial centres in APRIL, JUNE, JULY, and DECEMBER; and for the DIPLOMAS of ASSOCIATE IN MUSIC (A.Mus.L.C.M.), LICENTIATE IN MUSIC (L.Mus.L.C.M.), the TEACHER'S DIPLOMA (I.C.M.), and FELLOWSHIP (F.L.C.M.) in JUNE, JULY, and DECEMBER.

The NEXT LOCAL EXAMINATION in all branches of music will be held in DECEMBER, the last day of entry being November 8. REPRESENTATIVES are required to form LOCAL CENTRES in vacant districts in Great Britain and all other parts of the world. Ladies or gentlemen willing to undertake the duties should apply to the Secretary. SCHOOL CENTRES may also be arranged. GOLD, SILVER, and BRONZE MEDALS and BOOK PRIZES are awarded at the Examinations in accordance with the printed regulations. Full details will be found in the Syllabus.

The TEACHING DEPARTMENT of the College provides COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION for Students, Amateur or Professional. PRIVATE LESSONS are given in Pianoforte, Singing, Violin, Harp, Organ, Harmony, Counterpoint, and Musical Composition. There are SPECIAL COURSES of TRAINING for Teachers of Music, and PROFESSIONAL COURSE for Pianists, Violinists, and Vocalists. Fine THREE-MANUAL ORGAN (39 stops) in the College Concert Hall, available for lessons and practice.

The College is open from 9.30 a.m. to 9 p.m. The staff consists of over 90 professors. THE ORCHESTRA, OPERA CLASS, LADIES' CHOIR, and STRING QUARTET CLASSES meet each week. Full Particulars of both Education and Examination Departments of the College, together with Syllabus and Forms of Entry can be had on application to A. GAMBIER HOLMES, Secretary.

Telephones: 3870 Central and 3948 Gerrard.

Telegrams: "Supertonic, Reg. London."

BECOME A GOOD PIANIST without constant "practising."

All drudgery is abolished when my System is used, and progress becomes rapid and certain. Advanced players improve without touching a piano, "average" become advanced in a few months, and the beginner soon "plays at sight" with pleasure. Equal success with all grades, for whom there are distinct Courses.

The System is a complete one of Touch and Technique, not one of finger gymnastics only. Command is given over trills, repeated chords, skips, and every technical difficulty, also Sight reading. Harmony is not taught. Pupils constantly express delight at the perfect control of the keyboard they now possess.

Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., has strongly recommended my System, the advantages of which, he stated, he could cordially endorse from his own personal experience. More than 12,000 successful students add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System
of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing," will be gladly sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying, please state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C. 1.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (Lond.); L.R.A.M.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
- (2) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (3) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (4) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. Degrees.
- (5) Musical Appreciation.

For terms, lists of successes, &c., address—

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.

A CORRESPONDENCE COURSE FOR TEACHERS

SPECIALLY ARRANGED BY

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING.

This Course is intended to serve as a guide to Teachers, either in their Class-Work, or in their private teaching.

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

MUS. BAC. DEGREE

COMPLETE POSTAL PREPARATION.

Latest Successes: 5 FIRST MUS. BAC.
5 FINAL MUS. BAC.
2 FINAL MUS. DOC.

THESE STUDENTS PASSED AT FIRST ATTEMPT.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING, Mus. Doc. (Lond.),
48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

THE ARUNDEL MALE-VOICE CHOIR.
VACANCIES for ALTOS and TENORS, also second basses, exceptional voices. Amateurs only. Nominal subscription. Rehearsals fortnightly: Tuesdays. Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street. All particulars of F. Harbridge Smith, 48, Stockwell Road, S.W.9.

MR. TRAVERS ADAMS returns thanks for letters.
Vocal Classes shortly resumed. Intending pupils will receive copy, gratis, of latest work, "Physical Development in Relation to Perfect Voice-Production." Apply, 158, Holland Park Avenue, W.11.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS CELIA DAVIES (SOPRANO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

54, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W. 1.

MISS GERTRUDE MACAULAY (CONTRALTO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

23, Hawley Place, London, W. 2.

JOHN MACLENNAN (TENOR VOCALIST).

Tele: Brixton 1702.

185, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W. 9

MOUNTFORD SCOTT (TENOR).

Assistant Vicar-Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral.

44, Cranbrook Park, Wood Green, N. 22.

MR. ERNEST A. FLAMBE (BASS).

Concerts, Oratorios, Receptions, &c.

"Judas Maccabæus," "Messiah," "Elijah," &c.

67, Ashbourne Avenue, Mitcham, Surrey.

OSWALD PEPPERCORN (VOICE SPECIALIST).

Singing, Elocution, and Breathing.

Write for free audition, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W. 1.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O.,
A.R.C.M. (Double Dip.), L.R.A.M. (Double Dip.), Class A.

COMPLETE TRAINING BY CORRESPONDENCE:—

Courses of "Singing Papers," "Form and Teaching," "Touch," and "Accompaniment"; also, "The Art of Teaching."

Over 500 Successes at Exams.

"Recitative and its Rendering," 1/6. "The Singer's Vade Mecum," 6d.
Prospectus and particulars, 21, Boundary Rd., St. John's Wood, N.W. 8.

IDA COOPER

(SOPRANO).

Opera, Oratorio, Ballad.

Address: Usual Agents and Three Arts Club, Marylebone Rd., N.W. 1.
Tel.: Mayfair 6294.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

A.R.A.M. CONTRALTO.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W. 6. Tel.: Hampstead 5797.

MR. SAMUEL MASTERS

(TENOR).

Address: 164, Bank Buildings, Ewell Road, Surbiton.

WILLIAM BARRAND

BASS (ETON COLLEGE).

Oratorio, Ballads, Lessons.

35, Ragstone Road, Slough; or usual Agents.

MR. AMBROSE COVIELLO

Associate and Professor of the Royal Academy of Music, is now demobilised, and arranging times for Private Tuition in Pianoforte Playing and Teaching, at his studio, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, W. 1.

MUSICAL REVISER TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-FIVE YEARS

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING.

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W. 2.

*. The late Sir HUBERT PARRY kindly permitted his name to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O.; Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Prof. H. WOLFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

MR. EDWARD OXENFORD

(Author, "I FEAR NO FOE," &c.)

Submits popular and attractive LYRICS. Postage refunded.
Haddenham, Bucks.

THE NOVELLO CHOIR

(FOUNDER: DR. W. G. McNAUGHT)

Will commence Rehearsals on Tuesday, October 12,

AT 6.45 P.M., IN THE

NOVELLO HALL, 160, WARDOUR STREET, W. 1.

There are VACANCIES for CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES.

Hon. Sec.: H. A. GRIFFITH,

The Novello Works, Hollen Street, Soho, W. 1.

SINGING, PIANO-PLAYING, AND AURAL TRAINING. Dr. A. P. Alderson visits 60, Berners Street, W., every week for Private Lessons. Coaching also by Correspondence. 34, Knight's Park, Kingston-on-Thames.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.D. and MUS.B. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of F.L.C.M., L.Mus.L.C.M., A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O. (1916), and L.R.A.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, "Honours," and Pass Certificates (of the Colleges of Music) to the number of eight hundred and eighty-five. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Composition by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.
Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-20 ... 154 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-20 ... 39 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., c/o FORSYTH BROS., Deansgate, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

DR. CROSSLEY.—Singing, Piano, Composition.
Special Coach for Degrees, &c. Lessons by Correspond. And at FORSYTH BROS., Manchester. Terms, &c., Radcliffe, Manchester.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm.
F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE
TUITION. 380 Successes. 3, De Burgh Park, Banstead, Surrey.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration. "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W. 11.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.
Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W. 3.

DR. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., F.E.I.S., Warden, Incorporated Guild of Church Musicians, gives LESSONS, Personally or by Post, in HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT. 158, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, W. 11.

DR. LEWIS' TEXT-BOOKS:

- HARMONY. (2 vols.) 5s. each, net.
COUNTERPOINT. 5s. net.
DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. 5s. net.
FUGUE. 1s. 6d. net.
ELEMENTS OF MUSIC. 2s. 6d. net.
DEVELOPMENT OF ANGLICAN CHURCH MUSIC. 2s. net.
PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.
DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.
MATERIAL OF MELODY. 3d. net.
IMPROVISATION. 1s. 6d. net.

The above, complete, will be forwarded (carriage paid) for £1 5s.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS PREPARES for L.R.A.M. and other Examinations. Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Lessons (oral or by correspondence). Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes. L.R.A.M., &c. Pianoforte Classes, 10, Matheson Rd., West Kensington.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W. 1.

L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.—TEACHING SINGING
Exams. Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition. Complete preparation. Pupil writes: "Your Course is excellent, and my singing work has greatly improved, thanks to your tuition.—A.F." Mr. W. Lee Webster, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teaching Singing), 22, Lucknow Avenue, Nottingham.

DR. TAYLOR gives LESSONS by correspondence in all Musical Subjects, Elementary or Advanced. Diploma and Degree work. Manuscripts revised. Accompaniments written, &c., &c. Terms moderate. Portland Place, Lancaster.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.

RECENT SUCCESSSES:

- | | |
|-------------------------|--------------------------|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

SOPRANO and CONTRALTO WANTED,
Ethical Church, Bayswater. Good readers and soloists. No duties August and September. Salary £20 per annum. Apply, C. Kennedy Scott, Ethical Church, 46, Queen's Road, W. 2.

CHRIST CHURCH, Mayfair, W. Alto, Tenor, and Bass required. Communicants. Light duties. £12. Write, J. H. Olding, 5, Lydon Road, Clapham, S.W. 4.

TENOR LEADER and SOLOIST (not baritone)
REQUIRED. Free Church, North London. Must be experienced and good reader. £25. Colin Baker, 26, Cecilie Park, N. 8.

TENOR (late soloist, West-End Church). Good reader, DESIRES WORK as DEPUTY. Write, "K. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

EXETER CATHEDRAL CHOIR.

There is a VACANCY for a TENOR. Salary £120. Candidates must be Members of the Church of England. Good sight-reading essential. Applications, stating age, with copies of not more than three recent testimonials, should be sent without delay to the Rev. The Succentor, The Close, Exeter.

HEREFORD CATHEDRAL.

BASS SINGER WANTED.—Good sight-reader essential, Cathedral experience desirable, Church of England. Salary £110. Ex-service man preferred.

Applications, stating age and whether married, and enclosing not more than three testimonials, to be sent to The Chapter Clerks, 30, Castle Street, Hereford, before the 16th day of October, 1920.

BASS (OR BARITONE), £20-25 per annum; and ALTO, £15 per annum, wanted for choir of St. Peter, Bayswater. Good readers. Address, Leonard Butler, 28, St Stephen's Avenue, Ealing, W. 13.

BASS SINGER WANTED, at Unitarian Church,
Brixton. Salary £15. Apply, Organist, 14, Daysbrook Rd., S.W. 2.

SINGING AND VOICE-PRODUCTION. Miss
Mary Brundrett, pupil of Mr. CHARLES TREE, visits Liverpool weekly. Communications c/o Messrs. Crane, Hanover Street, Liverpool.

UNIVERSITY OF MELBOURNE (AUSTRALIA). CONSERVATORIUM OF MUSIC.

WANTED, a male TEACHER OF SINGING. Must be a good Concert performer, and also qualified to act as examiner.

For remuneration and conditions of appointment apply to the Agent-General for Victoria, Victoria House, Melbourne Place, Strand, London, W.C. 2.

Applications, including medical certificate and copies of testimonials, should be made to Mr. J. P. Bainbridge, Registrar, University of Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

SINGING TEACHER (lady), L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., wishes to ESTABLISH CONNECTION in London.

Discoverer of method with genuinely splendid results. Exercises specially devised to suit each individual case, and to overcome individual difficulties. Small thin voices made rich and powerful.

In promising cases the real carrying vocal vibrato with beautiful tone-quality has been obtained within three months.

People who have hitherto been unable to sing may now learn to do so by this simple, effective, and genuine method.

Parents who wish their children to become singers should have them trained by this method in their early teens. Only pupils with a musical ear or with some musical temperament could be accepted.

Vocal examination and advice on voice production for small fee. Write for appointment to "Revelo," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

£100 SINGING, £50 PIANO, Free Scholarships, Souvenir Cup, Cash Prizes, and Medals. Mr. CLIFTON COOKE'S OPEN COMPETITIONS for the trained and untrained, 6th and 13th November. Adjudicators: Singing—Miss KATIE THOMAS, F.R.A.M. Piano—Miss JOY SMITH, A.R.C.M. Prospectus from Secretary, 26m, Guilford Street, W.C. 1.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED
for New Jerusalem Church, King's Cross, W. 2. Two Sunday Services and weekly choir practice. Apply, giving particulars of experience, copies of testimonials, and salary required to Mr. Thos. Burl, 5, Leicester Road, East Finchley, N. 2.

WANTED, ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER,

for Great James Street Presbyterian Church, Londonderry.
Salary. £120 per annum.
Good prospects for a capable man.
Apply, enclosing copies of testimonials, to Robt. Neill, 41, Clarendon Street, Londonderry.

THE ORGANIST of the Foundling will shortly have a VACANCY for a Pupil-Assistant. Apply by letter to Dr. Davan Weiton, 36, Mount Park Crescent, Ealing, W.5

THE CHAIR OF MUSIC in the University of Dublin is now vacant. The condition of tenure of the Chair may be obtained by application to the Registrar, Trinity College, Dublin.

EXPERIENCED Accompanist desires ENGAGE-MENT for instrumental or vocal practice, or Choral Society.
London or Suburbs. "S. A.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour
Street, W.1.

YOUNG Gentleman REQUIRES POSITION as PIANIST in an Orchestra, or good Concert Party. Apply,
Mr. C. W. Bird, The Stores, Evershot, Dorset.

'CELLIST (lady), desires ENGAGEMENTS.
"At Homes," Concerts. London District. "A. B. C.," c/o
Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MEMORY.—MISS LILIAS MACKINNON,
L.R.A.M., undertakes, by her method,
to develop perfect musical memory. Course of Six Lessons, £3 3s.
Lessons by correspondence if desired. 21, Upper Cheyne Row, S.W.3.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—
Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed.
Redwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

STANDARDISED ORGANS (Pipe).—TWO-MANUALS and Pedals, as built to order, by Richardson's, specially to meet the requirements of the times. 100 to 500 guineas; in nine sizes. Entirely new introduction. These Organs are voiced and tuned and adapted according to size, &c., of Church. Specifications and Estimates, W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

A QUAIN OLD ORGAN.

FOR SALE.—Said to have been made in the time of Cardinal Wolsey by the Monks who built Cheshunt Great House. This instrument, which is now to be seen at Messrs. Walker's factory, Francis Street, Tottenham Court Road, W.C., consists of one manual and is of C compass—CC to C2, 4 octaves, 49 notes.

The stops are as follows:

Stopped Diapason	...	...	...	8 feet.
Principal	...	...	...	4 feet.
Sesquialtera (2 ranks)	...	...	...
Fifteenth	...	...	...	2 feet.

The keys are of dark wood, probably walnut, the sharps being of solid white ivory, and every pipe of the organ is of wood. The speaking front—of wood pipes with rounded fronts, symmetrically arranged—consists of the Fifteenth. The casework is of oak. It would be interesting to know if this organ is the identical instrument which is said to have been removed from Waltham Abbey at the dissolution of the Monastery in 1540, to Cheshunt Great House (see the Musical Times of September, 1905, p. 598). Price £100.

Apply, Messrs. H. Chaplin & Co., 101, Leadenhall Street, London, E.C.3.

TWO-MANUAL PIPE-ORGAN, with pedals, for SALE. Six stops, coupler Swell to Great, excellent tone. Height 8-ft. 9-in.; width, 7-ft. 6-in.; depth, 6-ft. Can be inspected by appointment. Purchaser to remove from present Church at his own expense.
Further particulars of Mr. W. H. Phillips, 20, Vallance Rd., London, N.

FOR SALE.—AMERICAN ORGAN, by Estey.
Solid walnut case. In good condition. 17 stops, knee swells, super-octave coupler. Suitable small Church or Mission Hall. £85.
Can be seen any time by appointment (Southend-on-Sea). "S.S.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

GUITAR FOR SALE.—Old Spanish. £4, or near offer. "K." 47, Dryburgh Road, Putney.

BALLAD HORN (Boosey) FOR SALE.—Silver-plated, leather case. Complete, £8 8s., or nearest offer.
Mitchell, Mumby, Alford, Lincolnshire.

GRAMOPHONE and Pianoforte Manufacturer desires to correspond with Music Teachers and Tuners who can introduce business for first-class instruments at factory prices, either for cash or credit, on a commission basis. Write, "Piano," c/o Gosden's, 11, Henrietta Street, London, W.C.2.

LYRIC AUTHOR is prepared to submit several original MSS. without obligation. Write, "Lyricus," c/o
Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LYRICS FOR SALE, for setting to music. Edith Smallwood, 25, Marine Parade, Worthing.

THE SINGER'S ART (just Published). By

Agnes J. Larkcom. Price 1s.
London: Novello & Company, Limited.

BASSES and BARITONES should buy "SONGS
OF THE NIGHT" (Oakley). Two Sets, Nos. 1-4 and 5-7. Price
2s. each Set. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

HYMNS, Chants, and Anthems neatly and legibly
Duplicated in black ink, from 4s. 6d. per 100, post paid. Samples 2d. stamp. W. H. Ridd, 211, Station Rd., King's Heath, Birmingham.

YOUR MELODIES or LYRICS may be transformed into works of beauty by the addition of musicianly accompaniments or settings. Only really good music will do—not the cheap, flowery type, full of worn-out harmonic "tags."
Send short MS. to me, together with stamped addressed envelope, for FREE specimen accompaniment, arrangement, or setting.

HUGH P. LAMBERT, 77, Valley Drive, Harrogate.

MSS. Copied and Transposed. | Choral and Instrumental
Compositions revised— | Arrangements.
Constructive criticism given. | (Terms moderate.)

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

"Orrisdale," 478, Chorley Old Road, Bolton.

DEAR SIRS,—I have opened many organs by various builders, but I wish to say this: That I have never played on a finer Pedal Board than the one which you make.

ARTHUR E. JONES, F.R.C.O., L.T.C.L.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments arranged.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

D.M.S.

STANDS for DIAL (compass) MUSIC SHORTHAND.

Composers, arrangers, and students save time and materials by drafting music on common paper. Easily learnt and transcribed.

Outlines, 1s. 2d.; Illustrated Supplement, 2s. 2d. Also ⁵/₃ Shorthand for Harmony, 1s. 2d., post free.

A. SOUTHEY & Co., 145, FENCHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.3.

MUSIC

AND

MUSICAL LITERATURE.

OLD AND RARE, SECOND-HAND AND NEW.

HAROLD REEVES has on display for sale at his warehouse, 210, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.C.2., the largest and most varied assortment of Books on Music and Musicians, of any bookseller in Europe. Catalogues issued.

Special bargain to Musical Times readers only. Ernest Newman's fine volume, "Wagner, as Man and Artist," over 300 pages, originally 7s. 6d. net, now offered, new copies, 5s. post free.

Over 5,000 Oratorios, Cantatas, Operas, and other Vocal Works are in store. Write requirements and save money by buying clean second-hand copies from Harold Reeves.

Music of all kinds in stock for all instruments. Harold Reeves has recently acquired the Musical Libraries of the late Dr. Wood, of Exeter Cathedral, Edward D. Rendall, music-master at Charterhouse, Professor Arbos, and G. S. L. Lohr, of Winchester.

Call and inspect the unique stock displayed by—
HAROLD REEVES, 210, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.C.2.
(next to Princes Theatre).

Phone: Gerrard 8398. Telegrams: Olmuscus, Westcent, London.

MUSIC OF ALL KINDS PURCHASED.
WHOLE LIBRARIES OR SMALL PARCELS.
PROMPT CASH PAYMENT.

THE SEASON'S SUCCESS.

"CREATION'S PRAISE."

Well-balanced in Chorus, Solo, and Quartet.

Cantata by F. W. PEACE.

O.N., 2s. 6d. Sol-fa, 1s. Less 25% Discount for six copies.

ALSO

"CHRIST THE CONQUEROR."

O.N., 2s. Sol-fa, 1s.

By JOHN S. WITTY.

BLACKBURNS, LTD.,

Broadway Avenue, Cardigan Road, Leeds.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 91.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION

BY
H. ELLIOT BUTTON

WITH PREFACE BY
SIR EDWARD ELGAR.

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

As musical compositions get more complicated, elaborate, and difficult of execution, it is increasingly incumbent upon the composer to present his meaning in a manner that will help the performer to grasp that meaning with as little trouble as possible.

The object of this book is to point out to composers, arrangers, and editors, the difficulties they often unwittingly place in the path of executants, and to suggest various means of obviating those difficulties.

Price - - One Shilling and Sixpence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Improve your Piano Playing!

AN organist who took the Advanced Correspondence Course of Piano Playing of the Gillett School is enthusiastic in an unsolicited letter of appreciation he sent. He writes:

"I have derived immense benefit . . . I can now play with ease and certainty pieces that formerly were awkward, and which I could never depend on getting through . . . my piano touch has changed altogether."

This organist wished to improve his piano playing, and this letter shows his gratification at the results attained. Another organist writes:

"I have now got a wonderful command over arm balance and relaxation."

And many others write equally cordially.

Can I help you to improve your Piano Playing? My course gives a sound training, and is based upon years of close study and actual teaching experience both oral and by correspondence.

Send a post card for Booklet,

"THE SUCCESSFUL PIANIST,"

which will tell you all about this unique system of training by written instructions.

(Studio M.T.)

THE CHARLES A. GILLETT

School of Pianoforte Playing,

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET,

NEW BOND STREET, W. I.

A. E. MILGROM

CONCERT DIRECTION.

RECITALS. CONCERTS. "AT HOMES" ARRANGED AND PERSONALLY SUPERVISED.

Concert Givers, Theatre and Opera Managers, please note above Agency have over 400 artists on their books containing Operatic and Concert Vocalists, Instrumentalists, Accompanists, Entertainers at the Piano, and Concert Parties in costume.

For terms, please apply to—

A. E. MILGROM, Concert Agency,

324, REGENT STREET (near Queen's Hall).

'Phone: Mayfair 4123.

Practice rooms can be rented by the hour, day, or week.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 92.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

THE SINGER'S ART.

BY

AGNES J. LARKCOM,

F.R.A.M.

Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

(INSTITUTED 1872.)

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P.

Chairman of Board:

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

October 6th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concert.

October 13th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture Recital by Dr. C. W. PEARCE, on "Old English Violin and Clavier Music." Illustrations by Mr. L. PÉCSKAI and the Lecturer.

October 20th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concert.

October 27th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture with Illustrations by Dr. J. WARRINER. Subject: "Bolshevism in Music."

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Elocution. The lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student: pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

A Special Course of Training for Music Teachers has been instituted to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, and has been approved by the Council.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open also to sufficiently competent persons who are not College students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Cambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., Admission Cards to Concerts, and the Syllabuses of the Higher and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CYRIL SCOTT.

YOUNG HEARTS

(PIECES FOR CHILDREN).

Series I., 2s. 6d. net.

1. SEE-SAW.
2. LAMENT FOR A BROKEN DOLL.
3. MUSICAL BOX.
4. EVENING PRAYER.
5. QUICK MARCH.

Series II., 2s. 6d. net.

1. MARCH OF A TIN SOLDIER.
2. SUNDAY MORN.
3. CONCERTINA.
4. LONELINESS.
5. THE BOY WITH THE PIPES.

These pieces are quite short and quite easy—easier even than the same composer's well-known "SUMMERLAND" Suite. Their aim is to familiarize young players with the modern idiom, so that they will be able to pass on to more complex works in due course.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & Co., LIMITED.

DAISY KENNEDY MISCHA ELMAN
JAN KUBELICK constantly play VIOLIN SOLOS by

F. DRDLA

of which the most popular are

VISION, Op. 28, 2s. MADRIGAL, Op. 25, 2s.
TANZWEISE AIR DE DANSE, Op. 96, 2s.

HUNGARIAN DANCES, arr. by Drdla, for Violin and Piano, are easier than the Brahms-Joachim, and more effective. 2s. each.

- | | |
|------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Hej de Fenyés | 5. Kalversai emlek |
| 2. Hamis babam | 6. Bartfai emlek |
| 3. Eg a Kunyho | 7. Rozsabokor Csardas |
| 4. Hey Hay | 8. Csak egy szep lany |

THE LITTLE SEVCIK - - - 3s. 6d.

The best Violin Tutor the world has produced.

Easy—Interesting. No premature forcing, no crowding, no confusing. The semitone system enables the Pupil to overcome the greatest difficulties without effort, and there is plentiful recreation, consisting of healthy Folk-Songs, &c.

At any Music Sellers.

BOSWORTH & Co., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

Publishers of the Five Great Piano Methods: 'BERINGER'S TUTOR,' 'WARD'S PROGRESSIVE TUTOR,' 'HEMY'S TUTOR,' 'WICKINS' RAPID TUTOR,' GRAHAM P. MOORE'S 'FIRST PRINCIPLES.'

Publishers of 'SEVCIK'S VIOLIN METHOD,' 'BERINGER'S DAILY TECHNICAL STUDIES,' 'MACFARREN'S THE CHILD'S FIRST MUSIC LESSONS,' 'SEPPING'S TINY TUNES METHOD,' ETC.

This adaptation has been made by Sir Edward Elgar, O.M., at the request of the LEAGUE OF ARTS, to whom it is dedicated. It is specially intended for the performance at the Dedication of the Cenotaph and similar ceremonies throughout the country.

WITH PROUD THANKSGIVING CHORUS

BY

LAURENCE BINYON

AND

EDWARD ELGAR

Arranged from "For the Fallen" for S.A.T.B., with accompaniment for Military or Brass Band, or Organ or Pianoforte.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

OCTOBER 1 1920

CHARLES KENNEDY SCOTT

There are not many regular series of concerts so uniformly good in idea and execution that one may attend year after year sure of satisfaction without even a glance at the preliminary programmes. The few answering this description would certainly include those given by the Oriana Madrigal Choir. Established in 1904, the Choir rapidly made a niche for itself in London musical life, and it has steadily increased its reputation. Much of its success is no doubt due to the catholic nature of its programmes. Rarely do we find a hackneyed work included, and the ground covered ranges from unaccompanied plainsong in unison (an unexpectedly severe test) to the most modern of works in eight or ten parts.

Charles Kennedy Scott is the Choir's founder and conductor, and he and it have become well-known together. The beginning of a new season's work seemed a good moment for a talk with Mr. Scott, so we have seized the opportunity.

First, a few biographical details. He was born in 1876 at Romsey, a quiet old market town in Hampshire, once a famous spot, but now almost unknown save for its noble Norman Abbey. After some instruction by a local teacher, Scott went to Brussels Conservatoire, where he studied the violin under Cornelis, the organ under Alphonse Maily, and composition with Kufferath and Tinel. He then came to London, where he has worked since as a teacher and conductor.

He spoke with enthusiasm of Maily. 'Maily's organ compositions,' he said, 'completely misrepresent him. He was one of the finest of teachers. If you ask me whether he was a good musician, judged by the highest standards, I should say he was not. But he was something far better. I have never met a man who could so thoroughly get at the very pith and marrow of a composition, and make others get at it, too. He took endless pains over details of organ playing that are usually neglected. Players who think of him as the composer of "Pâques Fleuries," and such futile things, should have seen him working his pupils at Bach—even at the choral preludes, then very little known outside Germany. One feature of our study at Brussels I have found of the utmost value ever since—plainsong. I am becoming more and more certain that plainsong and its lay-sister folksong ought to be a part of the foundation of musical study. It was always important, but it was never more so than to-day, when composers are seeing the beauty of free rhythm and the old modes.'

We asked Mr. Scott his opinion of the present stage of choralism in this country.

'It's a long, long way short of what it ought to be,' he replied. 'We shall never reach the right standard till we have a few choral societies made up of singers as stringently selected as are the players of a first-rate orchestra, and as rigorously rehearsed. They should be able to tackle a difficult new work with the sight-reading ability of an orchestra. There is nothing too difficult for our orchestras. Technically, they are ahead of their music, whereas choirs are a long way behind theirs.'

We pointed out that choral societies are composed of amateurs, most of whom work hard in other ways, and so have not the spare time necessary for the reaching of a standard on a level with that of professional players. Besides, it surely takes less time to make a good chorus singer than a good orchestral player.

'Granted,' he replied, 'but not one singer in a hundred will take the trouble to reach even that point. There is a pitiable lack both on the technical and spiritual side. How many members of the average choral society can maintain a perfect legato for more than a few notes? I don't mean a mere joining of the sounds but a keeping up of the spiritual intensity that must be at the back of every note if the singing is to be really vital. And the sight-reading! It was always bad, but it has surely gone back during the past few years. How in the world can a conductor do a tenth part of what he wants to do in the matter of interpretation, if all but the last few rehearsals are devoted to learning the notes? What sort of orchestral performances should we get if players had to have their parts hammered into them for weeks—even months? We shall never hear the choralism we ought to hear until we have a few first-class choral societies consisting entirely of singers who shall at least approximate to the standard of professional instrumentalists.'

'There are two ideals at which we should aim—a few professional societies of this type, with the resourcefulness and technique of a first-rate orchestra, to set a standard, and countless amateur choirs getting as near to that standard as they can.'

We suggested that as orchestral concerts are rarely financial successes, a concert given by an orchestra and a professional choir would be pretty sure to leave a balance on the wrong side.

'It would,' he said. 'One way of avoiding such a result would be to economise in the soloist department. As things are now, even with an amateur choir, a choral and orchestral concert is an expensive luxury. If nothing is done in the way of a subsidy, I fail to see how concerts with big forces and soloists can continue to be given.'

'Failing some kind of financial aid, I think we should try to organize first-rate amateur orchestras for occasional use with choirs. There are delightful works, especially among the older ones, that demand only a comparatively small band. It ought not to be difficult to find sufficient players, and they could easily be augmented from professional sources when a 'big modern work is undertaken.'

We discussed the technique of the average rank and file choral society. Mr. Scott thought there is in some quarters a tendency to attach too much importance to certain technical effects of a rather obvious type—point-making that easily degenerates into stunts.

'But after all,' he went on, 'perhaps the main thing with choral societies in general is not so much how they sing as what they sing.'

'In what directions do you think there is most need for improvement?' we asked.

'I will mention only two,' he replied. 'First, there is too often a lack of variety—a fault for which there is surely no excuse, bearing in mind the wealth of our choral repertory of all styles and periods. And why not use more music of an incontestably clear and direct character? A scheme that taxes both choir and conductor to the full the whole time is likely to tax the audience no less severely. We are constantly urging on people the importance of training themselves to be good listeners. Good listening is hard work, and an audience needs occasional respite even in a short programme. The other direction in which I think the choice of music is frequently at fault is in the too small proportion of a cappella works. We have almost got rid of the S.A.T.B. chorus accompanied by a pianoforte—one of the most futile of combinations. I don't suggest that we should abandon works for chorus and orchestra, but rather that every programme given by a choir and orchestra should contain several items in which both forces are heard separately. A long scheme in which they are constantly combined is not only wearisome; it is unfair to the singers, because so few works of the kind give them a fair chance. Nine composers out of ten when writing such a work think orchestrally nearly all the time. The result is that real choral writing is found only in patches. The rest of the work is usually a vivid orchestral piece, with the choir as a kind of "also ran." A list of compositions in which the balance is fairly held throughout would be very short. And after all if a choir is first-rate an orchestra is unnecessary. Sometimes it is little more than a very expensive blanket—gorgeous, I admit, but still a blanket. If we want to combine instruments and voices, we might well develop the possibilities of a kind of chamber music for quartet or small chorus and a few solo strings or wind instruments. This would give every performer a chance of the most finished execution with no danger of being overwhelmed, and nothing could be a better medium for a many-coloured polyphonic texture. Still, we have not nearly exhausted the possibilities of variety in unaccompanied singing, and we shall not do so until we make it our staple. There is a good deal of practical sense in the article on the subject in a recent Musical Times.* Some of the suggested effects may be questioned, but I am sure there is much to be done in the direction of tonal variety that will not only lead to fascinating results but will also enlarge vocal technique. The tone-colour range of humming effects, for example, is much wider than is generally realised. For sheer beauty I know nothing to beat some of the moments in the unaccompanied part of Delius's "Song of the High Hills," where, you remember, the choir is merely vocalising. And one sometimes hears a good male-voice quartet for a few bars chording so exquisitely that the effect is magical. Unfortunately such moments are usually confined to slow and simple passages. Why should not choral technique be developed so that this perfect blend may be heard throughout a difficult work?'

We asked Mr. Scott for his opinion on our modern writers of unaccompanied choral works.

'They are first-rate,' he replied. 'We may differ as to our rate of progress in other branches of creative art, but here I think everybody must agree that the splendid standard of our old vocal polyphony has been more than maintained. I doubt if anything approaches it in the output of any foreign country. The Continental choirs which have recently visited us have been able to show us something in regard to attack, drill, and all-round efficiency, but the music itself was generally more or less commonplace compared with that sung by our best choirs. The part-songs and other small unaccompanied works of Parry, Elgar, Stanford, and, among the younger school, of Walford Davies, Holst, Vaughan Williams, Balfour Gardiner, Percy Grainger, W. G. Whittaker, and a few others, is something of which we may well be proud. It is, too, almost invariably set to real poetry, and so makes a double appeal.'

Discussing our growing national consciousness in musical matters, he said:

'If I were asked who has done the most for English music, I should be disposed to say Cecil Sharp. The kind of work that he has achieved, and its extent, has, I think, given more impetus and direction to English art than the work of any other man. That influence and the revival of our interest in the Elizabethans appear to have determined a current in our music that will give it what is surely to be desired—a distinctly national complexion. In so far as art is a science it is of course cosmopolitan; in so far as it is a question of feeling, of genius, it must be national. We can learn foreign tricks; we can never really or effectively learn a foreign spirit. Not unconnected with this national question is the need for good, simple, popular music. There are two distinct trends in our music to-day, the professional and the amateur. In the former it is typified by such distinguished names as Bax, Ireland, Balfour Gardiner, Frank Bridge, and a dozen others, who it seems to me frankly care only for the art itself and its imaginative quality without reference to its social aspect—a perfectly comprehensible view and perhaps the most certainly effective. But there is another trend, which I term the amateur. This also is fraught with great possibilities, and opens up simple, bold avenues of expression based more on a consciousness of the social value of art. It would consider the man in the street, and would take on a practical rather than an imaginative aspect, though I quite see that it is hard to find a dividing line. As such it would reflect rather what I might call masculinity of utterance, and would be fitted more for open air use and ceremonial than for the contemplative detached atmosphere of the concert-hall. In this direction it seems to me that men like Martin and Geoffrey Shaw, Rutland Boughton, and Cecil Sharp, are doing splendid work, and I cannot help feeling that, much as my own personal tastes lie in the direction of the more intimate side of music, there is even more field for development (and certainly a necessity for it) along these lines than along the other. Moreover, it has the advantage of being open to the plain, honest criticism of the average man, which would be no bad thing for both the average man and the musicians concerned. The League of Arts aimed at developing art of all kinds on these democratic lines. Owing to the difficulties of the times in which the scheme was launched, we could do so only to a limited extent. But we managed to do enough in the way of outdoor music, dancing, and acting, to show that in more propitious days, and with proper encouragement from official quarters, the idea is not so visionary as many people thought it to be. Music will never hold the position that is its due until it is used, which is a different thing from being merely heard. A mother who sings her child to sleep—or even turns on a gramophone for the purpose—is using music. And similarly it should play a part in all our public life. A meeting of trade unionists now breaks up singing the "Red Flag," the tune of which is such a miserable affair that it is not worthy of association with so fine a thing as a flag, even a red one. A "rag" would be more in keeping. Now why should not the meeting be punctuated by choruses dealing with such subjects as the particular craft of the singers, or brotherhood, helped out by one or two popular songs of the day? And such civic occasions as, say, the taking of office by a mayor should be the occasion for something besides halting and conventional votes of thanks and mutual admiration. The local choral society should sing a chorus celebrating some bit of the town's history, or some famous person connected with the neighbourhood. No doubt his Worship and the councillors would feel they were making fools of themselves, but the feeling would soon wear off, and in course of time what is now a humdrum bit of business would develop into an affair of dignified ceremonial, with something to make the burghesses' attendance worth while. But any civic use, or even encouragement, of music is out of the question at present, chiefly because the artistic professions have taken no interest in politics, local or national. They have let local government get entirely into the hands of the business man and the shopkeeper, who naturally look at everything from the business and shopkeeping point of view.'

* March, 1920.

'What was the origin of the "Oriana Choir?"' we asked.

'It had a very modest beginning,' he replied. 'In the first place, Beecham and I and a few other friends used to meet at one another's houses to sing madrigals. Beecham sang bass, by the by, and used to surprise us by the amount of such music he had stored in his memory. These casual meetings gradually developed into the Society. In the earlier stage we had great help from Fuller-Maitland. The Society also owes a debt of utmost gratitude to one without whose disinterested help, especially during the past few difficult years, we could hardly have survived. He would dislike public mention of his name, but his brother musicians will know to whom I refer.

'Reverting to our beginnings, I remember how little equipped I was to be responsible for anything of the sort. One of the first pieces we sang was Morley's "My bonny lass," and I made my poor choir sing it to four beats in a bar! In those days I did not realise (and probably few did) that the normal unit in works of this type was the minim and not the crotchet. This is mentioned only to encourage others to go ahead if they have enterprise, and not wait till they feel omniscient before taking on responsibilities.'

Bearing in mind the unconventional character of the 'Oriana' programmes, we obtained a couple of specimens from Mr. Scott. Here they are:

ÆOLIAN HALL.—APRIL 11, 1916.

PART 1.

1. The Agincourt song (15th century) arr. by Geoffrey Shaw
2. Madrigals:
 - (a) 'Arise, awake' (5 parts) ... Thomas Morley
 - (b) 'Come, shepherd swains' (3 parts) ... John Wilbye
 - (c) 'Flora gave me' (5 parts) ... }
3. Ayres for three solo voices and accompaniment Thomas Campion
 - (a) 'O what unhop'd for sweet supply'
 - (b) 'Jack and Joan'
4. Chamber Trio for Oboe, Violin, Violoncello, and Cembalo ... Handel
5. Ayres (or 'Phantastick Spirites' ... Thomas Weelkes
 - (a) 'Thro' my carriage' } (3 parts)
 - (b) 'Ha! Ha! Ha!'
6. Ancient Round, 'Sumer is iucmen in' ... —
7. Ballet, 'See, the Shepherds' Queen' (5 parts) Thomas Tomkins

PART 2.

8. North Country Folk-songs ... arr. by H. G. Whitaker
 - (a) 'Sair fyel'd, hinny'
 - (b) 'By broom buzzems'
 - (c) 'Bonny at morn'
 - (d) 'Bobby Shaftoe'
9. Two Eastern Songs for Female Chorus and Harp Gustav Holst
10. Trio for Viola d'amore, Viola da Gamba, and Harpsichord ... Rameau
11. Somerset Folk-songs ... Collected and arr. by Cecil Sharp
 - (a) 'I'm seventeen come Sunday.'
 - (b) Sheep Shearing Song.
12. Part-song ... 'The stage coach' ... Balfour Gardiner

ROYAL VICTORIA HALL.—APRIL 16, 1918.

1. Part-song (3 parts) ... 'Here's a health unto his Majesty' John Savile
2. Madrigals:
 - (a) 'All creatures now are merry-minded' John Benet
 - (b) 'The silver swan' ... Orlando Gibbons
 - (c) 'Like two proud armies' ... Thomas Weelkes.

3. Folk-songs :
 (a) 'Gently Johnny, my Jingalo' Somerset
 (arr. by C. K. S.)
 (b) 'Bully in our alléy' (sea chanty)
 arr. by Balfour Gardiner
4. Pianoforte Solos by Bach, Lully, Dandrieu, and Scarlatti
 (Miss Harriet Cohen.)
5. Ayre 'Disdain me still' John Dowland
6. Three Rounds from 'Pammelia' (1609)
7. Ballet 'Sing we and chaunt it' Thomas Morley
8. Part-songs :
 (a) 'Owls' Elgar
 (b) 'On Craig Dhu' Delius
9. Three 'Pan' songs for Female Voices and Pianoforte
 Geoffrey Shaw
10. An Irish Tone-poem for Two Pianofortes Arnold Bax
 (Miss Harriet Cohen and Mr. Arnold Bax.)
11. Folk-songs :
 (a) 'The song of the blacksmith' }
 (b) 'I love my love' } Arr. by Gustav Holst
 (c) 'Swansea Town' }

From the 'Oriana' we went on to talk of the Philharmonic Choir which Mr. Scott organized last season. Discussing some of the criticisms, he said that people who compared the Choir with the best in the north of England overlooked the fact that the Philharmonic singers were got together (at an unsettled and difficult time) and prepared for their first performance of some exceptionally difficult new modern music, in the short period of a few months. Critics who, having heard old-established Northern choirs singing far more familiar music, shook their heads over the Philharmonic, should have realised that there was really very little ground on which comparisons could be based.

'It is ridiculous,' he went on, 'always to assert the superiority of the Northern choirs. My experience does not bear it out, though it seems a perfect idée fixe with many of our London critics. I am convinced that we have as good material in London as anywhere, and I simply will not agree with some of the criticism that has been levelled at the Philharmonic Choir. I don't mind admitting that it made us rather sore. This is not to imply that we are in any way satisfied with our achievements, but I do think that relatively they deserved far more sympathetic consideration than they received. Whether circumstances will allow the Choir to continue I do not know. There are many difficulties, but I feel sure that, these difficulties overcome, it can be shown convincingly that a London choir can be as good as any other. Moreover, I want the best choir to be in London, for I'm not above local patriotism! If we cannot have the best, we can console ourselves with some very appropriate lines of Meredith—those beginning, "So that I draw the breath."'

We quote the passage, recommending it to all who are unsuccessful in competitive festivals:

So that I draw the breath of finer air,
 Station is naught, nor footways laurel strewn,
 Nor rivals tightly belted for the race.
 Good speed to them! My place is here or there;
 My pride is that among them I have place,
 And thus I keep this instrument in tune.

It was fitting that we should be reminded of these lines by one who throws himself into his work so disinterestedly. Charles Kennedy Scott has already made a highly individual mark in our musical world. With his broad and democratic outlook, fine taste, and abounding enthusiasm, he should go far in the near future.

PEARSALL'S LETTERS

By W. BARCLAY SQUIRE

Robert Lucas Pearsall needs no introduction to readers of the Musical Times. Though the greater part of his life was spent on the Continent, and he was little known to his English contemporaries—excepting his connections and friends at Bristol—since his death in 1856 the steady growth in popular appreciation of his madrigals and part-songs has made his name a household word among choral societies which preserve the best traditions of English part-singing. But though his music is familiar, the man himself, with his wide interests in art, music, and archæology, is hardly known. Fortunately for posterity, he was a voluminous correspondent, and at least two series of his letters have been preserved. The earlier were addressed to his friend, the Rev. H. T. Ellacombe, vicar of Bitton, the parish in which Pearsall's old home, Willsbridge House, is situated. The larger part of this series, which begins at Carlsruhe in 1833, has been published by me in the New York Musical Quarterly for 1919 and 1920. The second series of letters is addressed to Johann Oehler, Chancellor of the Diocese of St. Gall, the capital of the Canton in which is situated the Castle of Wartensee, which Pearsall bought in 1843, and where the last years of his life were spent. Oehler was evidently a man after Pearsall's own heart; he studied music with him, and from 1846 the two friends kept up a lively correspondence. In his later years Oehler was engaged in preparing a new hymn-book for St. Gall, in which he was largely assisted by Pearsall. The book did not appear until 1863, but in the preface the editor pays a touching tribute to Pearsall, who had harmonized about half the entire collection, besides contributing several original compositions.

Oehler seems to have preserved every scrap of Pearsall's writing, besides making copies of all his master's music that he could obtain. Some years ago I was so fortunate as to recover in Switzerland all these manuscripts. The musical portion is now safely housed in the British Museum, but I hope to print a selection of the letters, together with a few others, in the pages of the Musical Times. The Oehler correspondence begins in 1846; the earlier letters of that year have already appeared in the Musical Quarterly. Previous to these is the following, which has kindly been communicated to me by Mr. Hubert Hunt. It is addressed to the Secretary of the Bristol Madrigal Society, of which Pearsall was the first honorary member. The composition referred to 'wherein the words "Dandery Dan" occur' is 'Who shall win my lady fair?'

I.

To WILLIAM HARWOOD, Esq., Jr.

Wartensee, April 10, 1845.

MY DEAR SIR,—On my return hither yesterday I found your polite letter informing me that I had been chosen and enrolled an honorary member of the Bristol Madrigal Society.

Let me therefore beg you to offer my warmest thanks to them for the very welcome honour they have done me, and to accept yourself my best acknowledgments for the flattering manner in which you have conveyed to me a communication so gratifying.

It naturally affords me pleasure to learn that the public are indulgently disposed towards my humble attempts at madrigal-writing, and perhaps at a future time it will be an encouragement to me to resume them; but ill-health has so troubled me during the last two years that I have not been able to produce anything worth preservation.

By a letter which I received from Bristol some short time ago, I learnt that a composition of mine wherein the words 'Danderly Dan' occur had been favourably received. I remember that I wrote this by way of experiment, and that the first time it was sung it failed so completely that I set it down as an unsuccessful attempt, and had quite forgotten it when the letter in question reached me. Now, however, that I find it has been on a further trial well received, I will beg you to have the goodness to note it in the music-books as an Ante Madrigal, for it is in fact an imitation of a style of song current in England about the time of Henry VII., and therefore established long before the introduction of madrigals with us. The class of song which I wished to imitate is very curious from being compounded of popular melody and the old ecclesiastical neuma, or vocalisation on the last syllable of particular phrases.

In repeating my thanks to you for the very agreeable letter which you have written to me, let me beg you to present my best remembrances to all the Gentlemen of the Madrigal Society whom I have the pleasure to know, and to assure them that their remembrance of me will be always dwelt on with real gratification by

Yours very faithfully,

R. L. PEARSALL.

II.

To Chancellor OEHLER.

[At end :] Wartensee,

December 20, 1846.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND,—Try whether you cannot arrange matters so as to remain here over-night on Wednesday. In the evening we shall have a better and a more convenient opportunity of conversing at our ease on subjects connected with counterpoint than we can have in the morning. The Eilwagen starts from Rorschach to St. Gall on Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, so that you may be there by half-past 9 on Thursday.

In the meantime I will ask you to do me a slight favour, viz., to go to the MSS. room of the old convent library and examine the ancient Antiphony there, so as to be enabled to give me, when you come here, a general idea of its contents. Ten minutes employed in its inspection will enable you to do this. I wish to know whether there are any Hymns in it, such as 'Aeternae rerum conditor,' or 'O lux beata Trinitas' (written by St. Ambrosius), or 'Te lucis ante terminum' (written by St. Gregory). In a word, whether there is any positive reason for believing it to be either an entire or a mutilated copy of the Antiphony compiled by St. Gregory, such as he is said to have sent by the hands of the singer Romanus to Charlemagne. I have seen it myself, but I had neither time nor opportunity to examine it with attention; but the writing, and the ivory-carvings on the exterior of it, seemed to me to be of the 8th century. There is also something remarkable about the musical characters in it, for they seem to be much more artificial than those of the same species which one meets with in books known or reputed to have been written in Northern Europe, inasmuch as there are certain marks, which seem to be auxiliary to the notation, and indicate, perhaps, the value of the notes or the sharpening or flattening of them.

Ever yours faithfully,

P. DE W.

The manuscript alluded to in the above letter is an Antiphoner and Gradual, now considered to be probably of the 9th century, with additions of the 12th and 13th centuries, with two 4th century ivory plaques on one of the covers. It was traditionally said to have been copied at Rome from St. Gregory's Antiphoner between A.D. 772 and A.D. 795 by Romanus, and to have been brought by him to St. Gall, where it is still preserved. It was exhibited for a short time at the Music and Inventions Exhibition at South Kensington in 1885.

III.

To the same.

Wartensee, January 14, 1847.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND,—You have made me your debtor in a way which imposes on me a double obligation, for I owe my thanks not only to you but to the Sisters of Magdenau for the box of cakes which arrived here the day before yesterday. If it is with such artillery that the fair nuns make their conquests, everyone will naturally desire to be besieged by enemies who employ such an agreeable means of bombardment. But I am much perplexed to know how I shall return their fire. They have directed their shot at my mouth, and therefore I will direct mine at their ears, and with this resolution I have put two pieces into battery. They are neither of them canons, but nevertheless I hope that they will go off very well and hit the mark at which I have aimed them. One of them is a Salve Regina for three soprano voices [and] chorus. The other is a Pange lingua for a soprano voice with a short chorus for four soprano voices. The latter of these I will enclose in the present letter, and I will beg you to get it copied for me at St. Gall on music-paper where the spaces between the staves are wide enough to admit the text of the different verses which compose the Hymn. There is one of the nuns who could sing this with a good effect, and the chorus is so short and easy that all the rest might learn it. With regard to the Salve Regina, I will bring it with me to St. Gall when next I go there (which will be in a few days), for there is a passage in it which I wish to alter. As I wish to speak with you, not only on this subject but on others, I will beg you to tell me by return of the post whether you will be at your chambers on Tuesday evening next or on Wednesday, for either on one or the other of these days I propose going thither. You misunderstood me about the Neumaschrift. All that I wished you to do was to note down any observation which might occur to you in casually inspecting it, for it is often the case that a thought which arises in the mind is erased by another if it is not noted down at the moment. I am glad to say that I have found my extracts: they were in the pocket of my mantle. I have also studied them, and have convinced myself that the characters are not positive signs of particular tones, but that they are signs of movement and of intervals relative to some particular antecedent, and that they arise out of, or are at least influenced by, the old system of musical proportion. They are referable also to a time when what we call the Gamut was not known. I find them distinguished by Greek names in a MS. cited by Abbot Gerbert. From what I have seen in a Treatise by Hucbald preserved by the same author, I am very much disposed to believe that Ildefons d'Arx is wrong about the signification of the small letters placed above the Neumaschrift in the Antiphonarium. You will do very right to set counterpoint to the Antiphons. But in setting these for two voices the rule which requires that the penultimate interval should be either a third or a sixth cannot be always observed. Work nevertheless at your exercises, and let me not forget to recommend you to select such Antiphons as are the most simple, because many of those which appear in the printed books have certainly departed from their primitive form. It has just occurred to me that perhaps you might engage Mademoiselle Falk to sing the Pange lingua to you, so that you may hear the effect of it. I think the melody has some claim to originality, and the cadences at the seventh bar and at the last bar of the chorus are (at least I hope and believe so) new. Nevertheless this is saying a great deal and sounds like vanity. Since I wrote what stands above I have made the alterations which I wished in the Salve Regina, and I therefore will enclose it with the Pange lingua.

Very faithfully yours,

R. L. P.

Magdenau, the nuns of which sent Pearsall a box of cakes, was a Cistercian convent on the road from St. Gall to Wattwyl. The 'Pange lingua,' which the composer wrote in return for the present, is printed below—it is believed for the first time. Copies of the 'Salve Regina' and of the 'O Salutaris' mentioned in the next letter are among the Pearsall MSS. in the British Museum. The latter part of the above letter refers to the St. Gall Antiphoner. Ildefons d'Arx (1755-1833) was a priest who wrote a history of the Cantori of St. Gall in the early part of the 19th century:

SOPRANO SOLO.

R. L. PEARSALL.

Pan - ge lin - gua glo - ri - o - si Cor - por -

- is mys - ter - i - um, San - guin - is - que pre - ti -

- o - si, Quem in mun - di pre - ti - um Fru - ctus ven - tris gen - er - o - si Rex ef - fu - dit gen - ti - Tutti.

Sop. 1.
um. Fruc - tus ven - tris gen - er -
Sop. 2.
Fruc - tus ven - tris gen - er -
Sop. 3.
Fruc - tus ven - tris gen - er -
ALTO.
Fruc - tus ven - tris . gen - er -

o - si Rex ef - fu - dit gen - ti - um.
o - si Rex ef - fu - dit gen - ti - um.
o - si Rex ef - fu - dit gen - ti - um.
o - si Rex ef - fu - dit gen - ti - um.

o - si, Quem in mun - di pre - ti - um Fru - ctus

IV.

To the same.

[At end:] Wartensee, January 23, 1847.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND,—An idea has occurred to me (I mean a musical idea) which I have set to the hymn 'O Salutaris Hostia,' and I think that the Nuns of Magdenau will not find much difficulty in singing it. The solo-parts are not very difficult, and the chorus is extremely easy. There is one part of the organ accompaniment which is written with red ink. This I would willingly omit in the performance whenever three voices can be found to sing with such confidence as may render the support of the organ unnecessary, for I think that the voices would sound better without any accompaniment at all, and the introduction of the organ at the chorus would have a better effect. I point out this part of the composition to your notice as a specimen of counterpoint of the second species, i.e., two notes against one, in which there are one or two features worthy of remark which I will point out to you when we next meet. In the meantime I will beg you to do me the favour of getting the composition copied fairly, for I have written the original in great haste, having much business on my hands. Excuse me therefore if I write but a short letter, and do not on account of its abrupt conclusion think that I am the less

Faithfully yours,

P. DE W.

V.

To the same.

[At end:] Wartensee, Jan. 27, 1847.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND,—In the present letter you will find the song which I have composed for Mademoiselle Falk to the words which you gave me. They are however such as are better suited for Recitative than Melody, and the only part of them which I could employ as such was the single phrase 'Der du hinweg nimmst die Sünden der Welt, erbarme dich unser,' and for this reason I have been obliged to dwell rather long on it, but I hope not tediously so. I believe that the words are all rightly accentuated: I will beg you however to look it through, and if you find any error in this respect, to note it in order that I may correct it when I have next the pleasure of seeing you. In the meantime give my best compliments to Mademoiselle Falk and express a hope, on my part, that what I have written may not be unworthy of her fine voice. I regret that I have been obliged to devote so much of the composition to Recitative, because it is almost impossible, in that style of writing, to invent anything new. I think nevertheless that in the accompaniment to the word 'Thränenzerflossen,' I have found a new progression—or at least a rare one. . . . The introduction of the Song of the Angels ('Der du hinweg nimmst') should be declaimed, as well as the little passage, quasi Recit., near the end of the words 'Erbarme dich unser.' I have written the word ritardando over the concluding notes of the song. I wish them to die away in an exhaustion of devotional feeling (if I may so express myself), the more particularly as the word unser, or rather the last and unaccentuated syllable of it, occurs, and one cannot prevent it, on the accentuated part of the measure. I will not fatigue you with any further observations on a production which I am afraid is very unworthy of your friend's charming talent. I hope however that she will do me the favour to sing it when I next come to St. Gall. Till then adieu, and Believe me to be Very faithfully yours,

R. L. P.

N.B.—I have opened this letter again to say that, just as I had sealed it, a better introductory symphony occurred to me. I have noted it down on a separate piece of paper so that when the song is copied it may be substituted for that which now stands there. In the new symphony I have endeavoured to convey in a very short form the impression of a man awaking out of a dream which bewildered him in the first moments of returning consciousness, but which immediately afterwards gave rise to religious meditation. Whether you will understand my attempt at musical painting, I do not know, for those things are never so clear to anyone as their author. But as the new introduction is much better than the other, I will beg you to let it replace the latter if you accompany Mademoiselle F. in her first trial of the song.

The song to which the above letter refers is 'Ich stand' im All.' It has never been published, but there are MS. copies in the British Museum and the Royal College of Music.

At the Crystal Palace on October 16 the London Sunday School Choir holds its annual Festival. There will be choral competitions and a large-scale performance of selections from 'Elijah,' 'The Woman of Samaria,' 'Caractacus,' and Spohr's 'Crucifixion.'

THE WORCESTER FESTIVAL

By SAMUEL LANGFORD

The Three Choir's Festival, favoured by beautiful weather, made even the musician recognise that such events have far more than a merely musical charm, and that the music itself is enhanced by many other impressions from the golden days of autumn, whose light slants downwards through the solemnities of Gothic architecture in softening rays as we sit and listen. The Festival was well attended, and on the whole so completely successful that it may be said once more to have established the Three Choirs Festivals on a pre-war footing. The listener familiar with the musical world will miss here most of all the aggressive mastery of the conductor's art which in general dominates the modern world of music. Its absence is the more felt as the vastness of the Cathedral dims the sharper outlines of music, and only the most masterful handling of music could make itself felt or appreciated. The personnel of the London Symphony Orchestra showed a most admirable loyalty to Mr. Ivor Atkins in combating this special difficulty, and the playing never during the week lost the refinement of execution or expression for which the Orchestra is famous.

Elgar and Elgar's music have done a great deal for the Festivals in recent years. Not only does the composer's presence as conductor of his own works do much towards keeping the performances abreast with the times, but it makes music understood as a creative art more properly in the Western counties than in any other part of the country. There were special circumstances in the reorganization of the choir that justified the inclusion of well-known works; but it may be noted for the encouragement of the musical pilgrim who finds 'Elijah' and 'Messiah' at any and every musical Festival, that such works no longer hold pride of place at these West country Festivals, and the routinized adhesion to them has therefore at least some distant prospect of being broken down.

The Festival has rarely boasted a finer set of vocal principals, and if, as was said, they considered in their fees the precarious nature of the undertaking, and the historic claims of the Festival on their loyalty, they were at least rewarded by one of the most pleasant functions they can ever have experienced. A virtue might even be made of some necessity for economy in future Festivals by the inclusion of more a cappella music. The one unaccompanied Motet by Hubert Parry, 'There is an Old Belief,' illustrated how much the very walls of the cathedrals cry out for this type of music, and probably no musicians are so well able as the cathedral organists to interpret it for us. If the space of a complete day during the Festival were devoted to this field of music, the pilgrim would then have something to take away which he would be little likely to find equalled in the busier centres of the art.

The opening performance of 'Elijah' lacked mainly a dominating figure in the title-part. Captain Heyner sang in many ways finely enough, but allowed himself to make good the deficiency of grandeur by a richness of discursive sentiment hardly suitable to the prophetic character. The prophet may neither seek for his words, nor temper them, nor dally with them. His part is to precipitate events. Mendelssohn could not write without sentiment, but he who interprets Mendelssohn's 'Elijah' must draw a sharp line between the fervour or animation of sentiment and its delays or reflections. The first tenor air is designed rather to pour into the work the fulness of sentiment not permissible to the main characters, and Mr. Elwes was by this reckoning a little too grudging of it.

The finest part of Captain Heyner's singing was, strangely enough, the difficult closing air, 'For the mountains shall depart,' which is often a failure with more imposing singers. The angelic numbers of the oratorio have what may be called an idyllic sentiment, and there is so much of the picturesque in their suggestion, that Sir Henry Wood's plan of having them sung in the background and at some little altitude has much to recommend it. There was something wanting in the machinery of these numbers at Worcester, and they were finely-sung without having their true idyllic effect. The pure dramatic style is strong and direct even where discontinuous, but the dramatic picturesqueness which we find in Mendelssohn and Weber is shifting and broken, and demands the nicest discrimination at every transition if its miracles and illusions are to work. The performance was less rich in illuminating incident than its general musical effect.

'The Music Makers' is among the slowest of Elgar's works to win its way into the public mind. It sings a rather complex view of progress in its relation to the arts and to life, and as a subject for music the poem has the disadvantage of being more clear as a whole than in its details, and the application of the music is also made complex by the fact that Elgar has here followed the manner of Richard Strauss in making himself more or less the hero of the story through biographical quotations from his own works. Many will remember the extreme eulogy of the poet O'Shaughnessy by Palgrave in the preface to his latest edition of the 'Golden Treasury,' and his forecast that a poet of such pure style will become better and better known. 'The Music Makers,' like 'Gerontius,' enshrines both a poetic and a musical genius, and if a space of some years divides the composition of the work from its full appreciation, the delay will do no more than illustrate afresh the arguments of the work itself. The revolving sequence of urgent harmony, which is Elgar's most personal contribution to musical technique, is more constantly employed in this work than in any, and the orchestral rushes—which in the first performance at Birmingham sounded a little noisy for the substance of the poem—had a softened grandeur in the Cathedral, and were here among the most effective features of the work. The final chromatic harmonies, which tell of the 'singer who sings no more,' were admired above all, and as they softened away in the gloom of the Cathedral their thrilling effect was felt by all. They set a seal of importance on the work which will bring many a listener back to it with a more inquiring interest than has been so far devoted to it. The impression of smallness made by the first performance was transformed in the atmosphere of the Cathedral to an impression more profound. Miss Desmond sang the contralto solo parts finely as regards the higher notes and somewhat dimly in the lower phrases, and the choir answered well to the composer's most impetuous demands.

The new valuation of Elgar by the players of the London Symphony Orchestra since the performance of his second Symphony in the spring, is now apparent in every note played under his baton. 'The Dream of Gerontius,' which opened the music on September 8, promised at first to be a unique interpretation, and throughout the playing maintained a unique standard. Morning is a trying time for the amateur singer, and had 'Gerontius' been fixed for later in the day probably its intonation would have been as fine as was heard later in other music, for there was no want of firmness. As it was, the intonation fell somewhat short of the ideal, which was the greater pity as that was the one flaw in the whole work. Even the difficult ejaculations of the demons' chorus had their definite musical pitch, and were not merely a shout, as in most performances. Few works have the charm of unity so perfect as we find it in 'Gerontius.' The intensity with which the prelude opens is maintained almost to the very last, and even the more pendulous movement of the second part softens without weakening the tension. If the composer gains hardness or incisiveness from the unflinching dogma of the text, the poem in turn wins a graciousness that only the music of genius could bestow. The technique of the music is so self-dependent that one may almost call it underived from anything outside the composer's imagination, and even the fugue is new-born, when we find it made the vehicle of litanies so spontaneously antiphonal and cumulative as its voices here. Mr. Coates sang the title-part from memory, and as finely as ever. It must be accounted an extraordinary thing that the generation which has produced 'Gerontius' should have produced also two singers so peculiarly fitted to sing it as Mr. Coates and Mr. Elwes. To combine the intense and the graphic with such a total freedom from the sensuous as they have done in this work would seem almost an impossibility. Captain Heyner sang finely without making the two baritone solos as overwhelming in their separate ways as some few great singers have made them, and Madame Kirkby Lunn, if she allows the Angel to betray some symptoms of anger, yet sings superbly enough to set certain terrific moments in a new dramatic light, and to reveal in them some unregarded strokes of the composer's genius.

For the afternoon there was 'a solemn music' in memory of Charles Hubert Hastings Parry, Charles Harford Lloyd, and George Robertson Sinclair.

It opened with the three Equali of Beethoven for a quartet of trombones, one of which was, we think on this occasion, replaced by the tuba. The notes of this music are few, and except for one short imitative entry move in simultaneous harmony. They illustrate the peculiar genius of Beethoven for the choice of impressive harmony, in which his sublimity surpasses that of every composer the world has known. These solemn chords, played, unlike the rest of the music, at the eastern end of the building, and softening along its whole length until the instruments sounded much like the diapason notes of an organ, revealed the length of the building as nothing else had done, and made one realise anew the interdependence of music and architecture. The Motet 'There is an Old Belief,' Lockhart's verses on the eternal reunion of friendship, come with a peculiar grace among Parry's 'Songs of Farewell.' The words are already endeared to the heart of almost every reader, and the music of Parry, which shows his highest art of manifold melody, is quite likely with the aid of its beautiful text to become the most popular of all his compositions. With his Miltonic Ode, 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' it stood well for both himself and his departed colleagues. Both pieces were finely sung, as the occasion demanded, the Motet with that fond impressiveness of vocal notes which seem to cling about the walls of great cathedrals, and the ode with the heaped up climaxes which also later in the Symphony by César Franck it seemed the one musical joy of Mr. Ivor Atkins to build. Prof. Walford Davies's 'Fantasy'—for tenor solo, chorus, and orchestra, composed for the abandoned Festival of 1914, on a passage from the 'Divine Comedy' of Dante, where the soul of Statius feels itself freed to seek the higher sphere and is greeted with shouts of 'Gloria'—carried the eye of faith more definitely forward, and took us back to the musical method and medium of 'Gerontius.' But the joy of Prof. Davies's music is more intangible. The attempted admixture of a divine humility with a heavenly ecstasy is a paradox which seems to lean, in all but one glorious outburst, to something of weakness, and the voice of Statius himself seems in one passage too much overborne for any substantial effect. Where ideas transcend, the power of the composer must transcend equally or the result is doubtful. Perhaps after all it is the strongly sensuous imagination, as in the example of Wagner, that can most safely attempt these heavenly flights, for there music is in little danger of losing its hold on our human feelings.

The secular concert in the Public Hall found place for no less than five West country composers, and the music-makers of Worcester gained a notable recruit in Mr. Alexander Brent-Smith, an old choir boy of the Cathedral and now music-master at Lancing College in Sussex. His 'Worcester Rhapsody' showed him already a composer of capacity, with a ready and engaging technique, definite ideas, and a commonsense handling of them, and although in conducting the piece he was making a first essay, his control of the orchestra was free and unruffled. He gave every promise of becoming a master of the craft. The introductory slow movement of his Rhapsody is inspired by the historic glories of Worcester, which it illustrates more perhaps in a ceremonial than a romantic way, and with an effective orchestration that contrasts well with the lively second movement bringing in the Worcester Brawle of Tomkins, organist of the Cathedral in the time of Charles I. The manner is contentious and the invention both lively and ready, and though the poetic gifts of the young composer are less evident than the musical, the music has a genius beyond a purely academic quality. Home is home in music as in other things, and the 'Four Worcestershire Sketches' of Mr. Julius Harrison found both a more genial presentation and a more full-hearted acceptance at this concert than previously in other places. The breadth of the composer's humorous implications in treating the air of 'The Ledbury Parson' was by no means to be mistaken here, and Mr. Harrison, being able to trust the appreciation of his hearers, gave a performance which aroused a spontaneous enthusiasm. He has been inclined to toy with a pensive romanticism, but his contrapuntal gift is so warm and overflowing that it is a pity if it is restrained by any too fastidious aims. There were songs of Mr. Atkins and Dr. Brewer, also enthusiastically received, but here, as in the Cathedral, the genius of Elgar was supreme, and his Introduction and Allegro for Strings, wonderfully played, and haunted by a melody first conceived, as he tells us, between the blue of the sea and the blue of the sky on the cliffs of Cardiganshire, and reborn from the singing of a labourer in the Wye Valley, had the authentic note of romance not yet captured by other composers of the Western Counties. The close of Wagner's 'Twilight of the Gods' and the 'Scheherazade' Suite of Rimsky-Korsakoff were music of more ambition and scope but of less effect in the small room.

On Thursday morning the 'St. Matthew' Passion music of Bach attracted one of the largest audiences of the week, and the Lord Mayor of London, who visited the Festival for this performance, was entertained by the Mayor of Worcester along with the civic dignitaries of the adjacent towns. A curious address was presented, in which Worcester claimed a certain superiority over London itself in the support of music, from its having offered hospitality to Italian singers at a time when London denied it. The Passion music was the main musical achievement of the week. It was given in the edition specially prepared for the Festivals by Mr. Atkins and Sir Edward Elgar, and the greatest care was taken in the presentation of every detail. The antiphonal effects were so carefully considered that a separate organ was provided on each side of the platform, and in the arioso sections that mark the words of Jesus, a thin veil of organ tone was added for the sake of solemnity to the string parts of Bach. (It should be mentioned that the organ parts here and at other times were in the safe hands of Dr. Brewer and Mr. Percy Hull, the Gloucester and Hereford organists.) The choruses for the disciples were allotted to an appropriately small choir. Nowhere during the week was the quality of the playing more remarkable than in the difficult obbligati for solo instruments which accompany the airs in this work. Each one of them demands a lifetime of musical culture for the necessary refinement of execution, the graceful treatment of its antiquarian ornamentation, its intricacy and freedom of rhythm, and above all, for the tenderness of feeling which lives in every note. Some had to be played also on instruments which are in a measure obsolete, and required a special preparation for their performance. The best of players are in such things the true model for the best of singers. Mr. W. H. Reed (violin), Mr. R. Purcell Jones (viola da gamba), Messrs. W. S. Hinchcliff, Horace Halstead, and W. H. Shepley (oboi d'amore, and oboe da caccia), all played with a certainty of interpretation and execution which were practically without flaw. The principals were almost absolutely the pick of the country for the work. Miss Agnes Nicholls sang the soprano airs with an admirable purity of style, a rich pathos, and all the splendour one could imagine as appropriate. Miss Astra Desmond needed only a little further hardness of tone in some places, and in the duets, to be an equal colleague. Mr. Gervase Elwes sang the narrative parts, not without effort, but with every sort of tactful expression and expedition. Mr. Steuart Wilson sang the tenor airs in a style finely related, and only here and there ineffectual because he so far eschewed the routine aspects of vocal culture. Captain Heyner sang the words of Jesus with deep feeling and more effectively than he had sung anything else in the Festival, and Mr. Radford gave the bass airs at the end of the work with an equal beauty and solemnity. The chorus singing was a great deal more supple than any pre-war singing of Bach's choruses, and while one might argue for ever about details in the treatment of such music, nobody could question the general beauty of the whole performance. After such music, the 'Requiem' of Verdi, in the evening, was a kind of surfeit, but the choir seemed to enjoy the contrast, and sang with an unrestrained vigour and splendour. The quartet was also an imposing one, and Mr. Norman Allin sang the bass part not only with the commanding power which it allows, but with a finer and more easeful gradation of tone than we had previously heard in his singing. Miss Carrie Tubb, who was a little out of health, failed to keep a pure intonation during the precarious octave passage which opens the 'Agnus Dei,' but sang otherwise with her usual power and splendour of tone. Madame Kirkby Lunn and Mr. Coates were more perfect, and the playing had all the pomp in which the music lives.

From one extreme we have gone to another, and to-day we are breeding a school of singers who condemn everything beyond the most naturalistic aspects of vocal style. Dr. Vaughan Williams may perhaps be regarded as the leader of this new virility, and his 'Four Hymns' for tenor solo, written for this Festival, and drawn from the metaphysical school of sacred poetry, eschew on two accounts the professional amenities of vocalisation. Mr. Steuart Wilson is the exemplary scholar of the school, and we recognise in him many fine and sound traits of musical style, and think him perhaps the possessor of the best young tenor voice in England. But none of these virtues excuse him for singing out of tune, or for getting out of breath in the middle of a phrase, as he did sometimes in these new songs. We do not need to grow so artless, or so English, that we cannot face the problems of sustained tone and harmonized vowel sounds, as these problems are understood by singers in general. Singing is not speaking, after all; nor is speech so vocal as it well might be. Folly of one kind should not lead to folly of another.

Music of national expression, such as Elgar's 'For the Fallen,' can hardly claim its due observance at the end of a long festival. It needs ceremony and a certain amount of isolation for its full effect. Miss Tubb sang very finely in this work, and its general grandeur of movement was achieved under the spur of the composer's baton.

'Messiah' was sung on the concluding day, not without serious though only momentary flaws. But taken for all in all, the Festival was vastly creditable to all concerned. May the next be as happy and successful.

The record would not be complete without a special word of praise to Mr. Ivor Atkins, on whose shoulders the brunt of the difficult work of reorganization has fallen, and to whom so much of the success was due. It should be added, too, that Church and organ music was fitly made much of at the largely-attended daily services in the Cathedral, the choirs of the Three Towns joining forces with admirable results.

VINCENT D'INDY'S VIEW OF HARMONY

BY RICHARD CAPELL

Readers of the Musical Times have lately been made aware of M. Saint-Saëns's interesting strictures on the 'Course of Composition'* of M. Vincent d'Indy, but, in the absence of a translation of the work, are still perhaps too ignorant as to its positive qualities. Dr. Ethel Smyth has declared that she often looks into the 'Orchestration' of Berlioz from sheer pleasure in the style. M. d'Indy's 'Composition,' too, has a spirit and a manner of its own, and it is easy to imagine a musician, though well beyond the aid afforded by the usual depressing kinds of musical manuals, turning similarly to this book, the harvest of a fertile mind and fine artistic conscience. As for the younger student, if he finds nothing new or newly stimulating in the actual instruction and information, one can only say that he must have been uncommonly lucky in his teachers and his reading.

* 'Cours de Composition Musicale,' par Vincent d'Indy, avec collaboration de Auguste Sérierx. 2 vols. Paris (Durand).

THE ONE CHORD.

Since in few lines it is not possible to indicate M. d'Indy's whole scope, one may preferably try just to point to the main lines in one or two chapters, and those in the first volume on Harmony and Tonality may serve well enough to illustrate his temper. And here as prelude are some of his General Notions:

Musically, chords do not exist, and harmony is not the science of chords.

The study of chords for their own sake is from the musical point of view an absolute æsthetic error. Musical phenomena ought always to be thought of in the horizontal direction.

Harmony results from the superposition of two or more different melodies, and the generating principle of harmony is the Chord.

In music, there exists, not Chords, but one Chord.

Whence this one Chord? From nature, from the emission of any single tone.

M. d'Indy's student is exhorted to weave into the very texture of his thought the existence of the series of Upper and Lower Partial (or rather of the earlier ones). If one cannot hear them in nature, one is to realise them 'by second nature.' He covers well-known ground by demonstrating the first six of both harmonic series, and the weight of his emphasis is of course against any lingering notion in his student's mind of a 'fundamental bass.'

In France, as elsewhere, the tares sown in the 17th century still seem unexterminated, and M. d'Indy is the man with the scythe. The 17th century, an epoch odious in our author's eyes, tainted music with the spirit of the Renaissance of the 16th century, and 'from its tendencies, full of pretentiousness and individualistic vanity, came about a stoppage in the development of all the arts from which we are still suffering.' The vulgarity of four-bar melody; the tyranny of the bar-division; our 'irregular and hybrid' minor scale; and the vicious Thoroughbass are all 17th century legacies.

M. d'Indy evidently finds insistence desirable to dispel from the student's mind the notion of a 'bottom note,' of a bass which is a foundation to an edifice—the true notion of course being that of radiation; your deepest possible 'bass' ever radiating still lower as well as upper harmonics.

M. d'Indy then is with Hugo Riemann and other well-known company in finding 'The Chord' in the harmonic series—that is, the 'major common chord' in the first six upper partials and the 'minor' in the lower—from a given Prime.

'Major' and 'minor' are terms which M. d'Indy, while exclaiming at their impropriety, continues to use as a concession to custom.

The preponderance [says M. d'Indy] attributed by the theorists to the lowest note of the Chord—a preponderance dating back to the establishment of Thoroughbass, one of the principles of the Renaissance which contributed most to falsifying the study of Harmony—brought it about that the lower of the two 3rds (in the close position of the common chord) was generally considered as characteristic. Hence the denominations of 'major' and 'minor' applied indiscriminately to common chords, scales, and modes. These denominations are unjustifiable, since in the so-called 'minor' chord—which is in no wise smaller than the other—the principal note or Prime is the highest of the three. That one then should be taken as the starting point not only of the Chord but also of the Scale, by virtue of the law of symmetry which rules the phenomena of harmonic resonance.

Since the Chord termed (improperly) minor reproduces in inverse order the elements constituting the (so-called) major chord, the same symmetry should obtain in the scales corresponding to the two forms. Nature has ordained a beautiful symmetry between the upward and downward series of harmonics. Shall man do less with his diatonic scales? If we say 'No,' then, given the diatonic upward (major) scale of C to C on the white keys of the pianoforte the relative downward (minor) scale will proceed from E to E (on the white keys). This is M. d'Indy's E minor scale, which reproduces inversely the intervals of the upward (major) scale in the same order. It is of course no innovation, but the Hypo-Æolian mode of mediæval music.

What for us constitutes the Mode [says M. d'Indy] is simply the way in which the chord and its corresponding scale are regarded. According as we take as our starting-point the Prime of the Upper Harmonic series, or that of the Lower, the Mode is 'major' or 'minor.' The Mode, like the chord which furnishes its characteristic intervals, is then one in principle and susceptible of taking two aspects, different and opposed.

THE CYCLE OF 5THS

Finding the common chord in the harmonic series Nos. 1 to 6, M. d'Indy has no further use for the series. The 7th, too flat in the upper series and too sharp in the lower to serve our art, and the fainter and (except as they double at the octave preceding intervals) mostly indescribable sounds belong to science, and not to practical music. The source of other constituents of our scale, diatonic and so-called chromatic, is to be sought elsewhere.

In effect, at the present stage of our musical understanding, our ears have no use for the 7th harmonic (say the flat B $\flat$ above the Prime C). Our ears declare it flat in relation to what? In relation to that other B $\flat$ which is the lower 5th of the lower 5th (otherwise the third lower harmonic of the third lower harmonic) of our Prime C. For the ear grasps more easily the relation of 1 to 9, that is, the 3rd of a 3rd, than that of 1 to 7.

In the preference of our unadventurous ears for the simplest of relationships, 1 to 3 (that is, tonic to dominant) is indeed to be found all our harmony. For though we see in the fifth harmonic the mediant of the Chord, the relations of 1 to 3 and its multiples are, single-handed, 'able to furnish us in logical order with all the elements of the [chromatic] scale, to the exclusion of any foreign element' (such as the more far-fetched harmonics). In effect, if, with M. d'Indy, we frankly accept the principle of equal temperament and ignore with him as 'inappreciable in practice' the difference in intonation of the sounds obtained by a series of 3rds and by one of 5ths, we possess in the dominant-tonic relationship a cycle—C (B $\sharp$ or D $\flat$) to G (F $\sharp$ or A $\flat$) round the wheel to F (E $\sharp$ or G $\flat$)—embracing all the dramatis personæ of our so-called 'chromatic' scale.

THE THREE TONAL FUNCTIONS

'Chromatic' is another of the improper terms on which M. d'Indy frowns. There are different degrees of intimacy between various members of our family of twelve—he classes these degrees as three—but no one sound can be regarded as foreign to any established tonality. Relationships of the first two degrees compose the diatonic scale.

The relationship of the first degree binds a tonic to its natural consonant harmonics. The relationship of the second degree binds a tonic to the natural consonant harmonics of its 5th, upper or lower.

Relationship of the third degree is established, according to circumstances, in various ways; but extends more particularly (a) to the natural consonant harmonics of sounds linked to the tonic by relationship of the second degree, (b) to harmonics of different mode originating from sounds linked to the tonic by relationship of the first or second degrees.

The relationship of the third degree may be considered as the extreme limit of Tonality in the present state of our musical understanding.

In this chapter on Tonality appears M. d'Indy's Table of Cadences, and here, still holding to the principle of symmetry found in the two harmonic series and applied to the two modes, one is not now surprised to find the cadence of 'D minor' resolving on 'A minor' termed 'Authentic Minor'—since the true Prime of 'D minor' is A, which is the lower (minor) dominant of 'A minor,' whose true Prime is E. Thus:

AUTHENTIC CADENCE OF THE MODE OF THE LOWER RESONANCE ('MINOR')

Ex. 1.

Let us here mention another of M. d'Indy's amiable concessions. He is content as a rule still to call his minor tonalities not by the names of their (true) tonics, but by those of their (true) dominants, thereby in practice falling in with the common custom.

The argument on harmony began with the assertion that there is but one chord. Harmony, due to the superposition of different melodies, is nothing but the setting in movement of the chord. Now this movement is a perpetual oscillation between the upper and lower 5ths—call them, for convenience, the dominants and subdominants. The chord, then, can take on three different characters, according to the effect of a cadence expressed or understood. It can act (a) as the starting-point or common measure, (b) as the determinative of an oscillation towards the upper 5th, or (c) towards the lower 5th. The tonal functions of the chord are then three. In the major mode the chord of common measure fills the function of tonic, that of the upper 5th the function of dominant, that of the lower 5th the function of subdominant. In the minor mode the original chord too is of the tonic function, but its top note is its Prime, so that the chord of the lower 5th plays the part of dominant, and that of the upper 5th that of subdominant.

The whole knowledge of harmony is thus reduced to discerning the three tonal functions of the chord with the aid of cadences—that is, by the strict application of the principle of tonality. So regarded, the motion of harmony becomes highly simplified, and is thus summed up by M. d'Indy:

There is but one chord, the Common Chord, alone consonant because it alone gives the sensation of rest and equilibrium. The chord manifests itself under two different aspects, major and minor, according as it is engendered from below to above or from above to below. The chord is susceptible of taking on three different tonal functions according as it is tonic, dominant, or subdominant.

All the rest of harmonic analysis is the spinning of words. What are called 'dissonances' are merely passing modifications which are not to be heard or explained otherwise than melodically. All the combinations of sounds termed 'dissonant chords' spring from melodic successions in movement, and can always be reduced to one of the three tonal functions. These combinations, which to be examined necessitate an artificial stoppage in the melodies constituting them, have no existence of their own, and the consideration of them in themselves, and for their own sake, is foreign to the art of music. So, on page 113, M. d'Indy brushes into the blue all the species of 7ths 'catalogued in the text-books under wild and fantastic denominations.' And later he makes severe fun of different harmonic analyses of the second and third (full) bars of the Prelude to 'Tristan and Isolde.' M. d'Indy, for whom the chord of the second bar is the tonal chord of A in the subdominant function, melodically contracted on itself, analyses it thus:

Ex. 2.

and finds the progression the simplest imaginable.

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

(Continued from September number, page 594)

BY HARVEY GRACE

III.—THE 'LITTLE ORGAN BOOK'

The Bach revival has had two phases. The musical world of a generation ago, as the stream of rescued works poured forth year after year, was naturally disposed to acclaim the two qualities of Bach that first leapt to the eye—his fecundity and skill. To-day we are well in the second phase, and accent is now laid on the emotional side of his work—so much so that there is sometimes a tendency to read into the music more than is actually there. Before many years are past we shall see Bach whole. His skill will be none the less appreciated for the recognition that in all but a few cases it was a means to an end rather than an end in itself. Indeed, bearing in mind his amazing technique, the final verdict will be one of surprise that Bach so rarely fell into the trap that proved fatal to the more deft of his successors—the use of skill for skill's sake.

It was in some ways unfortunate that the first of Bach's works to become known in England were fugues. We are only now recovering from the resultant tendency to fasten on to this part of his output at the expense of the rest. A surprisingly large proportion of musicians are still unaware that the avowed fugues are far outnumbered by the movements that are not fugal or in which fugal writing is merely incidental. Many organists have failed to realise that of the seventeen volumes of organ music comprised in the Novello edition only nine are labelled as collections of preludes and fugues, and even these contain a good number of pieces that are not fugues.*

The first Bach apostles in this country were chiefly organists, and for a long time the public took most of its slender allowance of Bach via the organ-loft, with the result that the words 'Bach' and 'fugue' came to be regarded as synonyms. The handicap under which the Chorale Preludes have suffered here is shown by the fact that the first complete English edition was published only a few years ago, long after the other organ works had become familiar, and in some cases hackneyed.

There were reasons for the slowness with which the Chorale Preludes have made their way among us. In many cases the melodic bases were either unknown or difficult to trace in the texture of the music. Even where the tune was familiar or easily followed, the emotional significance of the movement was missed through ignorance of the text. Further confusion was caused by some tunes being sung in this country to hymns contrary in sentiment to those Bach had in mind when writing the preludes on those chorales. Thus for generations we have associated a well-known tune of Luther with the Advent hymn 'Great God, what do I see and hear?' Turning to Bach's Prelude thereon we find, not the solemn movement we expect, but a piece singularly light-hearted—almost trivial. The explanation is that the Germans sang the melody to two texts, one dealing with the last Judgment ('Es ist gewisslich an der Zeit'—'Tis sure that awful Time will come'), and the other a thanksgiving hymn ('Nun freut euch, lieben Christen g'mein'—'Be glad now, all ye Christian men'). The organ piece is concerned with the latter. Bach has used the tune in its Advent aspect in the cantata 'Watchet, betet,' giving it to two trumpets in the accompaniment to the bass recitative, 'Ah, shall not this great day of wrath.'

A further example occurs in the case of the chorale sung in England to the Passion hymn, 'O sinner, lift the eye of faith.' Bach wrote no less than ten Preludes on this melody, but the organist who goes to them for a Passiontide voluntary will be disappointed. All the settings are festive, because in Bach's day the tune was sung to a metrical version of the 'Gloria in Excelsis.'

Until recently not more than one English organist in a hundred knew what Bach was driving at in the Chorale Preludes as a whole. We were confronted with collections of pieces bearing German titles, with no hint as to pace, power, or registration. Sometimes the thematic basis could be identified and followed, but more often not. In many cases it was even impossible to say whether the music was intended to be joyful or sad. We need not be surprised that the puzzle was laid aside in favour of Preludes and Fugues that carried their message on their face. The Chorale Preludes have not yet recovered from this early handicap, but they are now in a fair way to do so, thanks to the help afforded by the English versions, and by such recent additions to Bach literature as the volumes by Pirro, Schweitzer, Parry, and Sanford Terry. It is safe to say that no organist who has persevered and got at the heart of these wonderful works will ever rank them lower than Bach's other organ music. He will be more likely to rank them higher, by virtue of their intimate character, their diversity of form, and their amazingly wide emotional range.

As we have seen, variations on chorales were among Bach's earliest attempts at composition. He worked pretty constantly in this field; in fact, he ended his career, as he began it, with an organ piece of the type, dictating a chorale prelude as he lay blind on his deathbed. Altogether there are nearly a hundred of such works collected by Bach himself into five sets. The first of these—the 'Orgelbüchlein'—now falls due in our chronological survey, most of its numbers having been written at Weimar.

The 'Little Organ Book' (xv.) has been one of the most discussed of all Bach's organ works. There are several reasons for this—some musical, some historical and personal. The personal interest is twofold. Not only is the music unusually intimate, even for Bach: there is the added interest that attaches to unfinished works of art; for, as we shall see, the collection is but a small part of a big scheme that was never carried out.

* Although the volumes are numbered i.-xix., the thirteenth and fourteenth are now superseded, their contents appearing in the later books.

The title-page shows that Bach's first aim was educational:

The 'Little Organ Book,' wherein instruction is given to a beginning organist to work out a chorale in every style, also to perfect himself in the study of the pedal, the pedal being treated quite obligato throughout in the chorales herein contained. To the honour of the Lord Most High, and that my neighbour may be taught thereby. Autore Joanne Sebast. Bach. p.t. Capellæ Magistro S. [erenissimi] P. [rincipis] R. [egnantis] Anhaltini-Cothnensis.

The reference to Cothen led Spitta and subsequent biographers to conclude that the autograph was written at that place. But Dr. Sanford Terry in the Musical Times of March, 1917, points out that the expression 'pro tempore' (p.t.) has evidently been misinterpreted. Bach secured the Cothen appointment before being released from his Weimar duties, partly through pique at the Capellmeistership at Weimar, then vacant, being given to Dröse. For some time the Duke refused to accept his resignation. On November 6, 1717, Bach peremptorily demanded immediate release—which was very like a peppery composer; whereupon his employer had him imprisoned—which was no less like a Grand Duke. Bach remained under arrest until December 2, when he was allowed to leave for Cothen.

Dr. Terry suggests that Bach described himself as 'pro tempore' Cappellmeister at Cothen because although he had been appointed, he was detained at Weimar under protest, with no certainty of being able to take up his new work. It is thus extremely probable that Bach passed some of his four weeks' imprisonment in planning and making a fair copy of the 'Little Organ Book.'

This autograph, now in the Royal Library at Berlin, contains a hundred and eighty-four pages. Bach intended the collection to consist of a hundred and sixty-four pieces on a hundred and sixty-one tunes, three of these being used twice. He allowed one page for each movement, writing at the head of each page the title of the chorale to be treated thereon. This drastic rationing led to trouble in the case of some of the longer movements, pieces of paper being pasted on, or the tablature—a kind of letter notation—being employed. Of the hundred and sixty-four pieces planned, only forty-six were composed.

Spitta tells us that in 1879 he found another autograph, which had been in the possession of Mendelssohn, who had cut out several leaves and given them to his fiancée and Clara Schumann. This copy was obviously earlier than the one we have been considering, and contained about eight pieces fewer. Moreover, the order was quite different—an important point, as we shall see.

So little was it realised that Bach had any definite plan in view, that only two editions—the original Bachgesellschaft and the Novello—retain the original order. Some editors have rearranged the pieces in alphabetical sequence, while others have mixed them with other chorale preludes.

Until the appearance of Dr. Sanford Terry's three articles on the subject in the Musical Times of January, February, and March, 1917, it was held that Bach intended the collection to be a kind of musical Christian Year. As left by him, the book falls clearly into sections for Advent, Christmas, New Year, Epiphany, Passiontide, Easter, and Whitsuntide. Further subdivisions are suggested by Dr. Terry. But as all but a few of the forty-six completed pieces are in the early part of the book, this leaves practically the whole of the numbers from fifty to a hundred and sixty-four untouched. Nobody seems to have wondered what Bach had in his mind when arranging these later chorales. It was left to Dr. Terry to work out a scheme that certainly seems convincing, both in itself and because it is just the kind of thing that we may imagine Bach doing. Dr. Terry's theory is that Bach intended the book to be in two parts, the first consisting of sixty movements dealing with the Church's seasons and festivals, the second and larger portion illustrating the Christian life. I have not space to go into further details. Readers will find the whole hypothetical plan in the first of the three articles referred to.

Usually there is little room for speculation as to why a composer has left a work unfinished: death has applied the closure. But how came it that this ambitious scheme, planned and got well under way while Bach was still a young man, was not completed? Schweitzer thinks that the chorales treated were those that lent themselves best to the pictorial treatment Bach had in view, and that he found the bulk unsuitable. But, as Mr. Newman points out, it is too great a strain to put down to mere chance the fact that the most workable tunes should all appear in a lump at the beginning of the book. Moreover, Bach's aptitude for seizing on and illustrating some picturesque word was not likely to fail him here, where it had such scope for effective employment. We need not look far for an explanation. Bach either tired of the task or never found the leisure and the right mood happening in conjunction. As Dr. Terry shows, the completed part was of practical use, covering as it did the Church's year, whereas the remainder was a pious and rather fanciful extra. The first enthusiasm over, there was little inducement to spend time over work of slight utility in the regular duties of an organist.

A great deal—perhaps a great deal too much—has been made of the pictorial features of these preludes. In all but a few cases the method is that of a single plain presentation of the chorale with an accompaniment in which a figure of a descriptive character is employed, sometimes as an ostinato. The figure is intended to illustrate the general sentiment of the hymn, but we are not surprised to find Bach occasionally allowing himself to be captured by a picturesque phrase—sometimes even a single word—rather than by the text as a whole. Sometimes this trait has led to a misunderstanding of the sentiment of a movement, as will be shown later.

Both Schweitzer and Pirro have gone very thoroughly into the construction of the characteristic figures used in the Cantatas as well as in the organ works—Bach's 'musical language,' as Schweitzer calls it. Readers who wish to study the subject in detail may be referred to chapters xxi.-xxiii. of Schweitzer's 'J. S. Bach' and chapters i.-vi. and x. of Pirro's 'L'Esthetique de Jean-Sebastien Bach' (When will someone give us a translation of this fine work?) For our present purpose the quotation of a few of the more definite motives will suffice. All are to be found in the 'Little Organ Book.'

Bach expresses grief in two ways. Here is the little chromatic phrase used with such poignant effect in 'Das alte Jahr vergangen ist' ('The old Year is Dying'):

The other 'grief' motive is diatonic, and its chief point lies in the two-note grouping. A good example of one of its forms appears in the prelude on the Passiontide hymn 'O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig' ('O Lamb of God, Saviour'):

(The phrasing is Bach's.) At the right slow pace, the effect is that of a series of sighs. See also the long chorus which ends the first part of the 'St. Matthew' Passion—'O man, thy heavy sin lament'—where the figure persists in the accompaniment throughout.

Sometimes the expression is mainly through rhythm. Syncopation is employed to depict exhaustion or lassitude, e.g., the bass of 'Da Jesus an dem Kreuze stund' ('When on the Cross the Saviour hung'), which is syncopated throughout on this plan:

Other instances will be found in the pedal part of the preludes beginning on pages 53 and 76.

The motive of adoration and gladness is also dependent chiefly on its rhythm. Here is the form used in 'Herr Gott, nun sei gepreiset' ('Lord God, now we praise Thee'):

For modifications of this figure see the pedal part on pages 15, 195, and 119. The third of these examples, by the by, has until lately been entirely misunderstood. The hymn is one for the dying, the first verse being as follows:

'Hark!' a voice saith, 'All are mortal,
Yea, all flesh must fade as grass,
Only through Death's gloomy portal
To a better life ye pass,
And this body formed of clay,
Here must languish and decay,
Ere it rise in glorious might,
Fit to dwell with saints in light.'

Speaking of the little piece illustrative of this hymn, Spitta says: 'What tender melancholy lurks in the chorale "Alle Menschen müssen sterben" ("All mankind alike must die"), what an indescribable expression, for instance, arises in the last bar from the false relation between C sharp and C, and the almost imperceptible ornamentation of the melody!' And Ernst Naumann, who edited the Breitkopf edition, taking the same view, marked the piece serioso. But with our knowledge of Bach's system of motives, we are able to see that the prelude is concerned not with death, but with resurrection. Instead of taking the obvious course of writing a dirge, Bach looked at the last two lines, and accompanied the chorale with the joy motive, which appears without break in the pedal part, and in 3rds and 6ths in the left hand, thus:

The direction in the Novello edition—lento e tranquillo—is quite in keeping with this idea, as it expresses a contemplative joy. The piece is no less effective played with fair pace and power.

Bach has yet two more 'joy' motives—a series of quavers or semiquavers founded on scale-passages and a phrase with a strongly-marked rhythm. The former is usually combined with other features. The rhythmical figure is used in the inner parts of the prelude on 'Mit Fried' und Freud' ich fahr' dahin' ('In peace and joy I now depart')—a metrical version of 'Nunc Dimittis':

For a particularly good example of Bach's use of this material turn to the prelude on the Easter hymn, 'Erschienen ist der herrliche Tag' ('The glorious day has dawned'), where the very telling canon between the two outer parts is filled in by the rhythmical 'joy' motive in 3rds and 6ths. The pace being quicker, the notation is different from that of the 'Nunc Dimittis' but the idea is the same:

EX. 7. Allegro moderato.
MAN. I.

The figure is used also on page 117 to express the joy of confidence in the Divine goodness.

Bach's fondness for programme music led him to make use of a number of motives which appeal as much to the eye as to the ear—sometimes even more so. But we must beware of attaching too much importance to some of them. For example, everybody knows that he uses a downward-plunging pedal part in 'Durch Adam's Fall ist ganz verderbt' ('Through Adam's fall mankind fell too'). The casual reader says, 'How naive!' or, 'What an absurd attempt at realism!' Even so sympathetic a critic as Parry calls it, 'A semi-humorous stroke of realistic suggestion,' and describes it as 'quaint.' Yet the pedal part is but one of several constituents. Let us look at the first two bars:

EX. 8.

Did Bach mean nothing by the close juxtaposition of the major and minor 3rds that accompany the first note of the chorale and appear in nearly every bar? And the character of the pedal leap is far more important than its direction. In almost every case it is a 7th, and usually a diminished 7th. The chromatic harmony is also a factor, especially in such passages as the fourth bar from the end, where we pass from G minor through E minor to G major:

EX. 9.

Hearing this piece for the first time one is scarcely more conscious of the bass than of the other parts. We feel that the total effect is one of intense melancholy, and undue attention to the bass would weaken the appeal because it would make one think of a physical fall. (Strauss uses the drop of a 7th in the bass to depict the hanging of Till Eulenspiegel. In this case the physical aspect is perhaps in keeping. Strauss's illustration is realistic: Bach's is symbolical.)

Similarly, commentators are too prone to note the fact that in the Easter chorale, 'Erstanden ist der heilige Christ' ('Risen is the holy Christ'), the pedal part consists chiefly of upward leaps of a 4th or 5th. They seize on this and tell us that Bach means it to represent the Resurrection. But if we look at the whole of the bass we shall see that no less than six of the fifteen leaps are downward—which is certainly a queer way of expressing a rising! The point about the bass is that the leaps are with but two exceptions perfect 5ths and 4ths—the boldest of intervals. The inner parts express joy and animation by scale-passages. When these passages rise they do so not in order to be pictorial, but because a rising scale is naturally more expressive of joy than a descending one. Here are the opening bars:

EX. 10. Allegro.

It is obviously a mistake to focus the attention on the pedal part.

Again, Schweitzer says that 'the symbolism of the prelude on "Dies sind die heil'gen zehn Gebot"' ('These are the holy ten commandments') is rather primitive. It consists in the tenfold recurrence in the pedal of the first melodic period.'

The number is more than ten, counting the inversions. Without them it is less, so there is something wrong somewhere. As the motive—a diminished form of the first line of the chorale—appears in the two inner parts as well as in the bass, it is clear that Bach was expressing the idea of insistence, rule, dogma—anything but arithmetic.

Here I leave the general consideration of the programmatic side of the music, partly because it will crop up from time to time as we deal with individual works, but even more because I am anxious not to lay undue stress on it. After all, these pieces must in the long run stand or fall as music. If any reader hitherto unacquainted with the 'Little Organ Book' has arrived at the end of this chapter with the feeling that the methods of expression employed by Bach are likely to lead to mechanical rather than æsthetic results, I ask him to keep an open mind until we have discussed the purely musical side of the work.

Before doing this, however, we must pause for a few moments on two of the most striking features, the use of canon and ground bass.

(To be continued.)

'JEAN-CHRISTOPHE': SOME MUSICAL ASPECTS OF THE WORK

BY W. WRIGHT ROBERTS

I.—'THE GERMAN LIE'

The fame of M. Romain Rolland's great novel-cycle was well-established before the war; to return to it in these days is an enterprise of peculiar interest. Twelve years may not have quite dimmed the feeling of dismay with which some music-lovers first read its indictment of the German musical classics. To some, the shrewd diagnosis of modern French music and its conditions is yet of much significance. And many years are likely to pass before enlightened opinion can ignore 'Jean-Christophe' as a work of art. It tells with superb force and insight the life-history of an artist soul: it is the first, if not the only, great musical novel.

We propose to touch in the present article on the first point indicated above: on the famous revolt of the hero of the work against certain aspects of German music, a revolt embodying, of course, many of M. Rolland's own views.

The open-minded musician of to-day does not accept German music with the old unquestioning faith. In the first place, he knows more than he did of other schools of music. Further, granting that the war and all it stands for cannot logically impair the worth of the German classics, a musician nowadays is only human if he questions where he once adored. He might do worse than follow M. Rolland's Christopher through the process of his mental revolution. We outline in a few words the first three sections of the story.

The scene is a little Rhine town and duchy, where some fifty years ago the musician, John Christopher Kraftt, is born. The author boldly models some of the details of his youth on incidents in the life of Beethoven. Exploited as a prodigy by his drunken father, the boy struggles up through years of poverty and the drudgery of teaching till, as Hofmusicus to the Duke, he has a certain standing in his native town. Surrounded by musical apathy and conservatism, he preserves his splendid natural gifts, his spirit of inquiry, his uncompromising sincerity of artistic purpose. A stormy adolescence threatens to wreck his moral nature. But he emerges at the beginning of the fourth section ('Revolt') with a man's knowledge of life, and sets in earnest about his musical mission.

His state of mind is made perfectly clear by the author. He is in the flush of young genius first fully conscious of its powers. He is 'permeated with his musical imagination'; he waits absorbedly on inspiration alone. He refuses the shaping work of the intelligence; for him every note must be pure gold of intuition. Already, in passionate revulsion, he has torn up his jejune boyish attempts. Then one memorable night he finds himself at a concert in the Tonhalle of the little town. There is an average sort of programme—among other things the 'Egmont' Overture and Wagner excerpts—songs by Schumann and Brahms, sung with majestic honesty' by a loud-voiced diva—part-songs 'alternately cooed and roared' by a male-voice choir. He has heard such things before and enjoyed them; but now from end to end they ring false. Christopher and his creator turn devil's advocates on the spot, and for pages some of the worst things that can be said against German music are duly said.

The author is of course expressing his hero's thoughts, seldom remarkable for moderation. But behind them, with no great difficulty, we can trace those of M. Rolland. This champion of Bach, of Beethoven, of Wagner, here deals them the faithful wounds of a friend. He faces their faults without flinching. Such a 'crisis of healthy disgust,' he tells us, is good for Christopher at the outset of his career. It is good at intervals for all lovers of truth in art. Let us listen with patience to the Satanic plea. We quote from Mr. Gilbert Cannan's translation:

He saw German art stripped. All of them—the great and the idiots—laid bare their souls with a complacent tenderness. Emotion overflowed, moral nobility trickled down, their hearts melted in distracted effusions: the sluice-gates were opened to the fearful German tenderheartedness: it weakened the energy of the stronger, it drowned the weaker under its greyish waters; it was a flood: in the depths of it slept German thought.

Unchecked emotionalism, then, is the rock of offence. In particular, 'sentimentality'; and then the 'lying,' and the 'false idealism,' which spring up when emotionalism becomes a habit and a tradition in art. Such is the text of a long and devastating tirade.

If anyone is sacred to M. Rolland it is Beethoven. Yet the 'Egmont' Overture was on the programme of that unfortunate concert; so he does not escape. We read of its 'pompous disorder and correct agitation.' This, the only little attack on Beethoven in the whole of 'Jean-Christophe,' points surely if summarily at two cardinal disadvantages of his music. 'Correct agitation' raises the whole question of how far Beethoven really got his feelings expressed in his music, and how much of it must infallibly come to be regarded as formula and cliché. Then there rises a kindred if subtler problem. Beethoven dealt so much in 'disorder' and 'agitation' that he created a fashion of emotional unrest in music. This was taken up by many successors, true men and impostors; did he never follow it, mechanically, himself? With no time to attempt a solution of these problems, we must recognise their pertinency and importance.

One interesting point, not quite hackneyed, is made against Bach:

He seemed to Christopher to have had an insipid and sugared religion, a Jesuitical style, rococo. In his Cantatas there were languorous and devout airs . . . which sickened Christopher; then he seemed to see chubby cherubim with round limbs and flying draperies.

Part of the blame here must be shared by Bach's librettists; the wretched verses he sometimes set may have dragged down his style, here and there, from its normal levels of healthiness. Or it may be that Bach succumbs now and then to 'the fearful German tenderheartedness,' apart altogether from his texts. M. Rolland also talks of his 'stiffness,' an objection more and more discredited in these days. If we only give up asking Bach for what he never attempted to do, we shall usually find that within these limits he is freedom itself.

Mendelssohn fares better at this dreadful tribunal than might have been expected. 'Rich melancholy,' 'distinguished fantasy,' 'kindly-thinking emptiness'—such terms might rather come from the judge's verdict than from the adversary's plea. Nor will many quarrel with the pronouncement on Liszt: 'A mixture in equal doses of true and false nobility, of serene idealism and disgusting virtuosity.' Schumann is sternly—too sternly—dealt with: he is shown as a typical exemplar of 'the German lie.' His candour is admitted; but that very candour betrays more clearly 'the weaknesses of the German soul, its uncertain depths, its soft tenderness, its rather sly idealism, its incapacity for seeing itself.' This criticism raises a vast question: what emotional states should be expressed in music? M. Rolland has the French scruples in this matter—scruples deeply involved in the traditions of French art.

Wagner was sure of rough treatment. The devil's advocate braces himself for a stinging denunciation. 'False idealism,' we are told, impairs Wagner as it does the earlier Romantics. Lohengrin is just a German Pharisee.

The 'Flying Dutchman' overwhelmed Christopher with its massive sentimentality and its gloomy boredom. . . . Siegfried and Brunnhild . . . in the 'Götterdämmerung' laid bare before each other, especially for the benefit of the audience, their pompous and voluble conjugal passion. . . . False idealism, false Christianity, false Gothicism, false legend, false gods, false humans. Never did more monstrous convention appear than in that theatre which was to upset all the conventions.

Such thoughts have surely assailed the minds of most of us at some point or other in a Wagner opera. If sensible, we have tried to forget everything but the music, closed our eyes or stared hard at vacancy; and soon, before the mind's eye, Valhallas and enchanted forests have arisen, independent of the stage carpenter. We have had some respite from the pantomimic stage effects, the endless posturing and declamation. But while accepting the ultimate verdict on Wagner—that his music saves him—on the subject of that music a true devil's advocate might well have gone further than M. Rolland. He says nothing of the pretentious vulgarity, the Rossinian and Meyerbeerian infection, from which Wagner did not escape until after 'Lohengrin.' Such blows, of course, miss the broad shoulders of the later Wagner. The giant flood of his mature music bears up the heavy cargo of his faults.

Up to this point it is probable that the best judges of to-day would still support M. Rolland in his various indictments. Many, however, would disagree with him on the subject of Brahms. There is no set denunciation of this composer; rather a continual carping and girding in the earlier sections of the work. To Christopher, in his young days, the mention of Brahms is as the waving of a red rag before a bull. Brahms, more than anyone else, personifies his enemies. And too often M. Rolland confounds Brahms with the 'Brahmins'; too often the merely helpless crowd of academic reactionaries are lumped together with the sentimentalists, with Brahms for their common god.

Sentimentality, in this composer, may yet seem incredible to older musicians who only the other day were daunted by his austerity and complexity. Most of us, however, will admit the cloying, over-ripe sweetness found especially in his weaker songs and pianoforte pieces. And though he poured a wonderful new life into the classical moulds, we cannot altogether clear him of the charge of academicism. Too often we feel its chill, in his more elaborate designs: his heavy movement, his gauntness of melody, are often depressing. What then remains? More than enough, surely, to keep him among the giants. But M. Rolland brackets him with Mendelssohn. They are 'gods of the mists of October, and of fine rain.' Such men, we are told, 'never felt the intoxication of strength.' We wonder! Not in the superb fugue that winds up the 'Handel' Variations? Not in the Finale of the first Symphony, the 'Resurrection' chorus in the 'Requiem'? Whatever M. Rolland may now think of Brahms, it is hard to believe that the estimate in 'Jean-Christophe' will ever be the accepted one.

On the whole, however, it is still profitable to follow Christopher through his 'crisis of healthy disgust.' We must allow for his impatience, his dogmatism, his insolent confidence in his own powers. As his creator reminds us, he is no psychologist; he forgets that much real thought, much genuine emotion, found but imperfect expression in the works of those he condemns. In fact, Christopher shares their faults, for all the fierceness of his condemnation. These faults of unchecked emotionalism—of emotionalism worked to death as a deliberate lying fashion—have much to answer for. Much has been written, for example, on the musical brutality which is alleged to be an artistic counterpart of Prussianism itself. Brutality is not so far from sentimentality as might be thought; both are in Wagner, and after him came Strauss. It is significant that much of the most interesting music of the modern schools has long inclined to the intellectual, the impressionistic, the picturesque, the ironical—to anything rather than the purely emotional. The reaction is salutary, and will not last for ever. For, while the heart beats, sentiment—not sentimentality—must play its part in music, as it does in the works of those classics whom M. Rolland has eloquently championed, while not blind to their faults.

Interludes

By 'FESTE'

The autobiography at present appearing in the Sunday Times has naturally led to further activities among folk whose gifts lie in the direction of reminiscence rather than of reticence. We hear that several more volumes of the same intimate type are on the way. Most of them will deal with social and political matters, but we are promised one of interest to musicians—'The Reminiscences of Lysbeth Malpas' (née Manktelow), the wife of one of our most eminent conductors. Mrs. Malpas has long had unique opportunities for mingling with the truly great in the world of music. She has talked with them—even at them. It is no secret that many of the more impressionable among them have been at her feet—indeed, only our old-fashioned prejudice in favour of monogamy has hindered a round dozen of them from marrying her. Generally they have been handsomely consoled by a helping hand extended at that tide in the affairs of musicians which, taken at the flood, leads to emoluments that make the artist rich beyond the dreams of avarice, and keep the art itself in a chronic state of bankruptcy.

Mrs. Malpas's book will be published in the spring by Messrs. Smeed & Bundy, who, no doubt on excellent grounds, announce that it will be 'the book of the season.'

It is ever the policy of this journal to be abreast with the times, or even a little ahead of them, and it is therefore with deep gratification that I am able to announce that an arrangement has been made with Messrs. Smeed & Bundy whereby (at a fabulous cost) we are permitted to publish a few extracts.

Mrs. Malpas's book is a mine of epigram, as will be expected from one who (as Sir George Bealby neatly said) is not only witty herself, but the cause of wit in others. If the matter and manner recall the great Sunday Times exemplar, the fact need cause neither surprise nor complaint. Our extracts will show the extraordinary range covered by the reminiscences. To announce a work as 'the book of the season' is a step no publisher would take without the amplest justification. I believe our readers will agree that in making such an announcement Messrs. Smeed & Bundy did no more than was warranted by the character of this amazing volume.

CHAPTER I.

A MUSICAL HOME CIRCLE

... On both sides I (and for the matter of that my brother and sister as well) come of an intensely musical stock, though none of us have received any training in the art. It has always been a tradition in our family that musical genius should be unfettered by pedagogic, academic, and technical restrictions. My father was wont to say shrewdly 'When technique comes in at the door, music flies out of the window,' and I have often thought there is a good deal more sound sense in the remark than appears on the surface. I myself have inherited his distaste for the purely mechanical side of music—a distaste I never hesitate to show. Only recently I heard Mark Lemberg play the Brahms Variations on a theme of Handel. I held myself down with difficulty during the final fugue, and when my companion, Billee Flamborough* remarked 'That was a most difficult performance,' I burst out with 'I wish to Heaven it had been impossible!' (Unpremeditated verbal flashes of this type will occupy considerable space in the following pages. I record them in no spirit of vain-glory, since they are due to no effort on my part. A talent for epigram has come down to us from our grandfather Reuben, of whom I shall have much to say later.)

Music was the prime recreation of our home circle—a large one, and constantly augmented by admirers of myself and my sisters. Not that I shared the beauty that made my sisters the centre of attraction everywhere. Papa used to say, with the twinkling eye that warned us of something good coming, 'Lysbeth might have been pretty but for the irregularity and absence of proportion in certain of the more central of her facial members.' I was never under any delusions in the matter. My nose, for example—but why dwell on what has long been a prominent feature in the Society pages of our illustrated press? And yet there must have been a compensating something about me—a je ne sais quoi—for I had no lack of suitors, though for some reason—another je ne sais quoi—they usually ended by becoming engaged to my more superficially attractive sisters. Still, I had my triumphs. There was young Bob Tutteridge,† the best amateur bass of his day, whose singing of 'The Diver' an augmented fifth below the published key still remains a cherished though sombre memory. Young Bob‡ took his rejection badly,

* The Honourable Wilhelmina Flamborough.

† Mr. Robert Tutteridge.

‡ " " "

and in desperation began a series of wild plunges on the turf, in which, however, he came off so successfully that his threat of laying violent hands on himself was unfulfilled. As my great-aunt Agatha said: 'Time, the great healer.'

Mention of Aunt Aggie reminds me of her outstanding musical ability. Though, like all the Manktelows, self-taught, she was able to attack the most difficult works with confidence. I shall never forget standing spellbound one day while she dashed off practically from memory an easily identifiable version of Beethoven's 'Sonata Appassionata.'

AUNT AGGIE PLAYING THE 'APPASSIONATA'
PRACTICALLY FROM MEMORY.

And there was Yussuf Miglowski,* most gifted of pianists, endowed with an amalgam of mysticism, eroticism, and paganism that gave wizardry to his playing—Miglowski, who, taking 'No' for an answer a little too readily, threatened never to play again, and kept his word. He sank lower and lower in the social scale, and, prior to his disappearance last year, just managed to keep above the border line of indigence by acting as music critic, with lucid intervals in which he made the most of the scandalously inadequate hours set apart for the purveying of alcoholic liquors to be consumed on the premises.

CHAPTER II.

MY HUSBAND

... It was in our home circle that I first met my husband-that-was-to-be, Eustace Malpas. Papa had brought him home to dinner, as, sooner or later, he brought home everybody who really mattered. Eustace was already fairly well known as a conductor, though it was not until after our marriage that he came into his kingdom.

I think I may claim some share in his development. In the early part of his career he had a good many faults of style and deportment that I set to work to cure as soon as I had the right. Among the various little tricks into which he had fallen was that of slipping his left hand under the tail of his coat, and giving an almost imperceptible hitch to the waistband of what, being a woman, I suppose I must describe as his nether garments. This happened regularly, not only at the end of a movement, but frequently during straightforward passages in which his left hand had little to do. (I have seen eminent batsmen do a similar hitch in that awful moment of tension during which the bowler is walking back to his starting point. 'Plum' Warner,* for example, does it, and also adjusts his cap, before preparing to receive the next ball.) Eustace had acquired the habit in a curious way. At one of his first engagements, he dropped his baton, and stooped to pick it up, with fatal results to one of the two back buttons on which, I understand, so much depends. During the remainder of the concert he was so anxious about the staying powers of the survivor that he frequently and nervously sent his left hand on a journey of investigation, at the same time giving a mildly nautical hitch in order to relieve the strain on the solo button. The concert went off without disaster, but at his next few engagements he became nervous—quite without cause, for I need hardly say that the defaulting button had been made good in the meantime—and before he could pull himself up, he had acquired the habit I have mentioned. I set myself to cure it, and did so by sitting in a front stall, and at every backward movement of his left hand admonishing him with a cough of a peculiarly resonant and reproachful character. When I had coughed thus during the greater part of a series of symphony concerts (and caused my friends to suspect some pulmonary trouble) the cure was effected, though at the cost of a few delicate dynamic effects, some important gestures to his players having been checked by over-hasty action on my part. Other little gaucheries were more easily cured, e.g., his habit of acknowledging applause with a nod rather than a bow, and also a rather curt way of calling on his players to share in any specially prolonged tributes. To-day everybody admires the sweeping gesture with which he brings his hand to their feet; few know who taught him, and what patience she showed.

But Eustace's most serious defect was an excess of passivity when conducting. He has none now, though we had many arguments before I could get him to see the importance of methods that would impress the public. 'But,' he would say, 'if I am getting my players to do what I want by my present methods, why alter them?'

Lysbeth: It is not enough to control. You must appear to control.

Eustace: But the results should make that clear.

Lysbeth: They don't. I have heard it said that the band conducts you, and that if you left them to themselves they would produce exactly the same result.

* Mr. Joseph Miggles.

* Mr. Pelham F. Warner.

Eustace (grimly): Would they?

Lysbeth: Besides, the audience likes to watch a conductor, and if he gives them no kind of show, he may as well conduct behind a screen. People like to see a hint of the superman with a few Ajax-defying-the-lightning attitudes. And you are so desperately cool—physically, I mean. I dislike having to go into unpleasant particulars, but if you could manage to perspire unmistakably—I don't mean a mere half-hearted clamminess, but real drops, merging at times into a trickle, the 'Village Blacksmith' style—you know: 'his brow was wet,' or, better still, like Falstaff 'larding the lean earth' . . . And if you could manage to shake your mane [by this time I had got him to realise the value of a markedly leonine appearance] and dash away the drops from time to time, especially at the end of a climax, you will reach the position to which your talents and hard work entitle you.

Is there any need for me to say how well—even profusely—Eustace rose to the occasion? His gestures are now more than ample, and the audience is fully persuaded (as I intended they should be) that but for his frantic and occasionally menacing attitudes few of the composer's effects would be realised. Acting on my advice, he pays special attention to the percussion department, and whenever the timpanist makes a big hit, so to speak, the audience is rightly left with the conviction that but for Eustace's vigilant eye and minatory hand the entry would have been either tame or missed entirely. His reputation has grown with his gestures, and he is now acclaimed no less than a singer. The end of every concert sees him recalled again and again bowing fatiguedly. I never feel so proud of him as in this rôle of moist and wearied Titan. . . .

CHAPTER III.

GRANDFATHER REUBEN

I mentioned my grandfather Reuben's happy wit. Here is one of many examples. At one of our home music-makings, 'Doll' Peploe,* a rather futuristic young composer, played a MS. work. At its close everybody waited for the old gentleman's opinion. Without a word he rose, tottered to the pianoforte (he was then in his ninety-fifth year, and his rate of progress, though still remarkable, was not what it had been), took the MS., opened the window, and held the music outside very gravely. Asked for an explanation, he replied, with just the souffçon of a smile, 'It needs air.' Never was so damning a criticism made in so few words, or with such good humour.

On another occasion he said of an amateur who had invited us to dinner, had fed us badly, and then played some Bach to us, 'His Bach is worse than his bite.' I could fill many pages with such bright sallies. . . .

* Mr. (now Lord) Adolphus Peploe.

Grandpapa had a good deal of inventive genius, and among other things he made a portable keyboard instrument, which he called the 'Harpichette.' The tone was penetrating rather than sweet, and the compass was necessarily limited. But its portability atoned for its numerous defects—at least, so grandpapa contended, though with rather less persuasiveness than usual. He arranged a good many of his favourite morceaux for it, including 'Vital spark,' 'Sound the loud timbrel,' 'Eve's lamentation,' and 'I'd be a butterfly.' The appearance of Wheatstone's concertina at about the same period was fatal to the harpichette's commercial success. I have in my possession the only one ever constructed, but I never allow it to be played, out of respect to the memory of its inventor, to whose declining years it was an almost incessant pleasure—a pleasure in which, owing to its peculiar timbre, the entire household shared.

(From a miniature by Maclise.)

GRANDFATHER REUBEN PLAYING THE HARPSICHETTE.

[As announced above (the fact cannot be stated too often or too italically) the volume from which these extracts are taken will be published in the spring by Messrs. Smeed & Bundy as THE book of the season.]

JENNY LIND: A CENTENARY APPRECIATION

(Born October 6, 1820)

BY W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

'Have you ever heard Jenny Lind?' This was the question put me in January, 1877, as I raved over the delightful singing of Madame Tietjens, on her last appearance at Dublin. The late R. M. Levey was the speaker, and the veteran conductor could speak with authority not only on Jenny Lind but also on Catalani, Persiani, Grisi, Catherine Hayes, and Piccolomini. 'Yes! my boy' (this to me was then literally correct, as I was barely eighteen), 'she was indeed a wonderful artist.' Subsequently, in his 'Annals of the Theatre Royal, Dublin' (1881), Levey devoted a couple of pages to his appreciation of Jenny Lind, telling us of her vocal gymnastic feats, which had a climax in a cadenza for the performance of which the only appropriate term is 'wonderful.' He adds: 'All the solfeggi of all the masters seemed heaped into one. In fact, every possible display of which the human voice divine is capable was developed in this effort, never equalled before or since.' This enthusiastic verdict was apropos of her singing in Italian opera at the old Theatre Royal, Dublin, in October, 1848, on which occasion Balfe was conductor, with Nadaud and Levey as first violins, Oury second violin, and Piatti violoncello.

Jenny Lind's life has been written several times, and an excellent memoir of her by the late Julian Marshall will be found in the new edition of Grove. Therefore I shall merely 'bovrilise' the leading facts of her career. Born at Stockholm (and hence known as the Swedish Nightingale) on October 6, 1820, she made her début in Weber's 'Der Freischütz,' at the Stockholm Opera House, March 7, 1838; and was an instant success, becoming a Court singer in 1840. After a short period of study in Paris, under Garcia, she obtained an engagement at the opera, Berlin, on the recommendation of Meyerbeer, and scored a triumph in 'L'Etoile du Nord,' in December, 1844, appearing subsequently at Leipsic, Vienna, Hanover, Hamburg, and other centres.

On May 4, 1847, after much heralding, and having a great 'Press,' Jenny Lind captured London, and won unequivocal applause in 'Robert,' 'Sonnambula,' and 'La Figlia del Reggimento.' We are told that in a song from 'Beatrice di Tenda' 'she had a chromatic cadenza ascending to E in alt, and descending to the note whence it had arisen, which could scarcely be equalled for difficulty and perfection of execution.'

Her American tour, organised by Barnum in 1850, was, as Bunn would say, 'a blaze of triumph,' and, to come down to material things, she made the round sum of £20,000 in her semi-regal progress. Nor must it be forgotten that at Boston, on February 5, 1852, she married Mr. Otto Goldschmidt.

The late Mr. Wilhelm Ganz gave a graphic description of Jenny Lind's concert tour in Great Britain, in 1856, the party consisting of the Diva, Willoughby Weiss (of 'Village Blacksmith' fame), Ernst, Piatti, Goldschmidt, and Ganz. On September 26 and 28, 1859, she sang at the Antient Concert Rooms, Dublin, on which occasion Joachim played; and on October 7 she gave a concert at Waterford. At the Handel Centenary, in 1859, the late Joseph Robinson produced 'Messiah,' with Jenny Lind and Belletti, when the net receipts were £900—the largest amount up to that date chronicled in Dublin musical annals.

As is well known, Madame Lind-Goldschmidt was Professor of Singing at the Royal College of Music from 1883 to 1886, and she died at Wynd's Point, Malvern, on November 2, 1887, aged sixty-seven. A medallion memorial was erected in Westminster Abbey, and was personally unveiled by H.R.H. Princess Christian, on April 20, 1894.

Chorley wrote most eulogistically of Jenny Lind, and was particularly enraptured with her Swedish songs, as also with her singing of some of Mozart's great airs, the 'Bird Song,' in Haydn's 'Creation,' and 'the grandeur of inspiration with which the 'Sanctus of Angels,' in Mendelssohn's 'Elijah,' was led by her.' He added: 'These are the triumphs which will stamp her name in the Golden Book of singers.'

Ganz, who wrote from intimate knowledge, says that Jenny Lind was not only a marvellous executant, but also 'sang with intense feeling.' In particular, her cadenzas were phenomenal, especially those in Bellini's 'Sonnambula.' 'Though they were immensely difficult she warbled them off with the greatest ease.' He regretted very much that she gave up concert-singing so soon, while at the zenith of her powers, and he tells us that 'her upper notes sounded like silver bells.' As to her appearance on the concert platform, he adds: 'She was of middle height, with handsome features and a bright expression. She wore her pretty blonde hair in bandeaux.'

A dear, dead friend of mine who heard Jenny Lind sing at Waterford, in 1859, assured me that Chorley and Ganz did not exaggerate as to her vocal powers—yet that Ganz was quite correct in giving the palm to Patti, although, personally, my friend preferred Catherine Hayes to any singer she ever heard, not excluding Patti, or Grisi, or Albani, or even Tietjens. Another old musical friend assures me that in his recollection of sixty-five years, Jenny Lind was most marvellous as regards phenomenal execution in cadenzas and in the singing of Swedish ballads, and that she was of charming personality.

I cannot better conclude this brief appreciation than by quoting an acrostic written on the great vocalist by an enthusiastic young Irishman, in 1850:

Jenny Lind—a name of radiant lustre now—

Enshrined in history's page in dazzling light,

Ne'er may its glory fade o'er thy fair brow,

Ne'er o'er thy path be shade of sorrow's night,

Young, gifted lady, be you blest as bright.

Love light thy path, may earth's flowers strew thy way;

In life may yours be joy, and peace, and rest;

Ne'er may one care-cloud o'er thy bright path stray;

Death—may't but join your soul with seraphs blest.

MUSIC AT THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

BY ALFRED KALISCH

For the first time in the history of the British Association musical subjects were included in the programme—that is to say, subjects connected with civilized music. For many years savage music was discussed in the Anthropological Section. That probably was the reason why Dr. Lloyd Williams's paper on 'Welsh Music' and Prof. Walford Davies's address on 'Euphony and Folk-song' were included in the Anthropological agenda. A great many people regretted that it was not found possible to honour music in another way. A little music sung by a first-rate Welsh choir would have been a valuable diversion. In any Continental city of the size and importance of Cardiff there would assuredly have been a concert and a gala performance of opera in honour of the leaders of scientific thought.

Dr. Lloyd Williams gave a brief historical sketch of Welsh music, drawing a distinction between the songs which were obviously conditioned by the limitations of the accompanying harp and those in which the melodic outline was freer or obeyed no laws except those of song. The most interesting part of his address was that in which he dwelt on the relationship between song and the 'Hwyl,' or the cadenced speech of the Welsh speakers. This, he said, almost always approximated closely to the Dorian Mode.

It is not irrelevant to refer to a letter which appeared a few days later in one of the Cardiff papers pointing out that a certain well-known hymn-tune in B flat minor was supposed to have been inspired by the 'Hwyl' of an equally well-known minister.

PROF. WALFORD DAVIES'S NEW SCALE

Prof. Walford Davies's paper might have been a contribution to 'Scale Building,' for such was his main topic. At any rate, the part of his address that was most novel and most interesting to musical hearers was concerned with this subject. There are, he said, many attributes of music which it shares with speech; but the distinguishing mark of music is euphony. In song, the ideal of euphony is resemblance to impassioned speech. As an example to illustrate his meaning he took the phrase, 'I will up, saith the Lord.' The word 'up' could not in a song be associated with a descending interval, nor could it be sung to a long-held note. Now there are in music three immutable euphonies, based on mathematical associations, viz., the octave, the fourth, and the fifth, having the proportions 2 : 3, 3 : 4, and 1 : 2. On these intervals the pentatonic scale is founded, and on the pentatonic scale, in turn, is founded the bulk of the folk-song of the world—even among the native tribes of America. Prof. Davies expressed the wish that the world would for a while 'go pentatonic mad.' Music, he continued—diverging for a moment into metaphysics—is 'the most detached record of man's choosing force,' and he illustrated this by showing how the conscious or subconscious exercise of this right of choice goes to the making of a tune, illustrating this by showing how 'heathenish' the Marseillaise becomes if some of the notes are changed. The world at large does not realise this; yet the pentatonic scale has become dominant. He quoted with approval a remark made some time ago by the previous lecturer: 'How comes it that people brought up with major and minor always sing Dorian?' Discussing the effect of the absence of the tritone from the pentatonic scale, he examined also possibilities of further development. For example, by measuring the perfect euphonies from the three notes of an augmented triad he arrived at the following scale:

and showed how many major and minor triads could be used. He urged 'that the simpler euphonies should be taught to little children, and known like the multiplication table,' and that experts should explore the lesser-known scales and chords, of which, he said, there are, with the twelve-note scale, 2,049.

Prof. Davies should certainly propound this theory to a strictly musical audience that is capable of discussing it—which his anthropological hearers were not. It is significant, in any case, that the major and minor scales are being attacked on all sides. A German periodical has recently been started with the express object of smashing them, and returning to the 'pre-tonal' era.

[In order to give Prof. Walford Davies an early opportunity for laying his theories before the musical public, we have persuaded him to set them forth in an article which will appear in our next issue.—ED., M.T.]

Occasional Notes

Nobody doubts that the visit of Toscanini and his orchestra will provide London with an event of exceptional interest. But good wine needs no bush, and we are sure that neither conductor nor band will be helped by the sensational matter that has been so lavishly provided by the press agent of the management concerned. We give a few extracts, as specimens of a type of propaganda that is happily new to England—at least so far as music is concerned, though we have met with milder forms of it in connection with the prize-ring and the cinema:

Signor Toscanini, world-famed as the greatest living conductor, as the man who dared to order Caruso not to be late for rehearsals, as the conductor who caused a strike among the stars at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, for daring to criticise the conception of their part by the principal singers, and who when charged before the High Court Judges in Italy with striking with his baton at one of his instrumentalists who was playing out of harmony, was acquitted on the ground that he was a superman and could not be dealt with after the manner of ordinary mortals, Toscanini, genius and maestro, is coming to London.

Thus bad begins, but worse—far worse—remains behind:

Though Toscanini never minces his words with the stars, he goes still further when at variance with his instrumentalists, and on several occasions has attempted to teach his players by striking them on the head with his baton. In December of last year, at Turin, before the High Court Judges, Toscanini was charged with seriously assaulting a violinist during the rehearsal of Beethoven's ninth Symphony at Milan.

One would like to know at what point in the Symphony this occurred. The blow might well have lent emphasis to, 'O friends, not these sounds!' And it would have come with ironic point a little later, 'O, ye millions, I embrace ye! Here's a joyful kiss for all!'

To ordinary folk the bestowal of such endearments is apt to prove expensive, but a superman may do it with impunity, especially if a 'psychologist of renown' happens to be around:

On such occasions, Toscanini usually insists on the Rigorous (sic) exclusion of all but the performers, but he had made an unique exception in favour of Professor Pastor, a psychologist of renown, who was engaged in preparing a scientific treatise on enthusiasm (sic).

This courtesy was well rewarded, for the professor in the rôle of principal witness for the defence delivered a philosophical plea for the irresponsibility of genius, which won a verdict of acquittal.

Having stated that what really happened was that Toscanini struck out mightily (sic) but involuntarily with his baton, causing the violinist's bow to strike his head, Professor Pastor stated that he had made a special pathological study of Toscanini.

He found that on great occasions this prince of conductors becomes so possessed by a sublime frenzy that his normal personality forsakes him. He becomes transfigured by the genius beside or rather outside himself, so that the inhibitory nerves are completely paralysed.

In a paroxysm of inspiration, he falls a tragic prey to the tyranny of art, and the faculty of distinguishing between good and evil is subordinated to extreme ebbs and flows of sensibility. Stupendous words and vivacious deeds belch forth with volcanic force.

So impossible is anything like a quick return to normal equilibrium that throughout the night after a performance Toscanini continues in a state of pitiful nervous exhaustion. He cannot sleep, his teeth chatter incessantly, the muscles of his arms and legs become painfully rigid, the whole organism vibrates like the subsoil after a terrific earthquake.

The judges decided that a superman cannot be dealt with after the manner of ordinary mortals, and that it would be flagrant injustice to penalise a musical genius like Toscanini with even so much as the infliction of a fine.

In other words, the verdict was 'not guilty, and do it again whenever the faculty of distinguishing between good and evil is subordinated to extreme ebbs and flows of sensibility.'

Toscanini's memory must be as prodigious as the rest of his equipment:

Extreme near-sightedness compelled him very early to commit all scores to memory, so that to-day he conducts by heart almost a hundred operas besides an enormous concert repertoire. He will receive the score of a new opera, and spend a few hours pouring (sic) over it when lying in his bed. The next day he has every note and movement by heart, and, conducting without music, will remember the slightest error that has been committed at any stage by any of his instrumentalists who are playing from the book.

We thought democracies had no use for supermen, but evidently they have:

Toscanini is unquestionably a superman, and as such the socialistic-democratic municipality of Milan, who control the La Scala Opera House, have now decided that such a genius cannot be controlled in any way. He has been given a free hand.

In the final paragraph we get down to hard business:

Before Toscanini arrives in London he will proceed to America for a tour with the La Scala Symphony Orchestra, for which he was offered as an inducement a blank cheque to be filled in as he thought fit.

Here is ground where superman and second fiddle alike are as brothers. We hope—nay, we feel sure—that at the important moment of filling in the blank the great man's normal personality did not forsake him.

Instituted in 1919, the National Council of Music in Wales has already given good proof of its utility. While larger plans have been maturing, a practical enterprise has been carried out in the form of a series of lecture-concerts in schools. From December, 1919, to June, 1920, eighty of these concerts were given in a number of centres, and unmistakable interest and enthusiasm were aroused on every hand. The President of the Council, Prof. Walford Davies (Director of Music to the University of Wales), has made over thirty visits to schools, colleges, village institutes, and literary societies, for the purpose of giving addresses or lecture-recitals, and of holding conferences. Further plans of the Council, according to a paper recently issued, are to 'exercise any functions entrusted to it by the University, the National Eisteddfod, or the central Welsh Board,' to compile 'a definitive collection of national songs and national hymn-tunes, and to issue each year, with the help of colleges and all other bodies concerned, a co-ordinated report on the progress of Welsh music, together with a statement of the needs yet remaining to be satisfied, and the best method of dealing with them.' The ultimate aspiration of the Council, in which all will wish it success, is 'to serve as an organized embodiment and expression of Welsh nationality in music, not by excluding or discouraging the practice of the great masterpieces of other countries, but by so using them as to educate the national genius and to train it to deliver the national message.' Such a Council, it is added, might do for the music of Wales what, more than half a century ago, a group of enthusiasts did for the music of Russia.

In view of the growing complaint that the best of London's music is confined to a group of West End halls, it is interesting to observe that a new effort in decentralising is being made by the Battersea Borough Council. A series of municipal chamber concerts at the Town Hall has been organized under the direction of Mr. George Lane, to take place on six Wednesday evenings from October 13 to March 16, and six Sunday evenings from October 31 to March 6. It is proposed to secure the services of front-rank artists (the Grimson Quartet appears at the first concert), and to charge only low prices (2s., 1s., and 6d.) for admission—financially divergent ideals that claim the generosity of the musical profession and warm support of the local public.

We remind readers who have a turn for composition—and competition—that the proprietors of the Musical Times and the School Music Review are offering prizes of twelve guineas for unison and two-part School Songs, and that entries close on December 1. The words must be non-copyright, or the option of using them must have been secured by the composer. The usual nom-de-plume and separate envelope must be used, and compositions sent to the Editor of the School Music Review, 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W. 1. Fuller particulars were given in the September issues of both journals, and are repeated in this month's School Music Review.

On another page we print an article on Jenny Lind, the hundredth anniversary of whose birth falls on October 6. In our next issue will appear a document of great interest—the Memorandum drawn up by Jenny Lind in 1882, when asked by King Edward (then Prince of Wales) to accept the head professorship of singing for female students at the Royal College of Music. The memorandum (which has never before been published) has been kindly handed to us by Mrs. Raymond Maude, the great singer's daughter.

In our September issue, under 'Sixty Years Ago,' we reprinted the following from the Musical Times of September, 1860:

ONLY FOR ONCE IN A WAY. Ladies' Comic Song. The words (which are unexceptional) [sic] by CARPENTER, the music by C. W. GLOVER. Price 2s.

A few days ago we were surprised to receive an order for the song, accompanied by the necessary two shillings.

The programmes of five concerts to be given by the London Chamber Concert Society at Wigmore Hall on the five Tuesday evenings in November are of the quality that has previously built up the Society's good repute. They include Dr. Ethel Smyth's String Quartet, a clarinet and string Quintet by Herbert Howells (first performance), an evening of 17th and 18th century chamber music, a new Violin Sonata by Florent Schmitt with the composer at the pianoforte, and Elgar's Quartet.

Thou, O God, art praised in Sion.

October 1, 1920.

A SHORT FULL ANTHEM FOR MIXED VOICES.

Psalm lxx. 1, 2.

Composed by CHARLES MACPHERSON.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Allegro maestoso.

SOPRANO. f Thou, O God, art

ALTO. f Thou, O God, art

TENOR. f Thou, O God, art

BASS. f Thou, O God, art

ORGAN. f Gt. mf Allegro maestoso. ♩ = about 108. Thou, O God, art

prais - ed, art prais - - - ed in Si - on,

prais - ed, art prais - - - ed in Si - on,

prais - ed, art prais - - - ed in Si - on,

prais - ed, art prais - - - ed in Si - on, and un - to

Ch. (Sv. coupd.)

Copyright, 1920, by Novello and Company, Limited.

Also published for A.T.B. in NOVELLO'S SERVICES, ANTHEMS, &c., FOR MEN'S VOICES, No. 101.

shall the vow be per - form - ed . .
 and un - to Thee shall the vow be per - form - ed . .
 and un - to Thee, un - to Thee shall the vow . . be per - form - ed . .
 Thee, un - to Thee shall the vow . . be per - form - ed . .
Ped.

in Je - ru - sa - lem.
 in Je - ru - sa - lem.
 in Je - ru - sa - lem.
 in Je - ru - sa - lem.
Git.
Ped.

p Thou that hear - est the p Thou that hear - est the p Thou that hear - est the p Sw.

prayer, un-to Thee shall all flesh come,

prayer, un-to Thee shall all flesh come,

prayer, un-to Thee shall all flesh come,

un-to Thee shall all flesh come,

pp

Ped.

come, shall all flesh come.

come, shall all flesh come.

shall all flesh come.

shall all flesh come.

poco rit.

poco rit.

poco rit.

poco rit.

pp

a tempo 1mo.

Thou, O God, art praised, art

Thou, O God, art

Thou, O God, art praised

Thou, O God, art praised

f

fz

a tempo 1mo.

Thou, O God, art praised

Thou, O God, art praised

f

fz

Ped.

prais - ed in Si - on, and un - to Thee . .

prais - ed in Si - on, and un - to Thee

ed in Si - on, and un - to Thee . .

ed in Si - on, and un - to Thee . .

ff

Slower.

shall the vow be per - form - ed in Je -

shall the vow be per - form - ed in Je -

shall the vow be per - form - ed in Je -

shall the vow be per - form - ed in Je -

Slower.

ff

Allargando.

- ru - sa - lem.

- ru - sa - lem.

- ru - sa - lem.

- ru - sa - lem.

Allargando.

ff

THE ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

The fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the Royal Albert Hall, and of the formation of the Royal Choral Society, will be observed in May, 1921. The musical side of the commemoration is still under consideration. So many musical performances of various kinds now take place at the Albert Hall that it is difficult to realise the objections made to its use for concert purposes fifty years ago. The Musical Times for May, 1871, was evidently expressing popular opinion when asking why 'Oratorio and grand vocal and instrumental works should be dragged from their legitimate homes to this uninteresting locality.' Certainly the programme of the opening day deserves all the hard things said of it. We reproduce it, as a reminder of the progress that has since been made. The concert was described as 'Grand Miscellaneous':

L'Invocazione all' Armonia	...	...	The late Prince Consort
'Lascia ch'io pianga'	...	...	... Handel
'Ti Prego'	...	...	... Curschmann
'Salve dimora'	...	...	... Gounod
Prayer from 'Masaniello'	...	...	... Auber
Overture to 'La Gazza Ladra'	...	...	... Rossini

By way of comment, the Musical Times said:

After such a specimen as this, any person who believes that music will be cultivated amongst the 'arts and sciences' at South Kensington, should be rewarded for his faith by the grant of a box for life—and be made to go to every performance.

As events have turned out, compulsory attendance at every Albert Hall concert in these days would be no great hardship. The list of works to be sung by the Royal Choral Society during its jubilee season will be found in our 'Choral Notes and News.' There is every prospect that the efforts of Sir Frederick Bridge and his singers will be as popular as ever. We doubt if the Society has ever had larger audiences than during the past few years.

MUSICAL NOTATION

There are few practical musicians—whether pianists, organists, or players of orchestral instruments—who have not had frequently the irritating experience of encountering difficulties in the first readings of a new piece of music, only to find subsequently that many of these difficulties need not have existed had the composer laid out his work in a different manner. To take one instance, passages occur where a temporary modulation results in a bewildering display of accidentals with perhaps a fine show of double-sharps or flats. All this might have been prevented by a judicious change of key-signature. (We hasten to say that we have no wish to go so far as the small boy most of us have met with, who, on being temporarily baffled in his reading of a piece by encountering, say, a B sharp, and subsequently discovering that it is the same note on the pianoforte as C, expresses indignant wonder at the wrong-headedness of people in not writing a plain C if they want it!) Again, many of the difficulties experienced by young players in unravelling the slow movements of Beethoven, Mozart, &c., are entirely the result of the misleading time-unit adopted by the composers.

We are all familiar with the haphazard way in which accidentals are used: many of them are unnecessary, and only provide additional stumbling-blocks for the reader. The difficulties presented by modern music are already sufficient, without the addition of gratuitous pitfalls caused through inconsistent or slipshod notation.

There can be little doubt that in the matter of musical notation there is room for reform, and those who would see for themselves what is possible in this direction, and the frequently amazing manner in which what is involved may become quite simple under different notational treatment, will be interested to learn that the subject has been most exhaustively and convincingly treated by Mr. H. Elliot Button in his recently published book on Notation.*

In an introductory note the author writes:

As musical compositions get more complicated, elaborate, and difficult of execution, it is increasingly incumbent upon the composer to present his meaning in a manner that will help the performer to grasp that meaning with as little trouble as possible. The object of this book is to point out to composers, arrangers, and editors the difficulties they often unwittingly place in the path of executants, and to suggest various means of obviating these difficulties.

In approaching the subject, the reader is asked to consider things from a purely logical point of view, and not to be influenced by any preconceived ideas due to long usage, such as a certain style of notation 'looking neat,' another 'giving a finish to it,' &c. As the writer says:

If one means of expressing a musical idea is evidently clearer than another it should be unhesitatingly adopted, and should the reader consider that it does not look well, let him rest assured that his opinion is due to custom and must give way to logically-proven fact.

In his first chapter Mr. Button deals with time-signatures, and shows by various practical examples the advantages which would result from the adoption of a crotchet-unit system. Slow movements of the old classical composers were usually written in quaver—or semiquaver—unit time. This led to very long bars in which it is extremely difficult to realise the 'beats' at sight. The opening bars of Beethoven's Sonata Pathétique, with slow quaver-unit ($\frac{8}{8}$) are quoted, and then shown re-written with the crotchet as unit ($\frac{4}{4}$). The gain in clearness and simplicity is at once obvious. Similarly it is shown that the old fast movements, often written in minim-unit time, would gain by using the crotchet-unit. Interesting analyses of some quick movements from Beethoven's fifth Symphony, Schumann's 'Paradise and the Peri,' Elgar's 'Dream of Gerontius,' and Beethoven's Choral Symphony, illustrate in a most convincing way the advantages of the crotchet-unit. The Schumann example, with its preponderance of semibreves, is at once seen to be more easily grasped with the crotchet as unit; and as the movement proceeds and the pace increases the advantages become more and more apparent, till at the climax the crotchet-unit system stands out as incomparably clearer. As the author observes, singers and orchestral players who experience great difficulty in reading music written with such a mass of semibreves, would particularly welcome the reform.

A crucial example of the advantages derived from the crotchet, or dotted crotchet, is shown in an extract from Beethoven's Choral Symphony. A portion of the well-known Molto vivace movement (one dotted minim beat in the bar), with its directions Ritmo di tre battute and Ritmo di quattro battute—is set out with the signature $\frac{9}{8}$ (three dotted crotchet beats in the bar), changing to $\frac{12}{8}$. The composer's intention is at once clearly grasped. The rhythm is made apparent; many accidentals are found to be redundant and are therefore eliminated; the fast single beat in a bar is replaced by three (or four) ordinary beats; and lastly the necessity for Ritmo di &c., is avoided, while executive difficulties are considerably reduced.

* 'System in Musical Notation.' By H. Elliot Button. With Preface by Sir Edward Elgar. (Novello.)

We think readers will agree with Sir Edward Elgar that 'Mr. Button's rule, which adopts the crotchet exclusively as the "most convenient pulse-unit," scarcely needs endorsement.' The author is convinced that, with very few exceptions, the crotchet or dotted-crotchet-unit is the most suitable for all styles of music.

An important chapter deals with the grouping of notes. Notes should be grouped in such a manner as to show the half-bar in $\frac{3}{4}$ or $\frac{9}{8}$. A passage in $\frac{3}{4}$ time, for example, with a dotted crotchet on the second beat, becomes more distinct when the dotted crotchet is written as a crotchet tied to a quaver, the beat being then clearly shown. Examples are given to illustrate the advantages in various cases of using tied, instead of dotted, notes. An admirable example of this is given in an extract from Bach's Prelude in F# ($\frac{12}{8}$), where the arrangement as it appears in the Novello edition is seen to be vastly superior. Instances are provided of simple passages made to look difficult by clumsy (though mathematically correct) notation.

Just as notes may be grouped so as to indicate at a glance the pulses in a bar, so, in the next chapter, it is demonstrated by various examples that the consistent use of rests can be made to serve the same effective purpose.

In the chapter on Stems we see how stemming may often be used to show the beats in a bar. An extract from Beethoven's Sonata in F minor, Op. 57, is in $\frac{12}{8}$ time, but it requires to be studied closely before this fact (or the harmonic scheme) becomes apparent. The passage consists of detached chords on each stave, with rests between each chord. By a simple stemming arrangement the four beats of the $\frac{12}{8}$ bar and the four chords are at once evident. The absence of rests, now unnecessary, further simplifies the passage.

Dealing with slurs, expression marks, and double-bars, it is pointed out that music is frequently encumbered with slurs that are totally unnecessary, since they make the composer's intention no clearer, but rather tend to confusion. A careful study of this chapter would save composers much trouble, and would enable their intentions to be more quickly grasped by the player or singer.

With regard to the use of accidentals:

It is well to use as few accidentals as possible without leaving your intention indefinite or questionable. Some composers are addicted to adding unnecessary accidentals for safety, but more often than not these so-called 'safety accidentals' lead to slips in execution. In fact, the inclusion of an unnecessary accidental is more likely to mislead than the omission of one that should rightly be inserted, but about which there can be no doubt.

An illustration is given in which a bar containing a chord of B major on its first beat, is followed by a bar opening with a chord of the dominant 7th on G. In this case a 'safety accidental' is placed before the D in the soprano part, because the soprano would be liable to read D# in natural anticipation of the chord of B major. Everyone will not however agree with the author that 'there is no need to add the natural to the D in the accompaniment, as the organist, grasping the harmonic scheme, would not be liable to play anything but D natural.' Possibly this may be true of the simple example here shown, but in harmony as we find it at the present day a D# might quite feasibly be met with in such a chord as the above.

Some examples at the end of the book present in vivid contrast passages as originally written and then as revised according to the principles enunciated in the book. Perhaps the most striking of these is the extract from Schumann's Romance in F#. Ex. 1 shows the music in its familiar form with three staves:

EX. 1.

The simplicity and clearness of Ex. 2—with two staves only, the crotchet as unit, and the grouping of the quavers to show change of chord—provide an instructive contrast:

EX. 2.

Another interesting example is from Bach's Toccata in D minor. This extract abounds in unnecessary rests and accidentals, and its appearance is most confused and obscure:

EX. 3.

By eliminating redundant rests and accidentals, and by a simple process of 'stemming,' the difficulties vanish:

EX. 4.

We think we have sufficiently shown that the reforms suggested in this little volume would, if consistently carried out, undoubtedly do much to lessen the difficulties of instrumentalists and singers. Mr. Button is to be congratulated on the clear, concise way in which he has set forth his views, and he deserves the gratitude of all musicians for this tangible result of his untiring labours on behalf of the reform of musical notation.

G. G.

London Concerts

BY ALFRED KALISCH

The only concerts to be mentioned this month are Promenade Concerts. They are still—though occurring during the time when there is, in popular language, no 'season'—the most important concerts in London educationally, and those to which the seekers after musical novelty owe the largest debt.

The season which began on August 14 has so far had two distinctive characteristics. One has been the restoration of Richard Strauss to his place in the programmes, the other the new type of Wagner programme.

At the time of writing 'Don Quixote' and 'Till Eulenspiegel' have been heard. I can speak only of the latter from personal experience. It was like a tonic, and it served to remind us that a good deal of the music of the last few years which we have acclaimed as startlingly new is not so new after all. One left the hall wondering what would be thought of 'Heldenleben' and 'The Domestic Symphony' if and when they are on a programme again, and whether the 'Alpine Symphony' marks such a falling off as it is said to do by the composer's own countrymen. The performance of 'Till Eulenspiegel' was excellent, if a little too careful, and the public was very enthusiastic indeed. I am told that the reception of 'Don Quixote' was not quite so hearty.

Sir Henry Wood and many other conductors in other countries were for a long time anxious to add new Wagner excerpts to the list of those usually played, but till the end of 1913 Bayreuth had the control of such things and exercised its right to refuse permission. The intervening years were not suitable for experiments. Now, however, there are no obstacles, and on Monday, September 13, a start was made with long extracts from 'Götterdämmerung,' some at least of which had not before been heard in a London concert hall. We heard the duet between Siegfried and Brunnhilda in Act 1, followed by Siegfried's journey to the Rhine—one of our most familiar friends—the Waltrauta Scene, the Rhine Maiden Scene, and the Funeral March.

A few minutes put all doubts at rest. 'Götterdämmerung' has not aged, there is not a wrinkle on its splendidly grim face. It has not lost a tittle of its giant stature, and is as fresh and as big as ever. Its effect on the huge audience was electrical. It would be interesting to know for how many of them it was a return to an old love, and for how many a new thrill; in any case the second class must have been fairly large. Both sections applauded with equal zest. The number of recalls was quite exceptional.

Miss Carrie Tubb's singing of the music of Brunnhilda marked an upward step in her career, and Mr. Frank Mullings's vigour and vitality in the Siegfried music were good to hear. Miss Silvia Parisotti had some finely tender moments as Waltrauta, but was not quite heroic enough. Miss Carrie Tubb also sang the part of the first Rhine Maiden with Miss Nora Delmarr and Miss Ethel Furmedge. They sang well, but did not bring out all the humour there is in the music, but its charm was irresistible. Sir Henry Wood always rises to an occasion like this.

It might have been thought that the greater popularity of opera since the war would have made the public less anxious to hear opera in the concert-room. But apparently it is not so. Apart from the evidence of this concert there is the fact that the Royal Choral Society is about to perform 'Samson and Delilah'; and now I read that the Hallé Orchestra is going to do 'Carmen' at Manchester. Both works have, I understand, been put into the programme in response to requests from the public.

One other little fact about the new Wagner policy is worth mentioning: its adoption was strongly advocated in a letter to the Musical Times not long ago.

It now remains to discuss the novelties which have been played since the last issue.

Alfredo Casella's 'Pagine di Guerra' (August 18) was something of a disappointment to the admirers of his 'Couvent sur l'eau.' We miss here the grace and delicacy, and the distinction of the earlier work, for the composer's impressions are reproduced in the crudest modern idiom, which is now becoming as much a matter of clichés as the veriest academic tags. In spite of the very flowery periods of the analytical note which promised us a vision of brilliancy, strength, and speed in the last number, that represents a warship going into action, the best that can honestly be said for it is that its somewhat naive realism is mildly amusing. A meditation in a devastated city is as frankly ugly as the ruins themselves.

The next new work, which was heard on August 24, was a Pianoforte Concerto by M. Prokofiev. It is an early composition, and was therefore a disappointment to those whose curiosity had been raised to a high pitch by the alliterative headline in an American paper, 'Prokofiev Paralyzes Parterre of Pianists.' This apparently referred only to some of his later works, for the Concerto is a mild piece of musical iniquity; but it is the work of a young man of undoubted gifts, trying to find a new idiom for himself. The Pianoforte Concerto of Catoire, another Russian, which is not so modern, is more notable for the good use made of the material than the value of the material itself. It was brilliantly played by Miss Isabel Gray, who is justifying the favourable prophecies made regarding her. Miss Ellen M. Jensen played the solo part of the Prokofiev work with admirable technique and understanding. Pizetti da Parma's Suite for orchestra, announced for August 26, could not be played, as the parts had not arrived. Georges Dorlay's 'Mirage' ('Valse Intermezzo'), August 28, is comparatively unimportant, but shows the composer in a more pleasing light than some of his more ambitious work.

Of all the new works heard during the season so far, Béla Bartók's Suite for orchestra has given rise to the most vehement differences of opinion, and it is the one most likely to find a permanent place in the repertoire. Bartók is certainly a man of originality, and the most remarkable thing about his work is its strong rhythmical impulse. In his first stages he tried, with the fine recklessness of youth, to begin where his most advanced predecessors left off; but it looks as if now he were more cautiously retracing his steps, and had nearly found his proper place.

Gabriel Fauré's Fantaisie for pianoforte and orchestra has the intellectual grace and charm which has distinguished all his work, but it will probably not rank amongst the strongest of his compositions, though it has some moments which are very good to listen to. Miss Edith Barnet's playing of it was very satisfactory.

Henry F. Gilbert's 'Riders to the Sea,' announced for September 7, could also not be produced owing to non-arrival of parts. On September 9 Mr. Montague Phillips conducted the first performance of his Pianoforte Concerto. It has many attractive qualities and boasts at least two good tunes, which is quite an ample ration for a Concerto in these days. It suffers rather from an attempt to say too much and to make the foundation bear a superstructure too heavy for its strength. The orchestration is rather too voluptuous and too thick (like a Rubens lady), but there are several places in which particularly good use is made of violoncello tone. The pianoforte part is brilliantly written, but there is a certain sameness in the making of the patterns for the passage work. Mr. William G. James played it very effectively.

On September 14, Mr. Landon Ronald (not Professor as stated in the original announcement) conducted a Suite founded on his incidental music from 'The Garden of Allah.' It is good incidental music—that is to say, it is picturesque and intelligible—and goes along very easily. It is difficult now to say anything new in the Oriental idiom, and the composer himself would probably be the first to disclaim any ambitious intentions in that direction. Few of the works from the season's list of novelties have had such an enthusiastic reception.

I was not able to hear Mr. Armstrong Gibbs's Suite for orchestra, 'Crossings,' being at the first performance of 'Dante and Beatrice' at Hammersmith on that evening, but I remember the favourable impression it made at one of the Patron's Fund public rehearsals.

A pleasing feature of the same concert was the repetition of Howard Carr's 'Three Heroes.' The policy of repeating works which have already made their mark is one that should be encouraged.

One other incident deserves record here—the extraordinary enthusiasm of the public for the organ piece of Widor. This seems to suggest the wisdom of letting the public have larger doses of the food it wants. There is no shortage in the world's supply of organ music or, indeed, of organists.

Opera in London

BY FRANCIS E. BARRETT

It is somewhat notable that there is anything at all to record concerning opera in London during the last month; but as it happens the Metropolis, or such part of it as is represented by Hammersmith, has been the site of a good deal of opera giving. It is Mr. Mulholland who has thus kept up the operatic story. First of all he engaged the D'Oyly Carte Company to give their répertoire of Gilbert and Sullivan works, and then the Carl Rosa Company to fill the bill. Gilbert and Sullivan once again proved irresistible, and for three weeks the house was crowded for the performances of the best known of these immortal productions. The fact that the Company is not to give a London season this year in spite of the great success of its appearances at the Princes Theatre last winter, may possibly account for the eagerness with which it was received on this occasion. It seems rather hard that London is not allowed to hear more of these works, which are so satisfying to all the senses, and that for its light music has to depend on the wretched revue and 'musical' (save the mark) comedies. There is a wealth of Gilbert and Sullivan works of which the present day public knows nothing, so that there need be no question as to a répertoire.

OPERA IN ENGLISH

On the other hand the Carl Rosa Company does all it can to supply London, with the result that a return to the Metropolis was made as soon as possible after the Lyceum Theatre season. The visit received due recognition at the hands of the public in spite of the fact that the list of operas showed no change. The only addition to the répertoire was a revised version of Mr. Stephen Philpot's 'Dante and Beatrice,' which the Company produced at the Shaftesbury Theatre in 1918. Then I did not find Mr. Philpot's style particularly operatic nor his phraseology remarkable either for its force or its refinement.

A complete revolution of style could not be expected in the short interval since the first production, and there is no occasion for a revised estimate of Mr. Philpot's capabilities as an operatic composer.

The new version expands his opportunities for writing in a vein of intense feeling and of devising a coloured orchestral texture, but brings no better realisation of the necessity for adapting music to its purposes. There are many pages in the opera that are good for other uses than as accompaniment to song dialogue. They proceed simultaneously with the dialogue, but are not part of it. Moreover the composer scores too heavily. Wagner, the arch-fiend of noise, permits far more of his words to reach the auditorium than does the composer of 'Dante and Beatrice.' Without the help of a printed description of the plot much of the agitation of the people on the stage would have been incomprehensible. Their moments of satisfaction were usually more intelligible, as they consisted frequently of mutually inspired raptures by Beatrice and Dante. The need for clear definition of the argument is a practical point in opera-making that is so obvious as to occur to nearly all people except the few who compose opera. Only the strongest music can obviate it, and Mr. Philpot's is not strong enough, in spite of its facility and evident earnestness. Its intrinsic qualities are incomplete, for while it has all the appurtenances of a melodic style it lacks melody. It conveys the idea that Mr. Philpot can invent, but is too easily satisfied with first thoughts. On the credit side, he sustains a homogeneous passage well, can build a good climax, knows how to write independently for voices, and constructs an effective ensemble. With more assiduous invention and self-criticism, and his added knowledge of ways and means, Mr. Philpot's next opera should come nearer to the ideal.

In other respects 'Dante and Beatrice' makes good. The plot, which compares well with the operatic normal, is carried forward by much love, intrigue (Neri v. Bianchi), treachery, eavesdropping (by a useful jester), festivity, battle, and nuptials to a pathetic ending (death of Beatrice). Spectacle is abundant. The opening scene with the Ponte Vecchio in the background and some revised street-planning, allows the privilege of surveying the left bank of the Arno in all its spick-and-span mediæval newness, and serves at the beginning for a tableau of Holiday's famous picture. Chorus work, of bright aspect, is plentiful in street, palace, and church.

The first production was a triumph for Mr. William Boland as Dante. He sang with ease and conviction, and knew, by long practice, how to be statuesque while waiting for his cue. Miss Beatrice Miranda, rich-voiced as usual, was chiefly occupied with being gracious, a task completely done. The others were equal to their more mercurial parts, and as conductor, Mr. Philpot bore his responsibilities well.

Choral Notes and News

By W. McNAUGHT

Not much is yet known of the immediate plans and ambitions of choral societies, either in London or elsewhere. Detailed announcements that have come to hand show a regard for routine work at which nobody need be surprised. Choral society finance in these days is apt to resemble Mr. Micawber's, and 'safety first' is a good motto. Works that are known to pay their way are now more than ever the bread and meat of a society's existence. Elijahs, Messiahs, Wedding-Feasts, Merrie Englands, and the like are necessarily the staple food of the season. As music they satisfy the national palate, but as fodder for a news-column they are dry fare, and in giving an outline of the season's prospects (in this and the next issue of the Musical Times) works of every-day usage must be taken for granted and attention be chiefly confined to the less familiar.

THE ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

The programme of the Royal Choral Society, however, is of too wide an interest for anything short of complete quotation, especially since the Society is now entering upon its fiftieth season. The scheme is entirely traditional, thus ensuring that Sir Frederick Bridge and his choir will be engaged in work that is known to bring out their best capabilities, and that a public ready to hear familiar masterpieces will be sure of the quality of the performance. The following are the works chosen: October 30, 'Elijah'; November 27, 'Judas Maccabæus'; December 18, Carols; January 1, 'Messiah'; February 5, 'Samson and Delilah'; March 5, 'The Dream of Gerontius'; March 25 (Good Friday), 'Messiah'; April 23, 'Hiawatha.' With the exception of March 25, all the dates are Saturdays, and the concerts all begin at half-past two.

THE PHILHARMONIC CHOIR

No official announcement has yet detailed the plans of the Philharmonic Choir for its second season, but it is understood that the following works are to be in the list: Scriabin's 'Prometheus,' Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' Vaughan Williams's 'Fantasia on Christmas Carols,' the final scene from 'The Mastersingers,' part of the 'Christmas Oratorio,' and Delius's 'Sea Drift.' This is an adventurous choice nowadays, even for a choir with a policy (not of insurance), and it is to be hoped that Mr. C. Kennedy Scott will be well backed up, both by singers and by the public.

THE ALEXANDRA PALACE CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY

Although still excluded from its proper home, and forced to remain content with a hall—the Northern Polytechnic—which limits the membership of the choir, and still more seriously limits the size of its audience, this organization adheres to the policy which has made its name carry credit among musicians. It is long since 'The Apostles' was heard in London, and it is good news that Mr. Allen Gill and his choir have made it the chief goal of their season's work. This and the B minor Mass set a standard of well-directed zeal that is rarely aspired to nowadays. The list for the season includes also 'Israel in Egypt,' and Hubert Bath's 'The Wedding of Shon Maclean.'

The Islington Choral Society has been formed to meet the growing demands of the neighbourhood for choral music of its own. Practices are to be held at the Large Hall, Central Library, Holloway Road, under Mr. Ronald A. Chamberlain. Mrs. A. C. Peters, 84, Grosvenor Road, N. 5, supplies particulars.

Dulwich Philharmonic Society (Mr. Martin Kinglake) include 'The Golden Legend,' 'King Olaf,' and 'The Revenge,' in a season of four concerts.

East Herts Musical Society has decided on 'The Revenge,' 'Blest pair of Sirens,' and 'Samson'—all said to be new to Hertford.

Chamber Music for Amateurs

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur chamber musicians who wish to get into touch with other players. We shall be glad if those making use of the scheme will let us know when their announcements have borne fruit. Failing such notice, advertisements will be inserted three times.

Young lady pianist desires to meet other players, or good singer. Sheffield and Rotherham district.—'Pianist,' c/o Musical Times.

Chamber Music for amateurs in Italy. For particulars of a means of bringing together amateur players and singers, apply by letter to the Consul of the Independent Theosophical Society, 65, Via Mario Cutelli, Palermo, Italy.

Pianist (male) wishes to meet good violinist, for practice, Grieg (Sonatas), Coleridge-Taylor, &c.—J. C. BIRD, 1, Spooner Road, Broomhill, Sheffield.

Lady (violin and viola player) and gentleman ('cellist) wish to meet two violinists, or one violin and one viola player, for a weekly evening practice of classical quartets. Must be experienced and good sight-readers.—Mr. and Mrs. MARTIN, 5, Amblecote Road, Grove Park, S.E. 12.

Pianist (19) desires to form trio (pianoforte, violin, and 'cello) for study of good music. Saturday afternoon and evening.—A. W. W., c/o Musical Times.

String Players (amateur) wanted to co-operate with choir in recitals during next winter. Opportunities for study and performance of chamber music, accompaniment of choral works, &c.—Herbert C. R. GALER, St. Andrew's Church, Whitehall Park, N. 19.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist to form trio for weekly practice. She has a number of classical and modern trios. London, S.W. district.—L. G. K., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wanted to complete quartet, Monday evenings 7.30 to 10. Brownwood Park, N. district.—'Amateur,' c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist desires to join trio or quartet for practice of good music. Birmingham district.—B. S., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to form trio (violin, 'cello, and pianoforte) for the study of classical and modern works of moderate difficulty—e.g., Haydn's Trios. Monday or Thursday night, or Sunday.—W. M. 'St. Mary's,' Heathcote Street, Hull.

A few more string players are required for an amateur orchestra that has recently been formed at Bermondsey. Rehearsals on Fridays, at 8.0, in the Fort Road Institute, Bermondsey. Conductor, F. J. HUBBARD, 41, Trafalgar Road, S.E. 15.

Good 'cellist wanted for pianoforte trio.—Mrs. H. A. KERR, 15, Wickham Road, Brockley, S.E. 4.

Church and Organ Music

THE PRECES, RESPONSES, AND LITANY OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH:

A BY-WAY OF LITURGICAL HISTORY

By J. M. DUNCAN

(Concluded from September number, page 625.)

[The writer wishes to acknowledge the help kindly given him by the librarians of the various libraries named in this article, and also by Mr. G. E. P. Arkwright.]

III.

The Preces, Responses, and Litany were also set in 'Prick-song' by a number of other composers of the Tudor and Jacobean period, whose efforts may be studied in the same Royal College and Peterhouse MSS. The Preces of Orlando Gibbons were sung at the Gibbons Commemoration in 1907, and the Litanies—incomplete, like Tallis's—by William King (1624-80), of Oxford, by Henry Loosemore (d. 1670), of Cambridge, and by Thomas Wanless (d. 1721) of York, are still occasionally to be heard. They have been reprinted by Messrs. Novello. Special-mention should be made of the Responses of William Byrd, as reconstructed by Jebb. They seem to the writer to be superior to those of Tallis, both to the original and to the later versions, and would well be worth the attention of any enterprising choir on the lookout for something off the beaten track.

It remains to give an account of the history of Tallis's Preces, Responses, and Litany after the Restoration. The Commonwealth was a disastrous period for the old Church music. Not only were choirs broken up, choir-books destroyed, and traditions lost, but at the Restoration a new style of music became fashionable which depended upon solo singers rather than upon polyphony. Thus when in 1660 the choral bodies attached to Cathedrals all over England had to be re-constituted, the old five-part music was found to be too exacting for the diminished resources and technique of the time, and most of the choirs were obliged to content themselves with singing in three parts, or in four at the most. Accordingly, dating from the years following 1660, we find a number of adaptations of Tallis's Preces, Responses, and Litany made with these restrictions in view. The first which requires our notice is contained in Edward Lowe's 'Short Direction for the Performance of Cathedral Service,' the first edition of which was published at Oxford in 1661, and the second, incorporating the changes made necessary by the revision of the Prayer Book, in 1664. Here are the Preces from this second edition of 1664, showing the modifications made in consequence of the altered arrangement of the words:

The Responses are similarly reduced to four parts. The extreme parts are taken mainly from Set I. above, but the Kyrie follows 'Church Musick.' The inner parts are a fairly skilful amalgamation of the original three inner parts of Set I. The Litany is more clumsily done, the harmony being left incomplete in several places.

A number of other adaptations of the same kind are in existence, which though at first sight confusing in their variety, will all be found to have been made with the same object in view. Of only one need specific mention be made. According to Rimbault, the Rev. James Clifford, a minor canon of St. Paul's and editor of a celebrated collection of the words of anthems, made a manuscript copy of Tallis's Litany, which he entitled 'Maister Tallis' Letanie, Anno Dom. 1570.' This manuscript is not now traceable, and is known only by the reference to it in Rimbault's 'Full Cathedral Service of Thomas Tallis,' where the music is printed. The setting is in four parts, upon the same basses as the five-part Litany. It is an inferior piece of work, by no means deserving the eulogy given it by Rockstro in his article 'Litany' in Grove's Dictionary; and instead of being, as Rockstro claims, an original duplicate composition of Tallis, is evidently nothing but an adaptation of the original Litany made by Clifford himself, who probably added the date 1570 as his own guess at the date of Tallis's original composition.

Boyce's celebrated 'Cathedral Music,' 760, contains Tallis's Preces, Responses, and Litany. In the Preces 'And our mouth' follows Tallis, with only a modification of rhythm; 'O Lord make haste' has the treble from Byrd's Preces, which Boyce no doubt found in 'Church Musick,' but the harmony is Boyce's own. The Gloria follows Lowe, omitting the superfluous word 'and.' 'The Lord's Name' is an adaptation of Tallis's 'Praise ye the Lord,' presumably made by Boyce himself. The Responses follow 'Church Musick'; so does the Litany, correcting Barnard's misprints, and still further modifying the plainsong in 'We beseech Thee.'

The version of Tallis's Preces and Responses now in common use is the four-part one made by Barnby; and it will be interesting, in concluding this investigation, to observe that when Barnby reduced Boyce's five parts to four, without probably knowing it he was in some measure restoring Tallis's original.

(1.) THE PRECES

- 'And our mouth' (Plainsong in Treble). Tallis.
 'O Lord, make haste' (no P.S.). Treble by Byrd, harmony by Boyce. Nothing of Tallis.
 'As it was' (no P.S.). Lowe, modified by Boyce.
 Nothing of Tallis.
 'The Lord's Name.' Boyce.

(2.) THE RESPONSES

(P.S. in tenor throughout.)

- 'And with thy spirit.' Bass is by Tallis.
 'Lord, have mercy.' Probably not Tallis.
 'And grant us.' Treble, tenor, bass.
 'And mercifully.' Tenor, bass.
 'And make.' Treble, tenor, bass.
 'And bless.' Treble, tenor, bass.
 'Because there is.' Tenor, bass.
 'And take not.' Treble, tenor, bass.

(3.) THE LITANY

Barnby has also edited Tallis's Litany, reducing the five parts to four, but with less success than in the case of the Responses, as in the Litany the whole five parts are often required. A critically correct edition of the Litany, derived from a collation of Barnard with Peterhouse, and including Wooldridge's ending, is to be desired.

There are two mistakes often made in the performance of Tallis's Preces and Responses, a concluding allusion to which will not, it is hoped, be thought presumptuous. First of all, the plainsong inflections were used only as thematic material, and there is no foundation for the notion that they should be sung by the congregation supported by the choir singing the harmonies. They can, of course, be sung in this way, at least those of them which have the plainsong in the tenor part; but such treatment was not intended by the composer, who was contemplating a delicate treatment by a well-balanced choir, such as the Chapel Royal Choir of which he was a member. The tempo should not be too slow, it being remembered that the minim of the 16th century was a comparatively short note, being in fact almost the shortest (minimus) that was in common use; and the rhythm should be free and unfettered, founded upon word-values rather than note-values. The rigid rhythm one sometimes hears enforced in 'As it was' may be a literal reproduction of the printed text, but is actually a caricature of the composer's intentions. The petitions of the Litany as printed by Barnard have in several cases their reciting-notes worked out in full. For example:

which would sound ridiculous if it were intoned as it is written. In the same way recitative such as 'As it was' and the opening invocations of the Litany should be sung, like the reciting-notes of an ordinary chant, as freely and independently as possible.

Secondly, Tallis's Preces and Responses should be sung when possible without accompaniment, just like other music of the same period. Of course in parish churches, where the congregation has become accustomed to joining heartily in the treble part, such treatment is not possible, and a substantial accompaniment becomes indispensable, but where the service is sung by the choir alone, an organ accompaniment is a quite unnecessary intrusion which serves only to smother the lightness and free rhythm which ought to characterise the music. In former times unaccompanied singing was an art not cultivated in English choirs; even such pieces as Gibbons's 'Hosanna' and Byrd's 'Bow Thine ear' were accompanied by the organ. Therefore when the harmonized settings of Preces, Responses, and Litany were sung it was natural for the organ to play with them; and as these settings were reserved for use on Sundays and Holy-days (a simple unison sufficing, as has been seen, for week-days), the organ became traditionally associated with the festal performance of Tallis's music. But the Ferial Responses are always nowadays sung unaccompanied, and Tallis's Litany generally so: why therefore not also the Preces and Responses? The accompaniments in the old Cathedral style were in any case of a very unobtrusive character, and were doubtless a necessary evil in the days of irregular attendances and inadequate technique. They can now much more satisfactorily be dispensed with. No one who has heard the unaccompanied Tallis Responses as sung at King's College, Cambridge, will ever wish to hear them sung otherwise.

As for the initial pedal notes prefixed in some editions to each response, this is merely an 18th century device for starting an inefficient choir, and deserves classification in the same category as the custom of leading off with the treble note. A modern choir does not need makeshifts of this kind.

Owing to the fault of the postal service the proofs of last month's instalment of this article were unfortunately not corrected by the writer. Besides minor faults of spelling, a misprint made the example in col. 2 of p. 626 meaningless; the second counter-tenor should read B $\flat$, B $\flat$, B $\flat$, F, A, D, C. Secondly, the Agnus Dei from the Peterhouse Litany, with its combinations of G $\sharp$ and G $\natural$ in the same chords, was overlooked altogether. Thirdly, the remainder of the Responses should follow on p. 626. This example, being Tallis's original setting, is of too great general interest to be passed by, and is now appended:

* Treble Decani has peo-ple joy-ful

† Peterhouse has G $\sharp$ in Treble and G $\flat$ in Tenor.

‡ Peterhouse has G $\sharp$ semibreve in Treble and G $\flat$ E minims in Tenor.

THE NATIONAL UNION OF ORGANISTS' ASSOCIATIONS

The first Congress of the National Union of Organists was held at Southport on September 7, 8, and 9, with a gratifying and hopeful measure of success. The locale was a good choice, for at Southport the tables have been turned on the receding sea by the enterprise and resourcefulness of the inhabitants, who have made it a popular resort for the classes as well as the masses. The assembled organists found Southport a pleasant place in which to spend a few sunshiny September days, ostensibly talking over matters of state while not disregarding the social amenities and reasonable enjoyments of life which should come oftener their way when the National Union is more firmly established. It is high time that organists were federated, not indeed after the manner of trades unions, but in a way that surely will be found, or else the work of the Organists' Associations all over the country, or the deliberations of an annual Congress, would be futile. At present there are twenty-six local Associations in the Union, representing a body of, roundly, three thousand organists, choirmasters, and non-professional musical people who are in sympathy with the objects of the Union. The arrangements for the various meetings were admirably carried out by a local committee consisting of the president of the Southport Association (the Rev. J. Wesley Hart), Mr. J. F. Porter (treasurer), and Councillor John Brook (secretary).

At the opening meeting Dr. Prendergast, of Winchester, took the place of Mr. S. W. Pilling, president of the National Union, who was unavoidably prevented from attending owing to his sad bereavement in the death of his wife. A resolution of sincere sympathy was passed by the meeting.

In the afternoon an organ recital was given by Mr. H. F. Ellingford on the fine Willis organ in Holy Trinity Church, and in the evening a reception was held in the Art Gallery, when Sir James and Lady Paton received the guests. On Wednesday morning the Mayor of Southport, Councillor R. Wright, attended to extend the town's welcome to the delegates.

At the annual general meeting which was subsequently held, Mr. G. H. Hirst, of Dewsbury, presided, and Mr. J. Percy Baker moved the adoption of the new scheme of constitution and rules by which membership of the various Associations is in future to be restricted to organists and choirmasters. No distinction is however to be made between amateur and professional holders of such posts. The wisdom of this is apparent. Had they not a notable amateur in the President himself? An open letter to the Congress suggesting how Associations can help in the effort to improve the salaries of Church musicians was approved, and authorised to be sent out. In the afternoon a public meeting was held in the Cambridge Hall at which the Rev. J. Wesley Hart presided, and Prof. Joseph C. Bridge, of Chester, delivered an able speech dealing especially with the inadequate salaries paid to organists.

He said they were met that day not merely as industrial organists, but as a congress of Associations. That was to say, they represented co-operation, and he supposed there never was in the history of the country so much co-operation as there was at the present time. Sometimes, indeed, they saw it almost to their detriment; but sometimes undoubtedly it was to the benefit of those who co-operated. It was open to them, to make their co-operation of some value. There was one point on which they could work with co-operation, and that was with regard to the salaries of organists throughout the country.

He felt very strongly on that point. They had arrived at a time when a serious problem confronted musical men throughout the country. It was all very well for people to say that if other things had doubled in price the organist should double his fees. Such was an easy solution for the people who proposed it, but not so easy to the man who had to carry it out. An organist was hardly likely to be able to ask for an increase in salary, seeing how poorly the clergy themselves were paid. Two wrongs, however, do not make a right. He was thoroughly of opinion that there would be no difficulty in obtaining adequate salaries if the Church arranged its finances on a proper business-like basis. There was plenty of money in the Church in this country. The Church of England last year raised seven million pounds by voluntary effort, besides the endowments. The organist stood on rather a different footing; there were no endowments for him. He must rely upon the salary that was offered by the vicar and churchwardens of the parish. The Organists' Associations ought to impress upon the clergy to put bluntly before their congregations the necessity for paying organists a living wage. A correspondent in a musical paper had reckoned up the number of advertisements for organists in its pages. They totalled upwards of forty, made up as follows: five at £25 a year, three at £30, three at £40, nine at from £50 to £70, five of £80 or over, and in nineteen cases the salary was not stipulated. It was very easy to say the organist was required only one day a week. He (Prof. Bridge) had never yet seen a Church which wanted a man only one day a week. Supposing, however, it was for one day a week only, at a salary of £25 a year, he received 10s. a day for his work. A man down a coalpit received an absolute minimum of 12s. 7d. a day, whereas in the case mentioned an organist received 10s. It was, he considered, a disgraceful state of affairs that an organist should be paid at that miserable rate.

Dr. Prendergast, who also spoke, said that the Organists' Associations had been formed to promote the interests of organists collectively and individually, and to secure for them better conditions and more adequate remuneration. They wanted in their ranks every organist worthy the name, whether he or she was a professional or an amateur. Eventually the Union would be able to license organists and choirmasters. It might be possible to have some sort of trade union principles, but it was quite contrary to the nature of organists to strike.

The Rev. H. Dams, vicar of Knowsley, and formerly Precentor of Carlisle Cathedral, who supported the previous speakers in an interesting speech, laid the blame for the present woeful condition of things principally upon the 'man in the pew.' Agreeing together, clergy and organists would be better able to present their case to the laity whose duty it is, and in whose power it should lie, to ameliorate their condition. In the evening Dr. B. Lofthouse, of Southport, presided at the dinner held at Queen's Hotel, and on behalf of the delegates, Dr. J. Warriner, of London, presented an attaché-case and gold fountain-pen to Mr. John Brook for his eminent services in connection with the formation of the Union. The closing day, Thursday, September 9, was devoted to sight-seeing, and included a visit to the Southport Palladium, where Mr. Herbert Steele displayed the extraordinary effectiveness of the electric organ which is such a feature of this fine cinema.

In the afternoon a visit was paid to Liverpool, where Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper's abounding hospitality was shown in the provision of motors which met the members and conveyed them round the principal places of local interest, including the Cotton Exchange, Philharmonic Hall, New Cathedral, University, St. George's Hall (where Mr. Ellingford gave a short organ recital), and also to the remarkable new Church of St. Paul's, Stoneycroft, designed by Mr. Gilbert Scott, the genius-architect of Liverpool Cathedral. The acoustic properties of the Church greatly enhance the fine qualities of the organ by Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper, which were displayed by Mr. W. Maynard Rushworth, who is president of the Liverpool Association. The members were subsequently entertained at tea in Rushworth Hall, and in the evening the Congress was concluded by a smoking-concert at which Dr. Warriner presided. The various functions attracted excellent attendances of members and friends, and were supported by delegates from all over England and Scotland. Regret was especially felt at the unavoidable absences of Mr. Pilling, Dr. Alcock, Prof. Walford Davies, Mr. H. Goss Custard, and Dr. James Lyon, who had intended to take part in the proceedings. Next year's Congress is to be held in London.

Dr. Harold Darke has resumed his organ recitals at St. Michael's, Cornhill (Mondays, at 1.0). The present series will run to December 20. The book of programmes promises, as usual, a feast of good things old and new.

The Strolling Players' Amateur Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. Joseph Ivimey, announces concerts on December 9, February 17, and April 29, with programmes that include Beethoven's Overture in C, Op. 115, two 'Songs without Words,' by Holst (Op. 22), Stanford's 'Irish' Symphony, Beethoven's 'Pastoral,' Howard Carr's 'Three heroes,' and Mendelssohn's 'Scotch' Symphony.

AN ORGAN RECITAL IN BERLIN CATHEDRAL

An idea of the style and variety of music provided at a first-class German organ recital nowadays may be gathered from the account of a recent recital in the Domkirche, or Cathedral, at Berlin. These recitals are being given regularly on Thursdays at 8 p.m. by Prof. Walter Fischer, the organist of the Cathedral. A programme is purchased at the door for 30 pfennigs (a little over 3d. at normal rates, but at the moment less than a ½d. to an Englishman), and this entitles to admission. On the occasion in question the Church was very nearly full, and there was quite a sprinkling of children. The performance occupied an hour and a-half. Everyone sat stolidly still throughout. Personally, towards the end, I began to think that it had lasted quite long enough. The programme has several points of interest. The absence of 'arrangements' will be noticed—it is all definitely organ-music. J. S. Bach claims two items, and opens the proceedings. There is nothing English there, but it is interesting to note that César Franck secures admission. Variety is quite successfully introduced by the vocal and instrumental items, and the heavy monotony to which the average organ recital is prone is thus avoided. The Bach Prelude was very solidly played, with much reed-work, so that the florid passages came out rather blurred. Even before the high-pressure reeds were used, the full organ seemed more reedy than I expected. When accompanying the instrumental and vocal solos the lighter diapason work and the flutes were heard to better advantage; and, indeed, the accompaniments were all quite effectively and unobtrusively played.

As will be seen, the instrumental and vocal solos rather took the place of the light intermezzo-like pieces commonly played in England, and for that reason the purely organ solos may have seemed heavy by contrast. The choice of the solo from the 'German Requiem' was not without significance, and that poignant. It was exquisitely sung, and the familiar words seemed to take on an added meaning when heard thus in German. The programme is subjoined:

Organ recital by Prof. WALTER FISCHER in the Domkirche, assisted by FRÄULEIN JOHANNA BEHREND (soprano) and HEIT OSKAR GRUNDMANN (cello).

1. Præludium in C minor J. S. Bach
2. Aria from the Cantata, 'Ich hab' in Gottes Herz und Sinn' J. S. Bach
3. Air for violoncello and organ Fittenhagen
4. Organ Sonata on the 94th Psalm Reubke
5. Soprano solo from the 'German Requiem,' 'Ihr habt nun Traurigkeit' J. Brahms
6. Romance for violoncello and organ Pergolesi
7. Extract from the 'Grand Pièce Symphonique' César Franck

A. B.

MR. HERBERT WALTON'S RECITALS

Mr. Herbert Walton is now completing his twenty-third series of recitals at Glasgow Cathedral. How much he has done in the popularising of the organ and its music is shown by the large attendances. A recent recital drew an audience of 3,100. The building was packed long before the recital was due to begin, and hundreds were turned away. The collection amounted to £129 4s. 10d. in aid of the Royal Infirmary. The average attendance is 1,500. Such figures as these make one wonder if the power of the organ and organist as educational factors is fully realised. If this kind of thing can be done at Glasgow and at a few other centres, why not at all cathedrals and important churches?

The British Music Society is arranging a series of organ recitals throughout the country in aid of the Westminster Abbey Restoration Fund. Organists willing to help are requested to write to Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull, 19, Berners Street, W.1. The collections, after expenses have been deducted, should be sent to the hon. secretary of the scheme, Mr. L. C. Morris, at the same address, who will hand the total sum to the Dean of Westminster at the end of the year. Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson hopes to arrange a series of recitals in the Abbey in aid of the Fund.

The organ at St. John's, Hammersmith, has been rebuilt by Messrs. Henry Willis & Sons and Lewis & Co., and is now a three-manual instrument of thirty-nine stops and twelve couplers. A series of six recitals will be given on Saturdays at 5.30, from September 25 onwards, by Dr. W. J. Phillips, Mr. H. L. Balfour, Dr. Charlton Palmer, Dr. Charles Macpherson, Mr. J. Stuart Archer, and Dr. Davan Wetton, who will play in the order named.

Mr. Hubert S. Middleton, organist of Peterhouse, Cambridge, has been appointed organist and choir-master at Truro Cathedral, in succession to Dr. M. J. Monk, who recently retired.

ORGAN RECITALS

Mr. Maurice Popplestone, Victoria Wesleyan Church, Weston-super-Mare—Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Villanella, John Ireland.

Mr. Harold M. Dawber, St. George's, Stockport—Finale to the Etudes Symphoniques, Schumann; Pastorale, Vierne; Fugue in D, Bach.

Dr. Louis Hamand, Malvern Priory Church—Allegro, Concerto in G minor, Handel; Adagio from Clarinet Quintet, Mozart; Sonata in G minor, Purcell; Air from 'County Derry,' Hamand; Adagio and Allegro, Concerto in E, Bach; 'Finlandia.'

Mr. F. J. Livesey, St. Bees Priory Church—Passacaglia in C minor, Bach; Grand Chœur, Hollins; Fantaisie in E flat, Saint-Saëns.

Mr. A. G. Mathew, St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta—Finale, Sonata Britannica, Stanford; Concerto No. 6, Handel; Larghetto with Variations, S. S. Wesley; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach.

Mr. Herbert E. Knott, St. Anne's, Moseley, Birmingham—Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Lament, Harvey Grace; Elegia, Yon.

Mr. Hugh Fowler, St. Peter's, Budleigh Salterton (three recitals)—Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Fugue in G minor, Bach; Andantino, Frank Bridge; Sonata No. 1, Harwood.

Mr. Laurence M. Ager, Parish Church, Fletching, Sussex—Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Bach; The Holy Boy, John Ireland; Choral Song, S. S. Wesley; Prelude on 'St. Ann's,' Parry; Offertoire in G, Ager.

Dr. W. H. Harris, St. David's Cathedral—Prelude to 'Parsifal'; Allegro (Symphony No. 6), Widor; Sonata No. 1 (first movement), Bach; Largo from 'New World' Symphony; Overture 'Samson.'

Mr. Arthur Warrell, St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol—Marche Religieuse, Boëllmann; Minuet, Gigout; Meditation, Harvey Grace; Prelude on 'Hyfrydol,' Vaughan Williams; Grand chœur, Arthur Baynon.

Mr. Leitch Owen, Edge Hill Parish Church—Sortie, Lefebvre-Wely; Romanze, Merkel; Toccata in F, Grisson.

Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey (three recitals)—Chorale-Sonata in E minor, Merkel; Sonata in E minor, Rheinberger; Prelude and Fugue in E, Bach.

Mr. Allan Brown, Crystal Palace (ten recitals)—Concert Scherzo, P. J. Mansfield; Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Fugue in G minor, Bach; Toccata in G, Dubois; Imperial March, Elgar; Symphony No. 5, Widor.

Mr. Herbert Walton, Glasgow Cathedral (six recitals)—Chorale Fantasia, 'Darwell's 114th,' Harold E. Darke; Sonata Chromatica, Yon; Sonata, Elgar; Choral Prelude, Karg-Elert; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Rhapsodic Variations, Walton; Sonata, Reubke; Symphony No. 2, Widor; Three Miniatures, John Pulein; Sonata No. 11, Rheinberger.

Mr. Herbert Wiseman, Holy Trinity, St. Andrews (four recitals)—Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Choral Prelude on 'Melcombe,' Parry; Toccata and Fugue in D minor and Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann; Three Preludes on Welsh Hymn Tunes, Vaughan Williams; Scherzo in A flat, Bairdston; Concert Overture in C minor, Hollins; Improvisation Caprice, Jongen; Introduction and Passacaglia, Reger.

Mr. Herbert C. Morris, St. David's Cathedral (two recitals)—Fugue in E flat and Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Finale from Sonata, Reubke; Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; Pastorale and Finale (Symphony No. 2), Widor.

Mr. Ambrose P. Porter, St. Matthias's, Richmond (five recitals)—Rhapsodie No. 1, Herbert Howells; Sonata, Reubke; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann; Bridal March and Finale, Parry; 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' Austin; Three Impressions, Karg-Elert; Prelude and 'Angel's Farewell' ('Dream of Gerontius'), Epinkion, Rotham.

Mr. J. A. Sowerbutts, St. Stephen's, Walbrook—Sonata No. 20 (first movement), Rheinberger; Lamento, Baré; Fugue on 'Ad nos, ad Salutarem undam,' Liszt; Etude Symphonique, Bossi. At St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol—Fantaisie in A, Boëllmann; Rhapsody No. 3, Howells; Four Pastorals, Hillemacher; Solemn March, Sowerbutts; Symphony No. 1, Vierne.

APPOINTMENT

Mr. Henry F. Hall, organist and choirmaster, St. James's, Garlickhithe, E.C.

New Music

BY WILLIAM CHILD

The summer seems to have caused little if any reduction of output on the part of music publishers. Never have I been so bombarded with novelties as during the past couple of months. My considered opinions on them would be almost enough to fill the whole of this journal. As those same opinions would but give pain to most of the composers and publishers concerned, it is as well that I have neither space nor inclination to set them down. It will be more pleasant and useful to draw attention to the best of the stack.

Paul de Maleingreau is a composer but little known in England so far. Messrs. Chester have just brought out three works for pianoforte—a couple of Suites, and a Prelude-Choral and Fugue. One of the Suites is a nominal descendant of the ancient form, consisting as it does of a Toccata-Overture, Allemande, Sarabande, and Gigue. The music, however, is very modern, despite a few antique touches. The Sarabande is a wistful little movement, owing something to Debussy, and the Allemande has a good deal of delicate charm, especially in its opening. The Toccata contains rather an overdose of passage work. The Gigue is very ungigue-like, being not only unusually lengthy—seventeen pages—but containing one or two digressions. It would be a very exciting affair. The Suite is very difficult. Its companion—'Suite Pittoresque'—makes more reasonable demands on the player, and is altogether slighter in style. Its five movements have for programme 'Les Angelus du Printemps.' There are of course plenty of bell effects, as we have the morning, mid-day, and evening Angelus. The Berceuse is unusual in being one for après-midi—a time when most of us can go off without much rocking. An attractive set of pieces, this. The Prelude-Choral and Fugue was written in 1915, and has just been revised. It is extremely difficult, and I have an impression that the pains do not always yield a fair return. Are all the notes on pages 14 and 15 necessary? Or even a luxury?

Pianoforte concertos are usually a weariness to the flesh, especially when the cadenza comes along. One does not expect young Italy to have leanings that way, but Alfredo Casella has written two cadenzas for Mozart's D minor Concerto, No. 20 (Chester). The first looks like Mozart and not a bit like Casella, and the second seems like neither. Both are short.

Messrs. Chester have also published a set of Eight Preludes and an Allemande by Couperin, extracted from 'L'Art de toucher le Clavecin,' and edited by J. A. Fuller-Maitland, who adds an interesting preface which appears in English and French.

Cyril Scott as milk for babes is something new. Here is the first series of 'Young Hearts,' consisting of five short and easy pieces (Elkin). They are excellent. I am especially intrigued by No. 3 ('Musical Box'), in which the 'Keel Row' tinkles at the top of the keyboard with amusing effect.

Scriabin's 'Vers la Flamme' needs no introduction, as it has proved to be one of the composer's most popular works. It has not always been easily obtainable, but there will be no difficulty now that an edition has been published by Messrs. Chester.

Apparently students still have to slave away at the Beethoven Concertos, for here are new editions of No. 2, Op. 19, No. 4, Op. 58, and No. 5, Op. 73, carefully edited and fingered by Thomas Dunhill (Augener). From the same publishers come two books of 'Esquisses Techniques' by Moszkowski, a composer whose name is a guarantee of excellence. Though these works are definitely technical, music keeps breaking in.

Julius Harrison's 'Worcestershire Suite' has had a genuine success in its orchestral form, though it always seemed to me that a large orchestra was the wrong medium for works which were essentially slight, and which were not made less so by being delivered bigly. Messrs. Enoch have issued them as a set of pianoforte pieces, in which form they are, I think, far more attractive. The jolly 'Ledbury Parson' should now make hosts of friends.

Eugène Goossens's 'Nature Poems' (Chester) belong to the growing number of modern works which leave the reviewer more or less helpless. It is impossible to speak with confidence about such music without hearing it played, and only a first-rate pianist can play it. The pieces—there are three—are dedicated to Moisevitich, so we may hope to hear them soon. And we must leave it at that.

Cyril Scott's 'Pensoso,' No. 3 of 'Three Pastorals' (Elkin) is grateful and comforting after the foregoing. It is entirely on a tonic and dominant bass with some characteristic nebulosities, and is easy to play.

Under the title of 'The Mayfair Classics,' Messrs. Murdoch, Murdoch & Co., have lately issued about fifty well-known pianoforte pieces by Arensky, Beethoven, Liszt, Chopin, Henselt, Jensen, Schumann, &c., &c. The editing has been done by Messrs. Frederick Corder and Felix Swinstead. The cover is attractive, and the music-type large and well-spaced.

ORGAN MUSIC

Paul de Maleingreau's 'Symphonie de Noel' (Chester) is in four movements—'Vigile de la Fête,' 'Vers la Crèche,' 'L'Adoration Mystique,' and 'Dies lætitiae.' I seem to have heard that the composer is an organist; certainly he writes with a good knowledge of the instrument. There is so much fine music in this Symphony that it is a pity the appalling difficulties of some of it will put the work beyond the reach of all but a handful of players. The composer makes effective use of plainsong themes. In the first movement we have an Alleluia first played simply by pedals (8-ft.) as an inner part, then given to manuals, high up, with charming harmony, and later used as a solo with running accompaniment. Even better is the treatment of the plainsong tune 'Veni Redemptor' in 'Vers la Crèche.' It opens the movement played low on the Great with 8-ft. stops in bare 4ths, the pedal (16-ft. alone) supplying the melody an octave below. It makes three subsequent appearances, the best being the one which closes the movement—big chords with plenty of consecutive 4ths and 5ths which are well in keeping, and would be very effective in a resonant building. The other portions of this section are less convincing. The 'Adoration' opens beautifully, and although it fails to maintain the simple note that makes the start so arresting, it remains beautiful throughout. An effective touch is the introduction of the 'Alleluia' pp in consecutive six-fours. The Finale leads off with the plainsong of 'Angelus ad Pastores,' and later makes considerable use of the 'Alleluia' as a Canto fermo. Yet another plainsong hymn, 'Corde natus ex parentis,' is introduced, played by right hand and pedals in octaves, with rapid chromatic 3rds for the left hand. In the last page huge chords and a frantic pedal seem to represent the 'firing' of the bells. This last movement has its dry passages, and is unnecessarily difficult, but there are some thrills in store for player and hearers at the few places where organist (and organ) are adequate for its performance.

The same composer's 'Toccata'—also published by Chester—pleases me less. One gets rather tired of the long stretch with the melody given to the right hand and pedals (sometimes two octaves apart) which the left hand arpeggios. Some of the left-hand work lies rather awkwardly if the movement is played at the pace it seems to demand. Relief is provided by a big chordal passage and a rather quaint quiet section. Maleingreau is a composer who has something to say, and if he will say it more simply, he will find a large audience. There is room for good organ music in the modern idiom, and I believe a large proportion of organists will give it a warm welcome. But it must be of a reasonable degree of difficulty. Virtuoso organists are few, but there are plenty of players with a good all-round technique. Why not cater for them?

CHORAL MUSIC

Four part-songs for S.A.T.B. by John Gerrard Williams show the not too frequent combination of a very moderate degree of difficulty with ample scope for even the best of choirs. 'Sweet Kate' is a setting of some lines from Robert Jones's 'Musical Dreame' (1609), and sung at a quick pace, and with the right delicacy and humour, would be delightful. 'When Laura Smiles' (words by Thomas Campion) also demands a good deal in the way of speed, if the syncopated treble part and the five-bar rhythm are to make their due effect. The middle section, with the voices moving together in quavers pp is charming. 'Fair, sweet, cruel' (words by Thomas Ford) is more emotional in style, opening with some poignant dissonances and containing a good deal of striking harmony, e.g., the delicious change on page 4 from A minor to E flat. In complete contrast to these three dainty works is a 'Hunting Song,' an appropriately rough and vigorous setting of Scott's 'Waken, lords and ladies gay.' With scarcely an exception, the voices move throughout together—an effect which looks square on paper, and would be so in performance at anything less than the rapid pace marked. Plenty of tone is called for, and some good basses are necessary, especially if the work be sung a semitone lower than printed, as is suggested. Full closes are very sparingly used in all these part-songs. In the 'Hunting Song' the composer ends verses 1 and 2 on a widespread chord of the 9th, and the final cadence is an eight-part chord of the added 6th. Our readers will remember Mr. Williams as the winner of our recent part-song competition. Clearly he has the knack of writing fanciful small works. He showed it in his 'Pot-pourri' for pianoforte solo, and it is no less manifest in these part-songs (Novello).

Sir Charles Stanford has arranged his song 'A Carol of Bells' for S.A.T.B. (Enoch). It makes a capital part-song, and the only drawback that strikes one is that the words, having to do with the demolished carillons of Belgium, may prove rather too reminiscent of the war for many people. Musically it is a very effective piece of work. Gustav Holst's 'Two Psalms' for chorus, string orchestra, and organ (Augener) are among the most striking choral works that have appeared for some time. Both are founded on old Church melodies, the first from the Genevan Psalter of 1543, the second from the Geistliche Kirchengesänge of 1623. The latter tune is familiar in this country. It is set in the 'English Hymnal' to Mr. Athelstane Riley's 'Ye watchers and ye holy ones,' and Mr. Frank Bridge's version as 'A joyful Easter song' is no less well-known. Mr. Holst writes with appropriate austerity and simplicity, but none the less provides ample variety. For example, the alternation, in the first Psalm, of unaccompanied tenor solo, unaccompanied four-part female chorus, and tenor solo with S.S.A.A. background, is extremely effective, though the music is simplicity itself. The work ends with some bold canonic writing. The second Psalm contains a delicious section for S.A.T.B. pp, the voices singing bell-like 'Alleluias' against the psalm tune played by violins. The final section contains an imposing presentation of the tune by the orchestra, chiefly over a tonic pedal, with a fine vocal texture consisting of fragments of the tune. A note tells us that the organ part is arranged for brass instruments for use when the work is sung out-of-doors, or when an organ is not available.

Letters to the Editor

TAXATION OF MUSIC STUDY

SIR,—Secretaries of amateur musical societies, choirs, and so on, will need to sit up and take notice of certain ominous and little-known rulings emanating from the Custom House, London. The connection may not at first sight be obvious, but when it is added that it is the Entertainments Tax Department of the Custom House that is referred to, probably there will be a general straightening of backs and adjusting of pince nez. The fact is that a small musical society in far off Scotland dared to combat the interpretations adopted by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise in their endeavour to administer the Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916, in its relation to this tax. Admitted that the struggle seems rather like that of a certain minute insect which is popularly supposed to have pitted itself against the elephant; but if all the fleas in the world combined to attack all the elephants what a slaughter of elephants there would be! Mass would win, and it would not be the mass of the quadrupeds. Verb. sap.

Most people are aware that there is an Entertainments Tax. Some know that it was first imposed by the Act above quoted, and a very few favoured ones can cite from the Act, besides some interesting references to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, several very generous-seeming provisions for exempting certain kinds of entertainment from the tax altogether. The fight has turned upon these last, and for the benefit of the individuals who are invited above to pull themselves together in the interests of amateur music, it may be well to state them. While doing so I shall also do my best to give an impression of the ideas of the Commissioners on the subject.

Before proceeding, however, we ought to know what it is actually that the Act purports to tax. Avoiding tortuosities, an entertainment is any exhibition, performance, amusement, game, or sport to which persons are admitted for payment, and such payment is prima facie liable to the tax. Admission means admission as a spectator or member of an audience. Exemption may be obtained on, inter alia, the ground that the entertainment is either of a wholly educational nature or partly educational and not established or conducted for profit. In case of difference on the former point an appeal is permitted to the Education Department concerned.

A normal person on reading these provisions would come to the conclusion that, while there is no doubt that the object of the Act is to make entertainments more expensive in order to get money from those able to entertain themselves, there is a liberal opportunity given to non-profit-seeking bodies and persons who endeavour to improve taste in music by private and joint effort, for obtaining exemption. Indeed in an English case the leading judge specifically defined the tax as a luxury tax intended to obtain money for exceptional expenditure from those who had it to spare for entertainment. This is not the whole view of the Commissioners, as will be shown.

Take the case of an amateur orchestral society which has a paying and playing membership, which holds weekly practices during the winter months, and which pays a professional musician to instruct and inform in the classics of orchestral composition. If there is anything educational is it not just this sort of thing? Wholly educational in purpose and in effect, it would never be imagined by those unacquainted with officialdom that these practices could be regarded as taxable entertainments. Yet this is what the Commissioners have done. A claim for exemption only served to bring into the light of day the official interpretation of the word 'educational'—used simpliciter in the Act.

It would appear that if these meetings had been connected with an educational institution where music is taught or with a course of tuition in music they would have had a chance. It would not have much mattered what they played. So long as this nexus with something official and recognisable in the way of a school or class cannot be established the Act in its generous intention is inoperative. On the other hand, if the official connection had been provable, apparently there could have been jazz and jingle every night of the week without diminishing the educational value, and no tax would have been incurred. I refer later to a serious attempt on the part of the authorities at the Custom House to act as judges of musical programmes.

But, it may be asked, apart altogether from this question of exemption, how on earth can the Commissioners hold that the practices are taxable entertainments when it is the payments for admission as members of an audience that are taxable? The answer is quite simple. The members pay a subscription; they invite non-playing friends to drop in any odd time (which no one ever does), and therefore the subscriptions, after allowing as a deduction a proportion in respect of non-taxable privileges such as the right to vote and so on, are payments for admission of an audience and so liable to the tax. It does not signify anything that there is no audience at all or that there is none personally paying for admission. The playing members pay and extend an invitation, and that is sufficient. That is to say, the tax is to be levied not upon payments for admission in the normal sense but upon the expenses of carrying on the practices, since without a membership subscription there would be no practices and therefore no invitation. It may however be confessed that in the case I have in mind the caretaker's cat is nearly always in the practice-hall while its owner and some of his acquaintances hang around just outside the hall doors but within hearing. Also, those who play listen; how else could they do their bit satisfactorily? Oh, yes! there is always an audience anywhere, and there is now opened up a far-reaching vista for the activities of the tax-collectors. Picture an exhibition golf-match. Here is a sport or amusement to which hundreds of people are, actually and physically and not merely inferentially, admitted as spectators. But it may be argued, they do not pay. Quite true; but unless somebody paid, the thing could not go on. Find out who finances the exhibition or who are those whose subscriptions run the links on which it takes place, and tax that. The analogy seems complete.

Let us now consider the other portion of the average musical society's activities, namely, its concerts. I am not going to refer to those which sell tickets to all and sundry. The Society about which I am writing is not of that category. It sells no tickets, and there is no chance of the general public gaining entrance to its performances. It raises annually a Concert Fund by appealing to persons in the neighbourhood known to be 'interested in the cultivation of music.' If it gets enough money it gives what are practically free classical concerts to hundreds of people who are anxious for good music. The process of raising the money is often wearisome, and is somewhat like trying to get subscriptions for the Home for Lost Dogs or a similar deserving but uninspiring charity. But with a big push the fund is raised, and the Society gets to work. Besides giving free performances of good music in the manner noted, it brings forward local amateur vocalists and instrumentalists, the latter of whom obtain the unique opportunity of playing concerted pieces with the full orchestral accompaniment as written, and it never fails to give a hearing to the work of local composers of merit. Above all, it confines its programmes to the 'good stuff,' and has been responsible for introducing many works of the great masters which would otherwise not be heard in the locality. Practically all the tickets for these performances are distributed free; those who contribute to the Concert Fund receive about four per cent. of the total available.

Now here again is surely an example of what the Act was seeking to free from the tax. Granted that the concerts may not be wholly educational and in the same category as the practices, nevertheless they fit, as if it had been made for them, into the second provision for exemption quoted before, namely, partly educational and not for profit. They are at least as educational as a competition musical festival (to which anyone is admitted who pays for a ticket). Yet the former are to be taxed up to the hilt and the latter escapes though it has no more connection with any educational institution or course of tuition than the Custom House itself. But indeed it is useless to discuss this aspect further, since, by restricting the meaning of the word 'educational' in the way they have done, the Commissioners have rendered idiotic the legislative expression 'partly educational.' And it may here be added that they have also made the provision for appeal to the Education Department useless. In a case of difference in regard to 'wholly educational' one is permitted an appeal, but how can there be any difference if the question be one of fact, namely, connection, &c.? Any entertainment either has or has not such a connection, and there the matter ends. There cannot possibly be any 'difference,' and the Act might as well have not contained any reference to appeal at all. As a matter of fact the Department appealed to in the case under discussion has lumped practices and concerts under the one description of 'performances,' thus assisting to bring them all under the heel of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

In addition to the rulings above commented upon, there have been placed on record by the Commissioners two intriguing examples of the official attitude to quite ordinary things. The first is the assumption by the authorities at the Custom House that they are entitled to say whether a programme is intended for the student of music as distinct from the 'ordinary concert-goer.' The reason for this is in order to push home the decision that the entertainments in question are not educational. I do not know where the Custom House keeps its musical expert, but I should enjoy meeting him in order to discuss the matter. I have been earning a precarious livelihood for some years now as a professional man, and have for many more years followed the art of music privately. The mere fact that I have not been to school or college since such and such a year surely does not deprive me of the right to consider myself a student of music. If I were guilty of spending my leisure hours in company with others in playing cheap waltzes and music-hall snatches it would be otherwise. But I am not. It is our foible to regard Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, and their like in the succession, as writers of music and to study them. My Society confines itself to the work of the great ones in the art, and frames its programmes accordingly; but the Custom House expert says he cannot admit that we study. In any case, what is an 'ordinary concert-goer' and what is the Commissioners' model programme?

The second delightful little piece of by-play is the suggestion that the entertainments tax may be avoided on the subscriptions of those who support the Concert Fund previously mentioned, if the intention of the subscriber is solely to 'encourage music' (the ipsissima verba of the Commissioners) and not to attend the concerts. This is accomplished by the simple remedy of not sending him tickets. That is to say, if I give a subscription to this concert fund meaning to encourage music and believing in my heart of hearts that I am not interested in the concerts to the extent of going to hear them, then the Society will not be liable for tax on my subscription. If, however, in a weak moment I am tempted to ask for a ticket in order to see whether I ought to continue my subscription another year, and whether my intention is being carried out, a liability to the tax straightway arises. Hugging my intention to my heart I hurry to the concert only to find that when I have given up the ticket, the intention has gone with it. By attending the concert I cease to encourage music.

The position is capable of summary as follows: Whether you are (or imagine you are) educating yourself and others or not, and whether you do it for profit or not, so long as you cannot establish the requisite connection with something official in the scholastic or tutorial line and are unable to prove to the Custom House that your programmes are intended for the student—their imaginary student—(e.g., scales and exercises?) you will be taxed both on what the supporters of your performances give you and on what you yourself give in order to practise. If, however, you can get up a fund for concerts from those who are able to encourage music without going to hear it, you will be safe. You do not require to be connected with an educational institution, but you will have to do without an audience. As to your practices, the only way to avoid being mistaken for an audience paying for admission is for the practisers to stop their ears with red tape or some other suitable material. There is no escape otherwise for their subscriptions.—Yours, &c.,

GEORGE M. COTTON.

'OPERA IN ENGLAND'

SIR,—Mr. Francis E. Barrett, writing in your July issue on 'Opera in England,' states that the failure of opera in England is due to the fact that up to the present time such operas contain nothing that marks them as being British, and that it is British flavour that is wanted.

May it be pointed out that there is in existence a work written by the first composer of our times with all the British flavour that can be desired both in story and in music? I refer to 'Caractacus,' by Sir Edward Elgar. With a very few changes in the text so as to improve the action this work could be made into one of the most successful of operas. It contains some of the finest music from the composer's pen, and successful as it has been in concert form, I feel sure that on the operatic stage it would be still more so. I hope that one of the numerous opera companies will give this matter serious consideration.—Yours, &c.,

New York, July 16, 1920.

H. W. GRAY.

THE ARTISTIC VALUES OF OPERA

SIR,—In his courteous remarks with reference to my article, Mr. A. Keay has wandered a little from my subject. He asserts that, while 'Instruments may charm the senses,' the human voice touches listeners far more profoundly. Yet I do not think many musicians would rank the symphony lower than the opera or oratorio, as a means of touching something more than the senses. I do not forget that the religious significance of oratorio has its own very profound appeal to many; yet this is something quite apart from 'artistic values' and explores another field. Mr. Keay says that 'Uncertainty as to a composer's intention may or may not be an advantage.' I quite agree; it does not greatly matter; what matters is the hearer's interpretation. He says further that the 'Message of vocal music is not in doubt.' That surely is its limitation. And what will he say of songs or operas whose words are worthless? Must the music necessarily be worthless also? With regard to Wagner, do we chiefly think of that composer as a writer of vocal music? Is it not his orchestration, mainly, that preserves him?

Mr. Keay suggests that I must be 'an instrumentalist.' May I without offence suggest that he is a devotee of 'programme music'?—Yours, &c.,

ARTHUR L. SALMON.

SHALL WE RETAIN THE BAR?

SIR,—With regard to retaining the bar I think Mr. A. L. Salmon in his admirable article has omitted one consideration of value. There can be little doubt that past composers have used the bar in complete consciousness of all that it implies in accent and rhythm; and they had belief that those implications would control interpretation. The bar was thus a sort of anchorage for the composer's trust in the effects his work would produce; but a barless method would be more like shifting sand, which would lend itself, by its lack of restriction, to the wildest interpretation, whilst shielding inept performance. At the best it would allow music written with definite aim to become all things to all men, if that is an advantage; but it would secure no safe-conduct for a composer's message from himself to his audience.—Yours, &c.,

F. C. TILNEY.

September 9, 1920.

GLASTONBURY FESTIVAL SCHOOL APPEAL

SIR,—In response to the appeal contained in the letter of Sir Edward Elgar and Sir Henry Hadow, we beg to announce that over £1,100 towards the minimum then required has been received or promised since the public meeting held at Glastonbury on August 18. Thus a further sum of only £1,400 is now required for the current expenses and theatre fund. This sum must be raised by September 29 if the Festival is to be saved.

We should like to take this opportunity of saying that a Glastonbury Festival Association has been formed for Great Britain, the Dominions, and the United States of America with a minimum annual subscription of 5s. Associates will receive all free literature, and early intimation of events connected with the work. Full particulars of this Association may be obtained from Miss Edith Percy, High Street, Glastonbury.

We earnestly ask the public to come forward and help us by raising the small sum of £1,400 to save the Glastonbury Festival School. Unless this is done it must come to an end this autumn.

Subscriptions for the two funds should be sent to the treasurer, Mr. Roger Clark, Street, Somerset, and marked 'School' or 'Theatre' Fund according to the intention of the giver.—Yours, &c.,

RUTLAND BOUGHTON, Director.
P. NAPIER MILES, Chairman of the Executive Committee.
ROGER CLARK, Hon. Treasurer.

Glastonbury, Somerset.

September 5, 1920.

[Although this letter appears a few days after the date on which the fund is apparently to be closed—September 29—we insert it in the hope that it may still be of benefit to this deserving cause.—Ed., M. T.]

A PROGRAMME FOR RACHMANINOV'S

'PRELUDE'

SIR,—Referring to your reply to correspondent 'W. Smith' in September number regarding Rachmaninov's Prelude in C sharp minor, I have an edition of this composition with an introductory note. It reads as follows:

'The scene is Moscow, the proud, the vanquished, in the midst of its illimitable snow-clad plains, in the first depressing gloom of the long winter night; its desolate streets resounding to the stern tread of Napoleon's victorious troops: Moscow, suddenly ablaze in every part, the torch applied by the hands of its fiercely sullen inhabitants; its costly palaces, its cosy homes, its vast accumulation of military stores consuming to ashes, and Napoleon's long cherished, all but fulfilled hope of safety and comfort for his vast army through the long winter, on which he has staked his all, going up in smoke before his eyes and leaving four hundred thousand invading Frenchmen without food or shelter in the heart of a frozen desert; while the ponderous deep-throated bell of the Kremlin, sounding the alarm, booms on above the rush and roar of the flames, the crash of falling buildings, the shrieks of the wounded, burned alive in the hospitals, and all the confused terror of frenzy and destruction.'—Yours, &c., 295, Wells Road, Bristol.

CHARLES H. BISHOP.

September 6, 1920.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE RISING SEVENTH

SIR,—I am particularly anxious to establish the chronology of two progressions in which a 7th is allowed to rise, viz.: (1.) $\frac{7}{5}$ on the subdominant (major or minor) resolving on $\frac{7}{6}$ on the supertonic; and (2.) $\frac{7}{6}$ on the supertonic resolving on $\frac{7}{5}$ on the leading note, as:

Can any of your readers kindly furnish an example, preferably from the works of J. S. Bach, but in no case later than 1759? I find it first mentioned in C. G. Schröter's 'Deutliche Anweisung zum General-Bass' ('Clear Guide to Thorough-bass'), completed in 1754, though not published till 1772. With regard to the second, F. W. Marpurg in his treatise on 'Thorough-Bass,' 1759, giving an example in three-part harmony:

says: 'It is fundamentally wrong and irregular, use it who may! Strict musicians improve this progression—even though the figures prescribe the contrary—by interposing a note of resolution as follows':

Philip Emanuel Bach, in Part 2 of his 'Versuch,' 1762, gives the following example, which is similar to Marpurg's so far as the rising of the 7th and its resolution on a 6 on the leading-note are concerned:

of which he says: 'I leave it to composers to avail themselves of this licence in a suitable manner, and here merely make accompanists acquainted with it.'

The ♯ in the last example is of course merely an old way of expressing ♯—Yours, &c., T. T. ARNOLD.

Vine Cottage, Streatley-on-Thames.
August 5, 1920.

P.S. in the Example from P.-E. Bach the figuring 6♯ (on ♯ C) is of course equivalent to 6♯ being commonly used to denote an imperfect 5th, whether diatonic or not.

SUGGESTED RAILWAY CONCESSION TO MUSICIANS

SIR,—Will you allow me the courtesy of your valuable columns in order to bring the following matter before musicians, and particularly concert artists?

The increased charges in railway travelling are going to hit musicians of all kinds harder than almost any trade or profession. Before the present increase it was difficult to make anything out of an ordinary fee when the engagement involved a lengthy railway journey; but now it is a hopeless business. And if it is hard on artists with a recognised position, how much more so on those who are still little known, and who have to make their name by accepting, at a purely nominal fee, engagements which will give them an opportunity of appearing under good conditions. You know already that it is impossible for a beginner—even when talented—to secure a good position in London musical circles until an apprenticeship has been served and experience gained in the provinces.

There is another point. Those who have reached a certain eminence in their particular branch of the profession of music are expected to be always at the top of their form, otherwise they would soon lose their position. But an artist's nerves are a delicate part of his make-up, and a long journey in a crowded third-class carriage is not the best preparation for an evening's concentrated work. Most of the artists with whom I am acquainted are at their wits' end how to reconcile their ordinary fee with a journey which may involve the expenditure of a large sum in travelling first-class.

A single journey performed under uncomfortable conditions is no great matter, but when this has to be done three or four times a week during the whole season, it is a different affair. To look at it from a purely commercial standpoint, theatrical people and 'variety' artists are granted certain concessions in travelling—I believe three-quarter fares—yet they do not travel so often for such long distances as concert artists. Generally, theatrical folk make one journey a week. We, on the other hand, make a separate journey for each engagement, and in this way represent far more business to the railway companies. Besides this, we are responsible, indirectly, for a vast amount of railway traffic. I might mention my own case as an example. As conductor of the Hallé Manchester Orchestra I am concerned not only as regards myself, but as regards all the artists who will come from London, &c., to perform for us; and there are also the numerous occasions on which I take the Orchestra to different towns. Does it not seem just that we of the musical profession should enjoy the same privilege as the members of any music-hall entertainment? It is true that there are certain conditions which they must fulfil, such as travelling in parties of not less than five; but those conditions could easily be adjusted to suit our case.

It is evident that the concessions I refer to as being enjoyed by theatrical people have been obtained because they have a Union or Society to represent them, and that is where I come to the real purpose of this letter. It seems to me that the only Society which may fairly be said to represent musicians generally is the British Music Society, and I think it is through this Society that any efforts would have the best chance of success. The matter is really one of great importance, and closely connected with the helping of British music generally, and in a very practical way; and I very much hope that you will be interested in my suggestion, and that the President of the British Music Society, Lord Howard de Walden, may be induced to lend his great influence to help this effort.

Besides greatly improving the lot of musicians, it would put the British Music Society in an absolutely unassailable position, for I would suggest that membership of this Society should be the first requisite. It is necessary that in any representations made to the proper quarter we should be represented by a Society that included all branches of the profession; and the British Music Society is the only Society we have that fulfils this requirement.

The possession of a card of membership of the British Music Society, presented by the holder at a ticket office, should be sufficient to gain the advantage of some reduction on the usual fare.

I am so aware of the real hardships suffered by the members of our profession, especially by the less fortunate members, that I am willing to do all in my power to help. I believe that if our case could be fairly stated to Sir Eric Geddes it would meet with sympathetic consideration; and so far as I am concerned, I should be willing to promise that a deputation—including the heads of each branch of music—could be got together to further this most necessary reform.

As a first step, may I ask that all those desirous of securing concessions from the Ministry of Transport should at once send their names in support of the deputation to Mr. Frank Solman, Secretary, British Music Society, 19, Berners Street, London, W.1.—Yours, &c.,

10, Grove End Road,
St. John's Wood, N.W.8.
August 20, 1920.

HAMILTON HARTY.

Obituary

We regret to record the following death:

BROOK SAMPSON, which occurred at his residence, 36, Carlisle Road, Hove, on August 2. A native of Leeds, he early showed great talent. He became a pupil of Dr. Spark, the organist of Leeds Town Hall, and at the age of twenty-two was admitted a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, taking the Mus. Bac. (Oxon.) three years later. He was known in the musical world as an eminent authority on Bach, being the author of a masterly book, 'A Digest of the Analyses of J. S. Bach's Forty-eight Fugues from "Das Wohltemperirte Klavier,"' and other studious works.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of October, 1860 :

THE WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

On Tuesday, September 11, this Festival was inaugurated by a performance of the first part of Haydn's 'Creation,' in which the most marked feature was the singing of Madame Clara Novello, whose voice told wonderfully in 'The Marvellous Work,' and 'With verdure clad.' The choruses went well, 'The Heavens are telling,' bringing the selection to a fine close. After a few minutes' pause, Mendelssohn's oratorio of 'St. Paul' commenced, and did not conclude till four o'clock. The general execution was entitled to commendation—principals, band, and chorus alike exerting themselves to do justice to the great work. Mesdames Clara Novello and Rudersdorff divided the soprano music; Madame Sainton-Dolby and Miss Wells were the contralti; Mr. Sims Reeves alone sustaining the tenor part, and Signor Belletti the bass, assisted by Mr. Briggs, one of the lay-clerks of the Cathedral. At the miscellaneous concert in the evening, Professor Bennett's 'May Queen' was performed, and also one of Beethoven's symphonies, and other smaller pieces.

On Wednesday about 1,100 persons were present at the morning performance in the Cathedral, and certainly enjoyed a treat of the highest order, in the execution of Spohr's 'Last Judgment,' which was irreproachably performed throughout. . . . On Friday the 'Messiah' fulfilled every expectation, and about 2,200 persons were present. The choruses were uniformly well sung, and the solo singing could not have been surpassed. The incomparable air, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth,' was never delivered more divinely than on this occasion by Madame Novello, who was, probably, in some measure influenced by the reflection that these were the last notes she would ever be called upon to utter in an English cathedral. It was repeated, in accordance with the wish of the Dean and that of the entire audience. . . . The receipts are understood to have been highly satisfactory, and the charity will be considerably benefited.

THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

This Festival commenced on Tuesday evening, the 18th ult., and as at its predecessor, the Worcester Festival, the 'Creation' was chosen for the opening oratorio. The performance was unexceptionable; and to make it more than usually attractive, the principal vocalists were doubled in number. It will be recollected that the oratorio contains but one soprano, one tenor, and one bass; on this occasion Madame Clara Novello, Mr. S. Reeves, and Mr. Weiss sang the solo music of the first and second parts, while their places were supplied, in the third part, by Madame Weiss, Mr. W. Cooper, and Mr. Santley. . . . The Festival was brought to a close on Friday, by the performance of the 'Messiah,' when no fewer than 1,600 persons were present. The receipts have exceeded, to the amount of about £1,000, those of the last Festival; and it is expected that, in spite of the large expenses, more than £500 will be handed over to the charities.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—On Tuesday, September 4, a choral competition of Tonic Sol-fa classes took place. The Scottish, Staffordshire Potteries, Finsbury, Brighton, and West Riding choristers were included in the list of competing choirs, and the programme comprised many striking chorales from the works of Handel, Palestrina, Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Horsley, and other composers of the highest class; the performances of the several choirs being listened to with unmingled gratification by the vast audience assembled at the Palace, whose cordial manifestations of approval were fully justified by the precision evinced by the choral vocalists. The following are the decisions which were arrived at by the judges:

Sight-Singing. Possible marks, 90.	Selected Pieces. Possible marks, 135.	Whole Performance. Possible marks, 225.
Finsbury.....82	West Riding.....135	West Riding.....203
West Riding.....68	Staffordshire.....125	Finsbury.....186
Staffordshire.....40	Brighton.....114	Staffordshire.....165
Brighton.....28	Edinburgh.....114	Brighton.....142
Edinburgh.....25	Finsbury.....104	Edinburgh.....139

The announcement of the awards was made from the Handel orchestra at half-past four, and was accompanied by the presentation to the conductors of the successful choirs of a beautifully-embroidered banner—crimson, purple, and orange—with a purse containing £5. This latter award was intended to assist in defraying the incidental expenses of the choirs, and was extended, at the express desire of the judges, to the Brighton and Edinburgh choirs, who had acquitted themselves so creditably, though unsuccessfully. 21,605 visitors were present during the day, being admissions on payment, 18,075, ditto by season tickets, 3,530.

VIOLINS.—To be sold cheap, one by Antonius and Hiernonymus Amati, 1698; and several others equally valuable. Taken under Sheriff's warrant. Apply to J. Wood, 23, Market Hill, Barnsley.

BEECHAM OPERA

NEW PROVINCIAL COMPANY

(From our Manchester Correspondent)

Many persons of competent judgment have believed that provincial support for opera in the Beecham manner was much securer than in London: events have conspired to prove the accuracy of this view. Manchester has taken a prominent part in the salvage work of the wrecked Beecham Opera Syndicate. In the formation of a new limited liability company with a capital of £60,000, London was to be responsible for one moiety of £30,000, with a twelve or thirteen weeks' season and its own directorate, and the provinces to accept responsibility for the balance, the amount being spread over the cities of Manchester (£6,000), Glasgow (£6,000), Birmingham and Leeds (£5,000 each), Liverpool (£3,000), Bradford and Edinburgh (£2,500 each). The provincial season would run for thirty-five weeks (September 27 to April 2). No one person should hold more than two hundred and fifty £1 shares. The chairman of the provincial directorate (drawn from the seven centres above-named) would have a seat on the London Board, and the London chairman one on the provincial directorate.

In all these arrangements the honorary chorus director of the Beecham Opera Choir here, Mr. W. A. Lomas, has taken a prominent part. His duties in the past were not confined to Manchester, because he had active supervision of the supplementary choruses in all the other centres, and he it is who has been responsible for setting these centres to the work of raising their respective quota. At Manchester he quickly found twenty-four contributors of £250 each, and there is every prospect of at least £10,000 being put up here—the balance being in smaller blocks than 250 shares. A margin of £3,500 would mean twelve per cent. on the provincial capital, but nobody with experience in these matters would dream of paying on such a scale; more probably they would be content to put £2,000 per annum to contingent account and pay a modest five per cent.

Manchester will be headquarters, and it seems likely that Messrs. Lomas and James Ellinger will represent this city. Given public patronage on the scale of the winter seasons 1918-19 and 1919-20, there can be little doubt that keener business oversight will yield better results, but it must be remembered that all labour charges this winter will be higher, and it is disputable whether a higher scale of admission rates than last season will be possible. But the big thing about Mr. Lomas's efforts is that a fine company at the zenith of its powers is to be kept together. Nobody wants to see a repetition of the Denhof débâcle.

Barclay's Bank Musical Society, directed by Mr. Herbert J. Rouse, will give concerts at Queen's Hall on November 24 and March 16. At the former Sir Charles Stanford has undertaken to conduct his 'Songs of the Fleet.' Orchestral works in hand are Elgar's 'Polonia,' Tchaikovsky's 'Capriccio Italien,' Humperdinck's 'Hansel and Gretel' Overture, and Moszkowsky's 'Boabdil' Suite.

South London Ethical Choir, conducted by Mr. F. J. Hubbard, opens rehearsals at the Oliver Goldsmith School, Peckham Road, on Sunday, October 3, the first work in hand being 'A tale of Old Japan.'

Music in the Provinces

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS)

BIRMINGHAM

Our musical season opened brilliantly with an orchestral concert on Sunday evening, September 5, at the Theatre Royal, the first of a series of concerts which will be continued every Sunday evening for several months to come. The executive is the City of Birmingham Orchestra, numbering about seventy-five instrumentalists, with Mr. Alexander Cohen as leader and Mr. Appleby Matthews as musical director and conductor. Birmingham audiences have now grown accustomed to attend Sunday evening orchestral concerts, as was clearly shown last season when Mr. Appleby Matthews achieved so great a success with his scheme at the Futurist Cinema House, that embraced every Sunday evening during the autumn, winter, and spring. The foundation was laid on a safe and sure basis, and viewed from every point of view the Theatre Royal season now inaugurated promises a great success. The programme submitted for the first concert opened with an early work by Granville Bantock, the symphonic Overture 'Saul,' first produced at the Chester Festival of 1897. Since that date the composer's style has greatly broadened and developed, but nevertheless the Overture proved a very interesting and melodically beautiful work, which one would gladly hear again. We are also promised a performance of his 'Hebridean' Symphony. The Symphony of the evening was Tchaikovsky's fourth, which received a pleasing interpretation, although by no means perfect in detail. Mendelssohn's Overture, Nocturne, and Scherzo, from 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' was another item of compelling interest, as also was Elgar's early Serenade for Strings, Op. 20, that was beautifully played. Finally came the 'Tannhäuser' Overture. The vocalist was our local baritone, Mr. Herbert Simmonds, who sang songs by Sullivan which the audience received with every mark of enthusiasm.

Since giving in the Musical Times a résumé of coming musical events, several very important additions have been made. Once more the 'International Celebrity' concerts will submit four important subscription programmes at which will appear Dame Nellie Melba, Dame Clara Butt, Miss Rosina Buckman, and Madame Edna Thornton, and Messrs. Kennerley Rumford, Albert Sammons, Hollman, William Murdoch, Dinh Gilly, George Copeland, Arthur Mason, and Jean Vallier Bratza. Pachmann will give his farewell pianoforte recital, and finally, at the last concert, the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra, with Sir Henry Wood as conductor, will be the great attraction. Miss Leila Megaine, the Welsh mezzo-soprano, will be the vocalist.

Chamber music will be once more under the control of the Birmingham Chamber Concerts Society, and the executive the Catterall String Quartet.

The Festival Choral Society has just issued its scheme for the season. There will be four concerts in addition to the customary Christmas performance of 'Messiah.' Works to be given comprise Bantock's 'The Great God Pan,' Dvorák's 'The Spectre's Bride,' Bach's B minor Mass, Debussy's 'Blessed Damsel,' Bach's motet, 'Wailing, crying,' and a 'Meistersinger' selection. Sir Henry Wood will be the conductor.

Owing to her indisposition, Madame Minadieu's enjoyable Matinées Musicales will unfortunately not be given this season.

One of our local talented pianists, Mr. Wilfred Ridgway, will give three salon concerts during the season, for which excellent programmes have been arranged.

Mr. Mark Hambourg will once more visit our city, and will give a lengthy pianoforte recital at the Town Hall on October 4.

Miss Irene Berry, another local pianist, has arranged to give a chamber concert, when she will be assisted by the talented violinist, Mr. Alfred Barker, and by Mr. Johan C. Hock. The programme will include a Trio in D minor (MS.), by William Barnes.

In addition to the coming concerts already enumerated in the Musical Times, there will again be the customary choral concerts by the Midland Society, the Birmingham Choral Union, and the Choral and Orchestral Association's concerts and others.

Grand opera at Birmingham will be provided by the Beecham Opera Company, which will hold an operatic season of four weeks at the Prince of Wales Theatre from Monday, September 27, to Saturday, October 23. With the exception of a revival by this Company of the 'Mastersingers,' the repertory will consist of operas given here by the Beecham Syndicate on previous occasions, viz., 'Aida,' 'Coq d'Or,' 'Faust,' 'Samson and Delilah,' 'Il Trovatore,' 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 'Pagliacci,' 'Tristan and Isolde,' 'Maritana,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Madame Butterfly,' 'Carmen,' 'La Bohème,' 'The Marriage of Figaro,' 'Othello,' and 'Louise.'

Sir Edward Elgar will not only be well represented by his own compositions, but he himself will honour Birmingham by his presence to conduct the first of the six symphony concerts at the Town Hall on November 10 of the City of Birmingham Orchestra, which will include among its performers Messrs. Leon Goossens (oboe), Haydn Draper (clarinet), Alfred Brain (horn), and Wilfrid James (bassoon). Elgar's compositions to be given will include 'Falstaff,' the second Symphony, and, for the first time at Birmingham, his Violoncello Concerto.

BOURNEMOUTH

Arrangements for the winter season are now practically completed, and signs are forthcoming that a period of even greater activity than usual is before us.

A few months ago it was feared that possibly the Corporation would not be prepared to face the unavoidable increase in working expenses that a continuance of the Symphony Concerts at the customary high level would entail. A momentous question of musical policy confronted our Councillors, while hopes and fears alternately filled the minds of local musicians, both amateur and professional.

That for the time being, at least, the dread fiat has not gone forth may be gathered from the nature of the prospectus just issued. In a foreword to this Mr. Dan Godfrey says: 'The Corporation has wisely decided to maintain the Municipal Orchestra at its present strength. . . . The cost of the Orchestra, soloists and extra musicians for the Symphony Concerts will be £256 per week; it is therefore earnestly to be hoped that the financial results of the Symphony Concerts will be at least double those of previous seasons.' Mr. Godfrey goes on to speak of the fifty per cent. increase in the price of subscription tickets, and adds: 'It can safely be asserted that better value for the opportunities placed before the musical public of Bournemouth have never before been offered. Failure to realise the hopes of success this season would very probably have a disastrous effect upon the future policy of the Corporation.' Our Director of Music also remarks: 'It will thus be seen the great responsibility that rests upon my shoulders in endeavouring to cater so as to obtain adequate returns.' It is indeed a responsibility of no light nature. On the other hand, the credit to him will be all the greater if he is successful in receiving the requisite financial backing.

Meantime, as a glance at the advance prospectus discloses, Mr. Godfrey is bearing these increased responsibilities with a full consciousness of what is due to the supporters of music at Bournemouth. In no previous season have the arrangements for the Symphony Concerts presented such a progressive spirit. We are promised, for instance, Elgar's two Symphonies, Vaughan Williams's 'London' Symphony and Overture to 'The Wasps,' Scriabin's second Symphony, Frank Bridge's 'Sea' Suite, and such important and attractive novelties as Granville Bantock's 'Hebridean' Symphony and 'Sea Reivers' Overture, Julius Harrison's 'Worcestershire' Suite, Edgar L. Bainton's Concerto-Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, Ina Boyle's tone-poem 'The Magic Harp,' Eugène Goossens's 'By the Tarn' and 'Tam o' Shanter' tone-poem, Josef Holbrooke's symphonic poem, 'The Vikings,' Dorothy Howell's tone-poem, 'Lamia,' Herbert Howells's 'Puck's Minuet,' Roger Quilter's 'Children's'

Overture, Arthur Somervell's Variations for two pianofortes and strings, and the same composer's 'Thomas the Rhymer' suite, in addition to many new compositions of foreign origin.

In all, such a feast of good things has never before been spread before the gaze of Bournemouth's musical public, and it is earnestly to be hoped that the response will justify the pains taken to enhance the splendid reputation that the town has enjoyed for so many years.

BRISTOL

In the capital of the West, which has been particularly quiet for some weeks in the matter of music, local choral Societies are getting active and the membership of one at least, the Bristol Choral Society, large as it is, is full up. Practices are proceeding vigorously. This Society is giving six concerts with well-known singers as principals, and its scheme includes 'The Dream of Gerontius,' and the 'Parsifal' Prelude, Transformation, and Grail scenes. At the first concert, in October, the Ballet music and chorus from Borodin's 'Prince Igor' will be an interesting new item. The New Philharmonic Society is also giving some remarkable programmes of modern music during the season which will enhance its reputation for being in the forefront of Societies that present the latest and best in modern art. The Quinlan subscription concerts, Bristol being included in the series, will number five, and some well-known artists are announced to be heard, including several who greatly pleased local concert patrons last year. The Beecham orchestra, the Max Mossel subscription concerts, and the International Celebrity concerts will also claim public attention. M. Cortôt, the famous French pianist, is to appear at one of the Mossel concerts—which are wonderfully cheap in price—when he will sustain the whole of the programme. Many other lesser concerts are announced, but whether all these events, which are in excess of the number last year—and that was a pretty full season—will pay, time alone will tell. Certainly the agents report that a good beginning has been made with the bookings, which is all to the good in these days of necessarily high prices.

CAMBRIDGE

The calendar of the University Musical Society has just been issued for the new academical year, and it shows that in addition to the usual statutory concerts, a series of six chamber concerts has been arranged. The works to be performed include the following: Rhapsody for orchestra (Butterworth), Motet, 'Be not afraid' (J. S. Bach), Symphony in C minor (Brahms), 'The Hymn of Jesus' (Holst), 'The Song of the High Hills' (Delius), Pianoforte Concerto (Schumann), concert overture to the opera 'The Two Sisters' (Cyril Rootham), and 'Songs of the Fleet' (Stanford). The Bohemian and London String Quartets are giving concerts, and three are to be recitals for voice, flute, and pianoforte.

CHATHAM DISTRICT

The Dean and Chapter of Rochester have been compelled in common with many other Cathedral bodies to discontinue choral mattins on week-days for the time being. It is hoped that at some future date it may be found possible to revive these services, but at present the full choir will officiate only on Sundays and on special occasions, and at evensong.

Of outstanding importance to music in the Free Churches of Rochester, Chatham, Gillingham, and Rainham, was the announcement made on September 1 that the Free Church Council had called together choirmasters and organists of the churches to form an association of their choirs. The main objects of the new organization are to raise the standard of the music in the churches, and to stimulate the interest of Free Church-goers in the music. It is proposed that individual choirs shall assist each other on special occasions, that lectures on the theoretical side of the question be organized, and that united performances be given as convenient. Mr. Leslie Mackay was elected chairman of the executive committee, with which office he combines that of conductor.

Clergy in the Diocese of Rochester met at Rochester on September 8 to hear a lecture on 'Music in Church worship' given by Mr. C. Hylton Stewart (Organist of the Cathedral and Master of the Choristers). The lecturer gave an outline of music suitable for use in the Parish Church service, and put in a strong plea for prayers to be said in the natural voice and not monotoned. Mr. Hylton Stewart also mentioned the question of voluntaries, and ranged himself with Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson in his attack on organists who burst into blatant marches scarcely before the words of the Blessing have died away.

Chatham and Gillingham (Rochester) Choral Society resumed rehearsals on September 21, under the conductorship of Mr. C. Hylton Stewart. So far it has been arranged that during the forthcoming season performances shall be given of 'Sing ye to the Lord' (Bach), 'Messiah' (Handel), the ninth Symphony (Beethoven), selections from 'Parsifal,' and 'Songs of the Sea' (Stanford), in which it is hoped that Mr. Plunket Greene will sing the solos.

A new organ in memory of the men fallen in action during the war was opened at Rochester Baptist Church with a recital by Mr. A. V. Dale, on September 22.

CORNWALL

Competitions for town bands and male choirs were held at Redruth on August 21, Mr. Walter Halstead (York) adjudicating the bands, and the Rev. W. W. Bickford the choirs. With regard to the bands, the judge noticed a great improvement in standard on that of former years, and he thought the standard might be classed with that of the third section in Yorkshire and Lancashire. Nine bands competed. In the 'March' section, Stenalees Silver band came first and Truro Town band second. In the second section (test-piece, 'Recollections of England' or 'Norma') Foxhole band gained first place and Indian Queens second. In the third section the test-piece was 'Maid of Orleans,' and Truro Town band came first, with Fraddon band second. The test-piece for the choirs, of whom three competed, was Balfour Gardiner's 'Cargoes,' which the judge described as very difficult, and he congratulated the conductors on the creditable results achieved. Mabe choir won first place, Trelawny (Redruth) second, and Stithians third.

Six thousand people came to hear the competition between ten bands at Bugle on September 4, on the occasion of the fourth annual West of England bandsmen's festival. The judge, Mr. G. H. Mercer (Sheffield), said there was not one bad performance. In the class for Amateur band championships the Prince of Wales' cup was won by St. Dennis and the Western Morning News silver trophy by St. Austell. For hymn-tune playing St. Dennis also won the first prize and St. Austell the second. In the section for the championship of Cornwall, Sir Edward Nicholl's cup was won by Foxhole, and Stenalees came second.

A new choral Society, formed at Morval, sang the concert version of 'Merrie England' on September 2, conducted by the Rev. E. A. Saunders and supported by an orchestra. The parish numbers less than five hundred inhabitants, and the effort and its results were highly creditable.

Another new choir is Wadebridge Male Choir, conducted by Dr. Wilson Gunn, who sang Walford Davies's 'Hymn before Action,' the 'Faust' Soldiers' Chorus, and other pieces on August 19. The choir was well balanced, and sang with good expression. Wadebridge Amateur Orchestra supported the voices.

'Elijah' was performed on September 6 at Penzance, conducted by the Rev. Hartley Duerden, with Miss Bennett at the organ.

A development of the proceedings of the newly-formed West Cornwall Musical Society was marked on September 9 by an ambitious undertaking. A good orchestra had been organized and trained by the Rev. C. Daly Atkinson, and so good was its playing at Falmouth that it is hoped the ensemble will become the nucleus of a new Falmouth Orchestral Society. The programme included Haydn's Symphony in D, No. 2; Schubert's 'Unfinished,' and excerpts from 'Lohengrin.' A small choir sang Stanford's 'Songs of the Sea,' with Mr. Percy Cowell as soloist.

COVENTRY AND DISTRICT

September, according to custom, is proving itself to be a transitory period between the summer and autumn musical seasons. The Coventry Corporation summer Sunday concerts in Haul's Mill Park terminated on August 29, with a visit of the Band of H.M. Coldstream Guards. There have been no concerts of especial local interest in the city during the past month, though Societies have a number of comprehensive programmes in preparation.

Particulars of the season's concerts announced by the Coventry Chamber Music Society have already been given in this column. Coventry Philharmonic Society numbers among its principal items in the winter programme, performances of 'Elijah' and 'Messiah,' to be held in the Cathedral, and a miscellaneous concert. It is a matter for regret that at the recently held annual meeting of this Society an adverse balance was reported, the loss on the spring concert having been very serious. Efforts to remove the debt are to be made in the near future. 'Elijah' has already been put into rehearsal. Rehearsals have also been commenced by the Coventry Choral Society. Some interesting programmes from the Armstrong-Siddeley Orchestra and the Coventry Orchestral Society are anticipated, and the Coventry Musical Club Male-Voice Choir and Orchestra have several concerts in preparation.

A season of Gilbert and Sullivan opera by the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, announced to take place at the Empire Theatre, Coventry, is eagerly awaited by local playgoers and lovers of light opera, as is also the forthcoming Birmingham Grand Opera in English season by the Sir Thomas Beecham Company, which is always well supported by Coventry residents.

At Leamington, Kenilworth, and Rugby, local Societies are busy preparing their winter programmes. October will see the first of these taking place.

DEVON

The dominating event of recent weeks has been the Mayflower Tercentenary celebrations at Plymouth. Performances of an historical pageant, written by the Rev. Hugh Parry, ran for twelve days. The music was sustained by a choir of two hundred voices and an orchestra under the direction of Mr. David Parkes. The composer was Mr. Ronald Arthur Chamberlain, born in London in 1901, and now hon. organist of Canonbury Parish Church. Though he has already written a considerable amount of music, including two Sonatas for violin and pianoforte, this is his most ambitious composition, and as the Pageant will be performed in many centres throughout the country it will become widely known. The principal number is the Overture, which is based on Croft's tune to 'O God, our help in ages past,' and is in three movements. The first and last movements are chiefly occupied with the opening lines of the tune, the first Maestoso, in free elaboration, and the last, Allegro, in fugal treatment and broad development. The middle movement, Adagio, affords contrast, and deals with the last line of the tune. Following the Overture is a choral ode, 'Let us now praise famous men,' a five-part chorus with soprano solo, containing a vigorous fugue. The harmonic basis is clear, and the choral parts are appropriately on the easy side, elaboration being in the accompaniment. Another important item is a duet for soprano and tenor, an unusual collaboration, 'The breaking waves dashed high.' The Finale is an imposing arrangement of the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic,' so variously treated that its six verses are free from monotony, and interesting orchestral interludes are provided. The rest of the movement occupies itself in typical national airs.

Other events of the celebrations included the performance of a cantata, 'The Ship of Adventure,' composed by the Rev. Carey Bonner, and first produced in London. The choir comprised six hundred children and a hundred adults, supported by an orchestra and conducted by the composer. The cantata divides itself into four parts, linked by recitatives.

A massed choir of six hundred voices, trained by Messrs. D. Parkes and T. Martin, was conducted by Dr. H. Coward in two festivals. The choral pieces were selected as illustrating the spiritual meaning of the life of the Pilgrim Fathers. Gounod's chorus, 'By Babylon's Wave,' and two choruses by Dr. Coward, 'Behold, how good and joyful' and 'God's truth is marching on,' and the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic,' were prominent items. Other numbers were extracts from 'Messiah' and 'Hymn of Praise.' An orchestra played the accompaniments.

Three summer parties have visited Devon during August. Miss Adela Verne, M. Bratya, and Mr. S. Krish at Torquay gave two concerts, the pianist and violinist playing sonatas by Beethoven and César Franck, in which the violinist was overweighed. A novelty was a charming 'Libellules' for violin, by Zsolt, and Miss Verne played Liszt's arrangement of the 'Tannhäuser' overture, which does not commend itself as pianoforte music. Miss Carrie Tubb visited Exmouth with a party on August 18, and sang some new songs by Michael Head—'On a lady singing' and 'O let no star,' Miss Gertrude Higgs being the other vocalist. Signor Giovanni Barbirolli gave much pleasure by the beauty and interest of his 'cello playing, and Mr. Herbert Dawson was the pianist. A Welsh male choir, known as the 'Apollo,' sang delightfully at Exeter on August 23, conducted by Mr. D. J. Martin. Beauty of tone and sincerity of expression were the main features that recommended their singing.

Of numerous organ recitals must be noticed one on August 29 at St. David's, Exeter, by Mr. F. J. Pinn, that included Arnold Smith's Idyll, 'The Sea,' a new Minuet (A flat) by Hollins, a Romance in E flat by the late Dr. W. J. Wood, of whom the Irish Lysaght Lament was played in memoriam, and a song-setting (contributed by Mr. F. Isaacs) by Walter Hoyle (formerly of Exeter, now at Coventry Cathedral) of the hymn 'Through the day Thy love hath spared us.' Mr. W. Clotworthy, organist of Tavistock Parish Church, gave a recital on August 30; and at Combe Martin, on September 2, a recital was given by Dr. E. J. Rendell, organist of St. John's, Cardiff.

DUBLIN

Mr. Walter McNally, the Irish-American baritone, had a bumper house at his farewell concert, at La Scala Theatre, on August 28, prior to his post-graduate course of training at Milan. Dublin vocalists, ever anxious to help a brother artist, gave every assistance, and the programme was a feast of good things. In a neat speech at the close Mr. McNally paid a graceful compliment to Mr. Vincent O'Brien, his voice-trainer, who also taught John McCormack. The critics forecast a brilliant future for this popular vocalist, and no doubt a year's training at Milan will affix a hallmark to his already high reputation. Among the many artists who assisted, Miss Mollie O'Callaghan seemed prime favourite. Mrs. V. O'Brien and Miss Cuolahan acted as accompanists.

Music students will be glad to learn that the extensive Joly collection, which was bequeathed to the National Library of Ireland, Kildare Street, Dublin, can now be consulted. The catalogue is being printed, but meantime printed slips are available. In all there are 683 volumes, including English music (84 vols.), Irish (175 vols.), Scotch (176 vols.), Welsh (17 vols.), and Miscellaneous (231 vols.). The last named includes many rare musical works by Campion, Playford, Dufey, early ballad operas, and sheet songs of the 18th century. In addition to the Joly collection, there are three other collections, namely, the Banks, Omeath, and Hamilton gifts—making about 120 large volumes. Students will receive every courtesy from the deservedly popular librarian, Mr. T. W. Lyster, who is, however, soon about to retire.

In addition to La Scala Theatre, recently opened, which seats three thousand persons, a new place of amusement will soon be available for Dublin pleasure-goers. Unfortunately, the long-looked-for concert hall has not yet materialised, though its need is very obvious, as the Rotunda and Antient Concert Rooms are no longer available.

The Rev. Heinrich Beverunge, a German priest, who had been for twenty-six years Professor of Sacred Music at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, and who was an enforced resident at Cologne since July, 1914 (not being allowed to return by the British Government), has resumed his old post at the great Roman Catholic Ecclesiastical College, to which he had been appointed in July, 1888. His various editions of Palestrina, following in the wake of Haberl, have been adversely commented on by Dr. R. R. Terry.

GLASGOW

Mr. Herbert Walton's organ recitals at the Cathedral in August and September again heralded the approach of the next musical season. These recitals are becoming increasingly popular, and on September 7, when the proceeds were devoted to the funds of the Royal Infirmary, the audience was exceptionally large.

The following is a forecast of the winter's musical activities: The scheme of the Choral and Orchestral Union will embrace thirteen Tuesday and fourteen Saturday popular orchestral concerts. The Scottish Orchestra of seventy-five performers will again have Mr. Landon Ronald as conductor-in-chief, assisted by Mr. Julius Harrison, who will devote his whole time during the season to the work of the Orchestra, and will also conduct five of the Tuesday and five of the Saturday concerts. The music selected for the Choral Union's (Mr. Warren T. Clemens, conductor) share in the scheme comprises Elgar's 'Dream of Gerontius,' Austin's 'Hymn of Apollo,' David Stephen's 'Sir Patrick Spens' (a new work dedicated to the Glasgow Choral Union), Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Dvorák's 'The Spectre's Bride,' and 'Messiah.' The Bach Choir, now under the direction of Mr. A. M. Henderson, issues an unusually attractive prospectus of four concerts, two of chamber music and two of choral compositions. The choral works include three of the Church cantatas, and a first-rate selection of a cappella Church music covering a period from Tallis to Wesley. The University Choral Society, also under the baton of Mr. Henderson, will study the customary programme of part-songs and madrigals. The choir of Westbourne Church (Mr. A. M. Henderson, organist and choirmaster) will give Henschel's Mass in C and two movements of his 'Requiem,' conducted by the composer. Under the direction of Mr. Philip Halstead, four chamber concerts will be given at the Royal Institute of Fine Arts, at one of which the Flonzaly Quartet will perform. The Orpheus Choir's week of chamber concerts by the London Quartet, inaugurated so successfully last year, will be repeated in October, and the Choir's winter and spring series of choral concerts on the well-known Orpheus lines are announced. Similar choral concerts will be given by the William Morris Choir (Mr. W. Robertson, conductor), and Hamilton Choral Society, under Mr. T. S. Drummond, will perform 'Messiah' at its first concert at Christmas. The impulse given to choral singing by our great Competitive Festival is reflected in the large number of smaller choirs which have sprung into being during recent years. As many of these choirs are connected with large industrial and commercial concerns, they indicate a healthy interest in musical art, and, guided as they are in their selection of the music to be studied, they must have a very great effect in educating the musical taste of the people. Their programmes are generally irreproachable, and their aim is to achieve a Festival standard of performance. Of the smaller choirs specialising in part-songs may be mentioned Miss Boyd Steven's Ladies' Choir, the Scottish Song Society's Choir (Miss Mary Dixon, conductor), and Mr. Thorpe Davie's Choir.

The Glasgow Abstainers' Union's sixty-seventh season is for the first time to be on a subscription basis, and four ballad concerts are announced—possibly a first instalment, to be followed by others later in the season. The Glasgow Amateur Orchestra (Mr. H. A. Carruthers, conductor) and Mr. F. O. Sheard's Orchestra have resumed rehearsals.

In line with certain large cities in England, and under the auspices of the British Music Society, Glasgow is endeavouring to form a small limited liability company for the purpose of securing a season of opera by the Sir Thomas Beecham Company. Of concerts by outside entrepreneurs the series of Mossel, Quinlan, and the 'International Celebrity' are announced.

The work of the Nottingham Sacred Harmonic Society for its fifty-seventh year includes 'The Apostles,' 'The Flying Dutchman,' and 'The Spirit of England.' Mr. Allen Gill is the conductor.

HASTINGS

In the absence of the Municipal Orchestra there has been a slump in serious music during the summer months. At Hastings we have been regaled with a series of military bands, the best of which was that of the East Lancashire Regiment, whose conductor is fastidious enough to insist on true rhythm and intonation. The hopes raised by a visit from the Gwent Male-voice Choir were hardly justified by the performances in the St. Leonards Pier Pavilion. The singing was marred by shaky intonation and misapplied vibrato, and the choir was so ill-advised as never to dispense with the accompaniment of a pianoforte. Among the other concerts in the same room were pianoforte recitals by Messrs. Cernikoff and E. Howard-Jones, the former's flippant agility being in striking contrast to the somewhat calculated style of our own countryman.

The fine church at Rye has lately been filled at the organ recitals by Mr. Theodore Flint, Mr. Carlos, and Mr. Allan Biggs, with whom have been associated Lady Maud Warrender as vocalist and Miss Annie Kenwood as violinist.

An unusually attractive winter season is anticipated. Starting on October 30, Mr. Julian Clifford's symphony concerts and other music-makings will be held in the re-constructed Royal Concert Hall, whose excellent acoustics, and generous seating accommodation place it in the front rank of seaside concert-rooms. There the orchestra will be housed, and there, too, the musically inclined may indulge their taste in perfect comfort. The personnel will be somewhat fuller than it was last year, and the organization will come intact from Harrogate, where it has been employed during the summer.

LIVERPOOL

The month of October will see us settling down seriously to the enjoyment of the winter musical season, and indeed with a comfortable feeling of satisfaction after the rigours of the summer. There will, apparently, be plenty of choice, from the Philharmonic Society's Concerts downwards, if this description may be permitted in connection with the material comprising popular programmes and the star turns beloved of a diversified public. The city's premier Society will give ten concerts, the first of which is announced for October 19, and will be directed by Mr. Landon Ronald. The list of conductors is not yet completed, but it will include Sir Henry Wood (three concerts), M. Gabriel Pierné, M. Bronislaw Szulc (of the Warsaw Philharmonic Concerts), and M. Ernest Ansermet (Geneva). Among the vocalists already engaged are Miss Madeline Collins, Miss Leila Megane (Paris Opéra-Comique), and Mr. Frank Mullings, while the instrumentalists include Mr. Albert Sammons, Madame Suggia, and M. Alfred Cortôt.

Details of the instrumental items chosen by the various conductors are not yet to hand, but it is satisfactory to learn that the following choral works by English composers have been selected for performance, viz., H. Balfour Gardiner's 'April' (for chorus and orchestra) and 'There were three ravens' (eight-part unaccompanied); B. J. Dale's 'Before the paling of the stars' (for chorus and orchestra); Gustav Holst's 'This have I done for my true love' (unaccompanied); and Frank Bridge's 'Prayer' (for chorus and orchestra). For the big choral evening Bantock's 'Omar Khayyam' or Rachmaninov's setting of Poe's 'Bells' are works at present under consideration.

After a lapse of seven years it is highly probable that the Liverpool Church Choir Association will shortly be re-constituted, and its annual Festival be resumed as one of the outstanding choral events of the year. It is cheering to learn that there are faithful souls who did not suffer their subscriptions to lapse during the half-decade of the war period, and it is the clear duty of the Association to resume operations which in times past exerted such widespread and useful influences on Church choirs in this great city. The Festivals were brought into being and continued mainly through the indefatigable labours of Mr. Ralph H. Baker, whose organising ability was also conspicuously shown in the formation of the Liverpool Pageant Choir in 1907. Mr. Baker's happy recovery from his recent serious illness will, it is hoped, facilitate the projected revival, so that the Church Choir Association may be in readiness to do service in the new Cathedral when the choir-end of the great building is consecrated.

In his capacity as lecturer to the University of Liverpool, Dr. Pollitt will resume his weekly addresses on musical subjects which he initiated last season, and which were so favourably received. Dr. Pollitt purposes systematically to take as his themes the music to be performed at the various Liverpool concerts, and there can be no doubt that the University's lecturer in music will in this direction continue to do true and laudable service to those who find in music something more than a means of casual relaxation.

Mr. Samuel Vickers is making a courageous transfer of his popular Saturday evening concerts to the Philharmonic Hall, where he has undertaken a series of twenty concerts, beginning on October 2. Such famous singers as Madame Stralia, Miss Rosina Buckman, Mr. Frank Mullings, and Mr. Walter Hyde, appear in the long list of well-known vocalists. Mr. Vickers will no doubt repeat the success of his weekly concerts formerly held in Picton Hall by providing numbered seats in the Philharmonic Hall at 1s. 3d., with stalls at 2s. 4d., and boxes to hold six at 12s. 6d. Such a spirited enterprise well deserves to prosper financially, and in furnishing programmes with attractive and wholesome vocal music by first-class singers, Mr. Vickers's immense faith in his compact body of supporters—and theirs in him—will no doubt be vindicated.

Among other prospectuses which bulk largely is that of the 'International Celebrity' subscription concerts, of which five will be given, commencing on Saturday afternoon, October 2, when Dame Clara Butt will be the all-compelling attraction. The great and only Vladimir de Pachmann will make his latest farewell on October 22, Dame Nellie Melba will sing on November 13, Bratza (the youthful Serbian violinist) will play on January 21, and the series will be completed on February 21 by a visit of the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Landon Ronald.

Among our entrepreneurs who deserve well of the public is Mr. Max Mossel, the violinist, who announces four Saturday afternoon concerts in the Philharmonic Hall, commencing October 16, when it is delightful to hear that M. Cortôt will give a pianoforte recital. Mr. Mossel himself will play on December 11, with M. Alfred de Greef as solo pianist, and singers and players promised at the concerts include Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. John Coates, Madame Donalda, M. Mischa-Léon, Mr. Murray Davey, Miss Myra Hess, and Miss Irene Scharer.

Mr. Thomas Quinlan also makes a formidable bid for public favour in his series of five concerts, which will be sustained by great artists comprising Mesdames Emma Calvé, Tilly Koenen, Miriam Licette, and Mr. John McCormack, along with Mesdames Renée Chemet and Guilhermina Suggia, MM. Jacques Thibaud, Arthur Rubinstein, and Moritz Rosenthal, and the Beecham Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Albert Coates. The first concert takes place on Saturday afternoon, October 23. The Welsh Choral Union will give four concerts, and has made a not exactly thrilling selection in 'The Damnation of Faust' (November 20), 'Messiah,' and 'Dream of Gerontius,' with a miscellaneous concert (February 5) at which Miss Ruth Vincent will sing, and Miss Tessie Thomas—the young Welsh violinist—will play Elgar's Violin Concerto, and the orchestra Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. Mr. Hopkin Evans, the very able conductor, who is now resident at Liverpool, has individually tested each member of the famous choir, with a result that the personnel will remain almost the same as before, for very few members have been asked to retire. The splendid record of the choir still remains as the only memorial to the late Harry Evans, for nothing has been done in a tangible way to remove the reproach which at present attaches to the Welsh community in whose service he really burnt out his brief and brilliant life. About £250 is in hand, but this is insufficient to provide a fitting memorial over his grave and also endow a musical scholarship bearing his name. Is this too much to expect from Wales, and its reputed capital on the Mersey? The committee has regretfully received the resignation of Mr. J. D. Jones as hon. treasurer, a post he has held for nineteen years. His ability and tireless energy in promoting the best interests of the Welsh Choral Union, musically as well as financially, made him peculiarly well fitted to hold his responsible post, in which he will be difficult to replace. In electing him a vice-president of their organization, the choir is paying a compliment that is exceedingly well-deserved.

A competitive musical Festival was held for the first time at Wallasey on September 4, when the proceedings were initiated by a public luncheon at which the Mayor was officially present. This great and rapidly growing community on the Cheshire side of the Mersey may well be congratulated upon the inception and success of the Festival which it is hoped will be held annually. There were six entries for the chief choral event, for which the test-piece was 'My Love dwelt in a Northern Land' (Elgar), the first prize being awarded to Altrincham Primitive Methodist Choir (Mr. Albert Hill) with ninety marks, Brunswick Choir, Birkenhead (Mr. Tom Lloyd), with eighty-seven marks, coming second. For male-voice choirs the test-pieces were 'An Evening Pastoral' (W. Shaw), and Sullivan's 'The Beleaguered.' Southport Harmonic Male-Voice Choir (Mr. J. C. Hill), secured first prize with ninety-two marks, Warrington Male-Voice Choral Union being awarded the second prize with eighty-eight marks. There were also contests for Church choirs, male-voice quartets, and mixed-voice quartets. There was only one entry for female-voice choirs, so that the Competition Cup was awarded provisionally for one year to the Fairfield Ladies' Choral Society (Mr. J. A. Hebson).

The hon. adjudicators were Mr. Wilfred Shaw (Wallasey) and Mr. Eli Smith (Manchester).

MANCHESTER AND DISTRICT

The Manchester City Council has purchased for £90,000 the Free Trade Hall, built on the site of the historic Peterloo massacre. This building dates only from 1853, but in no other hall in the Kingdom have appeared so many famous politicians, preachers, lecturers, and musicians. Whatever sub-committee of the City Council takes charge of the destinies of this Hall has in its power possibilities of untold good for music and the arts. This is one of the foundation stones of the edifice of a well-ordered municipal music. In the August issue I put the case for the Municipality controlling the orchestra. With that under as wise control as is exercised, say, by the curator of the City Art Gallery in his special sphere, the possibilities latent in bringing school children and students of the Municipal Day Training College under the influence of first-class orchestral music could not well be overlooked.

With the re-casting of the affairs of the Beecham Opera Co., Ltd., and the constitution of a Northern and Midlands directorate with Manchester as headquarters, it ought finally to be possible to have this city directly associated with opera in the matter of the orchestra. The Hallé Orchestra Concerts Society at its last annual meeting decided to run its concerts during January and February next concurrently with the opera season (for the past three winters these concerts were suspended during the nine weeks' opera season). Obviously, then, the Hallé Band as now constituted cannot be in both places at the same time. The conspicuous defect of Beecham opera hitherto has not been on its artistic side so much as in its business management. If the old artistic standards can be maintained, no one knowing the men who are behind the new Company in this city can have the least doubt concerning the increased efficiency of the business side. Elsewhere in this issue I deal with the launch of the new provincial Company, but it does seem that, taking such a prominent part in the matter, Manchester could, and should, furnish an orchestra for opera here and in the North during the winter without impairing the excellence of the Hallé Band.

From October 2 until Good Friday there will be continuous orchestral music on every Thursday and Saturday, with a nine weeks' opera season thrown in from December 26 to the end of February.

The sixty-third season of the Hallé Concerts will be conducted by Mr. Hamilton Harty, two only of its twenty-one concerts being in the hands of guest-conductors. Very rightly the Pension Fund Concert of the Orchestra is held in mid-season, not as hitherto at the fag-end of an exacting winter. Choralists will find the scheme only mildly exciting: 'Messiah,' 'Elijah,' 'Faust' (Berlioz), with a concert performance of 'Carmen' as a novelty here, though perhaps not elsewhere.

If this scheme is a fair sample of the new conductor's abilities in programme-drafting, then he has nothing to learn in this difficult art. Extremists at both ends are catered for, and the huge intermediate class who find enjoyment in all sorts (provided only that it is the best of its particular sort) have received generous treatment at the hands of Mr. Hamilton Harty. Strauss comes back in 'Don Juan,' 'Till Eulenspiegel,' and 'Also sprach Zarathustra,' while new works are numerous and of many schools. They are recorded in the order of their performance: October 21, 'Worcestershire Pieces' (Julius Harrison) and 'Stenka Razine' (Glazounov); November 11, 'November Woods' (Arnold Bax); December 16, 'In a Vodka Shop' (Arnold Bax); November 8, 'Impressioni dal Vero' (Malipiero); January 20, 'Sea Reivers' (Bantock) and 'Russia' (Balakirev); January 27, 'Fantasy Scenes from an Eastern Romance' (Hamilton Harty); February 12, an orchestral work not yet named (Busoni), and an orchestral suite by Eric Fogg.

Three Beethoven symphonies, two by Tchaikovsky, and one each by Brahms, Rachmaninov, and Mendelssohn, means that with the three Strauss items (and deducting the five choral evenings from the total), works of symphonic dimensions will be given on eleven of a possible fifteen occasions. On two occasions Wagner provides an evening and a half, besides the equivalent of another half-evening at odd concerts. Delius and Stravinsky appear in little-known works, and perhaps Goossens's 'Philip II.' prelude ought to be welcomed among novelties (having been heard only under comparatively inauspicious conditions in September, 1917).

The Pension Fund Concert on January 13 will provide an interesting occasion in Dr. Brodsky's appearance as solo violinist at the twenty-fifth anniversary of his coming to Manchester. During this period he has acted both as leader and as conductor of the Hallé Band, as soloist, as leader of the Brodsky Quartet, and as principal of the Royal College of Music here. Busoni, Cortôt, Catterall, Dawson, Sammons, Anderson Tyrer, with Isolde Menges and Charlotte Elwell, and newcomers in Messrs. Carrado and Quiraga, provide a sufficiently distinguished group of instrumental soloists. Newcomers among the vocalists at these concerts include Misses Margaret Balfour, Collins, and Desmond. Several blanks occur, as impending negotiations in certain quarters are not yet completed.

The Brand Lane series of twenty concerts brings the customary long list of brilliant soloists: Pachmann, Lamond, Egon Petri, Irene Scharrer, Bratza, Hubermann, and vocalists more numerous and equally renowned. Sir Henry Wood will conduct a Hallé Band of a hundred players on eleven occasions, and Mr. Lane's choir will sing on six evenings. The most important novelty for Manchester audiences will be the late George Butterworth's 'Shropshire Lad' Rhapsody.

The only musical provision (apart from opera) made for December 26-29 and December 30 to January 1, is the appearance of the band of the Coldstream Guards. The Grenadiers Band also plays on October 16. Only those who have been at a band contest at Belle Vue on any first Monday in September can realise how such performances as these of the Guards are appreciated by the devotees of brass-playing in this part of the world.

The Co-operative Wholesale Male-voice Choir provides four concerts, with numerous soloists as attractions, and from eight to ten choral miniatures per concert, culminating in a performance of Brahms's Alto Rhapsody, with Miss Evelyn Arden as soloist.

The syndicate of which Mr. Thomas Quinlan is chief covers many Lancashire towns besides Manchester and Liverpool, and one may safely assert that such typical manufacturing centres as Bolton or Preston have never had such quality brought to their doors. Whether there are sufficiently numerous patrons for such, in addition to the maintenance of the old-established local institutions, both choral and orchestral, is a matter yet to be proved. It would be no musical gain in the long run were the dazzling brilliance of the Quinlan series or that of the 'International Celebrity' series to dim the lights of the native bodies which local patriotism has kept alive for fifty or, may be, a hundred years.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT

The local music-lover who cannot go to all the many concerts announced for the coming season will find it difficult to choose, in such an embarras de richesse, the particular series to decide upon. Taking purely local events first, the chamber music concerts arranged to be given in the Large Theatre of University College should certainly be filled to overflowing, the astonishingly low subscription placing them within the means of even the 'new poor.' Miss Cantelo will be the pianist at each concert, and the Catterall and the London String Quartets will each be heard on two occasions. Amongst the works promised are Beethoven's three 'Rassoumovsky' Quartets. Dr. F. Radcliffe announces his usual Wednesday organ recitals at St. Mary's Church, and the proceeds of his Sunday recitals during September will be devoted to the Westminster Abbey Restoration Fund. St. Mary's Choral Society will give the 'St. Matthew' Passion at Easter. Mr. Bernard Johnson will appear in his customary recitals twice monthly, when he will also be associated with Miss Helen Guest, Miss Ethel Cook, Miss Minnie Wilson, Mr. Stanley Kaye (all of Sheffield), Miss M. Keighley-Snowdon (London), Miss Guendolen Roe (Hull), and Mr. W. B. Haslam (Swanwick) in Pianoforte Concertos with organ accompaniment. Mr. Johnson also announces a continuance of the People's Concerts, with such attractions as the Hallé Orchestra under Sir Henry Wood (November 4 and March 2), Miss Myra Hess and Mr. Arthur Catterall, the London String Quartet, &c. A series of popular (not classical) promenade concerts will be given at Albert Hall on Saturday evenings. The Albert Hall Choir will perform Bach's 'Christmas' Oratorio on December 19, and Mr. Johnson's 'Ecce Homo' will be sung by the same choir on March 20, for the fourth year in succession. Messrs. Wilson Peck have secured such popular artists as Mr. John Coates, M. Siloti, Miss Caroline Hatchard, Mr. Frederick Ranalow, Miss Carrie Tubb, and Mr. Frederic Lamond (to mention a few names only) for their subscription concerts. Amongst the attractions offered by the Quinlan subscription series we note M. Cortôt, Madame Calvé, Madame Suggia, M. Rosenthal, the Beecham Symphony Orchestra, &c. The 'International Celebrity' subscription concert announcements are quite Americanized in their sensationalism, subscribers being lured by a 'Surprise Night!' Other attractions include Dame Clara Butt, Miss Marie Hall, and the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra under Mr. Landon Ronald. The Derby Municipal Chamber Concerts continue their excellent course this season, with the Bohemian Quartet and Miss Fanny Davies on October 29, recitals by Mr. Albert Sammons and Mr. William Murdoch on November 19, and the Birmingham Municipal Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Appleby Matthews, on December 10.

The Leicester Chamber Concert Society announces four concerts, at which Miss Gertrud Hopkins, Miss Grace Burrows, Madame Blanche Marchesi, Mr. Hubert Eisdell, the Ladies' String Quartet, Signor Mannucci, and Miss Constance Harcastle will be heard.

The Nottingham Sacred Harmonic Society's arrangements have already been announced.

PORTSMOUTH

With the end of September comes the end of 'summer time,' and the advent of the long winter evenings calls for indoor concerts to replace the band programmes which have been so successful on the Southsea piers during the last two months. The effort that is being made to cater for the music-loving public supersedes any previous essays, and that there will be no lack of first-class concerts, at which well-known artists will appear, is evident by the various series already announced.

The programme of the Portsmouth Philharmonic Society has been definitely decided upon, and there is a great demand for season tickets. The pièce de résistance—which, however, will not be performed until March 17—is Bach's

Mass in B minor. The soloists will be Miss Flora Mann, Miss Lilian Berger, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Frederick Ranalow. The other work on the list is Berlioz's 'Faust,' the characters in which will be represented by Miss Miriam Licette (Marguerite), Mr. John Coates (Faust), and Mr. Charles Tree (Mephistopheles). Three promenade concerts have been arranged for October, November, and February. The November concert is arranged for the anniversary of Armistice Day, and the programme—to which Mr. Edmund Burke will contribute—will consist entirely of the works of British composers. Mr. Frederic Lamond and Miss Carmen Hill have been engaged for the other two concerts.

Unfortunately the Philharmonic begins its work under a cloud by reason of the severe illness of the hon. conductor, Mr. Hugh Burry. He has been at Trouville, France, for a short rest, and although he has returned much benefited by the change, yet he is by no means strong enough to proceed with the heavy work of rehearsal. The Society has therefore been compelled to appoint a deputy, and on the recommendation of Mr. Ernest Boulton, the engagement has been secured of Mr. Arthur Bliss, who will conduct the first concert and will carry on until Mr. Burry is able again to essay the work he loves so well.

It will be a delight to many to hear that the 'International Celebrity' subscription concerts, under the directorship of Mr. Lionel Powell, are to be resumed at Portsmouth Town Hall. Pachmann, who has been persuaded to remain in England for a few concerts, will appear at the first of the series on October 5. It is stated that, owing to his great age, this will be his last appearance. Two concerts in November will introduce Madame Nellie Melba and Dame Clara Butt. At a grand operatic evening in January, Miss Rosina Buckman, the famous prima donna, and Miss Marie Hall, the celebrated violinist, will appear, while the last programme, in February, will be sustained by Miss Stella Power (the 'little Melba'), Bratza (Serbian violinist), and Miss Leila Megane (Welsh mezzo-soprano).

The Town Hall has also been engaged for a series of four Max Mossel concerts, at the first of which, on October 20, Mr. Max Mossel himself will appear with Miss Margaret Balfour and Mr. John Coates (vocalists), and M. Arthur de Greef (pianoforte). Among the engagements for the other concerts are Madame Donalda, Miss Myra Hess, Miss Mignon Nevada, Miss Irene Scharer, Miss Phyllis Lett, M. Cortôt, M. Mischa Leon, Mr. Frank Mullings, and Mr. Felix Salmond.

The fate of the proposed Municipal concerts is not definitely settled, but it would appear that the Town Hall committee has withdrawn its scheme on account of Mr. Hugh Burry's indisposition. At any rate, it had nothing to report at the Town Council meeting on September 14, and the concerts were to have started on the first Saturday in October.

Major John G. Horne, R.M.L.I., has been appointed Superintendent of the Royal Naval School of Music, Eastney, in succession to Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. S. Poë, D.S.O., who has secured an appointment as paymaster.

SHEFFIELD

The summer meeting of the Sheffield Centre of the British Music Society was a very pleasant function. English madrigals were charmingly sung by a choir of twenty-five voices under the direction of Mr. G. E. Linfoot, and an address on madrigals was given by Sir Henry Hadow to the manifest edification and delight of a large audience. Miss Helen Guest cleverly played groups of pianoforte pieces by modern composers, which, though interesting enough in themselves, produced an effect of intrusion on the prevailing 17th century atmosphere of the programme. Prof. Walford Davies is, we understand, to lecture to the Society on October 4.

A good deal of interest has been aroused by the enterprise of the Sheffield Education Committee—acting on the advice of Mr. Percival Sharp, Director of Education for Sheffield—in creating the post of Musical Adviser to the Committee. Such a post exists, we believe, in several of the largest provincial cities—e.g., Manchester appointed Dr. Walter Carroll to supervise its school music about two years ago. Mr. G. E. Linfoot, Mus. Bac., B.Sc., has been selected to fill the post at Sheffield, at a commencing salary of £650 a year. Mr. Linfoot was recently appointed lecturer in music in the University of Sheffield in succession to Dr. Coward. He has been for some eighteen years in charge of the music at the Sheffield Central Secondary School, and is Musical Director of the Sheffield Teachers' Operatic Society and chorus-master of the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society.

The last-mentioned Society proposes to give Bach's 'St. John' Passion in December, and 'Four Scottish Border Ballads' by Hamish MacCunn at its spring concert.

Five interesting programmes have been arranged by the University of Sheffield Chamber Music Society for the coming season. The 'Catterall,' 'Bohemian,' 'Edith Robinson,' and 'Sheffield' Quartets have been engaged, and there is every promise of another enjoyable series.

Three separate series of subscription concerts will run their course at Sheffield this winter, providing sixteen first-class concerts of various kinds. The 'Quinlan' concerts announced are five in number, as are the 'Sheffield' subscription concerts, while the 'International Celebrity' subscription concerts add six music-makings to the city's last year's number.

Four promenade concerts are also promised—to be conducted by Sir Henry Wood. At these events, with the exception of a concerto on each occasion, the programmes are to consist entirely of orchestral music, and four extremely attractive selections have been drawn up. The efforts of Mr. T. Walter Hall to ensure a regular supply of the best orchestral music deserve the highest appreciation of his fellow-citizens. Mr. Hall has formed a committee of influential musical people to control the scheme, and there is every prospect of a successful season, with possibilities of extending the series in future years.

SOUTH WALES

Despite industrial unrest, signs are not wanting of activity in the various musical centres throughout the district, and there is abundant promise of the 'full, rich, and rare' in music during the forthcoming season.

At Cardiff the Sunday orchestral concerts have already commenced auspiciously. At Park Hall, on September 5, the Arthur Angle Orchestra gave its opening concert of the season with Lenghi Cellini as soloist. On the same date, at the Empire, the newly-formed Comrades' Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Tom Jones, gave a concert in aid of the ex-service men's ward in King Edward VII. Hospital. A feature of the evening was the appearance of the Lord Mayor of Cardiff (Alderman G. F. Forsdike) as a capable elocutionist. An important suggestion was made by Councillor John Daniels, the president of the Cymmrodorion Society, that this fine orchestra should be made the basis of the Welsh National Orchestra. The Comrades' Orchestra commenced its series of Sunday concerts at Cory Hall on September 12.

On September 6 the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company visited Cardiff for two weeks, while the votaries of grand opera were regaled by the Carl Rosa Opera Company at Tredegar on September 6 to September 18, and at Cardiff for a similar period commencing on September 20, and by the Allington Charsley Opera Company at Merthyr on September 13 to September 19.

The Cardiff Chamber Music Society has just completed its arrangements for this season's concerts, and the programme is as usual a highly commendable one. At the first concert, on October 13, the Flonzaley String Quartet will be heard in Quartets by Haydn, Beethoven, and Schumann; at the second, on November 3, the Bohemian String Quartet, with Miss Fanny Davies (pianoforte), will play the Quintets of Brahms and Dvorák and a Beethoven Quartet; while for the third concert, on December 1, Miss Jelly d'Aranyi (violin) and Miss Ethel Hobday (pianoforte) have been engaged.

These concerts were started in 1899-1900 by a small committee of ladies, who ran them successfully through nine seasons until a larger and more representative mixed committee carried them on. They were discontinued during the war—from February, 1915, to November, 1919. Many of the most famous native and foreign quartet parties have appeared at these series, and the music provided has always been of the most excellent quality. Much of this success is due to the devotion of the hon. secretary, Mrs. Constance M. Paterson.

At the recent visit of the British Association to Cardiff, August 23 to August 27, papers were read (i.) by Dr. Lloyd Williams on 'Welsh Traditional Music,' in which he called attention to the influence of the harp on a considerable portion of the national music of Wales; and (ii.) by Prof. Walford Davies on 'Euphony and Folk-Music,' wherein he showed that the particular attribute of euphony, whether in melody or harmony, appears uniquely to belong to the realm of music.

A movement, started before the war, to erect a monument to the memory of the late Harry Evans, one of the finest of modern Welsh conductors, is now being revived and subscriptions are invited. Harry Evans rose to fame as conductor of the celebrated Dowlais Choir, and was appointed to conduct the Liverpool Welsh Choral Union, which under his leadership became one of the foremost choral Societies in the Kingdom.

It is mooted that the centenary of the Rev. John Roberts—better known as Ieuan Gwyllt—should be celebrated by organizing congregational singing festivals throughout Wales, to be called the 'Ieuan Gwyllt Festivals.' He was born on December 22, 1822, in Cardiganshire, and to him in a special degree belongs the credit of seeking to cultivate and elevate the music of the sanctuary in Wales. Towards the end of the 'fifties in the last century he brought out a hymnary or tune-book in the established notation and, in the early 'sixties, having studied the system, he transposed it into Tonic Sol-fa. Thus a great impetus was given to denominational singing, and singing festivals were organized throughout the Principality. He was in great demand as a conductor until his death in the 'seventies.

BELLS, CHIMES, AND CARILLONS

BY WILLIAM WOODING STARMER

Bell founders have been very busy during the past year making new bells and re-casting and re-hanging existing ones, particularly as war memorials. Probably there is nothing more suitable or more lasting for such a purpose.

Bell metal through all ages has retained its value with little fluctuation as to its comparative cost, save during the recent war when conditions as to the metal markets were abnormal. It is one of the most durable alloys known—consisting of copper and tin in the proportion of thirteen to four—and loses practically nothing by oxidation during a period of over five hundred years. A bell is always worth about two-thirds of its original cost, merely as a metal value.

In England, until quite recent years, bell music has been confined to change-ringing and automatic chimes. There is much to be said for change-ringing and its healthy exercise, although from a strictly musical point of view its claims are small. The enthusiastic change-ringer requires his bell to 'go' well, and is fascinated with the mathematical problems of the changes he delights to take part in ringing. He is not much concerned with the tone or accuracy of tune of his bell. If he were, a great many of our old rings would have been re-cast and accurately tuned long ago.

Chime tunes played automatically by clock mechanism are devoid of rhythm and accent, which must ever be supplied by the listener's imagination. There is a dearth of suitable tunes for chimes on account of the limitations of the bells on which they are played. In most cases the available bells number six, eight, ten, or twelve diatonic, on which very little melodic modulation is possible. Sometimes extra bells are available, which makes modulation to the dominant and subdominant possible, but the chime mechanism itself is responsible for many difficulties which have to be considered. Any excessive demands that may be made—such as a quick succession of notes, which generally produces an effect modestly describable as grotesque—usually interfere with the accuracy of the tone. The reasons for this are obvious when the difficulties to be overcome are taken into account: the bells are very often in awkward positions, some being near and some far away from the chiming machine; the hammers vary in weight; the connections between the barrel, and the hammers vary in length, &c.—all serious conditions to be dealt with when notes must be played accurately to the fractional part of a second.

In England, however, the musical possibilities of bells are now better understood than ever before, thanks to the great advance made in the design of the bell and the successful solving of the intricate problem of accurate tuning, accomplished during the past twenty-five years.

This country now produces the best bells in the world, and not only this but better bells than have ever before been made, not excepting the great masters such as Hemony and Dumery.

The four most recent carillons erected in Europe—Appingedam (1910), Eindhoven and Flushing (1914), and Rotterdam City Hall (1920)—have been made at the famous Taylor Bell Foundry at Loughborough. The Rotterdam carillon consists of forty-nine bells weighing over twenty-seven tons, and is the most important instrument of its kind in Europe constructed during the past hundred years.

In the United Kingdom the same firm installed the magnificent carillon at Queenstown Cathedral* (1919)—forty-two bells, weighing eighteen tons, and are now constructing for Armagh Cathedral one of thirty-nine bells, weighing eleven tons.

Such a demand for bells shows the growing popularity of the carillon as a musical instrument. With its clavier, four-octaves chromatic, it demands much from the founders, for every bell must be accurately 'in tune' with itself as well as with every other bell in the scale of sounds. Each bell has five tones, tuned to the accuracy of a single vibration. Under such conditions it will be readily understood how very important are the modern methods of tuning when such results are achieved. When bells are used in combination, in two, three, or more parts, no real music is possible without such accurate tuning.

As war memorials, carillons with claviers are to be erected at Spalding (thirty-five bells) and Loughborough (campanile and forty-seven bells).

Musical Notes from Abroad

ITALY

AN ORATORIO IN THE ALPS

One of the oldest sanctuaries in the world is that of Oropa, 3,800 feet up in the Alps, to the north-west of Biella, in Piedmont. Here is a famous black statue of the Virgin, brought from the East in A.D. 369 by Eusebius, the 'Hammer of the Arians,' and attributed in pious legend to the chisel of St. Luke. This year nearly two hundred thousand pilgrims celebrated the fourth centenary coronation of the statue, a new oratorio, entitled 'The Queen of the Alps,' having been written for the occasion by the well-known composer, Don Pietro Magri, and performed under his direction in the great square of the Sanctuary on August 29. The maestro is perhaps the foremost of the pupils of Perosi, and became his successor at St. Mark's, Venice. Successively also director of the chapels of Bari and Vercelli, Magri was appointed to the sanctuary of Oropa eighteen months ago.

* See Musical Times, October, 1919.

The story of the new oratorio centres round the statue of the Virgin already referred to. Contributory Arian episodes provide occasion for an effective descriptive page, but the entire work bears the stamp of lyricism, and, like all the music of Magri's, is distinguished for its melodic character and masterful counterpoint. Remarkable throughout the work is the effective treatment of the Gregorian motive of the 'Regina Cœli.' Sung in the open air by a choir of three hundred voices, with a band which included members of the Scala Orchestra, 'The Queen of the Alps' was received with enthusiasm by the thousands of people gathered together in the lovely amphi-theatre that shelters the Alpine sanctuary, and every critic is unanimous in ranking the new work with the masterpieces of Perosi. The partitura is published by Carrara of Bergamo, and costs twenty lire (sixteen shillings).

A MASTERPIECE WHICH DOES NOT EXIST

Apropos 'Un demi-siècle de Musique Française,' by J. Tiersot, the critic of Messrs. Ricordi's new review, Musica d'Oggi, points out a curious anomaly. Georges Bizet, he writes, inspired by the dire events of 1870, had an idea of writing an oratorio entitled 'Geneviève de Paris,' but his premature end prevented the consummation of this intention. Notwithstanding, however, continues the writer, an historian of the name and authority of Tiersot does not hesitate to write of this work, which never existed, as a 'masterpiece.' Nor does Tiersot write this incidentally. He spends two pages upon it, confronts it with the works of Massenet and of Franck, and concludes by informing us that Bizet's composition would have had its natural place 'dans quelque grande exécution nationale au Panthéon, devant les fresques de Puvis de Chavannes.' Says the critic, in conclusion, 'What admirable vivacity of imagination!'

LEONARD PEYTON.

MILAN

Organized by the Philharmonic Society, and directed by Arturo Toscanini, the first of a series of orchestral concerts was given at Padova on the evening of June 5. The C minor Symphony of Beethoven, followed by the Prelude and Finale of 'Tristan,' comprised the first part of the programme. The second part included Martucci's 'Notturmo' and 'Cabaletta,' Respighi's 'Fontane di Roma'—a wonderful piece of music and a great favourite—Saint-Saëns's 'Danse Macabre,' and the Overture of Verdi's 'Vespro Siciliani.' The orchestra played the entire programme to perfection, and Toscanini received an ovation such as, perhaps, is accorded to only such as he. Incidentally, the maestro's performance vindicated his prodigiously tenacious memory. Afflicted with extreme shortsightedness, he is obliged to carry the whole of the score in his head.

Before embarking for America, that exceptional young Bohemian violinist, Vasa Priboda—unknown and unappreciated barely six months ago, and to-day famous throughout Italy—gave a charity concert at the Lirico Theatre on June 17, the net proceeds being devoted to the War Orphans of the Savoy Committee fund. The programme included part of the Tchaikovsky Concerto, Op. 35, 'Le Streghe' of Paganini, a Nocturne of Chopin, 'La Ronda dei Folletti' of Bazzini, and part of the D major Concerto of Paganini. Notwithstanding the high prices, the theatre was well filled. Upwards of 40 lire was charged for the orchestra stalls, and 25 lire for the pit stalls, the Government tax being included in this price, viz., 11 lire per seat.

The trio Consolo-Serato-Maniardi recently gave a series of three concerts in the large hall of the Royal Conservatorium at Milan, the second of which was devoted to Brahms, whose third Sonata for pianoforte and violin, another Sonata for pianoforte and violoncello (composed in 1866), and No. 2 of the Trios, Op. 87, formed part of the programme.

In June, over two hundred children performed in 'Pianella perduta nella Neve' (Slipper lost in the Snow) at the Lirico Theatre. The object of the representation was the collection of funds to enable the poor and sick children of the Magenta quarter of Milan to be sent to mountain and seaside resorts. The first part of the programme was unfolded by adult singers, and afforded a striking contrast to the miniature performance that followed. The two hundred undeveloped voices rang out, however, with remarkably good effect, and the audience was genuinely delighted.

Some serious experiments have recently been made at Milan with an apparatus constructed by Signor Zeppleri by which phone-photo-mechanical performances of grand opera can be obtained. Essentially it is a combination of the kinematograph and the gramophone, synchronization being obtained by purely mechanical means. The films and discs are operated by the same electrically-driven shaft, thus securing complete accord between the moving pictures and the acoustic impression. The movement of the performer's lips, his every gesture, pose, and facial expression as projected on the screen move in perfect measure with the gramophone. The illusion is complete (just as it is complete in the case of the puppet worked by a first-class ventriloquist). There are many fine possibilities in the new combination, in that some of the most dramatic episodes of grand opera can be faithfully reproduced on the screen, instead of being left to the imagination of the audience.

E. HERBERT-CESARI.

Miscellaneous

NORWICH.—The pageant version of Handel's 'The triumph of Time and Truth,' referred to in our issue for August, was duly performed in the grounds of the Bishop's Palace, to the credit of Mr. Ernest Harcourt, who promoted the venture and conducted the music. The choir's work choruses such as 'The glory that crowns the hunter's toil' was of good quality, and the orchestra backed up well. Local soloists took the principal parts.

The operatic season at the 'Old Vic,' for 1920-21 was due to begin on September 30 with 'Faust.' During October 'Il Trovatore,' 'Carmen,' 'The Bohemian Girl,' 'Tannhäuser,' and 'The Marriage of Figaro' are included in the scheme of twelve performances. The season continues until January 8. Mr. Charles Corri conducts, and the operas are given in English.

Few organists give pianoforte recitals, so we note with interest that Mr. Francis W. Sutton, organist of one of our City churches, is giving such a recital at the Bishopsgate Institute on October 28, at 8 p.m., playing works by Chopin, Ravel, Frank Bridge, and Debussy. Miss Margaret Balfour will sing.

The Blackheath branch of the British Music Society offers a concert list of characteristic value and independence. On October 9 there will be modern songs and music for two pianofortes, on October 28 Ireland's Violin Sonata, on November 30 a pianoforte recital by Miss Harriet Cohen, and on December 17 some Spanish music.

The Festival of the Leyburn Wesleyan Choir was revived on August 28 with a concert at the Town Hall. A varied programme was given by adult and juvenile choirs, three solo vocalists, and Mr. C. L. Naylor as pianist. A special performance of 'The Creation' was held in the Chapel on the Sunday.

Stockport Vocal Union opens its forty-eighth season on October 25 with 'Elijah,' under Dr. Keighley. A season of six concerts provides two grand orchestral evenings, a miscellaneous programme, and a concert performance of 'William Tell.'

Answers to Correspondents

J. D. BENNETT.—The version of Chopin's G flat Study, played by Mr. Mark Hambourg, is probably not published. Inquire of the makers of the gramophone record.

CYMRU.—We have no particulars of the London Welsh Choral Society beyond the name of the conductor, Mr. Merlin Morgan. Perhaps some member will see this, and send us a prospectus.

'SHAKESPEARE.'—We do not know the publishers of Elsom's 'Shakespeare in Music.' Can our readers help us?

T. W. B.—For particulars of the Teachers' Registration Council write to the Secretary, 47, Bedford Square, W.C.1.

'MAUREEN.'—We understand that the present price of 'Grove' is 25s. per volume.

CONTENTS

	Page
Charles Kennedy Scott (with portrait)...	659
Pearsall's Letters. By W. Barclay Squire ...	662
The Worcester Festival. By Samuel Langford ...	665
Vincent D'Indy's View of Harmony. By Richard Capell ...	668
The Organ Works of Bach. 'The Little Organ Book.' By Harvey Grace (continued) ...	671
'Jean-Christophe': Some Musical Aspects of the Work. I.—The German Lie. By W. Wright Roberts ...	675
Interludes. By 'Feste' (Illustrated) ...	677
Jenny Lind: A Centenary Appreciation. By W. H. Grattan Flood ...	679
Music at the British Association. By Alfred Kalisch	680
Occasional Notes ...	681
The Royal Choral Society ...	687
Musical Notation ...	687
London Concerts. By Alfred Kalisch ...	689
Opera in London. By Francis E. Barrett ...	690
Choral Notes and News. By W. McNaught... ..	691
Chamber Music for Amateurs ...	691
Church and Organ Music ...	692
The Preces, Responses, and Litany of the English Church: A By-way of Liturgical History.—III. By J. M. Duncan ...	692
The National Union of Organists' Associations ...	694
An Organ Recital in Berlin Cathedral... ..	696
New Music. By William Child ...	697
Letters to the Editor ...	698
Obituary ...	701
Sixty Years Ago ...	702
Beecham Opera. New Provincial Company ...	702
Music in the Provinces ...	703
Bells, Chimes, and Carillons. By William Wooding Starmer ...	710
Musical Notes from Abroad ...	710
Miscellaneous ...	711
Answers to Correspondents ...	712
'Thou, O Lord, art praised in Sion.' A short, full Anthem for Mixed-Voices. By Charles Macpherson	683

THREE EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS:

1. Portrait of Charles Kennedy Scott.
2. 'Hark! hark, my Soul!' Hymn-Anthem. By Percy E. Fletcher.
3. Competition Festival Record.

FOR SALE.—A Manual Chamber PIPE-ORGAN. Six Stops, Foot and Hand Blower, Fine Swell, in mahogany case, by Russell. £50. Also Mason & Hamlin ORGAN. Three Manuals, 23 Stops running throughout, C.O. Pedals, Hydraulic Engine, light oak, large top. £350. Apply, Wilmot, Beethoven House College of Music, Dingwall Road, Croydon.

FOR SALE.—Handsome, powerful Harmonium. Four and a-half rows reeds. In perfect condition. Fit for any Church. £55. 'W.' 199, Bedford Hill, Balham, S.W. 12.

VIOLIN, by J. B. Williams, FOR SALE. Fine Instrument. Good condition. For particulars, apply, Major Cyril Wood, 8, Lambolle Road, Hampstead, N.W. 3.

PIPE ORGAN for SALE, single manual, five stops, tremulant, full set pedals. In Clapham. £50, or offer. Apply, Captain Dimmick, 9, Thirsk Road, Battersea, S.W. 11.

TENOR, BASS, and ALTO WANTED, for All Saints', Devonshire Road, South Lambeth. £12. Walter Attersoll, 21, Thurlstone Road, West Norwood, S.E. 27.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BACH, J. S.—"Christmas Oratorio." Wind Parts, &c. 12s. 6d.

BREWER, A. H.—"On Wings of Delight." In C, E flat, and F. 2s. each.

COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S.—"Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast." A Selection. Arranged for Organ by Hugh Blair. 2s. 6d.

DAVIS, J. D.—Four Little Pieces for Young Players. For Pianoforte. 1s. 6d. (See p. 716.)

— "Melody." For Violoncello and Pianoforte. 1s. 6d.

DOUGLAS, H.—"A Souvenir." No. 71, Original Compositions for the Organ (New Series). 1s.

FLETCHER, PERCY E.—Valse Lyrique ("The Smile of Spring"). Arranged for Small Orchestra. 1st Violin (Conductor), 6d.; 2nd Violin, 6d.; Viola, 6d.; 'Cello and Bass, 6d.; Wind Parts, &c., 5s.

GAUL, A. R.—"The Silent Land." Arranged as a Two-part Song. (No. 190, Novello's Two-part Songs for Female or Boys' Voices.) 3d.

GIBBONS, ORLANDO.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in D minor. In English and (Adapted) Latin. (No. 7, "The Cathedral Series of Church Service Music." Edited by Royle Shore.) 1s. 6d.

JONES, EDEN.—"My Haven." Song. 2s.

LARKCOM, AGNES J.—"The Singer's Art." (No. 92, Novello's Music Primers and Educational Series.) 1s.

MACPHERSON, C.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in G. For Congregational use. (No. 978, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 3d.

— Office for the Holy Communion, in G. (No. 63, Short Settings of the Office for the Holy Communion.) 1s.

— "Thou, O Lord, art praised in Sion." Anthem. (No. 932, The Musical Times.) 1½d.

MCNAUGHT, W.—"Dancing at the Lurgan." Song. For Medium Voice. 2s.

NEWTON, ERNEST.—"The Village Blacksmith." Arranged as a Part-Song for Male Voices. (No. 570, The Orpheus.) 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW (No. 340) contains the following music in both notations:—"The Bells of Aberdovey." Welsh Air. Arranged as a Two-part Song. "Now fades the sun's last lingering ray." Unison Song. ROBERT FRANZ. 1½d.

SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.

No. 1015. "In praise of May." Two-part Song. JOHN IRELAND ... — 1½d.

No. 1289. "Daffodils and Violets." Two-part Song. R. B. ELLIOTT ... — 1½d.

No. 1290. "The Laughing Waves." Two-part Song. G. RATHBONE ... — 2d.

No. 1291. "God sends the night." Two-part Song. G. RATHBONE ... — 1½d.

No. 1292. "Shepherds' Dance" (from "Henry VIII."). Two-part Song. EDWARD GERMAN ... — 2d.

SOWERBUTTS, J. A.—"Lament." In A minor. No. 72, Original Compositions for the Organ (New Series). 1s. 6d.

— "Sigh no more, ladies." Four-part Song. (No. 1380, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2319. "The fairies were tripping." Four-part Song. E. DOUGLAS TAYLER. 2d.

No. 2323. "Fair Oriana, beauty's queen." Madrigal for Five Voices. JOHN HILTON. (Edited by LIONEL BENSON) 2d.

No. 2324. "Gloria in Excelsis" (Sing to the Lord). Chorus from the first Mass. HAYDN 1½d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—(continued).

- No. 2325. "Sanctus" (Holy, Holy, Holy).
Chorus from the First Mass. HAYDN 1d.
No. 2328. "The Rhinemaidens." Trio for Female Voices. Adapted from Wagner's "Das Rheingold" and "Götterdämmerung" by W.
McNAUGHT 2d.

WILKINSON, H. J.—Thirty-seven Hymns. By
W. J. ROE. With original tunes. 2s. 6d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE—"Peace." Four-part Song.
(No. 1379, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 2d.

WILLIAMS, J. G.—"Sweet Kate." Four-part Song.
(No. 1382, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

—"When Laura smiles." Four-part Song. (No. 1381, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 3d.

· PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

FERRARI, GUSTAVE—"Jesus comes in raiment lowly." French legend of the 16th century. Harmonized for S.A.T.B. 15 cents.

FORSYTH, CECIL—"The Cat and the Gold Fish."
Cantata for Women's Voices. 35 cents.

HALL, W. H.—"Benedictus es Domine" (Blessed art Thou). 12 cents.

SONGS

BY

E. ROY THOMPSON.

STAINER & BELL, LTD.

Longing ...	(Fiona Macleod)	Compass	E to F
Milking Sian ...	" "	" "	D to F
Shule, Shule, Shule Agrah	" "	" "	B to G

Price, 2s. each.

CURWEN & SONS, LTD.

Requiem (R. L. Stevenson)...	Compass	D $\flat$ to F
Scatterpenny (Wilfrid Wilson Gibson) ...	" "	B to E
Cruel and Bright " " " (In the press) "	" "	E $\flat$ to F

Price, 2s. each.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.

Thy dark eyes to mine (Fiona Macleod)	(In the press)	Compass	D to G
Two Songs (Wilfrid Wilson Gibson):
Hareshaw ...	(In the press)	" "	C to E
Song of a Lass, O ...	" "	" "	B $\flat$ to F

Price, 2s. each.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED,
for Holy Trinity Church, Elgin. Two-Manual and Pedal Organ. Vacant through preferment. Light duties. Mild climate.
Good opening for qualified pianist, understanding voice-production.
Young and enthusiastic. £70. Apply, with testimonials (stating age, experience), Canon Hay-Dinwoody, Rectory, Elgin.

HARMONIUM for SALE. Rosewood case. Four sets of Reeds complete. Percussion action. Suitable for School-room or Chapel. Can be seen by appointment. "H." c/o
Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

EDWARD MACDOWELL.

FROM THE XVIIIth CENTURY

(TRANSCRIPTIONS FOR PIANO OF HARPSICHORD
AND CLAVICHORD PIECES).

1. COURANTE ... Jean Philippe Rameau
2. SARABANDE ... Jean Philippe Rameau
3. TEMPO DI MINUETTO ... G. B. Grazioli
4. LE BAVOLET FLOTTANT François Couperin
5. GIGUE ... J. Mattheson
6. SARABANDE ... Jean Baptiste Loeilly

Nos. 1 to 5, 2s. net, each. No. 6, 1s. 6d. net.

These are of medium difficulty, and well varied.
MACDOWELL was careful to preserve their original flavour in adapting them to the technique of the Pianoforte; and they will be found admirably suited either for recital or for teaching purposes.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W. 1.

THE HARMONISTS

OF ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL ROYAL WINDSOR CASTLE

MR. FREDERICK SMITH. MR. EATON COOTER.
MR. MALCOLM BOYLE. MR. LEWIS STAINTON.

For Concerts, At Homes, Masonic or other Banquets, &c.

Address, MR. MALCOLM BOYLE,
22, THE CLOISTERS, WINDSOR CASTLE,
Tel.: Windsor 160.

JUST REPRINTED.

PROGRAMME MUSIC

IN

THE LAST FOUR CENTURIES.

A CONTRIBUTION TO THE

HISTORY OF MUSICAL EXPRESSION.

BY

FREDERICK NIECKS.

PRICE TWELVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise that tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.
 "Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
 "Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."
 —Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
 Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS.			Staff	Tonic
			Notation.	Sol-fa.
Anthem—Christians, Awake ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Carol—Once in Bethlehem ...	...	...	2d.	1d.
Two Christmas Carols ...	...	...	3d.	2d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G ...	...	...	1/6	1s.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera ...	...	...	2d.	2d.
Benedictus ...	...	...	2d.	2d.
Jubilate ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Office for the Holy Communion ...	...	...	8d.	6d.
Pater Noster from the above ...	...	...	2d.	2d.
Amen ditto ...	...	...	1d.	1d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ...	...	...	1s.	8d.
Or, separately:—
Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Office for the Holy Communion ...	...	...	6d.	4d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Te Deum in B flat ...	...	...	3d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) ...	...	...	3d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ...	...	...	3d.	2d.

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) ...	...	...	2s.	—
CHURCH CANTATA.
Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for General use) ...	...	...	1/6	1s.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

MUSIC FOR ADVENT AND CHRISTMAS

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS. D. CANTAB.

SERVICES.

CHANT TE DEUM, in F ...	...	...	3d.
BENEDICITE, in F ...	...	...	2d.
BENEDICTUS AND JUBILATE, in F ...	...	...	4d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, in F ...	...	...	4d.
CANTATE AND DEUS, in F ...	...	...	4d.
COMMUNION SERVICE, in E, with BENEDICTUS AND AGNUS DEI—FOR FOUR VOICES ...	...	...	1s.

ANTHEMS.

O LORD, THOU ART MY GOD—ADVENT ...	...	...	3d.
IN THE BEGINNING—CHRISTMAS ...	...	...	4d.
TONIC SOL-FA ...	...	...	2d.
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME—CHRISTMAS ...	...	...	4d.
BEHOLD, I BRING YOU GOOD TIDINGS—CHRISTMAS ...	...	...	3d.

FIVE SETS OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS, in Books, 6d. each.

All numbers printed separately, 1d. each.

The Composer will be pleased to send Specimens.

Address: 36, CHRIST CHURCH ROAD, NORWICH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

LANDS OF JOY AND LIBERTY

(Written to commemorate Armistice Day, 1918),
 CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA. 8 MINS.

BY

C. STANLEY SMALLMAN.

Price Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SOLEMN MELODY

COMPOSED BY

H. WALFORD DAVIES.

FULL ORCHESTRA.

								s. d.
FULL SCORE ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	3 0
STRING PARTS ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 3
WIND PARTS ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	3 9

STRINGS AND ORGAN.

SCORE ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	2 0
STRING PARTS ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 3
ORGAN ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	0 6

PIANOFORTE SOLO ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 6
ORGAN SOLO ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 6
VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 6
VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1 6

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

DR. RALPH H.

BELLAIRS'

Melodic and Rhythmic Primer

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

There is in existence a multitude of pianoforte tutors, all of which are rather out of date in the light of modern educational developments.

The "MELODIC AND RHYTHMIC PRIMER," by Dr. Bellairs, breaks essentially new ground, by making a definite appeal to the sub-conscious as well as to the conscious mind of the musical beginner.

No dry-as-dust finger exercises or scale studies are employed. Against such, the pupil naturally rebels, and only negligible progress results.

The basis of music being melody, harmony, and rhythm, it is obvious that a correct educational plan must embrace all three.

Ear and imagination need training as well as hand and fingers, which have hitherto had the lion's share of attention.

The object of this "PRIMER" is to eliminate drudgery by stimulating interest from the very outset.

Published in 2 parts, each 2s. net. Complete, 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON:

ENOCH & SONS,

58, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, W. 1.

Telegrams: ENOCOUSE, LONDON. Telephone: GERRARD, 5595.

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

30th 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S CHORAL MUSIC

A SELECTED LIST.

FREDERIC AUSTIN

SONGS IN A FARMHOUSE

A cycle of traditional songs, S.A.T.B. Soli and Chorus, with accompaniment for pianoforte or orchestra. 18 mins.

Price One Shilling.

GRANVILLE BANTOCK

A PAGEANT OF HUMAN LIFE

Chorus only, unaccompanied. 15 mins.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

J. BRAHMS

SONGS OF LOVE (LIEBESLIEDER)

S.A.T.B. Soli or Chorus with accompaniment for pianoforte duet. 20 mins.

Complete vocal score, Four Shillings.

Vocal parts only, One Shilling.

EDWARD ELGAR

THE MUSIC MAKERS

Contralto Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 35 mins.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling and Sixpence.

EDWARD ELGAR

THE SPIRIT OF ENGLAND

S. or T. Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 30 mins.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling and Sixpence.

EDWARD ELGAR

*THE BLACK KNIGHT

Chorus and Orchestra. 40 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

BALFOUR GARDINER

*NEWS FROM WHYDAH

Chorus and Orchestra. 5 mins.

Price Eightpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

HAMILTON HARTY

THE MYSTIC TRUMPETER

Bar. Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 35 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

GUSTAV HOLST

*KING ESTMERE

Chorus and Orchestra. 25 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

E. C. MACMILLAN

ENGLAND

S. and Bar. Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 40 mins.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

THE PIED PIPER

T. and B. Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 30 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

THE CHIVALRY OF THE SEA

Chorus and Orchestra. 16 mins.

Price One Shilling.

Tonic Sol-fa, Ninepence.

RICHARD WAGNER

PARSIFAL

Prelude and Selection from Act I.

T. Bar. B. (B.) Soli ad lib., Chorus and Orchestra. 1 hr.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

RICHARD WAGNER

*SCENES FROM TANNHÄUSER

Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 1 hr. 45 mins.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

R. T. WOODMAN

FALMOUTH

Chorus only. Accompaniment ad lib. 5 mins.

Price One Shilling.

* Orchestral material for reduced orchestra may be hired from the publishers.

See also page 716 for list of Operas adapted for concert performance with reduced orchestra.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS
OF THE FAVOURITE OPERAS
ADAPTED FOR CONCERT USE.

1. FAUST.

Price 1s. Tonic Sol-fa, 9d.

*2. IL TROVATORE.

Price 1s. 6d. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.

*3. TANNHÄUSER.

Price 1s. 6d.

*4. MARITANA.

Price 1s. 6d.

*5. THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.

Price 1s. 6d.

*6. THE DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.

Price 1s. 6d.

*7. MARTHA.

Price 1s. 6d.

* Orchestral Parts for Reduced Orchestra may be obtained from the Publishers.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWO PASTORALS

"COME YOU, MARY."

"WHO WOULD SHEPHERD PIPES FORSAKE?"

THE WORDS BY

NORMAN GALE.

THE MUSIC BY

ERNEST BRISTOW FARRAR

(Op. 21, Nos. 2 and 3)

TWO KEYS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOUR SHAKESPEARE SONGS

1. HARK! HARK! THE LARK.

2. WHO IS SYLVIA.

3. TAKE, O TAKE THOSE LIPS AWAY.

4. ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE.

COMPOSED BY

REGINALD STEGGALL.

Op. 28.

PRICE, TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

SONGS

BY

JOHN GERRARD WILLIAMS.

"LOVE OUTWITTED"

Phantasy Duet for Voice and Pianoforte.

Price Two Shillings.

"MARCH MORNING"

For High and Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

TWO SONGS.

"ABSENCE" AND "SERENADE"

For High, Medium, or Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

COMPOSITIONS

BY

J. D. DAVIS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Four little Pieces (Mazurka, March, Scherzo, Valse) s. d.

For the Pianoforte 1 6

Melody. For Violoncello and Pianoforte 1 6

INSTRUMENTAL.

L'Auresque. Pianoforte Solo 2 0

Imperial March ("Pro Patria"). Op. 58. Pianoforte 2 0

—String Parts, 5s.; Full Score and Wind, MS.

Arioso. Violin and Pianoforte 2 0

Canzona. Do. 2 0

Gavotte and Musette. Do. 2 0

Six Pieces. Do. 3 6

Fantasia and Fugue. Organ Solo 1 6

Song of Evening. String Orchestra. ...Strings 2 6

—Score 2 6

The Maid of Astolat. Symphonic Poem. For

Orchestra 5 0

—Full Score and Wind Parts, MS.

SONGS.

Compromise 2 0

Could aught of Song. Two keys each 2 0

Good-night 2 0

If but 'twere mine. Two keys each 2 0

PART-SONGS.

From White's and Wills's. S.A.T.B. 0 2

To Daisies, not to shut so soon. S.A.T.B. 0 2

You spotted Snakes. S.S.C. 0 3

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

A SELECTION

FOR THE

ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

Op. 30, No. 1.

ARRANGED AND ADAPTED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S

MUSIC FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE.

A SELECTED LIST.

SONATAS AND SUITES.

EDWARD ELGAR

SONATA

Price Six Shillings net.

ERNEST FARRAR

CELTIC SUITE

Price Three Shillings net.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

TWO SUITES

No. 1, in D. No. 2, in F.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence each net.

ARTHUR HINTON

SUITE

Price Five Shillings net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

PIBROCH SUITE

Price Six Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

SUITE PITTORESQUE

Price Six Shillings net.

SHORT PIECES.

JOHN IRELAND

BAGATELLE

Price Two Shillings net.

JOSEF HOLBROOKE

SOUVENIR DE PRINTEMPS

Price Two Shillings net.

H. WALFORD DAVIES

SOLEMN MELODY

Price One Shilling and Sixpence net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

BENEDICTUS

From Six Pieces, Op. 37.

Price Two Shillings net.

J. B. McEWEN

SIX HIGHLAND DANCES

Price Two Shillings each net.

W. McNAUGHT

BARCAROLLE

Price Two Shillings net.

H. WALDO WARNER

SCHERZO

Price Two Shillings net.

JOHN E. WEST

IN THE SPRING

Price Two Shillings net.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER, JUN.

SOUVENIR

Price Two Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

AIR À DANSER

Price Two Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

SERENADE

From the Wand of Youth Suite, No. 1.

Price Two Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE MATIN

Price Two Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE NUIT

Price One Shilling and Sixpence net.

EDWARD ELGAR

PASTOURELLE

Price Two Shillings net.

G. RICORDI & Co,

265, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

THE LARGEST OPERATIC PUBLISHERS IN THE WORLD.

NO MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVAL IS COMPLETE WITHOUT A VOCAL OPERATIC SECTION.

ARIAS FROM OPERAS
are included in Programmes
of ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS.

ARIAS FROM OPERAS
should be in all MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVALS.

ARIAS FROM OPERAS are sung by all
THE GREAT VOCALISTS.

THE BEST AND MOST POPULAR OPERATIC ARIAS ARE PUBLISHED BY
G. RICORDI & CO.

OPERA COMPANIES are doing excellent business
EVERYWHERE.

OUR OPERATIC SELECTIONS are being played everywhere by all
THE LEADING ORCHESTRAS.

THE PEOPLE are enthusiastic about OPERA, and those Local Professors who do not recognise this are behind the times.

No Artist's Répertoire is Complete which does not contain these Celebrated Numbers.

OPERATIC ARIAS for Women's Voices.

Suicidio. La Gioconda	Ponchielli
Si me chiamano Mimi—Mimi's Song. La Bohème	Puccini
Musetta's Waltz Song. La Bohème	Puccini
Mimi's Farewell. La Bohème	Puccini
Vissi d'arte—The prayer. Tosca	Puccini
Un bel di vedremo—One fine day. Madam Butterfly	Puccini
O Don Fatale—O Fatal Gift. Don Carlo	Verdi
Ritorna Vincitor. Aida	Verdi
O Patria Mia. Aida	Verdi
The Willow Song. Salce. Othello	Verdi
Ave Maria. Othello	Verdi
L'Altra Notte. Mefistofele	Boito
La Voce di Donna. Gioconda	Ponchielli
Mia Piccirella. Salvatore Rosa	Gomez
The Spinning Wheel. The Angelus	Naylor
Farewell to my home. La Wally	Catalani

OPERATIC ARIAS for Men's Voices.

Che gelida Manina—Your tiny hand. La Bohème	Puccini
Amor e grillo—Love and fancy. Madam Butterfly	Puccini
E Lucevan la stelle—The Letter Song. Tosca	Puccini
Recondita armonia. Tosca	Puccini
Donna non vidi mai. Manon Lescaut	Puccini
Dai Campo. Mefistofele	Boito
Guinto sul passo. Epilogue. Mefistofele	Boito
Ceilo e Mar—Heaven and Ocean. Gioconda	Ponchielli
Celeste Aida. Aida	Verdi
Magiche Note. Queen of Sheba	Goldmark
Credo. Othello	Verdi
Ella giammai. Don Carlo	Verdi
Il Lacerato Spirito. Simon Boccanegra	Verdi
Quand era' peggio. Falstaff	Verdi
Per me Giunto. Don Carlo	Verdi
Pescatore-Barcarolle. Gioconda	Ponchielli

The above have English and Italian Text, and are published in several keys.

Lists, with descriptive notes and compass, may be had Post Free on Application.

G. RICORDI & Co., 265, Regent Street, LONDON, W. 1.

*The Craftsman's Latest Achievement :"CATHEDRAL ACRIBELLE" STRINGS.

THE CRAFTSMAN says : "Here is something new for you—a genuine super-quality silk string which will soon rank as the finest of its kind in the world. We call it the 'Cathedral Acribelle,' and I am confident that violinists everywhere will be delighted with it. This latest addition to our wonderful string family is the result of continuous experiments, and new discoveries in methods of manufacture. In materials, craftsmanship, and performance, 'Cathedral Acribelle' silk Violin Strings are quite distinctive. There is nothing like them on the market. Will you try a 'Cathedral Acribelle' at our expense? We have a sample string waiting for you. Write for one to-day."

ONE STRING FREE.

This offer is for October only. State exact string required.

CAT. NO.		DESCRIPTION.	RETAIL PRICE.
50	...	E Super-Silk, 3 lengths	1/- each.
60	...	A " " 2 "	1/3 "
70	...	D " " 2 "	1/9 "

SOLE MANUFACTURERS:

BRITISH MUSIC STRINGS, LTD.,

MONSELL ROAD, FINSPURY PARK, LONDON, N. 4.

Telegrams : "Cello, Finspark, London."

Telephone : North 2594.

MANUFACTURERS OF 150 DIFFERENT KINDS OF STRINGS FOR ALL INSTRUMENTS.

NOVELLO'S SONGS.

A. HERBERT BREWER—

When all the world is young.

In D (Compass, D to E) and F.

On Wings of Delight.

In C (Compass, A to C), E flat, and F

Price 2s. each.

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR—

Sweet evenings come and go, love.

In F (Compass, D to E flat) and B flat.

Price 2s.

BROMLEY DERRY—

The Raiders.

(A Song of the Norsemen.)

In G (Compass, D to E flat).

Price 2s.

LAXTON EYRE—

Life's Highway.

In E flat (Compass, B flat to F).

Price 2s.

ERNEST FARRAR—

Brittany.

In E flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), F, and G.

Price 1s. 6d.

EDWARD GERMAN—

Charming Chloe.

In D flat (Compass, D flat to E flat), E flat, and F.

It was a Lover and his Lass.

In G (Compass, D to E) and B flat.

Price 2s. each.

W. McNAUGHT—

The Piper.

In D (Compass, D to D) E flat, and F.

Price 2s.

W. G. ROSS—

A Daffodil Wedding.

In C (Compass, C to F) and D.

Price 2s.

LEONARD J WALKER—

My Life is like a Garden.

In B flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), C, and D.

The Summertime of Love.

In B flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), C, and D.

Price 2s. each.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

CHAPPELL & CO'S LATEST SONG PUBLICATIONS.

GUY D'HARDELOT—

MIDSUMMER MADNESS.
IN ENGLAND NOW.
MINE, ALL MINE.

TERESA DEL RIEGO—

HOMING.
RECONCILIATION.
THE MERRY HEART.

MONTAGUE F. PHILLIPS—

YOU AND I AND THE MOON.
SING, JOYOUS BIRD.
THE SILVER LAMPS.
SING, SING, BLACKBIRD.

EDRIC CUNDELL—

IN THE SILENCE OF THE NIGHT.
HOLD THOU THE MORN FOR ME.
SUMMER DAYS AND NIGHTS.

SAMUEL LIDDLE—

FULFILMENT.
A WOODLAND BOUQUET.

FRANK BRIDGE—

WHEN YOU ARE OLD.

R. CONINGSBY CLARKE—

MADONNA LILIES.
GOLDEN DANCING DAYS.
REAPING.
YOU IN A GONDOLA.

HERMANN LÖHR—

THE PORTALS OF THE FOREST.
THE ROAD OF LOOKING-FORWARD.
DARLING.
THREE LITTLE SPANISH SONGS.
THIS SONG OF OURS.

HAYDN WOOD—

LITTLE YVETTE.
MY GARDEN OF DREAMLAND.
THERE'S A SONG DOWN EV'RY ROADWAY.
FLEURETTE, I SHALL NEVER FORGET.

ERIC COATES—

THROUGH ALL THE AGES.
AT SUNSET.
SINCE YESTERDAY.

GRAHAM PÉEL—

THE CHALLENGE.

GERALD CARNE—

PROVENCE.

H. LYALL PHILLIPS—

THE FOUR CROSS ROADS.
A DEVONSHIRE WEDDING.
WIMMEN ! OH, WIMMEN !

ARTHUR KLEIN—

LIVE, LAUGH AND LOVE.

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W. 1.
And may be had of all Music Sellers. NEW YORK, MELBOURNE, AND SYDNEY

NEW WORKS BY JOSEPH JONGEN. SUITE EN FORME DE SONATE PIANO SOLO.

Op. 60.

1. SONATINE. 2. LA NEIGE SUR LA FAGNE.
3. MENUET DANSÉ. 4. RONDEAU.

Price, 8s. net cash.

TWO SERENADES FOR STRING QUARTET.

Op. 61.

1. SÉRÉNADE TENDRE. 2. SÉRÉNADE DRAMATIQUE.

Miniature Score, 4s. net cash. Parts, 10s. net cash.

Works by JOSEPH JONGEN published previously:

	NET CASH.
CRÉPUSCULE AU LAC OGWEN, Impression, Op. 52. Piano Solo	2 0
PAGES INTIMES, Op. 55. Piano Duet	4 0
CHANT DE MAI and MENUET-SCHERZO, Op. 53. Organ	2 0
DANS LA DOUCEUR DES PINS, Op. 51, No. 1. Violoncello and Piano	2 0
STRING QUARTET IN A MAJOR, Op. 50. Miniature Score, 3s.	12 0
"CALMES AUX QUAIS DÉSERTS . . ." Op. 54. Voice, Piano, and String Quartet	4 0
Ditto Voice and Piano	2 0

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough Street, W. 1.

Hark! Hark, my soul!

COMPOSED BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

953.	A charge to keep I have ...	King	3d.
884.	A crown of grace for man	Brahms	4d.
478.	A few more years shall roll	H. Blair	3d.
597.	A prayer for peace ...	Crotch	3d.
801.	A solemn prayer ...	A. H. Brewer	2d.
935.	A song of joy ...	John E. West	3d.
917.	Abide with me ...	Ivor Atkins	3d.
424.	Ditto ...	R. Dunstan	3d.
805.	Adeste Fideles ...	H. Hofmann	4d.
927.	All go unto one place ...	Wesley	3d.
1033.	All nations whom ...	B. Luard-Selby	4d.
113.	All they that trust ...	Hiller	8d.
1033.	All Thy works ...	T. Adams	3d.
475.	Ditto ...	J. Barnby	4d.
503.	Ditto ...	G. H. Ely	4d.
30.	Ditto ...	E. H. Thorne	3d.
719.	All ye who seek ...	H. M. Higgs	3d.
9.	All ye who weep ...	Gounod	3d.
592.	Alleluia! now is Christ	T. Adams	3d.
729.	Alleluia! the Lord liveth	C. Harris	3d.
548.	Almighty Father ...	B. Steane	3d.
937.	Almighty God, give us ...	Wesley	3d.
161.	And all the people saw	J. Stainer	6d.
699.	And God shall wipe ...	Greenish	3d.
1055.	And in that day ...	F. R. Rickman	3d.
229.	And it was the third hour	Elvey	3d.
485.	And Jacob was left alone	J. Stainer	6d.
658.	And Jesus entered ...	H. W. Davies	3d.
732.	And suddenly there came	H. J. Wood	3d.
675.	And the Lord said T. W.	Stephenson	3d.
357.	And the wall of the city	Oliver King	3d.
778.	And there shall be signs	Naylor	4d.
402.	And when the day ...	C. W. Smith	3d.
861.	Angel Spirits ...	P. Tchaikovsky	2d.
642.	Angel voices, ever singing	E. V. Hall	3d.
611.	Angels from the realms ...	Cowen	3d.
749.	Ditto ...	P. E. Fletcher	3d.
751.	Ditto ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
1017.	Arise, shine ...	T. Adams	3d.
923.	Ditto ...	G. F. Cobb	4d.
228.	Art thou weary ...	C. H. Lloyd	6d.
948.	As Christ was raised ...	Wareing	3d.
317.	As I live, saith the Lord	E. T. Chipp	3d.
333.	As it began to dawn ...	Ch. Vincent	3d.
498.	As Moses lifted up ...	F. Gostelow	3d.
643.	As the earth bringeth	A. H. Brewer	3d.
24.	As the hart pants (s.s.t.b.)	Gounod	3d.
147.	Ascribe unto the Lord	Travers	6d.
109.	Ditto ...	S. S. Wesley	4d.
399.	At the Lamb's High ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
456.	At the Sepulchre ...	H. W. Wareing	4d.
957.	Author of Life Divine ...	Button	2d.
660.	Awake, awake ...	John E. West	3d.
700.	Awake, awake, put on ...	Greenish	3d.
56.	Ditto ...	J. Stainer	6d.
759.	Ditto ...	Stephenson	4d.
149.	Ditto ...	M. Wise	4d.
955.	Awake! O Zion ...	C. Forrester	3d.
199.	Awake, thou that sleepest	Stainer	6d.
150.	Awake up, my glory ...	M. Wise	3d.
744.	Be glad and rejoice ...	M. B. Foster	3d.
578.	Ditto ...	B. Steane	3d.
212.	Be glad, O ye righteous	H. Smart	4d.
989.	Be glad then, ye ...	A. Hollins	3d.
143.	Be merciful ...	H. Purcell	6d.
257.	Ditto ...	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
597.	Be peace on earth ...	Crotch	3d.
567.	Be Thou exalted ...	C. Bayley	3d.
383.	Beye all of one mind	A. E. Godfrey	3d.
471.	Be ye therefore ...	A. S. Baker	3d.
440.	Before the heavens ...	H. W. Parker	3d.
651.	Behold, all the earth	G. F. Huntley	4d.
598.	Behold, God is great	E. W. Naylor	4d.
865.	Behold, God is my John	E. West	3d.
636.	Ditto ...	F. C. Woods	4d.
1035.	Behold, how good ...	J. Battisbill	3d.
349.	Ditto ... (Male)	Caldicott	3d.
349.*	Ditto ... (s.a.t.b.)	Caldicott	3d.
419.	Ditto ...	Hamilton Clarke	3d.
89.	Behold, I bring you	J. Barnby	3d.
948.	Ditto ...	J. Maude Crament	3d.
896.	Ditto ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
810.	Behold, I come quickly	Ivor Atkins	2d.
713.	Behold, I have given you	C. Harris	3d.

554.	Behold, I send ...	J. V. Roberts	3d.
587.	Behold My servant ...	J. F. Bridge	3d.
65.	Behold now, praise ...	J. B. Calkin	3d.
631.	Ditto ...	F. Iliffe	3d.
912.	Ditto ...	John E. West	3d.
315.	Behold, O God ...	F. W. Hird	4d.
524.	Behold, the days come	Woodward	4d.
1045.	Behold the Heaven ...	A. R. Gaul	3d.
652.	Behold the Name ...	Percy Pitt	4d.
502.	Behold, two blind men	J. Stainer	3d.
938.	Bethlehem ...	Ch. Gounod	1d.
378.	Bless the Lord ...	M. Kingston	4d.
796.	Bless the Lord, O my soul	Hailing	3d.
855.	Bless the Lord thy God	Roberts	3d.
450.	Bless thou the Lord ...	C. Bayley	4d.
374.	Ditto ...	Oliver King	3d.
693.	Blessed are the dead ...	B. L. Selby	2d.
667.	Blessed are the pure ...	A. D. Arnott	3d.
390.	Blessed are they ...	A. W. Batson	3d.
616.	Ditto ...	H. Blair	3d.
77.	Ditto ...	W. H. Monk	3d.
112.	Ditto ...	Arthur Page	3d.
15.	Blessed be the God ...	S. S. Wesley	2d.
756.	Blessed be the Lord ...	J. Barnby	3d.
895.	Ditto ...	J. F. Bridge	6d.
876.	Ditto ...	O. Gibbons	3d.
183.	Ditto ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
770.	Ditto ...	Heap	6d.
331.	Ditto ...	Markham Lee	3d.
1006.	Blessed be the Name ...	C. Lee Williams	4d.
724.	Blessed be Thou ...	E. C. Baird	3d.
838.	Ditto ...	J. Kent	4d.
400.	Blessed City ...	A. C. Fisher	4d.
284.	Blessed is He ...	F. E. Gladstone	3d.
262.	Ditto ...	C. H. Lloyd	8d.
292.	Ditto ...	C. Mackenzie	3d.
206.	Blessed is the man ...	Clarke-Whitfield	3d.
64.	Ditto ...	John Goss	4d.
769.	Ditto ...	H. W. Wareing	3d.
1004.	Blessed is the soul (s.b.)	Macfarren	6d.
286.	Blessed Jesu (Stabat Mater)	Dvorak	6d.
943.	Blessed Lord ...	S. S. Wesley	2d.
5.	Blessing, glory, wisdom	B. Tours	3d.
950.	Ditto ...	A. H. Brewer	3d.
652.	Blow up the trumpet ...	F. Iliffe	3d.
97.	Blow ye the trumpet ...	Henry Leslie	3d.
961.	Born to-day ...	J. P. Sweetnick	3d.
118.	Bow Thine ear ...	W. Bird	3d.
939.	Bread of Heaven ...	E. German	3d.
1024.	Break forth into joy ...	W. G. Alcock	3d.
774.	Ditto ...	H. E. Button	3d.
415.	Ditto ...	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
798.	Ditto ...	H. A. Matthews	3d.
92.	Ditto ...	R. Prentice	6d.
491.	Ditto ...	B. Steane	3d.
323.	Brightest and best ...	E. V. Hall	4d.
340.	Bring unto the Lord ...	Gladstone	3d.
98.	Brother, thou art gone	J. Goss	4d.
279.	By Babylon's wave ...	Gounod	2d.
197.	By the rivers of Babylon	L. Samson	4d.
121.	By the waters of Babylon	Boyce	4d.
644.	Ditto ...	S. Coleridge-Taylor	3d.
511.	Ditto ...	H. Clarke	4d.
853.	Ditto ...	H. M. Higgs	3d.
742.	By Thy glorious death	A. Dvorak	3d.
116.	Call to remembrance ...	J. Battisbill	6d.
952.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	3d.
680.	Calm on the list'ning ear	Parker	3d.
841.	Cast me not away	C. Lee Williams	2d.
975.	Ditto ...	S. S. Wesley	3d.
497.	Christ both died ...	E. W. Naylor	3d.
454.	Christ is risen ...	G. B. J. Aitken	3d.
368.	Ditto ...	J. M. Crament	3d.
666.	Ditto ...	W. Jordan	4d.
533.	Ditto ...	J. V. Roberts	3d.
814.	Ditto ...	E. A. Sydenham	3d.
307.	Christ our Passover ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
783.	Christ the Lord is risen again	... 4d.
370.	Christ the Lord is risen to-day	... 3d.
488.	Christians, awake ...	... J. Barnby	3d.
648.	Ditto ...	H. M. Higgs	4d.
983.	Christmas Day ...	G. von Holst	4d.
445.	Cleanse me, Lord ...	G. F. Wrigley	3d.

909.	Come and let us ...	A. Hollins	3d.
52.	Come, and let us return	J. Goss	3d.
95.	Ditto ...	W. Jackson	3d.
805.	Come hither, ye faithful	Hofmann	4d.
283.	Come, Holy Ghost ...	G. Elvey	4d.
201.	Ditto ...	J. L. Hatton	4d.
829.	Ditto ...	Palestrina	2d.
717.	Ditto ...	C. Lee Williams	2d.
881.	Come, let us join our	E. V. Hall	3d.
293.	Come, my soul ...	G. C. Martin	4d.
314.	Come now, and let us	H. W. Wareing	4d.
1.	Come unto Him ...	Gounod	2d.
946.	Ditto ...	H. Leslie	3d.
256.	Come unto Me ...	H. R. Coudrey	3d.
635.	Ditto ...	G. J. Elvey	3d.
103.	Ditto (Bach)	J. Stainer	3d.
922.	Come with high and holy	Blair	3d.
1005.	Come ye, and let us	Macfarren	3d.
748.	Come, ye children and	J. Booth	3d.
924.	Ditto ...	H. J. King	3d.
334.	Come, ye faithful ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
921.	Come, ye faithful, raise the strain	... 3d.
1019.	Come, ye Saints ...	H. E. Button	3d.
951.	Come, ye sin-defiled	J. Stainer	2d.
931.	Come, ye thankful ...	B. Steane	3d.
914.	Comes at times ...	Woodward	3d.
1008.	Ditto ...	H. Oakeley	2d.
994.	Coronation Offertorium	Elgar	2d.
622.	Create in me a clean heart	P. J. Fry	3d.
688.	Crown Him the	B. Luard-Selby	2d.
356.	Daughters of Jerusalem	H. J. King	3d.
449.	Dawns the day ...	R. H. Legge	3d.
213.	Day of Anger (Requiem)	Mozart	6d.
682.	Day of wrath ...	J. Stainer	2d.
252.	Death and life ...	Walter Parratt	3d.
968.	Death is swallowed up in	Hollins	3d.
849.	Deliver us, O Lord ...	Gibbons	3d.
90.	Distracted with care ...	Haydn	3d.
887.	Do not I fill heaven ...	H. Blair	3d.
737.	Doth not wisdom cry	D. S. Smith	3d.
703.	Drop down, ye heavens	Stainer	4d.
277.	Enter not into Judgment	Clarke	2d.
362.	Eternal source ...	F. Brandeis	2d.
1008.	Evening and Morning	Oakeley	2d.
854.	Exalt ye the Lord	H. Elliot Button	3d.
764.	Except the Lord build	Edwards	3d.
771.	Ditto ...	Eaton Paning	4d.
628.	Ditto ...	H. Gadsby	4d.
470.	Eye hath not seen (s.a.)	Foster	3d.
584.	Ditto (s.a.t.b.)	M. B. Foster	3d.
625.	Far be sorrow ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
672.	Far from the world	H. W. Parker	3d.
329.	Far from their home	Woodward	3d.
364.	Father, hear the prayer	F. Brandeis	3d.
763.	Father, now Thy grace	W. Coenen	3d.
46.	Father of Heaven	Walmisley	3d.
384.	Father of Life ...	S. J. Gilbert	3d.
768.	Father of mercies ...	E. V. Hall	3d.
1065.	Ditto ...	S. P. Waddington	3d.
671.	Ditto ...	John E. West	3d.
1050.	Fear not, O land ...	E. Elgar	3d.
28.	Ditto ...	John Goss	3d.
916.	Ditto ...	W. Jordan	3d.
872.	Fear Thou not, for I am	J. Booth	1d.
446.	Flee from evil ...	W. J. Clarke	3d.
553.	For a small moment	J. Stainer	2d.
254.	For ever blessed ...	Mendelssohn	3d.
198.	For the mountains ...	L. Samson	3d.
901.	For this mortal ...	S. S. Wesley	3d.
728.	Forsake me not ...	J. Goss	4d.
273.	From the deep I called ...	Spohr	6d.
227.	Give ear, O Lord	T. M. Pattison	2d.
433.	Give ear, O Shepherd	A. Whiting	3d.
88.	Give ear, O ye heavens	Armes	3d.
956.	Ditto ...	W. G. Alcock	3d.
604.	Give thanks, O Israel	Ouseley	4d.
741.	Give the King thy	W. G. Alcock	6d.
990.	Ditto ...	A. H. Brewer	3d.
309.	Give the Lord ...	C. H. Lloyd	8d.
383.	Give unto the Lord	H. W. Parker	4d.
933.	Glorious and powerful	God Gibbons	3d.
1039.	Glorious in Heaven	Vittoria	3d.
2.	Glory be to God ...	S. S. Wesley	2d.
779.	Glory to God in the	E. M. Lee	3d.

NOVELLO'S

OCTAVO EDITION OF ANTHEMS.

941.	God be merciful ... A. H. Mann	4d.	412	Honour the Lord... J. Stainer	4d.	519.	I will open rivers E. Pettman	3d.
49	Ditto ... S. S. Wesley	3d.	129.	Hosanna (in C) ... O. Gibbons	3d.	371.	I will set His dominion H. W. Parker	4d.
236.	God be merciful unto us C. F. Lloyd	6d.	1015.	Ditto (in E flat) O. Gibbons	3d.	100.	I will sing a new song ... Armes	8d.
105.	God came from Teman Steggall	4d.	43	Ditto ... G. A. Macfarren	3d.	608.	I will sing of the mercies J. Booth	3d.
967.	God is a Spirit ... W. S. Bennett	13d.	557.	Hosanna to the Lord W. Jordan	4d.	134.	I will sing of Thy power Greene	4d.
128.	God is gone up ... Croft	4d.	646.	Ditto ... Luard-Selby	3d.	192.	I will sing unto the Lord Wareing	3d.
892.	Ditto ... O. Gibbons	3d.	1021.	Hosanna we sing John E. West	3d.	6.	I will wash my hands Hopkins	3d.
864.	Ditto ... Walter B. Gilbert	2d.	260.	How beautiful are the feet Handel	3d.	710.	If any man hath not H. W. Davies	4d.
605.	God is my salvation C. F. Bowes	3d.	691.	How blest are they Tschalkowsky	4d.	819.	If Christ be not raised Macpherson	4d.
1068.	God is our hope ... A. H. Brewer	3d.	321.	How excellent is Thy ... Cowen	6d.	979.	If the Lord had not E. C. Bairstow	3d.
131.	Ditto ... Greene	6d.	615.	How great is the loving West	3d.	825.	If the Lord Himself W. Child	3d.
332.	God is our refuge ... A. Foote	4d.	373.	How long wilt Thou Oliver King	2d.	758.	Ditto ... Walmisley	6d.
101.	Ditto ... H. Hiles	6d.	867.	Ditto ... Jeremiah Clarke	3d.	53.	If we believe that Jesus died Goss	13d.
75	God said, Behold G. Macfarren	4d.	647.	How lovely are ... C. Salaman	3d.	544.	If ye love Me ... B. Steane	2d.
969.	God so loved the world H. Moore	3d.	104.	Ditto ... Spohr	8d.	453.	Ditto ... H. W. Wareing	3d.
1012.	Ditto ... E. G. Monk	4d.	988.	Ditto ... J. Brahms	2d.	732.	Ditto ... H. J. Wood	3d.
473.	Ditto ... J. V. Roberts	3d.	766.	I am Alpha ... Ch. Gounod	3d.	789.	If ye then be risen Ivor Atkins	4d.
342.	God, that madest earth A. C. Fisher	2d.	539.	Ditto ... J. V. Roberts	3d.	469.	Ditto (s.a.) M. B. Foster	3d.
1056.	God's peace is peace eternal G. Giee	3d.	623.	I am He that liveth T. Adams	4d.	58.	Ditto ... Naylor	3d.
344.	God, Who at sundry times, H. Mee	4d.	664.	I am the Resurrection ... Croft	3d.	61.	In Christ dwelleth John Goss	3d.
715.	God's peace is peace eternal G. Giee	3d.	662.	Ditto ... R. Rogers	4d.	913.	In divers tongues Palestrina	2d.
1070.	Grant us Thy peace G. Bullivant	3d.	268.	I am well pleased J. Rheinberger	3d.	619.	In every place incense John E. West	3d.
550.	Grant, we beseech Thee M. Elvey	2d.	120.	I beheld, and lo ... Blow	6d.	655.	In heavenly love ... H. Parker	3d.
388.	Ditto ... Roberts	3d.	280.	Ditto ... Elvey	6d.	403.	In my Father's house Crament	3d.
517.	Great and marvellous J. F. Bridge	4d.	496.	I came not to call... C. Vincent	3d.	777.	Ditto ... H. Elliot Button	3d.
187.	Ditto ... Monk	3d.	207.	I cried unto the Lord ... Heap	4d.	102.	In sweet cot tent E. H. Thorne	3d.
848.	Ditto ... T. Tomkins	3d.	537.	I declare to you Cruickshank	4d.	802.	In that day (Christmas) Bridge	3d.
223.	Great is Jehovah (Male) Schubert	4d.	168.	I desired wisdom J. Stainer	6d.	278.	Ditto ... G. Elvey	4d.
987.	Ditto ... Schubert	4d.	230.	I did call upon the Lord Pattison	4d.	720.	In the beginning C. Macpherson	4d.
602.	Great is our Lord M. B. Foster	4d.	515.	I do not ask, O Lord ... Roberts	3d.	582.	Ditto ... F. Tozer	4d.
136.	Great is the Lord ... Hayes	4d.	117.	I have set God ... Blake	6d.	890.	In the day shalt ... H. W. Wareing	3d.
708.	Ditto ... A. W. Marchant	3d.	420.	Ditto ... Hamilton Clarke	4d.	338.	In the fear of the Lord J. V. Roberts	3d.
237.	Ditto ... F. Ouseley	6d.	130.	Ditto ... J. Goldwin	3d.	980.	In the hour of my ... Davies	4d.
481.	Ditto ... B. Steane	6d.	122.	I have surely built ... Boyce	4d.	659.	In the Lord ... C. Macpherson	4d.
813.	Ditto ... E. A. Sydenham	3d.	219.	Ditto ... T. T. Trinnell	4d.	282.	Ditto ... R. Stewart	6d.
220.	Grieve not the Holy Spirit Stainer	3d.	590.	I heard a great voice G. F. Cobb	3d.	385.	In Thee, O Lord... S. C. Taylor	3d.
609.	Guide me, O Thou H. Blair	3d.	396.	I heard a voice ... John Goss	2d.	33.	In that day ... B. Tours	3d.
427.	Hail! gladdenings Light J. T. Field	2d.	903.	I looked, and behold H. Willan	3d.	148.	Ditto ... J. Weldon	3d.
545.	Ditto ... Martin	4d.	1029.	I love to hear ... M. B. Foster	3d.	725.	Is it not wheat-harvest T. Adams	3d.
326.	Hail, thou that art A. Carnall	4d.	1022.	I saw the Lord ... C. Harris	3d.	467.	Is it nothing (s.a.) M. B. Foster	3d.
560.	Hail to the Christ J. Barnby	3d.	171.	Ditto ... J. Stainer	6d.	571.	Ditto (4 voices) M. B. Foster	3d.
945.	Hail, true Body ... H. Willan	2d.	114.	I was glad ... T. Attwood	4d.	91.	It came even to pass Ouseley	4d.
499.	Hallelujah, Christ is risen Steane	3d.	293.	Ditto ... A. H. Brewer	3d.	180.	It is a good thing J. Barnby	6d.
382.	Hallelujah! the Light Oliver King	3d.	32.	Ditto ... G. Elvey	3d.	231.	Ditto ... T. M. Pattison	4d.
173.	Happy is the man ... E. Prout	8d.	79.	Ditto ... C. E. Horsley	6d.	215.	It shall come to pass ... Garrett	6d.
681.	Hark, the glad sound M. B. Foster	3d.	743.	Ditto ... C. H. H. Parry	4d.	908.	Jesu, Lord of life and glory Elgar	3d.
909.	Ditto ... A. R. Gaul	3d.	379.	Ditto ... T. T. Trinnell	4d.	397.	Jesu, lover of my soul (Male) F. Iliffe	3d.
487.	Ditto ... E. V. Hall	3d.	119.	I was in the spirit ... Blow	6d.	907.	Jesu, meek and lowly ... Elgar	3d.
345.	Hark, the herald angels E. V. Hall	3d.	205.	I will always give thanks Clarke	3d.	1031.	Jesu, our Lord ... Ch. Gounod	2d.
444.	Hark! what news Oliver King	3d.	1064.	I will cause the shower Naylor	3d.	654.	Jesu, Thou joy ... E. H. Davies	3d.
404.	Hark! Hymn ... F. Tozer	2d.	874.	I will cry unto God H. J. King	3d.	844.	Jesu, Thou sweetness H. J. King	3d.
820.	Haste Thee, O God John Shepherd	3d.	73.	Ditto ... Steggall	3d.	904.	Jesu, word of God incarnate Elgar	2d.
784.	Have mercy upon me J. Barnby	4d.	502.	I will extol Thee ... C. M. Hudson	3d.	455.	Jesu Christ is risen Oliver King	4d.
535.	Ditto ... J. Goss	4d.	1068.	Ditto ... John E. West	3d.	788.	Jesu Christ is risen to-day Gaul	4d.
1013.	Ditto ... E. Minshall	3d.	29.	I will give thanks J. Barnby	3d.	971.	Jesus lives! no longer now Foster	3d.
377.	Ditto ... Kellow J. Pye	3d.	156.	Ditto ... E. J. Hopkins	6d.	618.	Jesus of Nazareth ... G. Byrd	4d.
401.	Ditto ... J. Shaw	3d.	568.	Ditto ... Mozart	2d.	548.	Jo in harvest ... B. Steane	3d.
794.	He sendeth the springs Wareing	3d.	915.	I will give unto him ... H. Blair	2d.	7.	Judge me, O God ... Mendelssohn	13d.
701.	He shall swallow up ... Greenish	3d.	674.	I will give you rain H. W. Wareing	4d.	677.	Just Judge of Heaven Garrett	13d.
707.	He that dwelleth ... J. Booth	4d.	225.	I will go unto ... Gauntlett	2d.	614.	Justorum animæ ... Byrd	3d.
837.	He that shall endure Mendelssohn	2d.	591.	I will go unto the altar C. Harris	3d.	179.	King all glorious J. Barnby	6d.
898.	He that spared not His Gladstone	3d.	437.	I will greatly rejoice Cruickshank	4d.	997.	Ditto (4 voices) J. Barnby	4d.
900.	He will swallow up death Wesley	13d.	1037.	Ditto ... E. C. Bairstow	3d.	581.	Kings shall be thy G. C. Martin	2d.
389.	Hear me when I call (Male), Distin	2d.	495.	I will lay me down A. C. Edwards	3d.	894.	Kings shall see and arise Bridge	6d.
339.	Hear my prayer Mendelssohn	4d.	195.	Ditto ... H. Gadsby	2d.	425.	Lead, kindly Light R. Dunstan	3d.
1001.	Ditto ... H. Purcell	2d.	209.	Ditto ... H. Hiles	3d.	528.	Ditto ... C. L. Naylor	4d.
146.	Ditto ... C. Stroud	4d.	958.	I will lift up mine eyes J. V. Roberts	3d.	589.	Ditto ... D. Pughe-Evans	3d.
442.	Hear my words C. H. H. Parry	8d.	739.	Ditto ... D. S. Smith	3d.	1067.	Ditto ... B. Smith	3d.
310.	Hear, O God ... A. Friedländer	6d.	126.	I will love Thee ... J. Clark	3d.	37.	Ditto ... J. Stainer	4d.
138.	Hear, O heavens P. Humphreys	3d.	1058.	Ditto ... Oliver King	3d.	706.	Let all the world ... W. Jordan	4d.
94.	Hear, O Lord ... John Goss	2d.	394.	Ditto ... Kingston	4d.	132.	Let God arise ... Greene	6d.
139.	Ditto ... C. King	2d.	760.	I will magnify Thee W. H. Bell	4d.	375.	Ditto ... T. T. Trinnell	4d.
162.	Ditto ... F. Ouseley	2d.	78.	Ditto ... J. B. Calkin	4d.	857.	Let my complaint Arthur Batten	2d.
831.	Hear, O My people J. Holbrooke	3d.	27.	Ditto ... John Goss	3d.	346.	Ditto (Male) Thorne	3d.
203.	Hear, O Thou Shepherd Clarke	4d.	633.	Ditto ... F. Iliffe	3d.	509.	Let not thine hand J. Stainer	3d.
522.	Ditto ... T. A. Walmisley	4d.	405.	Ditto ... Oliver King	4d.	807.	Let not your heart Eaton Fanning	3d.
776.	Hear the voice and prayer Tallis	2d.	780.	Ditto ... E. M. Lee	3d.	438.	Ditto ... M. B. Foster	3d.
773.	Hearken unto me W. H. Bell	3d.	1010.	Ditto ... C. H. Lloyd	3d.	438*	Ditto (8 v.) M. B. Foster	3d.
376.	Hide not Thy face Kellow J. Pye	2d.	929.	Ditto ... A. W. Marchant	3d.	795.	Let the heavens be glad M. Higgs	4d.
366.	Ho! every one ... J. M. Crament	4d.	886.	Ditto ... Palestrina	3d.	226.	Let the peace of God J. Stainer	4d.
246.	Ditto ... G. C. Martin	4d.	153.	Ditto ... J. J. Shaw	3d.	565.	Let the righteous ... R. F. Lloyd	3d.
339.	Holy Ghost, to earth ... Dvorák	4d.	154.	I will mention A. Sullivan	6d.	328.	Let the words of my A. D. Culley	3d.
111.	Holy, holy, holy ... Croft	3d.	790.	I will not leave you W. Byrd	3d.	494.	Let Thy merciful ears W. B. Bell	2d.
644	Holy, Lord God ... T. Bateson	4d.	575.	Ditto ... B. Steane	2d.	1066.	Let us now fear A. W. Grodhart	3d.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

HYMN-ANTHEM

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY F. W. FABER

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

ARRANGED FROM THE SACRED SONG BY THE COMPOSER.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

With flowing movement, sustained and expressive.

ORGAN. p Sw.

cres. dim. Ped.

SOPRANO. mp cres.

Hark! hark, my soul! An - gel - ic songs are swell - ing O'er earth's green

ALTO. mp cres.

Hark! hark, my soul! An - gel - ic songs are swell - ing O'er earth's green

TENOR. mp cres.

Hark! hark, my soul! An - gel - ic songs are swell - ing O'er earth's green

BASS. mp cres.

Hark! hark, my soul! An - gel - ic songs are swell - ing O'er earth's green mp Ch. (Sw. coupd.) cres.

Copyright, 1920, by Novello and Company, Limited.

Published separately as a Song in E♭ and C.

HARK ! HARK, MY SOUL !

The image shows a page from a musical score for the song "The Ocean's Wave-Beat". It features four vocal parts (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, and Bass) and a piano accompaniment. The music is in 2/4 time and B-flat major. The lyrics are: "fields, and o - cean's wave-beat shore : . . . How sweet the truth those". The score includes dynamic markings such as "cres." (crescendo) and "p." (piano). The piano part consists of a simple harmonic accompaniment with chords and single notes. The vocal parts are written in a simple, accessible style, with the lyrics clearly aligned under the notes.

bless - ed strains are tell - ing Of that new life when sin shall be no bless - ed strains are tell - ing Of that new life when sin shall be no . .
 bless - ed strains are tell - ing Of that new life when sin shall be no . .
 bless - ed strains are tell - ing Of that new life when sin shall be . . no
 mf

more. mf On - ward we go, for more. mf On - ward we go, for more. mf On - ward we go, for more. mf On - ward we go, for

mf Gt. (Sw. coupd.)

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

still we hear them sing - ing, "Come, wea - ry souls! for Je - sus bids you still we hear them sing - ing, "Come, wea - ry souls! for Je - sus bids you still we hear them sing - ing, "Come, wea - ry souls! for . . Je - sus bids you still we hear them sing - ing, "Come, wea - ry souls! for . . Je - sus bids you come!" And thro' the dark, its ech - oes sweet - ly ring - ing, dim.

come!" And thro' the dark, thro' the dark, its ech - oes sweet - ly ring - ing, dim.

come!" And thro' the dark, thro' the dark, . . its ech - oes sweet - ly ring - ing, The dim.

come!" . . And thro' the dark, its ech - oes sweet - ly ring - ing, dim. Ch.

The mu - sic of the Gos - pel leads us home. mp An - gels of

The mu - sic of the Gos - pel leads us . . home. mp An - gels of mu - sic of the Gos - pel leads us home. mp An - gels of

The mu - sic of the Gos - pel leads us home. mp An - gels of Sw.

mp Ch.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

cres.
Je - sus, An - gels of light, Sing - ing to wel - come the
cres.
Je - sus, An - gels of light, . . Sing - ing to wel - come the
cres.
Je - sus, An - gels of light, . . Sing - ing to wel - come the
cres.
Je - sus, An - gels of light, Sing - ing to wel - come the cres. Sw.

rall.
pil - grims of the night.
rall.
pil - grims of the night.
rall.
pil - grims of the night. . .
rall.
pil - grims of the night.

rall. pp a tempo.

p Far, far a - way, like bells at eve-ning peal - ing, The voice of
p Far, far a - way, like
p Far, far a - way, . . like
p
Far, far a -

Ch. 8, 4 & 2 ft. uncoupled. (or Solo Carillon).

p Sw.
Man.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

Je - - sus sounds o'er land and sea,

bells, o'er land and sea,

bells, o'er land and sea,

way, o'er land and sea,

cres.

And la - den souls by

And la - den souls by
Ch. 8 & 4 ft. (Sw. coupd.)

Ped.

cres.

Kind Shep-herd, turn their wea - ry steps to

Kind Shep-herd, turn their wea - ry steps to . .

thou-sands meek-ly steal - ing, Kind Shep-herd, turn their wea - ry steps to . .

thou-sands meek-ly steal - ing, Kind Shep-herd, turn their steps to Ch.

Thee.

mp

Rest comes at length; though

Thee. . .

mp

Rest comes, though

Thee. . .

mp

Rest comes, though

Thee.

Though

Sw.

mp

Ch. 8 ft.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

life be long and drear - y, The day must dawn, and dark-some night be life be drear - y, cres. The day must dawn, and dark-some night be life be long and drear - y, The day . . must dawn, and dark-some night be life be drear - y, The day . . must dawn, and dark-some night be cres.

Su. p.

past; All jour-neys end in wel-comes to the wea - ry,

past; All jour-neys end in wel-comes to the wea - ry,

past; All jour-neys end in wel-comes to the wea - ry, past; Jour-neys end in wel - comes, wel-comes to the wea - ry,

mf

mf

mf

mf

mf Gt.

Broadly.

And heav'n, the heart's true home, will come at . . last.

And heav'n, the heart's true home, will come at last.

And heav'n, the heart's true home, will come at . . last.

And heav'n, the heart's true home, will come at last.

f

f

f

f

Broadly.

Su.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

An - gels! sing on, your faith - ful watch - es keep - ing, Sing us sweet
 An - gels! sing on, your faith - ful watch - es keep - ing, Sing us sweet mp Gt.

Till morn-ing's joy shall
 Till morn-ing's joy shall frag-ments of the songs a - bove; Till morn-ing's joy shall frag-ments of the songs a - bove; Till morn-ing's joy shall end the night of weep - ing, And life's long shad - ows break in cloud - - less end the night of weep - ing, And life's long shad - ows break in cloud - - less end the night of weep - ing, And life's long shad - ows break in cloud - - less end the night of weep - ing, And life's long shad - ows break in cloud - - less

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

broadening out. Slower. dim.

love. An - gels of Je - sus, An - gels of light,

ff dim.

love, cloud-less love. An - gels of Je - sus, An - gels of light,

ff dim.

love. An - gels of Je - sus, An - gels of light,

ff dim.

love, cloud-less love. An - gels of Je - sus, An - gels of light,

Gt. Slower. broadening out. ff dim.

Sing - ing to wel - come the pil - grims of the night. An - gels of

dim. p

Sing - ing to wel - come the pil - grims of the night. An - gels of

dim. p

Sing - ing to wel - come the pil - grims of the night. An - gels of

dim. p

Sing - ing to wel - come the pil - grims of the night. An - gels of

Sw. dim. p Ch.

HARK! HARK, MY SOUL!

First system of the musical score. It features four vocal staves (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) and a piano accompaniment. The lyrics are: "Je - sus, An - gels of light, Sing - ing to wel - - -". The piano part includes dynamic markings: cres., rall., and f. The vocal parts also have cres. and rall. markings.

Second system of the musical score. The lyrics are: "come . . . the pil - grims of the night. . .". The piano part includes dynamic markings: p, Very slow., and p (Unaccompanied.). The vocal parts also have p markings.

Third system of the musical score. The piano part includes dynamic markings: pp and Ch.. The vocal parts continue the melody.

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION OF PART-SONGS

SELECTED LISTS OF RECENT PUBLICATIONS

MIXED VOICES

(S A.T.B. unaccompanied or accompaniment ad lib. where not otherwise indicated.)

*Alexander (Humorous)	A. H. Brewer	13d.	*Lullaby, A	C. Lee Williams	13d.
Autumn	G. Tootell	13d.	*March of the Cameron men, The ...	Granville Bantock	3d.
*Beacon, The	Adam Carse	3d.	My dear mistress has a heart	John E. West	2d.
*Beyond	C. Lee Williams	13d.	*O can ye sew cushions ... (arranged by Granville Bantock)	3d.
Boy, The	A. H. Brewer	3d.	*Oh! the noble Duke of York (arranged by N. F. Byng-Johnson)	13d.
Cries of London, The	R. Deering	6d.	*Rolling down to Rio	Edward German	4d.
" "	Orlando Gibbons	6d.	*Soldier, rest... ..	David Stephen	3d.
" "	T. Weelkes	4d.	§*Song of the grey seas (accompanied) ...	Percy E. Fletcher	6d.
*Deil's awa' wi' the exciseman, The ...	E. T. Sweeting	3d.	*Song of the thrush, The (accompanied)	R. Walthew	4d.
*Echo Song	Oliver King	13d.	Sweet Day, so cool... ..	David Stephen	2d.
*Frog, The (arranged)	Ernest Newton	4d.	Sweet Western Wind	John E. West	13d.
From the lone Shieling	Malcolm Maclean	3d.	Tell me where is fancy bred	John Pointer	13d.
Gather ye rosebuds	John Pointer	3d.	Tewkesbury Road	E. T. Sweeting	3d.
Here a pretty baby lies	J. A. Sowerbutts	13d.	*There is a lady sweet and kind ...	Harold E. Darke	13d.
*How happy the lover	John E. West	13d.	Three Sleeps	John Gerrard Williams	13d.
Hunting Song	John Gerrard Williams	3d.	Tide rises, The	Adam Carse	13d.
*I love my love in the morning	Bernard Johnson	13d.	Water Party, A	C. H. Lloyd	3d.
Islet, The	Percy E. Fletcher	13d.	*Weep you no more	Arthur Somervell	3d.
*John Peel	(arr. by John E. West)	3d.	§*What shall we dance	F. H. Cowen	4d.
*Lass with the delicate air (arranged) ...	Michael Arne	13d.	Where shall the lover rest	E. C. Baird	4d.
Longing	Haydn Keeton	2d.	*Wi' a hundred pipers	(arr. by John E. West)	3d.
*Love is a sickness	A. W. Marchant	13d.	*World is too much with us, The ...	Granville Bantock	3d.
Love the Harlequin	H. W. Wareing	3d.	Youthful, charming Chloe	W. McNaught	3d.
Love wakes and weeps	B. Luard-Selby	13d.

MALE VOICES

(T.T.B.B. unaccompanied or accompaniment ad lib. where not otherwise indicated.)

*Alexander (Humorous) (T. (or A.) T.B.B.) ...	A. H. Brewer	2d.	*Lullaby (Op. 49, No. 4)	Brahms	13d.
§Bacchanalian Chorus	J. W. Elliott	4d.	*Mad Dog, The (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.)...	C. H. H. Parry	4d.
*Ballade	Granville Bantock	4d.	*Marching (Op. 41, No. 4) (Humorous)	Brahms	2d.
*Boy, The (Humorous) (T. (or A.) T.T.B.) ...	A. H. Brewer	3d.	*Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1)	Schumann	3d.
*Cargoes	H. Balfour Gardiner	3d.	*Oh! the noble Duke of York (arranged by N. F. Byng-Johnson)	3d.
Crossing the Bar	T. F. Dunhill	2d.	Orpheus (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.)	C. H. H. Parry	3d.
Durge of Kisses, A	Percy E. Fletcher	3d.	*Pibroch of Donuil Dhu	Granville Bantock	4d.
*Duncan Gray (T.T.B.)	A. M. Richardson	3d.	Queen of my heart, The	A. H. Brewer	3d.
Early one morning (arr. by T. F. Dunhill) (A T.B.B.)	Folk-Song	2d.	*Riders of the night, The	Laurent de Rillé	4d.
Echoes	T. F. Dunhill	2d.	*Sailor's Return, The	Percy E. Fletcher	4d.
*Festival Song	Granville Bantock	4d.	Sally in our Alley (A. (or T.) T.B.B.) ...	H. Elliot Button	3d.
*Full fathom five	T. F. Dunhill	3d.	Sir Eglamore (arranged)	H. Balfour Gardiner	3d.
*Glories of our Blood and State, The ...	Granville Bantock	3d.	*Sleeping	Edward German	3d.
He that bath a pleasant face (arranged)	Hatton	3d.	Softly fall the shades of evening (arranged) ...	Hatton	3d.
Hymn to Harmony	Laurent de Rillé	4d.	*Soldier, rest... ..	A. Somervell	3d.
I fear thy kisses (A. (or T.) T.B.B.)	A. H. Brewer	2d.	*Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2)	Schumann	3d.
*I would I were the glow-worm	Harold Rhodes	3d.	That very wise man (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.) ...	C. H. H. Parry	3d.
*Laird o' Cockpen	Granville Bantock	4d.	There was an old man (Humorous)	A. H. Brewer	3d.
Lament, A	(arr. by H. Elliot Button)	2d.	*United are we (Op. 41, No. 2)	Brahms	2d.
*Land of the leal, The (arr. by H. Elliot Button)	Scotch Air	2d.	§Viking Song... ..	Julius Harrison	4d.
Lass of Richmond Hill, The (A. (or T.) T.B.B.)	A. H. Brewer	3d.	*Walpurga (Op. 30)... ..	F. Hegar	6d.
Let the hills resound (arranged)	Brinley Richards	4d.	Ware, Wire!	C. Lee Williams	3d.
*Little Sandman, The	(arr. by John E. West)	3d.	Who rides for the King	Reginald Somerville	3d.
*Lotus Flower, The (Op. 33, No. 3)	Schumann	2d.	Winter is gone, The (arr. by R. Vaughan Williams)	Folk-Song	2d.
*Lucifer in starlight (6 parts)	Granville Bantock	6d.

§ Orchestral Accompaniment.

* Also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

THE
ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, N.W. 1.

INSTITUTED 1822.

INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER. 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

PRINCIPAL—SIR ALEXANDER CAMPBELL MACKENZIE, Mus.D., LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.A.M.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC offers to students of both sexes (whether amateur or professional) a thorough training in all branches of music under the most able and distinguished Professors. In addition to receiving individual lessons in the various branches of the Curriculum, students have the advantage of attending the Orchestral, Choral, and Chamber Music Classes, and the weekly Lectures on music and musicians. Evidence of their progress is given at the Fortnightly and Public Concerts and by periodical Operatic and Dramatic Performances.

There are three Terms in the Academic year—viz., the Michaelmas Term, from Michaelmas to Christmas; the Lent Term, from early in January to Easter; and the Midsummer Term, from early in May until the end of July.

A large number of Scholarships and Prizes are founded and are competed for periodically.

Students who show special merit and ability receive the distinction of being elected by the Directors, Associates of the Institution, and are thereby entitled to the use after their names of the letters A.R.A.M. Students who distinguish themselves in the musical profession after quitting the Institution may be elected by the Directors, Fellows of the Royal Academy of Music, and are thereupon entitled to the use after their names of the letters F.R.A.M.

Subscribers have the privilege of attending the Lectures and Public Concerts and of introducing friends in proportion to the amount of their subscriptions.

An examination of persons trained independently of the Academy is held twice a year—viz., during the Summer and Christmas vacations—successful candidates at which are elected Licentiates of the Academy, and are thereupon entitled to the use after their names of the letters L.R.A.M. The syllabus is issued annually at Easter.

A Special Teachers' Training Course, to meet the requirements of the Teachers Registration Council, has been instituted, prospectus of which is now ready.

A JUNIOR DEPARTMENT is now open.

Prospectus, entry form, and all further information may be obtained on application.

J. A. CREIGHTON,

Secretary.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF

THE ROYAL ACADEMY of MUSIC & THE ROYAL COLLEGE of MUSIC

FOR

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron—HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
ASSOCIATED BOARD:

ERNEST MATHEWS, Chairman.

SIR ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE, Mus. Doc., St. And., Cantab., Et Edin., LL.D., D.C.L., Principal of The R.A.M.
SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, M.A., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Professor of Music, University of Oxford, Director of The R.C.M.
OSCAR BERINGER.
PERCY C. BUCK, M.A., Mus. Doc.
EATON FANING, Mus. Doc., Cantab.
FREDERIC KING.
SAXTON W. A. NOBLE.
SIR WALTER PARRATT, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Cantab. Et Dunelm.
H. W. RICHARDS, Mus. Doc., Dunelm.
SIR CHARLES V. STANFORD, D.C.L., LL.D., M.A., Mus. Doc., Cantab. Et Oxon., Professor of Music, University of Cambridge.
S. P. WADDINGTON.
H. WESSELY.

Secretary: JAMES MUIR.

Bankers: BANK OF ENGLAND, WESTERN BRANCH, BURLINGTON GARDENS, LONDON, W. 1.

THE Board holds Examinations throughout the United Kingdom and in the Colonies in both Theoretical and Practical Music. The Examinations are of two kinds, "Local Centre" and "School." The Local Centre Examinations are carried out by two Examiners chosen almost exclusively from the Staffs of The Royal Academy of Music and of The Royal College of Music. The School Examinations are conducted by one Examiner.

The Subjects for Examination are comprised in the following list:—

GRAMMAR OF MUSIC.	ORGAN.	DOUBLE BASS.
RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC.	VIOLIN.	HARP.
HARMONY.	VIOLA.	WIND INSTRUMENTS.
COUNTERPOINT.	VIOLONCELLO.	SINGING.
PIANOFORTE.

Local Centre Examinations (Syllabus A). Examinations in Theory held in March and November at all Centres. In Practical Subjects in March—April at all Centres; and in the London district and certain Provincial Centres in November—December also. Entries for the November—December Examinations close Wednesday, October 13th (or, with extra fee, October 21st), 1920.

School Examinations (Syllabus B) held three times a year: viz., October—November, March—April, and June—July. Entries for the October—November Examinations close Wednesday, October 6th (or, with extra fee, October 14th), 1920.

Theory Papers set in past years (Local Centre or School) may be obtained from the Central Office, price 6d. per annual set post-free.

The Board offers annually Six Exhibitions tenable at The Royal Academy of Music or The Royal College of Music for two or three years. These Exhibitions are limited to Candidates under twenty years of age who fulfil certain conditions set forth in each Syllabus.

Syllabuses A and B (for 1920 or 1921), Forms of Entry, and any further information, may be obtained, post-free, from the Secretary—

JAMES MUIR,

TELEGRAMS:—"ASSOCIA. LONDON."
 TELEPHONE:—MUSEUM 1710.

CENTRAL OFFICE: 14 & 15. BEDFORD SQUARE. LONDON. W.C. 1.

No. 933

THE

MUSICAL TIMES

FOUNDED 1844

NOVEMBER 1, 1920

Price 6d.

SPENCER PIANOS

GRANDS • UPRIGHTS • PLAYERS

Sole Agents

MURDOCH MURDOCH & CO

Piano & Player-Piano Experts

461 & 463 OXFORD STREET

And at BRIGHTON • PORTSMOUTH • SOUTHAMPTON
FOLKESTONE • DOVER • CHATHAM
BIRMINGHAM • CAMBRIDGE

WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON.

“The World’s Piano Centre.”
ARCHIBALD RAMSDEN

LTD.

ALSO

CECILIAN HOUSE.

12, Park Row,
LEEDS.

• 65 Wigmore Street •
• LONDON • W.1.

PIANOS

“NEW PATENT THREE COMPARTMENT TOP LID” FOR GRAND PIANOS.

We have already converted over 600 Grand Pianos with this New Device.

Kindly send for Booklet giving particulars.

FOUNDED

1837.

AGENTS

THROUGHOUT

THE WORLD.

GRANDS-UPRIGHTS.

AWARDS for Good

Tone:

LONDON - - - 1851

PARIS - - - 1867

LIMA - - - 1872

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. 1882

LONDON - - - 1885

PLAYER-PIANOS.

SHOWROOMS:

ALLISON PIANO FACTORY, LEIGHTON ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, LONDON, N.W.5

ESTEY ORGANS ESTEY PIANOS

ONLY ONE GRADE OF EACH.
THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE.

Largest Stock of Organs in the World.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE POST FREE. CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

Telephone: Museum 1317.

Telegrams: "ESTEY OX. LONDON."

Estey Organ Co.

- 12 -

RATHBONE PLACE,

OXFORD STREET,

LONDON, W. 1.

AN IMPORTANT NEW EDUCATIONAL WORK.

101 ORIGINAL STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

G. H. CLUTSAM

Book I. - Nos. 1 to 32

„ II. - „ 33 „ 66

Book III. - Nos. 67 to 92

„ IV. - „ 93 „ 101

PRICE 2/6 NET EACH BOOK.

ENGLISH OR CONTINENTAL FINGERING.

(ESTABLISHED 1788.)

METZLER & CO. (1909), LTD.,

42, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

Copyright 1920 by Metzler & Co. (1909), Ltd.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 933.—Vol. 61
Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

NOVEMBER 1 1920

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

Conductor: SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. D.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27, AT 2.30 P.M.

JUDAS MACCABÆUS - HANDEL

MADAME ELSA STRALIA.
MISS MILLICENT RUSSELL.
MISS MARGARET BALFOUR.
MR. WILLIAM BOLAND.
MR. GRAHAM SMART.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 18, AT 2.30.

CAROLS

MISS FLORA WOODMAN.
MISS CARMEN HILL.
MR. JOHN BOOTH.
MR. TOPLISS GREEN.

At the Organ ... Mr. H. L. BALFOUR.
Full Chorus and Orchestra.

Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.;
Unreserved, 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W. 1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: Sir A. C. MACKENZIE, Mus. Doc., LL.D., F.R.A.M.

CHAMBER CONCERTS, November 1 and 17, at 3.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERTS, Saturdays, November 6 and 20, at 3.

A SPECIAL TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE, to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, has been instituted.

L.R.A.M. CHRISTMAS EXAMINATION. Entries will be accepted up to 15th November on payment of a late fee of 5s.

A JUNIOR DEPARTMENT is now open.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W. 7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Telegrams:

"Initiative, Southkens, London."

Telephone:

"1160, Western."

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH ALLEN, M.A., D.Mus.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D. Litt.

The CHRISTMAS HALF-TERM will commence on MONDAY,
NOVEMBER 1, 1920.

A Junior Department is established for Pupils under 16 years of age.
Syllabus and Official Entry Forms may be obtained from the Registrar.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC PATRON'S FUND
(Founded by Sir Ernest Palmer, Bart.). For the encouragement of British Composers and Executive Artists.

Particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

CLAUDE AVELING, Registrar.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M. FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A).

Examinations in Theory held in March and November at all Centres.
In Practical Subjects in March-April at all Centres, and in the London district and certain Provincial Centres in November-December also.
Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday,
February 9th, 1921.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday, February 2nd, 1921.

Theory papers set in Examinations of past years (Local Centre or School) can be obtained on application. Price 6d. per set, per year, post-free.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from—

JAMES MUIR, Secretary,

14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C. 1.

Telegrams: "Associa, London."

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

A MEETING of past and present members of the ROYAL COLLEGE
OF MUSIC, will be held in the Concert Hall of the College, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, at 5.30 p.m.,

to discuss the proposed College Memorial to SIR HUBERT PARRY.

All who have been connected with the College, in any capacity whatsoever, since its foundation, are urged to attend, if possible, as the business before the Meeting, and the decisions to be made, will be of the utmost importance.

Suggestions as to any point connected with the Memorial will be welcomed, and should be sent, as soon as possible, to the Hon.
Secretary of the Memorial Committee,

Miss EMILY DAYMOND, 17, Kensington Square, W. 8.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC

(CORPORATION OF LONDON).

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C. 4.

PRINCIPAL ... LONDON RONALD.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all musical subjects. STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Stage Dancing, Fencing.

HALF-TERM began MONDAY, 1st NOVEMBER.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £7 17s. 6d. and £10 10s. per term, comprising principal and secondary Subjects,
Harmony, Sight-Singing, and/or Orchestra.

Performances of "Veronique," School Theatre, December 2nd, 3rd, and 4th.

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Local School
Examinations (open to general public), free on application.

Telephone: Cent. 4459.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

Examination Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Sec.

Kensington Gore, S.W. 7.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

Examinations for degrees in Music are held as follows: Matriculation, January, July, and October; First Mus. B., March and September;
Mus. B. and Mus. D., September only.

For particulars, apply Secretary of Examinations, University Offices,
Durham. Copies of former Examination Papers, 1s. 6d. per set.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE. SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A.

SESSION 1919-1920.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 23 to December 21) WINTER TERM (January 20 to April 5); SUMMER TERM (April 7 to June 28).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Patroness: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: Sir THOMAS BEECHAM, Bart.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Special Houses of Residence recommended for Students.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

Opera Class—Miss MARIE BREMA.

STANLEY WITHERS, Registrar.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

FOUNDED 1892.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All Branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c., and Opera.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

THE INCORPORATED LONDON ACADEMY OF MUSIC, 22, Princes St., Cavendish Square, W. 1.

Branches: Hampstead Conservatoire, N.W. 3,
and 117, Seven Sisters Road, N. 7.

Principal: T. H. YORKE-TROTTER, M.A., Mus. Doc. (Oxon.).

Rhythmic Method of Music Teaching. Special Classes for Teachers. Special Training in Music and Elocution. Private and Class Lessons in every subject by the best Teachers.

ORCHESTRAL AND CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES WEEKLY.

Frequent Students' Concerts. Examination in Music and Elocution, July and December. Spong Rhythmic Dancing. For Prospectus and Examination Syllabus apply to the CENTRAL ACADEMY, 22, PRINCES STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W. 1.

THE LONDON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

6 and 7, BLOMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W. 2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Solo Boys and Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church Services. &c. Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES

COLLEGE OF VIOLINISTS LTD.

91, ST. MARTIN'S LANE, LONDON, W.C. 2.

EXAMINATIONS

IN VIOLIN, VIOLA, VIOLONCELLO, AND THEORY OF MUSIC
held in JUNE and DECEMBER

Syllabus on application to E. E. JACKSON, Hon. Secretary.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPosed AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hessele, E. Yorks.

LONDON COLLEGE OF MUSIC. GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

Patron: HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF LEEDS.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION:

DR. HORTON ALLISON Mus. D. Dublin; Mus. B. Cantab.; F.R.A.M.
DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac. Cantab., Principal.
G. AUGUSTUS HOLMES, Esq., Director of Examinations.
(Staff of Fifty-five Examiners. For full list see Syllabus.)

EXAMINATIONS—LOCAL AND HIGHER.

The NEXT EXAMINATION for Certificates in Pianoforte, Violin Singing, Elocution, Organ, Theory of Music, &c., will be held in London and at over 400 Local Centres in the United Kingdom in DECEMBER. Last day of entry, November 8th.

SYLLABUS, and Forms of Entry, on application to the Secretary. Silver and Bronze Medals and Book Prizes are awarded at the Examinations in accordance with the printed regulations.

The HIGHER EXAMINATIONS for the Diplomas of Associate (A.L.C.M.) and Licentiate (L.L.C.M.) take place in April, June, July, and December, and for the Diplomas of Associate in Music (A. Mus. L.C.M.), Licentiate in Music (L. Mus. L.C.M.), and Fellowship (F.L.C.M.), in June, July, and December.

LOCAL CENTRES may be formed in districts unrepresented, either in the United Kingdom or abroad; particulars on application. SCHOOL CENTRES may also be arranged.

In the Educational Department students are received and thoroughly trained in all musical subjects under the best Professors at moderate fees. Lessons may commence from any date.

For full information apply,

A. GAMBIER HOLMES, Secretary.

Telegrams: "Supertonic, Reg. London." Telephone: Central 3870.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC. LONDON.

Governors: Directors of the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
INCORPORATED 1891.

158, HOLLAND PARK AVENUE, KENSINGTON, W. 11.

President: THE MOST HON. THE MARQUIS OF ANGLESEY.

Board of Examination:

Principal: J. H. LEWIS, D.C.L., F.E.I.S., Mus. Doc.

Chairman: J. M. BENTLEY, Mus. Doc. Cantab., Hon. F.R.A.M.
Hon. Director of Studies: CHURCHILL SIBLEY, Mus. Doc., F.I.G.C.M.
Registrar: J. G. COOPER, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.

ROBERT FOX FREW, Mus. Doc. Dunelm.

Rev. NOEL BONAVIA-HUNT, M.A. Oxon.

Secretary: H. PORTMAN LEWIS.

Metropolitan and Provincial Examinations in all subjects, including the Diplomas of A.V.C.M., L.V.C.M., F.V.C.M., also for the Teachers' Professional Diploma in the Art of Teaching, April, July, and December. Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for Competition.

Local Secretaries required for towns not represented. Lessons given in Pianoforte, Singing, Elocution, Harmony, Counterpoint, and all other subjects connected with the culture of Music.

All communications to be addressed to The Secretary.

INCORPORATED GUILD OF CHURCH MUSICIANS.

Founded 1888.

Incorporated pursuant to Act of Parliament XXX. and XXXI.
Victoria, Cap. cxxx. § 23.

President: THE RT. REV. BISHOP J. E. C. WELLDON, D.D., DEAN OF DURHAM.

Vice-Presidents:

THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON OF MIDDLESEX.
THE REV. CANON W. DOUGLAS SPRINGETT, D.D. Oxon.
THE REV. SIR GEORGE RALPH FETHERSTON, BART., J.P.

Warden:

DR. J. H. LEWIS, D.C.L., F.E.I.S., Mus. Doc.

Chairman (Board of Examination):

DR. J. M. BENTLEY, Mus. Doc. Cantab., F.R.A.M.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING AND RITE OF INDUCTION,
Monday, January 24th, 1921.

ASSOCIATE (A.I.G.C.M.), LICENTIATE (L.I.G.C.M.), FELLOWSHIP (F.I.G.C.M.) EXAMINATIONS in London and at approved Provincial Centres in April, July, and December.

COMPETITIONS, 1920.

SILVER MEDALS are awarded for the best INTRODUCTORY
VOLUNTARY for the ORGAN, and EVENING SERVICE.

BRONZE MEDALS for the best HYMN-TUNE, TE DEUM
(Chantwise), Harmonized Setting of the GUILD OFFICE.

Organists (Members) have the FREE use of the Register of Vacant Appointments.

Calendar (gratis) and further information of DR. LEWIS, Warden,
158, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, W. 11.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

METROPOLITAN EXAMINATION, SEPTEMBER, 1920.

The following CANDIDATES passed:

IN SINGING.—As TEACHERS: Mary Gibson, Thomas Edwin Teasdale Griffiths, Walter James Lancaster, Helena Marie Lightwood, Robert Pickard.

As PERFORMERS.—Edith E. Biedermann, Lilian Muriel Blake, Annie Holden Broadbent, Marjorie Brooks, Chloe Curtis, Ethel Florence Davison, Frank Temple Evans, Lena Blanche Fentiman, Ruby Graham, Dorothy Hames, Frederic Robert Leeds, Joanna Chalmers Morton, Greta Paul, Francis William Poulton, Doris Richardson, Maggie Robertson, Gladys Lilian Sames, Elizabeth Scott, Frank Richard Hayne Seaton, Bertha Therese Seymour, William James Smith, Gertrude Agnes Wood, Winifred Wyard.

Examiners: Thomas Meux, Selina Pitt Soper, W. H. Thomas, Arthur Thompson, Mary T. Wilson.

PIANOFORTE.—As PERFORMER and TEACHER: Arthur Wilkinson Urquhart.

As TEACHERS: Dorothy Adams, Winifred M. Amor, Dorothy Nora Alice Beck, Phyllis May Bendall, Isabella Ethel Black, Margaret Eileen Bond, Beatrice Marjorie Booth, Gertrude Maud Brett, Marjorie Brighouse, Florence Eleanor Bristow, Jeannie Staveley Brown, May Caldecott, Gwen Champion, Elaine Charlton, Alice Chappell, Isabel Kathleen Charman, Lillias Aileen Clarkson, Vera Eugene Cooke, G. Audrey Kathleen Cousins, Doris Cox, Margaret Elizabeth Davies, Joan Phyllis Dixon, Rose Mary Dunkley, Frederick Thomas Durrant, Vida Eaton, John Frederick Estcourt, Muriel Edith Everett, Dorothy Hazel Gladys Falkner, Audrey Farr, Margaret Flower, Margery Alicia Freeman, Dora Winifred Fry, Irene Agnes Gibb, Elizabeth Bennett Gill, Talman J. M. Gorby, Violet Amy Guillaume, Cathie Hackney, Florence Margaret Halton, Ann Blowfield Hamerton, Marjory Joan Hardwick, Victoria May Harlow, James Henry Hawarth, Ruth Hodges, Kathleen M. E. Hull, Stanley Hull, Dorothy Josephine Iles, Eva Scerries Jones, Dilys Muriel Jones, Lillias Jones, Susannah Rosina Jones, Millicent Lawian, Ray Levinson, Dorothy Little, Margaret Macaulay, Eleanor Alexa MacPhee, Grace Ellen Markwick, Hilda Maisie Marsh, Winifride Mayes, Winifred Alice McDougald, Freda Constance Monk, Millicent Ruth Monk, Violet Alexandra Munro, Edith Mabel Newson, Lilian Edith Newstead, Doris Mary Oakley, Catherine Milne Ogilvie, Grace Agnes Page, Winifred Mary Panting, Nellie Parker, Winifred Mary Peel, Wilfred Hudson Phillips, Florence Ethel Powell, Daisy Prince, Cicely Hilda Purton, Madge Reade, Emma Florence Richards, Bertha Maude Roberts, Daniel John Roberts, Leonard Woodroffe Robinson, Margaret Josephine Russell, Marion Irene Russell, Dora Wingate Scholes, Irene Mary Sclanders, Ethel Lilian Smith, Ethel M. Snelling, Frances Elsie Sortwell, Kathleen Joan Spurr, Doris Mamie Steen, Kathleen Mary Stone, Lucy Taylor, Wilfred Arthur Taylor, Arthur Stanley Tetlow, Elsie Margaret Thomas, Gertrude May Tippet, Mary Titchmarsh, Cecilia Drummond Trimby, Mabel Annie Upton, Elaine Wallis, Sybil Marguerite Warner, Philippa Weaver, Florence Whitaker, Katharine Anne White, Gwladys Mary Williams, Elsie Beatrice Williamson, Ethel Marianne Winfield, Elsie Lawrence Wood, Gertrude Elizabeth Wood.

As PERFORMERS: Audrey V. Goldsteen, Alfred Harold Imray, Henry Victor Love, Margaret Makepeace, E. H. Joan Pound, Doris Roughton, Leslie Bunting Taylor, Dulcie Rose Winter, Cecilia Elizabeth Yeoman.

Examiners: Carlo Albanesi, Oscar Beringer, Victor Booth, Ambrose Coviello, Harold Craxton, W. J. Kipps, T. B. Knott, Tobias Matthay, Frederick Moore, Claude Pollard, Chas. F. Reddie, Percy Waller.

ORGAN.—Charles Percival David Cannon.

Examiners: Stanley Marchant, Mus. D., H. W. Richards, Mus. D., Reginald Steggall.

VIOLIN.—As TEACHER: Gwendoline Augusta Hannaford

Examiners: F. Corder, H. Wessely, Rowsby Woof.

ELOCUTION.—As TEACHERS: Hilda Beer, Stella A. Clark, Richard Arthur Lee Dixon, Isa Stephenson Fowler, Lilian Rose Kitting, Edith Eveleen Mathews, Lilian Emily Constance Renno, Harold John Ripper, Douglas Stevens, Annie Charlesworth West.

As PERFORMER.—Beatrice Maude Culverwell.

Examiners: A. Acton Bond, Wilton Cole, F. Corder, Katie Thomas.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

ADVISORY BOARD FOR COMPOSERS.

FEDERATED BOARD OFFICES: 101, MORTIMER STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Director: DR. A. EAGLEFIELD HULL.

Advisory Board:

MESSRS. ARNOLD BAX, YORK BOWEN, FRANK BRIDGE, ALBERT COATES, EDWARD J. DENT, EUGENE GOOSSENS, DR. EAGLEFIELD HULL, HAMILTON HARTY, JOHN IRELAND, DR. R. R. TERRY, DR. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS.

Advice, criticism, and appraisalment of Composer's MSS., with suggestions for publication and performance if worthy.

Particulars from Mr. L. C. MORRIS, M.C., Secretary, Advisory Board for Composers, Federated Board Offices, 101, Mortimer Street, W.1.

THE PHILHARMONIC CHOIR.

Hon. Conductor: CHARLES KENNEDY SCOTT.

Rehearsals on Wednesdays, 6.15 to 7.45 p.m., at the Ethical Church, 46, Queen's Road, Bayswater, W.

Vacancies for Singers in all "parts."

Applications to—

GRANVILLE HUMPHREYS, 145, Elms Road, Clapham, S.W. 4.
Phone: Brixton, 3076.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

FOR MUSIC TEACHERS.

Every teacher who secures admission to the Register of Teachers kept by the Teachers' Registration Council is recognised as qualified. As an aid to the development of your teaching connection, and for the fixing of a minimum fee, this recognition will be invaluable.

Admission to the Register of Teachers

is a privilege which may be secured on special terms during the present year by any member of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, since proof of membership of the I.S.M. is accepted by the Teachers' Council as evidence of the attainments which are required in the case of private teachers who apply for Registration under the transitional conditions which are in force up to the 31st December, 1920.

The I.S.M.

was founded in 1882, and is organized on a two-fold basis, central and local. The central organization, with its office in London, provides for members expert help in matters relating to

REGISTRATION, SALARIES, FEES,
PENSIONS, VACANT POSTS,
ENGAGEMENTS, AGREEMENTS,
INCOME TAX,
RECOVERY OF FEES,
ETC., ETC.

Consider the matter now

and write to-day for a form of admission to membership of the I.S.M.

Address your application to The General Secretary, The I.S.M., 19, Berners Street, London, W. 1.

BRITISH MUSIC SOCIETY.

(NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL.)

19, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Patron: THE RT. HON. A. J. BALFOUR.

President: THE LORD HOWARD DE WALDEN.

Hon. Director: DR. A. EAGLEFIELD HULL

£15,000 WANTED.

FOR THE FOSTERING AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF
BRITISH MUSIC AT HOME AND ABROAD.

YOU CAN HELP

By sending a Donation to the Foundation Fund.

By becoming a Member.

(Membership is open to Professionals and Amateurs.)

By forming New Branches.

By assisting Centres and Branches already formed.

Full particulars from

THE GENERAL SECRETARY.

19, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Y.M.C.A. MUSIC SECTION.

Chairman: SIR JOHN D. MCCLURE, LL.D., D.Mus.

Committee: Prof. Percy C. Buck, M.A., D. Mus.; Prof. H. Walford Davies, LL.D., D. Mus.; A. A. Fitzsimmons; Harvey Grace, F.R.C.O.; J. T. Lightwood; Sydney H. Nicholson, M.A., B. Mus.; Percy A. Scholes, B. Mus., A.R.C.M.; Miss Phoebe M. Walters, A.R.C.M.; Mrs. Z. F. Willis. Secretary: Major J. T. Bavin.

All information regarding its aims and plans for the introduction and maintenance of good music in the Y.M.C.A. as an educational and recreational feature, may be obtained from The Secretary, Y.M.C.A. Music Section, Shakespeare Hut, Malet Street, W.C.1.

THE IDEAL METHOD OF MEMORY-TRAINING FOR MUSICIANS.

A SYSTEM OF STUDY WHICH QUICKENS AND STRENGTHENS THE MUSICAL MEMORY, THE IMAGINATIVE AND PERCEPTIVE POWERS.

A CORRESPONDENT WRITES:—

"I could not play one piece from Memory. Now I can play from Memory every piece I learn."

Write for particulars:—

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC.,

SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 25, LOXHAM STREET, BOLTON.

MR. W. H. BREARE

VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING
TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.

Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique: How it feels to Sing," 3s. 6d. each, post 3s. 10d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee.

"One of the sanest of sane expositions."—"Musical Courier, N.Y."

"Is a reliable expert in all branches."—"Gentlewoman."

"A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—"Eastern Morning News."

"Do not hesitate to commend."—"Glasgow Herald."

"His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—"Aberdeen Free Press."

"Common-sense in all he utters."—"Leeds Mercury."

"Is an acknowledged authority."—"Western Morning News."

"I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H. Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

PIANO PLAYING KEPT UP without keyboard practising.

Not the least of the many benefits which the use of my System confers upon pianists is that of being able to keep "in practice" without keyboard practising.

Even when circumstances make keyboard work impossible for several months, definite progress is often made in touch, increased powers of execution, and in general command over the keyboard.

This is one of the many reasons why pianists of all grades of proficiency should take my Postal Course.

Sir Frederick Bridge, C.V.O., has strongly recommended my System, the advantages of which, he stated, he could cordially endorse from his own personal experience. More than 12,000 successful students add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System
of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing," will be gladly sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying, please state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C.1.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: MR. A. MCALISTER, B.A. (Cantab.)

YOU can get to the

TOP

One Fee

for the whole series

F.R.C.O.

Mus. Bac.

—B.A.

Mus. Bac.

Final

Exercise

1st M.B.

Final B.A.

Inter B.A.

MATRIC

F.R.C.O.

A.R.C.O.

Guarantee Courses: ONE FEE.

Mus. Bac. | A.R.C.O. | L.R.A.M. | A. Mus. T.C.L.
B.A. | F.R.C.O. | A.R.C.M. | L. Mus. T.C.L.

201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

MR. CHARLES TREE.

Crowded houses at Plymouth, Pontefract, Weston, &c.

Western Daily Mercury, October 11.—Crowded audiences enjoyed Mr. Tree's lectures. The hall was well-filled in the afternoon—in the evening every seat was occupied. Nothing like it has been given by any artist. On voice-production he has constituted himself a valuable authority, in fact he stands pre-eminent in this class of work. The event was unique in the history of musical Plymouth, and his hints on voice-production constitute a singing lesson of the highest value.

Morning News.—So popular was the appeal of his lecture-recital that the audience overflowed into the orchestra. He was all for sincerity and simplicity, and his choice of songs to enforce his points was admirable and convincing.

Pontefract Advertiser, October 2.—A very full hall. His methods are based on sound principles. Though he has been singing for thirty years his voice was as fresh at the end of the evening as it was at the beginning.

Pontefract Express.—There should be a higher standard of singing at next year's competitions. For non-singers it was most enjoyable, for singers an education and a delight.

Pontefract Guide.—Our warmest thanks to the promoters for such a treat. Large numbers have expressed the highest appreciation of the admirably sustained programme.

It behoves our young vocalists to avoid the "vocal production" of certain foreign artists whom some of our critics are lauding. Though mentally artistic their physical work is a dreadful proposition, and means death to any voice.

Ease is the key-note to long life of the voice, not the tightness so prevalent among some of our foreign visitors. Think of Plançon, Manuel, and the like—what ease! What nasal resonance! What enunciation!

"How to acquire ease of voice-production," by Charles Tree (5s.).
(If difficult to obtain, write direct to author.)

Concerts, &c.: Address, 14, Courtfield Gardens, Kensington, S.W. 5

L.R.A.M. (PAPER WORK)

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,

Mus. Doc. (Lond.).

LATEST SUCCESSES:

5 at first attempt, September, 1920.

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

Tel. 3033.

A.R.C.M. (PAPER WORK)

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,

Mus. Doc. (Lond.).

LATEST SUCCESSES:

7 at first attempt, April, 1920.

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

Tel. 3033.

MUS. BAC. DEGREE.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING,

Mus. Doc. (Lond.).

SUCCESSES:

13 at first attempt in

"FIRST" AND "FINAL" MUS. B. AND MUS. D.

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

Tel. 3033.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (Lond.); L.R.A.M.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
- (2) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (3) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
- (4) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. Degrees.
- (5) Musical Appreciation.

For terms, lists of successes, &c., address—

48, Linden Road, Redland, Bristol.

Telephone: Bristol 3033.

THREE ARTS CLUB BUREAU.

CONCERT DIRECTION.

RELIABLE ARTISTS FOR ORATORIO AND BALLAD
CONCERTS.

19a, Marylebone Road, N.W. 1.

Mayfair 2000

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS CELIA DAVIES (SOPRANO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

54, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W. 1.

MISS GERTRUDE MACAULAY (CONTRALTO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

23, Hawley Place, London, W. 2.

JOHN MACLENNAN (TENOR VOCALIST).

Tele: Brixton 1702.

185, Loughborough Road, Brixton, S.W. 9.

MOUNTFORD SCOTT (TENOR).

Assistant Vicar-Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral.

44, Cranbrook Park, Wood Green, N. 22.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O.,

A.R.C.M. (Double Dip.), L.R.A.M. (Double Dip.), Class A.

COMPLETE TRAINING BY CORRESPONDENCE:—

Courses of "Singing Papers," "Form and Teaching," "Touch,"
and "Accompaniment"; also "The Art of Teaching."

Over 500 Successes at Exams.

"Recitative and its Rendering," 1/6. "The Singer's Vade Mecum," 6d.
Prospectus and particulars, 21, Boundary Rd., St. John's Wood, N.W. 5.

MISS FRANCES BUMFORD

(THE BRILLIANT SOPRANO).

Pupil Madame Albani and Jean de Reszke, of Paris

Open for Engagements, Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

Vacant dates, apply—

Mr. W. T. Llewellyn, 275, Gladstone Road, Barry.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

A.R.A.M. CONTRALTO.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W. 6. Tel.: Hampstead 5797.

MR. SAMUEL MASTERS

(TENOR).

Address: 164, Bank Buildings, Ewell Road, Surbiton.

EDWARD ROBINS

(TENOR).

Address: 40, Arthur Road, Holloway, N. 7.

RALPH WILLIAMS (L.R.A.M.)

(TENOR).

Lackham House, Osterley Park, W.

WILLIAM BARRAND

BASS (ETON COLLEGE).

Oratorio, Ballads, Lessons.

35, Ragstone Road, Slough; or usual Agents.

MR. HARRY BURLEY

(PRINCIPAL BASS LEEDS PARISH CHURCH).

ORATORIO, BALLADS, LESSONS, ETC.

Address: Grove Park Terrace, Harrogate; or, c/o Ramsdens, Park Row, Leeds.

HERBERT TRACEY

(BASS).

8, Cavendish Mansions, Clapton Square, E. 5. 'Phone: Gerrard 7255.

MRS. J. R. MAITLAND,

PIANIST, A.R.M.C.M.

ASSOCIATE MADRID CONSERVATOIRE OF MUSIC.

Pupil of Backhaus, Egon Petri, Dr. Walter Carroll, &c.

Buoni Method.

Lesson in advanced Pianoforte Technique and Interpretation at Wigmore Studios, 110, High Street, Marylebone, and
"Lusitania," Curzon Avenue, Beaconsfield, Bucks.

MR. AMBROSE COVIELLO

Associate and Professor of the Royal Academy of Music, is now
demobilised, and arranging times for Private Tuition in Pianoforte Playing and Teaching, at his studio, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore
Street, W. 1.

DOUGLAS STEVENS (L.R.A.M.)

(TEACHER) ELOCUTION.

"An elocutionist of marked ability and considerable range."— Morning Post.

Terms for Recitals or tuition from—

85, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C. 1.

Tel.: Museum 1785.

MEMORY —MISS LILIAS MACKINNON,

L.R.A.M., undertakes, by her method
to develop perfect musical memory. Course of Six Lessons, £3 3s.
Lessons by correspondence if desired. 21, Upper Cheyne Row, S.W. 3.

MUSICAL REVISER TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-FIVE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING.

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W.2.

*. The late Sir HUBERT PARRY kindly permitted his name to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O.; Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Prof. H. WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.D. and MUS.B. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities. Diplomas of F.L.C.M., L.Mus.L.C.M., A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O. (1916), and L.R.A.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes, "Honours," and Pass Certificates (of the Colleges of Music) to the number of eight hundred and eighty-five. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Composition by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.
Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

SINGING, PIANO-PLAYING, AND AURAL TRAINING. Dr. A. P. Alderson visits 60, Berners Street, W., every week for Private Lessons. Coaching also by Correspondence. 34, Knight's Park, Kingston-on-Thames.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-20 ... 160 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-20 ... 39 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., c/o FORSYTH BROS., Deansgate, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

SINGING AND VOICE-PRODUCTION. Miss Mary Brundrett, pupil of Mr. CHARLES TREE, visits Liverpool weekly. Communications c/o Messrs. Crane, Hanover Street, Liverpool.

DR. CROSSLEY.—Singing, Piano, Composition.
Special Coach for Degrees, &c. Lessons by Corresp. And at FORSYTH BROS., Manchester. Terms, &c., Radcliffe, Manchester.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by L. ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist. Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 380 Successes. 3, De Burgh Park, Banstead, Surrey.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W. 11.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc. Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations. Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.

Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W.3.

DR. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., F.E.I.S., Warden, Incorporated Guild of Church Musicians, gives LESSONS. Personally or by Post, in HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT. 158, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, W. 11.

DR. LEWIS' TEXT-BOOKS:

- HARMONY. (2 vols.) 5s. each, net.
COUNTERPOINT. 5s. net.
DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. 5s. net.
FUGUE. 1s. 6d. net.
ELEMENTS OF MUSIC. 2s. 6d. net.
DEVELOPMENT OF ANGLICAN CHURCH MUSIC. 2s. net.
PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.
DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.
MATERIAL OF MELODY. 3d. net.
IMPROVISATION. 1s. 6d. net.

The above, complete, will be forwarded (carriage paid) for £1 5s.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS PREPARES for L.R.A.M. and other Examinations. Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Lessons (oral or by correspondence). Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes, L.R.A.M., &c. Pianoforte Classes, 10, Matheson Rd., West Kensington.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W. 1.

DR. TAYLOR gives LESSONS by correspondence in all Musical Subjects, Elementary or Advanced. Diploma and Degree work. Manuscripts revised. Accompaniments written, &c., &c. Terms moderate. Portland Place, Lancaster.

L. R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.—TEACHING SINGING. Exams. Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition. Complete preparation. Pupil writes: "Your Course is excellent, and my singing work has greatly improved, thanks to your tuition.—A.F." Mr. W. Lee Webster, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teaching Singing), 22, Lucknow Avenue, Nottingham.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.

RECENT SUCCESSSES:

2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Pianoforte Teacher), A.T.C.L. (Pianoforte and Vocal Teacher). Registered Teacher (T.R.C.)—Correspondence Lessons, Theory, Harmony, Form, Art of Teaching, History, Interpretation. Successes at R.A.M. and T.C.L. Metropolitan Examinations. Compiler, Musical Terms (English first), Novello, 4d. Bawburgh Vicarage, Norwich.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

A Course of Five Lectures on "Some Obsolete Musical Instruments," will be delivered by SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., Mus. Doc., King Edward Professor of Music, at the University of London, South Kensington, S.W., at 5 p.m., on Wednesdays, November 3, December 1, 1920, February 2, March 2, and Friday, May 6, 1921. Admission free, by ticket, to be obtained from the Academic Department, University of London, South Kensington, S.W.7.

E. C. PERRY, Principal Officer.

DURHAM CATHEDRAL.

CHORISTERSHIPS.—Board, Lodging, Education, and Medical Attendance free. Candidates must have a good voice and correct ear, and should be between eight and eleven years of age. Education for the Public Schools. Apply to the Rev. The Precentor, The College, Durham.

REORGANIZATION OF CHOIR, St. Mary's, Charing Cross Road. Boys WANTED, 5s. per quarter. Also gentlemen (voluntary), light duties. Choral Eucharist every Sunday. Apply personally after any Sunday morning service, or by letter to the Organist, "Tapson," c/o 440, Strand.

TENOR required. £20 per ann. St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham. Write, stating age and experience, Dr. Shinn, 4, Sydenham Park, S.E. 26.

BASS WANTED.—Church in W.C. District. Moderate music, £10. Apply, R. W. Ready, "Valmar," Crichton Road, Carshalton.

CORPORATION Organist requires an Articled-Pupil or Assistant. Large four-manual Organ. Tuition for all examinations; choral and orchestral training included. Resident or non-resident. Salary £50 per annum, with possibility of securing Church appointment and private teaching. Apply "Organist," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LYNTON.—Organist and Choir-Trainer required. Apply, giving particulars of qualifications, references, and stating salary expected, Vicar, Lynton, North Devon.

ORGANIST REQUIRED for Brentwood Congregational Church. State age, qualifications, and salary. Hawkins, 64, Park Road, Brentwood, Essex.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED (Male or Female), for Larkhall Parish Church. Fine two-manual organ. Salary £50. Applications, with testimonials, to be lodged not later than Saturday, November 6, with John Paterson, "Claremont," Montgomery Street, Larkhall, from whom information regarding duties, &c., may be obtained.

CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED at the Camberwell Green Congregational Church. Apply by letter, stating qualifications, and salary required, to Mr. T. Duncan Bell, 66, Grove Park, Camberwell Grove, S.E. 5.

THE SINGER'S ART (just Published). By Agnes J. Larkcom. Price 2s. London: Novello & Company, Limited.

SINGING AND ELOCUTION connection for DISPOSAL, flourishing Yorkshire town. Splendid opening for lady vocalist (or would exchange for nucleus in or near London). Address: "Canta," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W. 1.

LADY PIANIST desires engagement as accompanist, preferably to strings. Good linguist, so could help singers in practice. Miss Hendery, 68, Petherton Road, Highbury, N. 5.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Redwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

STANDARDISED ORGANS (Pipe).—TWO-MANUALS and Pedals, as built to order, by Richardson's, specially to meet the requirements of the times. 100 to 500 guineas; in nine sizes. Entirely new introduction. These Organs are voiced and toned and adapted according to size, &c., of Church. Specifications and Estimates, W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

TWO-MANUAL ORGAN for SALE.—Fourteen Stops, hand and foot blower. Apply, School House, St. Margaret's Road, Plumstead Common, Kent.

ÆOLIAN PIPE ORGAN for SALE.—17 stops, 2 composition pedals, 116-note, double tracker board, two-manual. Carved black oak case. 10-ft. 6-in. high; 11-ft. broad; 7-ft. deep. Electrically driven. A most beautiful instrument. Can be seen by appointment. The present price of this instrument—which is very difficult to obtain—is £2,300. I will accept £1,700. W. Bowker, 125, Kings Road, Brighton.

GOOD ORGAN WANTED, for Church seating about 700. Full particulars, with specification and price, to Rev. Chas. Evans, Wesleyan Manse, Rushden.

FOR SALE.—"Alexandre" Harmonium. Suit fair-sized Church or Hall. Further particulars, address, "C.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

VIOLIN, by J. B. VUILLAUME, for Sale. Fine instrument. Good condition. For particulars apply, Major Cyril Wood, 8, Lambolle Road, Hampstead, N.W. 3.

A WELL-SEASONED, splendid tone 'CELLO, including Bow and Case. £15. "Cello," c/o Abbotts, 5, Eastcheap, E.C. 3.

FOR SALE.—VIOLIN. An. & H. Amati, in perfect condition. Guaranteed. Fine specimen. VIOLONCELLO, Francesco Ruggeri. A magnificent instrument. Guaranteed. Seen and tried by appointment. C. H. Curtis, 36, Cricklade Avenue, Streatham Hill, S.W. 16.

SATINWOOD GUITAR for Sale.—New condition. £4. Complete in leather case. Beautiful instrument. Miss Binstead, Mordiford, Hereford.

GOOD PIANOFORTE WANTED.—Leading make. Good condition imperative. Full particulars to E. W. Pocock, Solicitor, 45, Oakfield Street, Roath, Cardiff.

PIANO PEDALS with Organ Stool complete. Perfect condition. £15. 40, Vincent Street, Derby.

VIRGIL CLAVIER for SALE.—Excellent condition. £15. 50, Barry Road, East Dulwich.

£100 SINGING, £50 PIANO, Free Scholarships, Souvenir Cup, Cash Prizes, and Medals. Mr. CLIFTON COOKE'S OPEN COMPETITIONS for the trained and untrained, 6th and 13th November. Adjudicators: Singing—Miss KATIE THOMAS, F.R.A.M. Piano—Miss JOY SMITH, A.R.C.M. Entries close 2nd and 9th November. Prospectus from Secretary, 26M, Guilford Street, W.C. 1.

LYRIC AUTHOR is prepared to submit original MSS. to professional composers. Write, "Lyricus," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

CAROLS, Hymns, Anthems, &c., neatly duplicated from 4s. 6d. 100, post free. Samples 2d. stamp. Also copying, transposing, &c. Lowest prices. W. H. Ridd, 211, Station Road, King's Heath, Birmingham.

"THE BEAUTYSTONE," Savoy Opera (Sullivan). Wanted, Vocal Scores and Libretti. Condition immaterial if intact. Potts, 7, Gowan Terrace, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BASS VOCALISTS should buy descriptive Song, "THE VOICE OF THE DEEP" (Oakley). Compass: G (or low E flat) to E flat. Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover Street, W. 1.

EXPERT MUSICAL REVISION.

Reviser of long experience to publishing Company undertakes to revise MSS. and prepare them for publication.

Accompaniments written, orchestration and all branches of arranging. Lyrics set. No hackneyed melodies. Write, Walter Stewart, 46, Aldridge Road Villas, London, W. 11.

ST. LUKE'S, HAMPSTEAD, N.W. 3.

A SERIES OF ORGAN RECITALS will be given on SATURDAYS IN NOVEMBER, AT 5.30 P.M., BY MR. MATTHEW KINGSTON.

Special Programmes.
Willis Organ. Eminent Vocalists (to be announced).

GOOD VIOLINIST (ARTISTE)

REQUIRED FOR PALACE HOTEL, ABERDEEN
Classical and Modern Chamber Music played, as well as high-class Operatic Selections.

All communications to—

MR. JULIEN ROSETTI,
Leader and Musical Director, Palace Hotel, Aberdeen.

ORCHESTRAL PARTS REQUIRED.

(Second-hand.)

CLASSICAL AND MODERN—FOR AMATEUR ORCHESTRA PRINCIPALLY STRINGS.

Writes to "C. J.," Dagmar House, Hatfield, Herts.

THE TECHNIQUER

For ALL Instrumentalists.

Invented and Patented by MR. R. J. FITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of letter sent to Miss ETHEL COLLAR, L.R.A.M., of Deal, by T. HAIGH, Esq., Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., on being requested to take the chair at a Techniquer lecture demonstration.

"August, 1920.

"I leave for South Africa this morning and do not return till October. My Techniquer is already packed for use on the journey. You can tell the meeting that it has been round the world with me and I wouldn't leave it behind on any account. I find when giving recitals that a few minutes' use of it just before playing is a splendid 'Tonic' to the necessary muscles."

Send for full particulars and list of testimonials.

No earnest student should be without a Techniquer.

"Hand Development," post free, 7d. Set of 15 photos, 4s.
The Secretary, 33, Orchard Street, W. 1.

D.M.S.

STANDS for DIAL (compass) MUSIC SHORTHAND.

Composers, arrangers, and students save time and materials by drafting music on common paper. Easily learnt and transcribed.

Outlines, 1s. 2d.; Illustrated Supplement, 2s. 2d. Also —3— Short-hand for Harmony, 1s. 2d., post free.

A. SOUTHEY & Co., 146, FENCHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C. 3.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

"Orrisdale," 418, Chorley Old Road, Bolton.
DEAR SIRS,—I have opened many organs by various builders, but I wish to say this: That I have never played on a finer Pedal Board than the one which you make.

ARTHUR E. JONES, F.R.C.O., L.T.C.L.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments arranged.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W. 16.

COMPOSITIONS BY NOEL PONSONBY.

FIVE SHORT PIECES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. 2s.

"ARISE AND GIRD THEE FOR THE TASKS OF PEACE."

Unaccompanied Motet for Full Four-Part Choir. 3d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

(INSTITUTED 1872.)

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P.

Chairman of Board:

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

November 3rd, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concert.

November 8th, at 5 p.m.—Pianoforte Recital by Mr. CHARLTON KEITH.

November 10th, at 3 p.m.—Pianoforte and Vocal Recital by Mr. FRED. J. GOSTELOW and Mr. IVOR WARREN.

November 17th, at 3 p.m.—Recital of own Compositions (Pianoforte and Vocal) by Mr. JOSEPH SFEAIGHT.

November 24th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture Recital by Mr. DAWSON FREER, on "British Vocal Art," with Illustrations by the Lecturer and the College Choir, conducted by Mr. E. STANLEY ROPER, B.A., Mus. B.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Elocution. The lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student: pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

A Special Course of Training for Music Teachers has been instituted to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, and has been approved by the Council.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open also to sufficiently competent persons who are not College students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Cambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., Admission Cards to Concerts, and the Syllabuses of the Higher and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CYRIL SCOTT.

YOUNG HEARTS

(PIECES FOR CHILDREN).

Series I., 2s. 6d. net.

1. SEE-SAW.
2. LAMENT FOR A BROKEN DOLL.
3. MUSICAL BOX.
4. EVENING PRAYER.
5. QUICK MARCH.

Series II., 2s. 6d. net.

1. MARCH OF A TIN SOLDIER.
2. SUNDAY MORN.
3. CONCERTINA.
4. LONELINESS.
5. THE BOY WITH THE PIPES.

"To the enterprising teacher who takes his art seriously, and who is ambitious to keep his little pupils en rapport with modern thought, we can honestly recommend Cyril Scott's 'Young Hearts' Suite."—Musical Opinion.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W. 1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LIMITED.

USEFUL BOOKS

which every keen student of the violin should possess:

"ELEMENTS OF VIOLIN PLAYING," by PAUL STOEVIING. 6s. net.

"SECRET OF BEAUTIFUL TONE," by SASS. 9d.

"SOMETHING NEW ABOUT SEVCIK," by HAYES. 6d.

"VIOLIN TEXT-BOOK," by M. C. WICKINS. 9d.

"WHAT VIOLINISTS OUGHT TO KNOW," by PAUL STOEVIING. 9d.

LEAVES AND BLOSSOMS.

A collection of celebrated compositions by eminent masters arranged for violin with pianoforte accompaniment. Over two hundred numbers carefully edited and beautifully printed.

Price from 6d. each.

A New Work for the Violoncello.

Phantasy, for 'Cello and Piano ERIC FOGG
(BOSWORTH EDITION, No. 1031.)

A beautiful work in this eminent modern composer's inimitable style 5s. net.

THE SEVCIK VIOLIN METHOD.

The greatest and most interesting Method the world has ever produced.

Send for EXPLANATORY BOOKLET (gratis).

"Key to Sevcik's Works," by PAUL STOEVIING.

At any Music Sellers.

BOSWORTH & Co., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

Publishers of the Five Great Piano Methods: 'BERINGER'S TUTOR,' 'WARD'S PROGRESSIVE TUTOR,' 'HEMY'S TUTOR,' 'WICKINS' RAPID TUTOR,' GRAHAM P. MOORE'S 'FIRST PRINCIPLES.'

Publishers of 'SEVCIK'S VIOLIN METHOD,' 'BERINGER'S DAILY TECHNICAL STUDIES,' MACFARREN'S 'THE CHILD'S FIRST MUSIC LESSONS,' 'SEPPING'S TINY TUNES METHOD,' ETC.

This adaptation has been made by Sir Edward Elgar, O.M., at the request of the LEAGUE OF ARTS, to whom it is dedicated. It is specially intended for the performance at the Dedication of the Cenotaph and similar ceremonies throughout the country.

WITH PROUD THANKSGIVING CHORUS

BY

LAURENCE BINYON

AND

EDWARD ELGAR

Arranged from "For the Fallen" for S.A.T.B., with accompaniment for Military or Brass Band, or Organ or Pianoforte.

PRICE EIGHTPENCE.

Tonic Sol-fa, 6d.

Accompaniment for Military Band ... 9s. 6d.
Ditto for Brass Band ... 6s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

NOVEMBER 1 1920

EXTREMISTS versus THE REST

BY ERNEST NEWMAN

Matters have been shaping for some time in the musical world towards a test match between the little Franco-Russian-Italian group of musicians and critics in our midst and the rest of England; and now the great event is in full swing. Three things have brought affairs to a head—the concert of Stravinsky's later works that was given in London last summer, the Suite from Mr. Eric Fogg's Ballet 'The Golden Butterfly' (scenario by Mr. Leigh Henry), that was received with such laughter at Queen's Hall a few weeks ago, and finally Delius's trenchant article in the September number of the Sackbut. Mr. Fogg's Suite was only important as proving what many of us have been asserting for some time—that the Stravinsky idiom has lately tended to become a mere bundle of tricks that any musician of average skill could perform with the greatest ease. By that we did not mean, as some of the infuriated partisans of Stravinsky seemed to think we meant, that Stravinsky is a mere charlatan. We meant simply that Stravinsky's art, like that of all other artists, is made up of matter and manner; that, like all other artists, in his weaker moments he finds it easier to exploit an old manner than to invent new matter, and, once the trick of the manner has been caught, any ordinarily clever musician can give a colourable imitation of it. Our view was, in fact, that this idiom has now reached the academic stage, and it is as easy to turn out reach-me-down music in this style as it is in any of the styles of the past that have become academicised. In taking this view we were no more anti-Stravinsky than we are anti-Brahms, say, when we point out passages in this or that work of that great composer in which he has for the moment resorted to standardised devices of composition that any gifted student could manipulate as well as he.

It was no use, however, our taking the line that one can think rather little of a certain work of a composer and yet not be 'anti' that composer. The out-and-out Stravinsky partisans, themselves men of extreme views, could not conceive how other people could be men of moderate views. As we did not accept all the latest works of Stravinsky as plenary inspirations, it followed that we must be sworn foes of Stravinsky in everything. So it came about that there was war in heaven. As little of Stravinsky has been performed outside London, the ordinary lover of music must sometimes have longed for someone to tell him all about the war, and what we slew each other for.

The Editor of the Musical Times, who, like myself, claims to take the middle course in the controversy, has been good enough to suggest that I might try to state the whole case for the general reader, and persuade him, if possible, that the middle course is the sensible one. I have this disqualification for the task, that I am hardly likely to be accepted by the Stravinsky whole-hoggers as an impartial judge. As, however, they are the sort of people who would not accept anyone as a competent judge unless they knew to begin with that he was on their side, I shall make bold to pass them over and address my argument to the person who in the long run will have to decide this as he decides every other question—the ordinary plain sensible man.

What, then, is all the trouble about? The first stone, so far as this country is concerned, was thrown by a party more remarkable for numbers than for influence. It consists practically of Mr. Edwin Evans and Mr. Leigh Henry. On the other side, I believe, are most musicians of any standing.

What is it that has moved Delius to protest so strongly? He speaks of the 'present widespread cult of charlatanism and humbug in music,' and declares that 'the time has come when every musician of serious aims should declare . . . what is his attitude towards the current attempts on the part of Russian impresarios, Parisian decadents, and their press-agents, to degrade his art to the level of a side-show at a fair.' He protests against 'the devotees of "Dada" [the latest Parisian tomfoolery that calls itself a movement], sneering at the great masters of the past in the hope of attracting greater attention to the petit-maitres of the present.' He points out that no great art-work is made in a minute: it must be the work of serious men who reverence their art and devote the best years of their lives and the best faculties of their being to it. He does not believe that the great men of the past have been not merely equalled but superseded, as some partisans of certain living composers would have us believe. 'This is an age of anarchy in art; there is no authority, no standard, no sense of proportion. Anybody can do anything and call it "art," in the certain expectation of making a crowd of idiots stand and stare at him in gaping astonishment and admiration.' 'Great men must be denied and great achievements scoffed at in order that the little ones may become conspicuous. There must be a complete transvaluation of values. Art has been "serious" too long: now let us play the fool, in season and out of season; let us deny everything, turn all our values upside-down.' 'For the "latest fiction" public, Shakespeare is out of date and unreadable: for its musical counterpart, Bach is a fossil and Beethoven a mummy.' A certain section of critics is always after the stunt and the scoop; and as there are no stunts and no scoops to be got out of the composers of the past, whom everyone knows, resort is had to a few composers of the present who are not widely known, the hope being that the current ignorance of them will make it easier, in the language of the vulgar, to put the stunt over.

With almost all of this I am in agreement. I would dissent only from two articles of the indictment. I cannot follow Delius in his implied wholesale condemnation of the Russian Ballet; and I do not think the true explanation of the activities of certain journalists in England, France, and Italy is that they are deliberately working stunts for stunts' sake. I believe them to be in the main sincere. But sincerity may be a dangerous virtue in a man of limited vision: he thinks his little nostrum the panacea for all mankind, and will stop at nothing to force it down our throats. The trouble with these journalists is not their lack of sincerity, but their lack of breadth. There is also, as I have urged elsewhere, a little harmless vanity in the case. It is always flattering to our self-esteem to believe that we were the first to 'catch on' to a new thing. In these circumstances it is only natural that we should end in believing that the new thing is a good thing simply because we have become sponsors for it.

Now what is the point of contention between people like Mr. Edwin Evans and Mr. Leigh Henry and their colleagues in France and Italy and the rest of us musicians? It is not at all what they think it is. They always imagine we are denying a principle. We cannot get them to see that we accept the principle, but merely question the value of this or that work written in illustration of it. We all agree that both the forms and the spirit of art must change with each new stage in the culture of the race. They tell us that certain modes of procedure that were valid, or thought to be valid, in the composition of the past have little or no validity for the composition of to-day. We fully agree with them. Indeed, we knew it before they told us. They tell us that the modern mind cannot tolerate the padding, the remplissage of the past. Again we agree. They tell us that it is possible to construct modern music much in the way that some modern paintings are constructed—by the juxtaposition of values rather than by way of a coloured outline. Once more we agree; once more we politely beg leave to inform them, however, that we had thought these things out for ourselves long ago. Where we differ from them is in their belief that it is the method that matters. We hold that all that matters is the way a particular composer has applied the method in a particular work. The strictest conformity to the older forms does not necessarily make a great work of, say, a symphony by Macfarren. Nor does the most faithful following of the newer principles necessarily make a work of Stravinsky, say, great. Our quarrel with him over some of the works we heard at M. Ansermet's concert was not because we thought his method per se wrong, but because we thought these particular works were very feeble specimens of the method.

If we could only make our opponents see this, there might be some hope of a fruitful discussion.

But they cannot or will not see it. And I suspect the reason to be that harmless vanity to which I have already referred. They have come to regard themselves as a caste apart in music. They think the Muses have whispered secrets to them that have been withheld from the rest of us. It would be too dreadful a shock for them to have it once brought home to them that we can not only follow easily the music they think difficult, but can see it critically, which they cannot. Hence the deplorable figure that Mr. Evans cut in the recent controversy. No one used to write more sensibly about the new spirit than Mr. Evans: his article in the Musical Times of August, 1917 (based on some lectures of his) is the best summary of the new æsthetic problem that I have seen. It is true that the ideas were not absolutely Mr. Evans's own. They were none the worse for that. Mr. Evans was merely drawing up a précis of the creed of a certain international group, much as a secretary might draw up a précis of his firm's views on a particular matter; and the thing was extremely well done. But Mr. Evans has been nothing but a disappointment to us since the Ansermet concert. I myself suspect that his fidelity was somewhat strained by these works, but he dared not admit it, either to us or to himself. What we expected from him, and kept on vainly expecting, was a statement of just why he thought certain works remarkable that we found obvious. But he thought it more prudent to keep up the old pose that this, was an order of music that only a few select spirits here and there—himself being one of them—could hope to understand, and that we poor noodles were beaten by them as a dull schoolboy might be beaten by some problem in the higher mathematics. It was no use our telling him, in the plainest words we could command, that the music did not puzzle us in the least—that we followed it with perfect ease, but did not think the bulk of it worth making any fuss about. His reply was a marvellous theory of what might happen to us if the music of, say, China were to be suddenly dumped upon us; how hard it would be for us to adjust our old-fashioned notions to it, or it to them! After that I gave Mr. Evans up. If he is still merely attitudinising, I can only urge him, in the interests of his own critical reputation, to strike a new attitude: the place for the present one is the museum. If, on the other hand, he really believes what he says, if, for him, this music of Stravinsky's is as difficult to understand as the music of a race totally alien to us in culture and tradition would be, then, frankly, I do not think much of his musicianship; for to myself and others the music presents no more difficulties of comprehension than any other simple-minded music does. If, alternatively, he holds that it is quite easy to him and one or two others, but to the rest of us, people who have been soaked in every sort of music all our lives, it is a sealed book, then—well, in that case I can only say that self-flattery could not go further.

If we want the pure milk of the Stravinsky dogma, however, we must go not to Mr. Evans but to Mr. Leigh Henry. His is a curious mind, that apparently is quite insensitive to much of the great music of the world. He especially abhors Elgar, Beethoven, and Brahms: no one but a comic artist could do justice to that afternoon in Mr. Leigh Henry's life when, as he tells us, fleeing from one concert-room to escape the boredom of Handel and Brahms, he entered another only to find—Beethoven! For Mr. Henry, Elgar is vulgar, banal; Brahms's first Pianoforte Concerto is 'intolerably dull and utterly platitudinary'; Beethoven's seventh Symphony is 'bombastic and sententious'; and so on and so on. It is open to Mr. Henry, of course, to reply to this, 'You say you do not think much of certain music. How then can you deny me the right to think little of certain other music?' We do not deny him the right, however; we simply hazard the opinion that when most of the best musicians of the last fifty or a hundred years say one thing and Mr. Henry another, it is at least not improbable that it is Mr. Henry who is wrong. For we who disagree with him have this advantage over him, that whereas he is blind to the virtues of a great deal of the sort of music that we like, we are quite as appreciative as he is of a great deal of the sort of music that he likes. Our musical sense, we venture to think, is a little more comprehensive than his. We do not find a liking for Stravinsky or Bela Bartok incompatible with a liking for Cimarosa, the tender charm, grace, and wit of whose music have no more effect on Mr. Leigh Henry than a fairy-tale would have on a horse. Mr. Henry hears only the notes: they lead to no imaginative reaction in him. He reminds me of the gentleman in the poem:

Primroses by the river's brim
Dicotyledons were to him,
And they were nothing more.

Well, what is it that this gentleman of obviously limited imagination is storming polysyllabically at us about? He has a theory of what music should and what it should not be: it is the theory of his little Franco-Russian-Italian clan. Music should not be 'literary,' and it should not build itself up in the way the older symphony did. As this means scoring off the slate a great deal of the music that we think among the finest ever written, we are sorry we cannot oblige Mr. Henry to that extent. His courteous reply, of course, is that we who still think Beethoven and Brahms and Wagner and Strauss rather fine fellows are merely old women who ought to have died—or, at any rate, gone into a Musical Home of Rest—in August, 1914. He pictures us as hopeless Conservatives who know nothing of the newer music. To that I can only reply after the manner of Gibbon's answer to the critic who doubted whether the historian had read all the books he had mentioned in 'The Decline and Fall': 'If Mr. Leigh Henry will call some day when I am out, my servant shall show him the library.' As for the theory of the new music, Mr. Henry really has no need to argue with us. Unlike him, we do not worry in the least about theories; all we are concerned about is whether this or that work is a decent specimen of its own theory.

Mr. Henry imagines that he has to insist on the principle that music can now be written in a way different from the old. We agree; with the proviso that the Stravinsky way is still only one way among others. Let me quote Mr. Henry's own statement of what Stravinsky has been doing, or trying to do, in some of the works that were given at M. Ansermet's concert:

Here [in the 'Three Pieces for String Quartet'] Stravinsky breaks finally with the academic theories of instrumental writing. The old forms are entirely scrapped, with all their conventions: the stereotyped procedure of thematic development is replaced by a broad tonal design based on sound-colour quantities: the older contrast of 'masculine' and 'feminine' subject-matter is superseded by a decorative juxtaposition of instrumental colour, derived from a particularised observation of the individual timbre-qualities of each; and from this treatment each 'movement' of the 'Three Pieces' obtains a unity approximating to what one terms 'the balance of values in painting': the old unimaginative (sic!) symmetry of theme-repetition and response is laid aside.

There is nothing so startlingly new to us in all this as Mr. Henry imagines. We have been familiar with it for years in painting, and we have watched various attempts to practise it in music. It was natural that the growing impatience of all of us with roundabout processes should lead musicians to ask whether much of the once customary connective tissue of music could not be done away with, whether the lines of form could not be abstracted and simplified as they have been in painting, whether harmonies could not be pressed closer together, whether orchestral colour could not take over some of the functions formally allotted to line. As I have said already, we have an open mind for any new theory or method: all we ask is that the result shall be something more than an illustration of the theory,—that it shall be an art-work that justifies itself to our ears and our brain. We watch with respectful interest the experiments of the greater men, without always thinking the experiments a success. Schönberg has been trying for some years to take short cuts in harmony. We know that this has always been one of the ways in which new chords have come to be added to the harmonic vocabulary. But it does not necessarily follow that because the telescoping of some progressions has been justified by time that every piece of such telescoping will be justified. As 'Autolycus' pointed out in the October number of Musical Opinion, in a devastating reply to Mr. Leigh Henry, we may dispense with connective words up to a point with a real gain in concision and force, but it is easy to go beyond this point and become unintelligible. The fact that the artist is intelligible to himself is only half the battle: he has to make himself equally intelligible to mankind in general.

Here is a very mild specimen of Schönberg's later manner (the opening bars of the song 'In diesen Wintertagen,' Op. 14, No. 2):

Ex. 1. Moderato.

In die-sen Win-ter-ta-gen, nun sich das
Licht ver-hüllt, &c.

We can sympathise fully with his desire to make every chord a self-supporting entity, as it were, a collection of ruling chiefs standing shoulder to shoulder without any dilution of dependents, and at the same time we can say with confidence, after playing through the song many times, that it is not a work of art of any particular value. It interests us, but it does not bowl us over, does not make us gasp and wonder how such a vision of beauty could come to a man. We have the same feeling with regard to the four songs of Op. 22, from which I quote the opening bars of 'Seraphita.' (The melody is given to six clarinets, the harmonies to the muted 'celli divisi):

Ex. 2.
(♩ = 96-100.)

pp sf pp p pp &c.

The devotee of Schönberg may say, of course, that in twenty years this will be recognised as wonderful music, and we who think it mere experimentation will look very foolish. Well, we will risk it. If anything is wrong with us, however, it is with our taste. Any trained musician will scout the idea that this music is difficult to read, to follow, or to understand.

I insist upon this because of the quaint notion of people like Mr. Evans and Mr. Henry that we find it difficult to read, follow, or understand Stravinsky. On the contrary, we find him, in comparison with such a man as Schönberg, almost comically simple. Schönberg does at all events vary his expression, and keeps working his harmonies out with a sort of dogged logic over several pages at a time. The latest Stravinsky thinks only in snippets, and repeats the same childish devices till we are weary of them. Let us look at some of the specimens of the music that Mr. Evans imagines to be as incomprehensible to poor fellows like myself as Chinese music would be. It is no wonder that a boy of seventeen, like Mr. Fogg, can unconsciously parody the style, for it is all formulæ. It is all very well to talk of Stravinsky getting his balance by means of tonal quantities and values instead of by conventional symmetries, and of replacing 'the stereotyped procedure of thematic development' by 'a broad tonal design based on sound-colour quantities'; but really we expect something a little less infantile than this ('Berceuses du Chat,' No. 3):

Ex. 3.

Do-do, l'en-fant do, l'en-fant dor-mi-ra bien-tôt
Au-jour-d'hui le chat a... mis son bel hab-it gris, &c.

The bass moves about throughout the greater part of the little song in 4ths, and it all ends with this dazzling inspiration:

Nothing so encouraging to the young composer as these latest Stravinsky works has appeared for a long time: on these lines composition has at least been made so easy that no one need despair. All you have to do is to 'juxtapose tonal values' regardless of whether the juxtaposition talks sense or nonsense, wisdom or childishness. You will have to be cautious, of course. You must not go on too long, or people may find you out. For this reason it is best to follow Stravinsky's wise example. The four songs of the 'Berçuses du Chat' contain 59 bars in all; the four songs of 'Pribaoutki' 22, 20, 34, and 58 bars respectively; the first and last of the 'Three Pieces for Clarinet Solo' 30 and 61 bars (the second has no bar-divisions, but occupies eight lines). When you go beyond, say, fifteen bars you are running risks; so, regardless of what Mr. Leigh Henry, in his innocence, may say about the passé device of symmetry, achieve symmetry and length at the same time by the simple plan of repeating yourself. The thirty-six bars of the song 'Tilimbom' (No. 1 of the 'Trois Histoires pour Enfants') are occupied solely with thirty-six repetitions of a four-note figure. In the right hand, twenty-four bars are silent: the other twelve are devoted to repetitions of the same figure. Repeat yourself, in fact, to any extent; this sort of thing is forbidden only to the German classics: it is all right for a modern Franco-Russian. Above all, do not let Mr. Leigh Henry scare you off thematic symmetry. Make no attempt, of course, to work out a balance of design on a large scale. That method has two disadvantages: it is German, and it requires a certain amount of brains, a certain faculty for going on thinking consistently. But in your own primitive little way there is no objection to one bar balancing another thematically, as Stravinsky makes them do all through the 'Three Pieces for Clarinet Solo' and elsewhere.

The other devices are equally simple. Write out your little work, first of all, in plain, straightforward harmony. If it looks rather commonplace in that form, just put one section of the harmony out of tune with the other, and then keep hard at it all the while, in this style ('Berçuses du Chat,' No. 1):

Notice how the situation has been saved by putting the bass 5th on C sharp instead of on D, as an old-fashioned nincompoop like Brahms would have done.

Or you can jam alien notes together in this fashion ('Berçuses du Chat,' No. 2):

or this ('Pribaoutki,' No. 2):

or this ('Pribaoutki,' No. 3):

Any old notes will do; the great thing is to get them a little 'off' with each other. That will show people what a daring harmonic thinker you are.

As regards your vocal melody, you have the choice of two courses. You can write a succession of notes that mean nothing at all apart from the words (never mind what Mr. Leigh Henry may say as to the absurdity of making music depend on literary suggestions), or you can write in the Russian folk-song style. This latter method may be most strongly recommended because of its ease. But never forget to show your modernity by harmonizing even a child's folk-song just off the key, as thus (No. 3 of the 'Trois Histoires pour Enfants'):

And of course, having hit upon a simple little dodge of this sort, you must keep it going like an obsession. The bass of the last example, for instance, runs unchanged through the whole of the nineteen bars of the song. The art is all the more dazzling when you can hit upon a figure like this (No. 4 of 'Pribaoutki'):

EX. 10.

Et l'vieux a . . dit comme ça, au bos - su d' se and keep it up for no less than twenty-one bars.

Another safe stunt is to harmonize in 7ths instead of in 6ths, and to end without concluding, as thus ('Berçuses du Chat,' No. 4):

mon en - fant à moi en . . a un bien plus beau que . . ça.

THE END.

And whatever you have made up your mind to say, keep on saying it, especially if you can convey the impression of two impolite people talking at once, neither listening to what the other is saying ('Quatre Chants Russes,' No. 4):

EX. 12.

tr

PIANO.

tr

&c.

Finally, be very careful as to the literary ideas you set yourself to illustrate. Beware of touching normal humanity. Don't sing of men and women, of love and death, of the joy of life, or of any other matters in which foolish humanity is interested. For one thing, this is what the Germans do, and the first article of your creed must be contempt for most things German. In the second place, if you try this sort of thing you will invite comparisons with some of the big composers, and that may be awkward for you. The best way to prevent people from discovering that there is nothing at the bottom of your purse is to refuse loftily to turn it out. So affect a cheerful, cynical superiority to the ordinary human themes, and sing about such things as cats, ducks, sparrows, hares, goats, swans, geese, hens, and cookery.

It is all so absurdly easy that one wonders why more composers do not do it. They must be either too busy or too lazy.

All this may not seem at first sight like taking the middle course in the discussion. I think it is, however. We have no quarrel with Stravinsky. I personally would not say, as one inimical critic has said, that Stravinsky is merely a sort of superior Irving Berlin. I have always thought the composer of 'L'Oiseau de Feu,' 'Petrouchka,' certain songs, and certain parts of 'The Nightingale,' one of the most original geniuses the world of music has ever known.* Our quarrel is not with him, but with the journalists who try to force the whole of him down our throats indiscriminately. We do not even say that all these later works are worthless. Some of them have decided charm, though it is true that their charm largely depends upon tricks, and so is easily imitable. There is undeniable piquancy in some of Stravinsky's larking about with voices and instruments; but let us frankly call it larking about and have done with it. When Stravinsky writes 'Rag-time' we are invited to look upon it as one of the most marvellous works of the day, whereas it seems to us that any one of a hundred other composers could have done the thing equally well. Does it really take any prompting from heaven to play about with discords in this obvious way?

EX. 13.

p

f

col. 8va. throughout.

p

&c.

* I have not heard 'Le Sacre du Printemps.'

When Puccini does the same sort of thing in his representation of an out-of-tune old barrel-organ in 'Il Tabarro':

Ex. 14.

Ex. 15.

we take it for what it is—a jeu d'esprit requiring no particular genius. It is only when Stravinsky and his school do the obvious thing that we are supposed to go blind with admiration for it.

Let us then make one thing clear. We are not against any composer merely because he is doing new things. We merely claim to distinguish between the new things that exhibit genius and the new things that do not. And we object to having the latter stuffed down our throats by a few journalists who have never shown the slightest ability to discriminate between the first-rate and the third-rate music of their own adoration. Mr. Leigh Henry, for instance, is an admirer of Alfredo Casella. I myself regard Casella as one of the brightest musical intelligences of the day, and an incomparable parodist; but as a composer I should say he belongs to the large number of people who want to but can't. Test him by some of the pieces of his that Mr. Henry quoted from with approval in a recent article on him. This is from his 'Inezio':

Ex. 16.

Andante molto moderato.

and this from No. 1 of his 'Pupazetti':

Ex. 17.

Allegro molto vivace, quasi presto.

Is there a student in any of our conservatoires who could not turn out this sort of thing by the ream? Mr. Henry thinks that this music 'possesses a peculiar richness of texture, created not by elaboration but by a kind of tonal-colour-synthesis, sometimes concentrated throughout, sometimes concentrated by degrees, by successively superimposed motives.' For Mr. Leigh Henry, seemingly, it is enough that a piece of music is written in a certain style; if the rules of the school are complied with, the quality of the thinking is a secondary consideration.

This is what we have been accustomed to call academicism. Mr. Leigh Henry and his associates, in fact, are the new academics, the High Priests of the Obvious. And it is because we others object to academicism of any sort, to the new as well as the old, that we cannot accept a particular piece of work as being excellent merely because it comes out of a particular school. We are all looking forward to Stravinsky giving us a big work that shall be as fine as the big works of his past. But the small works of the last few years we can regard only as a mixture of good fun, poor fun, experiment, occasional inspiration, and negligible triviality—in any case, as mere studies, mere pages from a sketch-book.

Mr. Evans, indeed, surmised as much at the end of one of his articles. But he had previously taken these sketches with a portentous gravity that to me was wholly comic. And it was when coming out from the concert of these mere sketches that Mr. Eugène Goossens, jun., remarked to Mr. Leigh Henry that this was 'the finest thing, the only thing, comparatively, in the whole past season'! For Mr. Leigh Henry they were 'the greatest musical event' at which he had been present for six years! Can they wonder that we wonder at the ease with which they are satisfied?

The Royal College of Music memorial to Sir Hubert Parry will be discussed at a meeting in the Concert Hall of the College on November 18, at 5.30 p.m. The meeting is open to past and present members, and all who have been connected with the College since May, 1883. Meanwhile suggestions as to the memorial are invited, and should be sent to the hon. secretary of the Memorial Committee, Miss Emily Daymond, 17, Kensington Square, W.8.

SOME NEW SCALES AND CHORDS

BY H. WALFORD DAVIES.

The Editor has asked me to enlarge on Mr. Kalisch's short and interesting note in the October Musical Times, on my paper to the British Association dealing with what may be called euphonic scales. Such scales, based on the so-called perfect euphonies (4th, 5th, and octave) seem to lie inherently at the back of folk-music. Less obviously they seem also to play a great part in more complex modern music; and since new chords and scales are in any case more than usually significant to music-lovers of to-day, I should be very happy to respond to Mr. Kalisch's suggestion, and to attend any meeting of musicians which he or any one may care to suggest, still better to convene, in order to try and tell them what little I know about this important subject, and perhaps induce others to tell more.

In our present system I have found that between the plain sounding of any note with its octave and the complex sounding of all twelve notes of the chromatic scale together, there are 2,047 possible soundings of groups of notes, ranging from the ordinary two-note groups (which we call intervals) to eleven-note groups, which could be chords but at present can only be called scales of sorts, having but a limited significance and affording limited joy to present-day listeners. Some of the many five-note, six-note, and seven-note groups will be found to sound charmingly new, others have long ago become familiar (in certain extended formations), having been used as chords of climax by Wagner and others in the accepted diatonic system. As an example taken at random, I remember the vivid ecstasy (thirty years ago) of first hearing the following group of notes:

used as a splendid chord of climax at the end of 'The Barber of Bagdad' (Cornelius), but in a strict key-scheme of F sharp major it was no other than our old friend the so-called 'dominant major 13th.' Of course, its possible uses in other and more subtle ways are legion, and only now begin to be apparent.

Perhaps an explanation of the word 'sounding,' as used here, is needed. It is taken, for want of a better word, to mean any group of notes thought of as a whole, however they may be presented to the ear. It therefore includes many terms applied to various groups of notes, such as interval (melodic or harmonic), chord, spread chord, arpeggio, broken chord, scale, phrase, &c. And here it should be specially noted that a sounding which can only be taken in instantly as one chord by an alert and practised mind, may yet be gradually assimilated by the veriest beginner. If it be slowly and methodically spread before the ear in single notes or in such lesser groupings as a beginner's mind can grasp, it becomes more and more easy to take in as a whole.

New soundings by Schönberg, Scriabin, and very many others, whether used only experimentally or with masterly certitude, are now daily bewildering or pleasing us. But whether they bewilder or please (or first do one, then the other), these new relations must interest every alive music-lover. They are of moment, for example, to Church musicians as much as to our friends the operatics and the orchestral tone-poets. It would be a lovely thing to any of us to gain immediate mental mastery over the vast new harmonic riches now to be had for the asking, and (so far as they fit into and enrich the language) to learn to use them with courage, keenness, consistent relevance, and good sense. As the chord-vocabulary of the 16th century stands to that of the 18th, so stands the 18th to that of the 20th. As is the lucid mastery of resource attained by minds like Palestrina's to that attained by Bach, so must Bach's work be to the best achievements of the man (or is it to be the group of men?) now due.

For those who have explored or would like to explore the subject in detail for themselves, I will venture to add a word about the particular example of derived scales quoted by Mr. Kalisch, and about two others.

I.—THE AUGMENTED TRIAD SCALE

The scale quoted by him is derived from the chord:

by measuring the three so-called perfect intervals (4th, 5th, and 8ve) from its component notes:

and by compounding these into close position within one octave:

Perhaps the chief interest of this scale lies not so much in its characteristic order of tones and semitones as in the positively mystic array of common chords and augmented and diminished triads which it contains. To quote only its common chords and those merely haphazard, in catalogue order (so to speak), starting from the lowest note of the scale and working upwards, let the reader play the following softly, with pedal for each chord, and very slightly spread if he desires:

These are all possible common chords within the scale. (The first three major chords are here repeated at the end merely to round off the list agreeably to the mind.) Now if the above list be played in arpeggio style as follows:

its possibilities (as a basis for harmonic enterprise as well as for purely expressive purposes) become gradually obvious. They are indeed vast. But the learning ear need not be baffled by them, and the knowing ear will scarcely be bored by them. The following, for example, is a commonplace strain built on this scale:

Its character, both as to melody and harmony, will perhaps not be instantly obvious, familiar as is its style and diction to the ordinary musical mind. Many such passages should be made, consistently within this or any given scale, and many times repeated till their consistency and significance are clear. Then a whole new vein of expressiveness enters the finger-tips of any quick player who has taken the trouble to master the group (or sounding), and he can pass on to another.

2.—THE DIMINISHED TRIAD SCALE

The scale derived by the same process of measurement from any given diminished triad:

comes out as follows:

and the common major and minor chords which can be sounded within that scale are then ten:

Comparing this group with the previous example, it is noteworthy that there are three diminished triads possible in each of the two scales; that there are no chords of the diminished 7th in either (this characteristic alone would give them distinction among the semi-chromatic scales); that there are three possible soundings of the familiar dominant 7th in each scale; that whereas the first is rich in augmented triads on every one of its nine degrees, the second has only this augmented triad:

in its three positions.

3.—A SIX-NOTE SOUNDING

The following is one of the most entrancingly interesting six-note soundings:

compounded of the following six common chords:

As a scale or arpeggio, whichever it may be, it is piquant, very clear, and very useful, as e.g. :

If many others of the 2,049 possibilities be carefully studied, the student is led to the stimulating reflection that chords and scales are lasting things. They are there in nature, waiting to be found, appreciated, and used—greatly to the enrichment of musical life and experience. They are imperishable because there is nothing in them to perish. As the ratio 1 : 2 could not be imagined to cease in the created universe with the departure of a man's mind should it perish, so no chords or other orderly soundings (in the sense used above) can ever die. They only pass unheeded—to the possible loss of the heedless.

It is well to remember that mathematics does not make music. Just as the completest knowledge of syntax will not make a poet, so not the most exhaustive tables of chords and scales nor the knowledge of them can bring to birth a single good new tune. Technique never yet made fantasy; on the contrary, fantasy makes its own technique. Yet is not imagination daily hampered by lack of mastery of material? And there seem to be periods when knowledge crawls too far behind. Great harmonic renewals seem at this moment due or overdue. Old threadbare harmonies are still being tricked out with syncopations, over-coloured robes and other devices perhaps to cover their nakedness. In rag-time it was not the 'rag' that bored us to desolation; on the contrary, it was the poor old shred of a conventional musical sentence that was being tricked out and ragged just because it was so appallingly worn out. We are in the position of harmonic builders pre-eminently to-day, as they were in the early 17th century, but with a vastly greater task ahead, and a vastly greater heritage behind us. It is not necessary to scrap the minor and major scales; we need only to realise that they are two out of exactly four hundred and sixty-two seven-note soundings, not one of which is without its significance, not one without its serviceability to a master-builder, though probably no other two are more worth future composers' attention than the two upon which Bach built his 'Forty-eight,' Beethoven his 'Nine,' and Wagner his 'Ring.' Let us take out of our treasure things new and old, since all real musicians necessarily become 'disciples of the Kingdom.'

JENNY LIND AND THE R.C.M.

The following memorandum, now printed for the first time, was sent by Jenny Lind to Sir George Grove on being asked by King Edward (then Prince of Wales) to accept the Head Professorship for female singing students at the Royal College of Music. 'If I am not appointed,' she added in a covering letter, 'you will treat this as private.' As our readers know, she was appointed, and held the post until 1886, the year before her death.

August, 1882.

'I understand that at the Royal College of Music it is intended to train two kinds of pupils—Foundationers and Paying Pupils. At present I propose dealing with the former, whom I shall call Foundationers, irrespective of whether they will become entitled to the proposed fuller benefits of training and boarding, or of training only.

'(1.) I assume that such Foundationers will be elected in open competition, and will be qualified by talent, and (in the case of vocalists more particularly) also by a healthy constitution in addition to a promising voice.

'(2.) Supposing that my terms in the letter accompanying this Memorandum are found to be acceptable, I shall be prepared to teach of such Foundationers classes of three (3) in one hour, each class twice a week. It being understood :

- (a.) That I adopt class-teaching ;
- (b.) That the grouping of the pupils in each class depends upon myself ;
- (c.) That the above-named two hours a week for each class constitute the minimum of time required, and that subsequently, according to circumstances, an increase of time for tuition may be requisite.

'Upon this footing the maximum of time I should be able personally to devote to the said class-teaching would be four days a week, three (3) hours each of the four days. Consequently as a maximum I would teach 18 pupils in six classes.

'(3.) For my own classes I would naturally claim the right of selection and the power of rejection of pupils on the Foundation, but as Head Professor of this (Female) Department, I shall also require a veto on the admission at all of unqualified or untalented pupils (Foundationers) into any of the other classes of this Department, and I take this opportunity to state that a Female Foundationer elected should, as a rule, not begin the study of singing before the age of seventeen to eighteen, and not later than from twenty-two to twenty-three.

‘(4.) I beg leave to state what I consider essential for the training of a vocalist Foundationer, in addition to her principal singing study :

- (i.) Sol-faing properly classed and under the control of the head professor ;
- (ii.) Pianoforte and musical harmony ;
- (iii.) { (a) English (pure enunciation, poetry, &c.) ;
(b) Declamation ;
- (iv.) One foreign language at least ; and, as in course of time instruction in one or other of the above-named subjects can be lessened or replaced by—
- (v.) Concerted vocal music ;
- (vi.) Deportment, &c.

‘In urging these subjects of study, and in the order in which they are named, I have taken for granted that the Institution will be in a position to allow what is deemed requisite for the training of the Foundationers. I have consequently been guided by what I believe to be the receptive capacity of young students, and have not lost sight of the difficulty of classing the various students for the different subjects, so as to allow them proper time for private study and needful rest. And, it should perhaps be added here, that the subjects of training which I have named above embrace the education of a vocalist generally, while the Stage has its additional requirements.

‘(5.) I assume the College to be in a position to exercise control over the persons elected Foundationers, as to the term of years they should remain in the Institution (subject of course to their proving themselves worthy of its privileges). And while I do not presume to propose anything definite or precise, I can but consider three years to be the minimum of time necessary for the training of a vocalist on the Foundation, while a term of from four to five years would be desirable—nay, requisite.

‘(6.) During my possible connection with the Royal College of Music the female vocalist Foundationers admitted to the Institution will probably exceed in number the pupils I can have in my own classes. Additional professors will then have to be appointed to teach them: in which event I have no doubt that the Council, in order to ensure unity in the teaching in my Department, will grant me a voice in the appointment of these masters, and, in case any responsibility remained attaching to me for the teaching of such pupils, also the power of inspecting their classes. At the same time I should be willing, if it were found practicable, and subject of course to limits to be agreed upon, to admit of these students as listeners into my own classes, as is the custom in some foreign conservatoires.

‘(7.) I would now refer to paying pupils. As it will be necessary from the outset to make provision for the teaching of this branch of the female singing Department, I venture to suggest the appointment of another Head Professor, to take the entire charge of it ; and I do so as a matter of duty, having regard both to the possible numbers of the paying pupils, as also to the responsibility and labour I am undertaking in respect of the Foundationers as set forth in the previous paragraphs, a responsibility already sufficiently serious in proportion to my health and strength.

‘(8.) In conclusion—If from circumstances which at the present time it is impossible to judge of, it should be thought desirable that I should hold a conference or class for singing teachers of my own Department, or even of others not so connected, I shall be quite prepared to do so ; and I am not without hope that thus, in a measure, the genuine Italian method of singing may be preserved—a method which I, by long experience, have been taught to consider the only one capable of developing to the utmost the powers of the human voice, thereby enabling it to become the free and unfettered interpreter of soul and mind.

‘(Signed) JENNY LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT.’

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

(Continued from October number, page 675)

BY HARVEY GRACE

III.—‘THE LITTLE ORGAN BOOK’—(contd.)

Thanks to the old theorists who, for want of something better to do, wrote all sorts of ingenious canons that had no more relation to music than acrostics have to poetry, the canon form is still regarded as little more than a scientific device. The reader who doubts this is advised to read the article on the subject in ‘Grove,’ and the second half of Prout’s ‘Double Counterpoint and Canon.’ In both he will find the minimum of reference to the expressive possibilities of the form. Yet modern as well as old music gives us ample proof of this expressive power. I need mention only one modern example—a very striking one, and now, happily, familiar—Franck’s Symphony. Nobody can hear the canonic portions of the first and last movements without being aware that the result of the device is an increase in the emotional intensity. In the first movement the canonic treatment accentuates the feeling of struggle ; in the Finale it induces a kind of headlong impetuosity that makes the splendid, joyous theme more exultant than ever.

Apart from this intensifying power, of course, a good canon pleases both mind and ear by the ease with which it overcomes a technical problem. These things being so, we need not be surprised to find that the canonic preludes in the ‘Little Organ Book’ are among the most striking in the set. There are eight of them,* and in variety both of method and expression they are remarkable. In the first of the Advent pieces ('Gottes Sohn ist kommen') we have a canon in the octave between treble and tenor, with two free parts, one entirely in crotchets and one in quavers. The tenor is played by the pedals with an 8-ft. trumpet against an 8-ft. principal on the manual. These directions are by Bach. The Novello edition suggests the playing of the left-hand part on a second manual with a 16-ft. stop as well—an effective arrangement. There is a delightful flow about this piece when played with the quietly-festive pace demanded. (The direction Andante perhaps implies too deliberate a movement.) As examples of Bach's freedom, note that the first four of the six pedal phrases end on a discord. Here is the close of the first, the pedal part being written in the tenor in order to show the harmony at a glance:

* Spitta makes the number nine by including ‘Herr Jesu Christ, dich zu uns wend,’ which is an example of free canonic imitation rather than a real canon.

The alto part has to keep moving in a somewhat narrow field at times, but there is no sense of monotony when the piece is properly registered, because the centre of interest is so plainly the chorale, especially the tenor version.

Coming to the Christmas section, we find the same method employed in the piece on 'In dulci júbilo.' This is easily one of the best of all Bach's chorale preludes, on the score of both skill and effect. Not only have we a canon in the octave between treble and tenor, but the two free parts are also in canon during the first half of the movement. The result of this double allowance of ingenuity is not a pedantic essay, but a piece of singular brightness. The writing shows a great advance on that in the prelude mentioned above. There is far more enterprise and freedom in the accompanying voices, and Bach is never at a loss. The gaiety and grace suggest Mozart's canonic writing at its best. Editions vary considerably in their laying-out of this piece. In some cases the editors have retained the original position of the pedal part, which involves an F sharp above the stave—a note found on few English organs.

In the Mendelssohn autograph the pedal stop is marked 8-ft. The Novello edition, in giving the pedal part an octave lower, retains the original effect by indicating a 4-ft. stop. As a rule, the manual parts are given to one keyboard. The Novello edition suggests two, but the arrangement—effective as it is in showing the canonic working of the alto and (real) bass—is hardly practicable, as it calls for some stretches that few hands will be able to manage.*

It is a question whether the simultaneous use of three notes against two was intended by Bach. Notation in those days was an approximate affair in many respects.† For this reason, Naumann's treatment of the repeated notes in the Breitkopf & Härtel edition is probably justified. It certainly makes the whole piece brighter rhythmically, besides being far easier to play. Here are a few specimen bars from the Novello, and the Breitkopf & Härtel editions. The player who wishes to adopt the latter reading can easily do so by playing on one manual throughout, and changing repeated crotchets into alternate crotchets and quavers:

Ex. 2a. Man. I.

Ex. 2b.

* In Book xiii. of the Novello edition it is laid out for one manual, besides being rather more conveniently arranged in other respects. In last month's Musical Times I stated that Books xiii. and xiv. 'are now superseded, their contents appearing in the later books.' I find that this is only partly true, as xiii. and xiv. contain several preludes that are not included in the other volumes. Moreover, even in the case of duplicated pieces, the editing and arrangement are often different.

† The work under notice provides us with a good example. For the triplets Bach writes quavers instead of the crotchets called for by the minim unit.

The last two bars are most conveniently played thus:

It is unfortunate that this prelude—perhaps the most engaging little organ-piece Bach ever wrote—should suffer from being set forth usually in a form that makes it appear forbiddingly difficult. It is far from easy as laid out by Naumann, but the player is encouraged by being met half-way, as well as by the clearness of the appeal to the eye.

Among the Passiontide preludes are four canons of great interest and effect. That on 'O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig' sets out like a double canon, but after the first few bars resolves itself into a canon at the fifth above between tenor (pedal 8-ft.) and alto. The free parts are beautiful examples of the long-drawn sinuous melodies of which Bach seemed to have an inexhaustible supply. Here, as in the canons already discussed, we find the phrases of the chorale usually ending on a discord. Even the final cadence has an element of surprise owing to the keynote F with which the leading voice ends being taken as the third of the relative minor, and sustained while the second voice and the free parts effect a plagal cadence:

Ex. 4. (Tenor prominent.)

Adagio.

The tiny piece on 'Christe, du Lamm Gottes' is a canon at the twelfth above between tenor and treble. The tune however is almost lost sight of, the ear being occupied with the scale-passage of six notes with which the three free parts are occupied. This sixteen bar prelude is likely to be passed over, partly on account of its brevity, and perhaps even more because of its passing-note roughness. On acquaintance it gets hold of one in a curious way. Not often is so much suggested in so small a space.

Its successor, 'Christus, der uns selig macht' is even more discordant. Bach evidently had in mind the second half of the text:

See the sinless Son of God
Shameful mockings bearing,
Bitter taunts, a cruel rod,
Doom of sinners sharing.

Again we have a feint at a double canon, but after the first few bars the imitation between the free parts is fragmentary. The chromatic scale-figure with which Bach so often accompanies reference to the Crucifixion is a powerful factor throughout. This is one of the most relentlessly discordant pieces in all Bach. In order to bring out its almost savage quality it should be played ff with a very powerful pedal reed, and at a pace so deliberate that none of its asperities are smoothed over.

The prelude on 'Hilf Gott, das mir's gelinge' is a puzzle at first sight. It is a canon at the fifth below between treble and alto, with a tenor part in semiquaver triplets which run cheerfully hither and thither over three octaves, and a bass hardly less enterprising though slower of gait. Why this animation—even gaiety—in a Passiontide prelude? If we look at the hymn we see that Bach, ever susceptible to words, evidently seized on 'frolich' and 'singen.' The result is a piece of great charm and originality, though these qualities are somewhat at the mercy of the registration. The flowing tenor part must be played with stops sufficiently telling to be distinct in the lower notes, but not over-prominent in the higher. The best plan will perhaps be a light 8-ft. and 4-ft. on the Swell or enclosed Choir, with the box slightly open when the part is low and closed as it rises above the chorale.

Of the two remaining canons that on 'Erschienen ist der herrliche Tag' was quoted in our last chapter, and the one on 'Liebster Jesu' is a straightforward little piece that calls for no comment.

The student who feels disposed to join in the popular cry of 'down with rules' will do well to give his mind to these eight canons for a space. Let him learn to play them fluently (they are far from easy) with a well schemed registration and with the text of the hymn at the back of his mind, and he will see that the most stringent rules, so far from hampering a composer's delivery, may even make it more striking. But of course the composer must have something to deliver.

As a general principle in registering these eight preludes we should avoid over-insistence on the canon. The cantus firmus should be prominent, with the imitation as a kind of shadow thrown against the free parts. As Schweitzer says, 'the piece is not there for the sake of the canon, but the canon for the sake of the piece.'

The examples of ground bass need not detain us long. Bach's use of the device in the 'Little Organ Book' is so free that we may regard it merely as a development of the descriptive-motive idea.

In our last chapter we saw something of the kind in the preludes on 'Durch Adam's Fall' and 'Erstanden ist der heil'ge Christ.' Composers from a very early date must have realised that the ground bass held considerable dramatic possibilities. They began writing variations over a bass as exercises in skill, finding a repeated bass a very easy way of obtaining the homogeneity that so often escaped them at other times. But it must soon have become obvious that given a really significant bass the form might become a powerful medium for expression. The short step to a descriptive bass was easily taken, and there resulted a form which is very much in favour with modern composers, though of course it is now amplified in countless ways. It is a long road from some of the examples in the 'Little Organ Book' to Elgar's 'Carillon,' but the road is plain.

Perhaps the finest specimen is the prelude on 'Heut triumphiret Gottes Sohn.' The pedal part consists of a five-fold delivery of this vigorous theme:

with a kind of Coda under the final Alleluia of the chorale. The figure is modified slightly at each appearance, and is used in various keys. It is no doubt suggestive of trampling death under foot, or (as some commentators think) of treading the wine-press—a biblical expression used in a good many Passiontide and Easter hymns. In support of the latter view it is worth noting that in the Cantata 'God goeth up,' a reference to the wine-press is accompanied by a figure very similar to the first portion of Ex. 5.

In 'Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ,' we have this figure as a pedal ostinato:

But perhaps the most picturesque bass is that of 'In dir ist Freude,' a hymn for New Year's Day:

In Thee is gladness
Amid all sadness,
Jesu, Sunshine of my heart!

The pedals deliver the theme:

nineteen times, besides making a few references to the chorale melody.

There is good ground for Pirro's suggestion that Bach played this motive with a 4-ft. glockenspiel added to the ordinary registration. This delightfully naive piece is usually marked to be played with loud and heavy stops, but I venture to suggest that a light scheme is better. The writing for the left hand suggests the earlier methods of Bach in making excursions to the bottom of the keyboard, sometimes hanging round the pedal part, with heavy effect when loud stops are used. Here is a plan that will be found effective on most organs. A rather soft Great (8-ft. flute or stopped diapason) coupled to Swell, very soft 2-ft. (no 4-ft. stops). Box closed most of the time or opened so slightly that the 2-ft. is never more than a kind of delicate tingle. Pedal coupled to Great, with soft 8-ft. and 16-ft., and the Choir clarinet coupled for the ostinato only. The pace should be quick. The whole movement then suggests bells, not only by means of the registration, but also because of the manual scale-passages and the constantly-repeated:

of the chorale melody. The shakes at the end, which are irritating when the piece is played rather slowly and loudly, become delightful under this light treatment. This prelude is a fine technical study, played at a good speed.

Of the remaining ground basses, mention need be made of one only—that of 'Puer natus in Bethlehem.' It is surmised that Bach meant it to depict the bowings of the Magi as they advanced to the cradle.

If this is so, its appeal is to the eye rather than to the ear:

An alternative suggestion is that the piece is a lullaby, the bass representing a rocking of the cradle, but the character of the music as a whole does not support this view.

Another prelude on which opinions differ as to the poetic intent is that on 'Herr Gott, nun schleuss den Himmel auf' ('Lord God, now open wide Thy heaven'). The text is a kind of deathbed meditation. Some authorities say that the pedal part represents a knocking at the door of Heaven; others, that it figures the weary steps of the pilgrims; yet others, that the continuous and rolling left-hand passage is descriptive of the sick man's suffering. The main point, surely, is that the combination of the two supply an urgently-expressive undercurrent to the melody. This is one of the most beautiful works in the set, and makes a wide appeal without regard to any programme. The finish and consistency of the writing are alike remarkable. Here is the first phrase:

Ex. 10. Allegretto.
Man. I.

The remainder of the preludes in the 'Little Organ Book' fall roughly into two groups. In one the chorale is developed into a long-drawn florid melody, in the other and far larger group we find the tune stated with little or no embellishment against a polyphonic background of a more or less descriptive character. Of the three pieces of the former type one, 'O Mensch, bewein,' is well known and calls for no comment beyond a remark as to the importance of playing it very slowly. The little piece on 'Das alte Jahr vergangen ist' ('The old year is dying') is perhaps even more expressive, owing to the poignancy of its harmony and a certain broken character in its utterance brought about by the occasional resting of the under voices. Note here that Bach does not reproduce the sentiment of the hymn, which is one of thankfulness for preservation during the past year. He was captured by the first line, and never got beyond the word 'vergangen.' The third prelude of the arabesque type, that on 'Wenn wir in höchsten Nöthen sein' ('When we are in deepest need'), is so simple and diatonic that a casual playing over leaves one with an impression that there is nothing in it. Its really touching character is revealed only on full acquaintance. Observe too that the three simple supporting parts carry out the idea of the text by being based on the opening phrase of the melody. All these three pieces have their florid melodic line made still more elaborate by numerous ornaments. At the risk of being called a vandal I suggest that the ornaments may well be omitted. They belong to the clavier rather than to the organ, and they add a great deal to the technical difficulty without contributing anything notable on the expressive side. On the contrary, in some cases they induce a trivial and showy effect. Moreover they are as a whole obsolete, and they are apt to give an antiquated effect to music which is still vital. The most we can safely do is to make use of a judicious selection. After all, such things were always more or less ad libitum, so that in omitting some of them we are doing no more than exercising a traditional right of choice.

The preludes with the melody delivered plainly in the treble as a rule speak for themselves.

Among the more pictorial examples attention may be drawn to two in which scale-passages are employed to suggest flight. In 'Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar' ('From heaven came the angel host') the angelic flight is represented by rapid scale-passages in the inner parts and by a slower one in the bass. This piece can hardly be played too rapidly. Turning to the hymn for the dying 'Ach wie nichtig, ach wie flüchtig' ('O how cheating, O how fleeting') we find this very different kind of flight expressed also by two inner voices moving scalewise. But here the pedal part is significant in quite another way. Its short three-note motives, ending in every case with a falling octave, seem to be quietly insisting on the words 'wie nichtig.'

Many of the preludes, especially those in which the expression is general rather than particular, lend themselves to several methods of performance. Perhaps the finest piece of polyphony in the book is the prelude on 'Christ wir sollen loben schon,' in which the chorale melody is in the alto, slightly ornamented and surrounded by three parts full of interest. This piece may be played very softly or very loudly with equally good effect, provided the pace be so moderate as to give the splendid counterpoint full scope. But probably few will be tempted to play it fast. The texture is something to linger over, and all sorts of interesting things happen on the way. The pedal part is worth looking at alone for its insistent rhythm and its wide sweep. The prelude on 'Jesu, meine Freude' may be played effectively in three ways. It is well suited with a big mass of diapason tone, or by soft expressive stops. Best of all, however, is the playing of the beautiful tenor on a separate manual with a stop of the same power as that used for the other voices, but of a different colour. The tenor part then comes to the surface from time to time in a fascinating way.

But the whole set give great scope for registration, although most of the numbers are well able to dispense with anything beyond a quite simple scheme.

The reader to whom these works are new may be warned against a hasty opinion based on a reading through, especially at the pianoforte. No other works of Bach yield up so little of their secret on a first acquaintance. As Parry says (after describing it as 'a lovable little collection'):

'There is hardly any work of Bach's which brings the hearer into more intimate relations with him, or one more suffused with his personality. . . . It is indeed not a work for the public at all, but for those who can enter into converse with a great mind in the things which meant most to him.'

We may fairly assume, however, that there are plenty of the public no less able than players to 'enter into converse with a great mind,' even when the converse is so intimate as in this case. It is merely a question of the players doing their duty and bringing the parties together.

The 'Little Organ Book' is unexpectedly difficult, and the technical obstacles are as a rule not of the conventional type that the student has conquered in his instruction book. That is why the 'beginning organist' should be put to work on the 'Little Organ Book' as soon as possible, and kept at it in preference to spending time over material—including some of the weaker fugues of Bach—that he will never want to play later on. These little pieces he will play more and more as long as he plays anything.

As to the general level of excellence, I believe that all who have lived with the collection for years will agree that of the whole forty-five pieces only two are failures—'Puer Natus' (because its inner parts seem to stick and its intention is not clear) and 'These are the holy Ten Commandments' (which is so appropriately dogmatic as to be hopelessly unmusical).

As a practical point, it may be added that owing to the shortness of most of the preludes they may well be played in groups of three or four. Effective and well-contrasted little suites may easily be arranged. It is hardly necessary to point out that the pauses merely indicate the end of the chorale phrases and have not their usual meaning.

I began last month's chapter by saying that perhaps too much has been made of the programmatic side of the chorale preludes. It is right and helpful that we should know something of this side, but we shall miss the spirit of the music if we imagine it to be more than very slightly dependent upon its descriptive features. Moreover, as we have seen, commentators are by no means agreed as to Bach's intention in some cases.

There is also a tendency to regard Bach as having been the first to employ pictorial methods. It will be agreed that many of the descriptive figures are merely the conventional formulæ by which the same emotional states have been expressed for a long time, and will no doubt be expressed for a good many years to come. It is less generally known that they were by way of being conventions before Bach was born. There is hardly one of the long series used by Bach that cannot be found similarly employed in the chorale preludes of his predecessors. Moreover, the idea of organ solos or accompaniments illustrating the text associated with the chorale dates from the primitive days of organ music. Pirro, quoting Mattheson's 'Ehrenpforte' (1740) tells us of Christoph Raupach, organist at Stralsund, who in 1710 used to give recitals after the Sunday service, the programme consisting of improvisations on choral melodies. He aimed at illustrating the words to which the tune was sung, and in order to avoid a misfire he distributed a printed explanation of the items among the audience. Pirro gives the scheme of a three movement sonata thus improvised.

The 'Little Organ Book,' then, was no innovation save in the fact of its being a carefully planned work, carrying out consistently methods that had so far been used in an isolated or haphazard way. No work of Bach contains so little original matter. In many cases two of the constituents—the chorale melody and the characteristic motive—were common property. To make matters worse, some of the chorales are dull, especially when treated as slow canti fermi. Bach was as yet only at the beginning of his prim as a composer. He was destined to produce some of the colossal things in music. Yet all who have thoroughly grasped these little pieces will agree that he never showed his genius more convincingly than when time after time he thus took two—sometimes three—conventions and produced from them not another convention but a poem. It is Abt Vogler with a difference:

And I know not if, save in this, such gift be allowed to man,

That out of three sounds he frame, not a fourth sound, but a star.

Consider it well: each tone of our scale in itself is nought; It is everywhere in the world—loud, soft, and all is said: Give it to me to use! I mix it with two in my thought; And there! Ye have seen and heard . . .

(To be continued.)

Interludes

An episode in the life of Jenny Lind of which little seems to be known was the tour in America. As a rule it is barely mentioned, and yet it deserves record as one of the curiosities of musical history. Could there be a more oddly assorted couple than a great singer and a showman—especially such a singer as Jenny Lind and such a showman as P. T. Barnum?

Turning over the 'Twopenny Box' at a second-hand bookseller's a few years ago I unearthed a tattered little volume whose title-page at once captured me and my twopenny:

BARNUM,

THE YANKEE SHOWMAN,

AND

PRINCE OF HUMBUGS.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

I had no thought of finding any musical interest in the work, and was pleasantly surprised when, after enjoying accounts of such enterprises as General Tom Thumb, the Mermaid (a stuffed monkey), the model of Niagara 'with real water' (one barrel thereof kept on the run by means of a pump and reservoir), &c., I came to a chapter headed 'The Jenny Lind Enterprise.' As the book is no doubt long since out of print, and as particulars of the tour have not appeared in the musical press, at all events for a good many years, the present seems a fitting moment for a dip into it:

In October, 1849 [says Barnum], I first conceived the idea of bringing Jenny Lind to this country. I had never heard her sing, inasmuch as she arrived in London a few weeks after I quitted it with General Tom Thumb. Her reputation, however, was sufficient for me.

He carefully figured things out, and saw a prospect of 'immense pecuniary success.' There was risk in the fact that the American public had long associated his name with humbug, but he decided he could afford to lose fifty thousand dollars on the venture, so he set to work to pull the necessary strings. First, an emissary had to be chosen :

I found in Mr. John Hall Wilton, an Englishman, who had visited this country with the Sax-Horn Players, the best man whom I knew for that purpose. A few minutes sufficed to make the engagement with him, by which I was to pay only his expenses if he did not succeed in his mission, but by which also he was to be paid a large sum of money if he succeeded in bringing Jenny Lind to our shores, on any terms within a liberal schedule, which I set forth to him in writing.

Briefly the terms were an offer of sixty thousand dollars for a hundred nights, or a sharing arrangement. If this offer were not accepted, Wilton was authorised to increase it to 150,000 dollars and all expenses (including servants, carriage, secretary, and three musical assistants of her own choice) for a hundred and fifty nights.

Wilton found on his arrival in London that the singer was on the Continent. In reply to his letters she said that if she came to America, Julius Benedict and Signor Belletti, a baritone, must come too. These artists were in London, and Wilton lost no time in making an arrangement with them. He then started for Lubeck, where Jenny Lind was staying. She told him of other offers for an American tour, and frankly admitted she had been given to understand that Barnum was a 'humbug and a showman who would not scruple to put her in a box and exhibit her to all and sundry at twenty-five cents a head.' In due course she was satisfied as to his bona fides, and in February, 1850, the tour was settled. Barnum placed 187,500 dollars at a London bankers immediately, as per agreement, though only after a good deal of selling, borrowing, and mortgaging.

Two days after hearing of Wilton's success Barnum began his press campaign. He gives the following extract from his first letter to the New York papers :

Perhaps I may not make any money by this enterprise; but I assure you that if I knew I should not make a farthing profit, I would ratify the engagement, so anxious am I that the United States should be visited by a lady whose vocal powers have never been approached by any other human being, and whose character is charity, simplicity, and goodness personified. . . . Since her débüt in England she has given to the poor from her own private purse more than the whole amount which I have engaged to pay her, and the proceeds of concerts for charitable purposes in Great Britain, where she has sung gratuitously, have realised more than ten times that amount.

Barnum showed excellent judgment in engineering the tour. For example, although Jenny Lind had intended singing no more in England prior to her departure for America, and had in fact declined some London engagements, he persuaded her to give two concerts at Liverpool on the eve of sailing :

My object in making this request was to add the éclat of that side to the excitement on this side of the Atlantic, which was already nearly up to fever heat.

Who was the 'music critic from London' mentioned in the following paragraph ?

The first of the two Liverpool concerts was given the night previous to the departure of a steamer for America. My agent had procured the services of a music critic from London, who finished his account of this concert at half past one o'clock the same night, or rather the following morning, and at two o'clock my agent was overseeing its insertion in a Liverpool morning paper, numbers of which he forwarded to me by the steamer on the same day. The re-publication of the criticism in the American press, including an account of the enthusiasm which prevailed at her trans-Atlantic concert, had the desired effect.

A slow and tortuous proceeding this seems to us, in these days of cables and wireless.

On Sunday, September 1, the steamer bearing the party hove in sight, and immediately afterwards I was on board and had taken Jenny Lind by the hand.

After a few moments' conversation she asked me when and where I had heard her sing.

'I never had the pleasure of seeing you before in my life,' I replied.

'How is it possible that you dared risk so much money on a person whom you never heard sing?' she asked in surprise.

'I risked it on your reputation, which in musical matters I would much rather trust than my own judgment,' I replied.

However, there was a good deal more in it than that, though he adds it only in an aside to the reader. He really relied only 'prominently' on her artistic reputation :

I also took largely into my estimate of her success with all classes of the American public, her character for extraordinary benevolence and generosity. Without this peculiarity in her disposition I never would have dared make the engagement which I did, as I felt sure there were multitudes of individuals in America who would be prompted to attend her concerts by this feeling alone.

The landing was witnessed by thousands of enthusiasts, one of whom obligingly added to the effect by falling overboard from a sloop and being promptly rescued.

A superb bower of green trees, decorated with beautiful flags, was discovered upon the wharf, together with two triumphal arches, on one of which was inscribed 'Welcome, Jenny Lind.' The second was surmounted by an American eagle, and bore the inscription, 'Welcome to America!' These decorations were not produced by magic, and I do not know that I can reasonably find fault with some persons who suspected that I had a hand in their erection.

But having evolved a bower and a couple of arches, he might have crowned the work by hitting on some less poverty-stricken inscriptions.

Barnum's carriage was in waiting, the party got in, and with the showman on the box beside the driver, a triumphal progress was made to Irving House :

Within ten minutes of our arrival at Irving House, not less than ten thousand persons had congregated round the entrance in Broadway, nor was the number diminished before nine o'clock in the evening [about eight hours later].

At her request I dined with her that afternoon, and when, according to European custom, she prepared to pledge me in a glass of wine, she was somewhat surprised at my saying, 'Miss Lind, I do not think you can ask any other favour on earth which I would not gladly grant; but I am a teetotaler, and must beg to be permitted to drink your health and happiness in a glass of cold water.'

Pussyfoot! or, as a French journal had it the other day, 'Foot of Cat!'

The enthusiasm of the arrival scenes were well maintained:

At twelve o'clock that night she was serenaded by the New York Musical Fund Society, numbering on that occasion two hundred musicians. They were escorted to Irving House by about three hundred firemen in their red shirts, bearing torches. At least twenty thousand persons were present. The calls for Jenny Lind were so vehement that I led her through the window to the balcony. The loud cheers lasted for several minutes before the serenade was permitted again to proceed.

This kind of thing went on for weeks. Her rooms were thronged by visitors, 'including the magnates of the land in both Church and State.' Barnum was all out, however, for capturing the man in the street, knowing that a prolonged tour would be a frost without that numerous person:

It was with some difficulty that I prevented the fashionables from monopolising her altogether, and thus, as I believe, sadly marring my interests by cutting her off from the warm sympathies which she had awakened among the masses. Presents of all sorts were showered upon her . . . Songs, quadrilles, and polkas were dedicated to her, and poets sang in her praises. We had Jenny Lind gloves, Jenny Lind bonnets, Jenny Lind riding hats, Jenny Lind shawls, mantillas, robes, chairs, sofas, pianos—in fact everything was Jenny Lind,— a state of things calculated to make any showman rub his hands. The poets were stimulated by the prospect of a prize of 200 dollars (offered by Barnum, of course). The winner was Bayard Taylor, whose lines were set to music by Julius Benedict. Barnum was in some ways a very simple person. He shows this constantly throughout his book. His comment on the prize-giving is delightfully naive:

This award, although it gave general satisfaction, yet was met with disfavour by several disappointed poets, who, notwithstanding the decision of the committee, persisted in believing and declaring their own productions to be the best.

Unique—almost incredible—behaviour! And from poets, too! Now had they been composers . . .

Most of the tickets for the first concert were sold by auction, and the receipts promised to be so large that Barnum offered the singer a larger share than had been agreed on:

Jenny looked at me with astonishment. . . . She grasped me cordially by the hand, and exclaimed, 'Mr. Barnum, you are a gentleman of honour. You are generous. . . . I will sing for you as long as you please. I will sing for you in America—in Europe—anywhere!'

However, Barnum again takes the reader into his confidence, admitting that he was less generous than he seemed to be. He saw the money rolling in, and thought it wise to forestall envious outsiders who might try to persuade the singer that she was not receiving a fair share—which is just what happened before long.

The first concert drew an audience of five thousand, and the enthusiasm 'was probably never before equalled in the world':

As Mr. Benedict led her before the footlights the entire audience rose to their feet and welcomed her with three cheers, accompanied by the waving of thousands of hats and handkerchiefs. This was by far the largest audience Jenny had ever sung to before. She was evidently much agitated. . . . At the conclusion of the concert the audience . . . called vociferously for 'Barnum,' and I reluctantly responded to their demand.

Reluctantly . . .

The Press played up gallantly, with and without the aid of Barnum. Even on the day before this first concert the New York Herald contained a leading article ('unbought, unsolicited,' says Barnum, proudly), from which I quote the conclusion:

Jenny Lind, the most remarkable phenomenon in musical art which has for the last century flashed across the horizon of the old world, is now among us. . . . Three years ago, more or less, we heard Jenny Lind on many occasions, when she made her first great sensation in Europe by her début at the London Opera House. Then she was great in power—in art—in genius; now she is greater in all. We speak from experience and conviction. Then she astonished, and pleased, and fascinated the thousands of the British aristocracy; now she will fascinate, and please, and delight, and almost make mad with musical excitement the millions of the American democracy . . .

We speak soberly—seriously—calmly. The public expectation has run very high for the last week—higher than at any former period of our past musical annals. But high as it has risen, the reality—the fact—the concert—the voice and power of Jenny Lind will far surpass all past expectation. Jenny Lind is a wonder, and a prodigy in song, and no mistake.

Thus the New York Herald, soberly—seriously—calmly—and no mistake.

The disparity between Showman and Nightingale was constantly in evidence. For example, the latter always wished to arrive unexpectedly, and therefore quietly, at a town where she was due to sing—a refreshingly un-prima-donna-like preference. But this did not suit Barnum. He said nothing, but did a good deal:

Although it frequently seemed inconceivable to her how so many thousands should have discovered her secret, and consequently gathered together to receive her, I was not so much astonished. . . .

How should he be, with a telegraph wire and an agent who knew his job at the other end of it?

Sometimes the crowd was inconvenient, and had to be hoodwinked. At Philadelphia they hung around the hotel and refused to disperse, demanding the appearance of Jenny Lind on the balcony. But she had gone to bed with a bad headache, and could not be disturbed. However, a Barnum is not easily stumped. The singer's companion, Miss Ahmansen, wearing Jenny's bonnet and shawl, proved such a colourable imitation, that when she was led out on to the balcony and had bowed gracefully, the many-headed gave her three cheers, and went home well pleased. But [adds Barnum] :

Miss Lind was so utterly averse to anything like deception, that we never ventured to tell her the part her bonnet and shawl had played in the absence of their owner.

A similar ruse was employed at New Orleans. The wharf was crowded :

Jenny dreaded the excitement which she must now encounter.

'Mr. Barnum, I am sure I can never get through that crowd,' said she, in despair.

'Leave it to me. Remain quiet for ten minutes, and there shall be no crowd here,' I replied. Taking my daughter on my arm, she threw her veil over her face, and we descended the gangway to the deck. The crowd pressed round. . . . 'Open the way, if you please, for Mr. Barnum and Miss Lind!' cried Le Grand Smith over the rail of the ship. 'Don't crowd her, gentlemen,' I exclaimed . . .

and they reached the hotel with the crowd at their heels, Jenny Lind coming along quietly in time to steal into the hotel and appear on the balcony in response to the usual demand.

Even more astute was his dodge at Cincinnati. There was again a difficulty in landing, but Barnum dared not repeat the New Orleans ruse, as an account of it had been published in the Cincinnati papers. However :

I gave my arm to Miss Lind, and begged her to have no fears, for I had hit on an expedient which would save her from annoyance. We then descended the plank to the shore, and as soon as we had touched it, Le Grand Smith called out from the boat as if he had been one of the passengers : 'That's no go, Mr. Barnum, you can't pass your daughter off for Jenny Lind this time.' The remark elicited a peal of merriment from the crowd, several persons calling out, 'That won't do, old Barnum! You may fool the New Orleans folks, but you can't come it over the "Buckeyes." We intend to stay here until you bring out Jenny Lind.'

So they stayed till the truth dawned on them—an hour later—and then said, 'Well, old Barnum has humbugged us, after all!'

There was some unpleasantness at Havana, the public protesting at the high prices for admission to the concert. They paid, and attended, determined to be unimpressed. Some even hissed, but the singer soon overcame all opposition, and the concert ended in the customary thunderous cheers and encores :

I cannot express what my feelings were as I watched this scene from the dress circle. Poor Jenny! I deeply sympathised with her when I heard that first hiss. I indeed observed the resolute bearing which she assumed, but was apprehensive of the result. When I witnessed her triumph, I could not restrain the tears of joy that rolled down my cheeks ; and rushing through a private box, I reached the stage just as she was withdrawing after the fifth encore. 'God bless you, Jenny, you have settled them !' I exclaimed.

'Are you satisfied?' said she, throwing her arms round my neck. She, too, was crying with joy, and never before did she look so beautiful in my eyes as on that evening.

Here is a pleasant little glimpse of the Nightingale and Showman unbending, during a month's rest :

Jenny was now free from all annoyances ; her time was her own ; she received no calls, went and came when she pleased, had no meddlesome advisers about her, legal or otherwise, and was as merry as a cricket. We had a large courtyard in the rear of the house, and here she would come, and romp and run, sing and laugh, like a young schoolgirl. 'Now, Mr. Barnum, for another game of ball,' she would say half-a-dozen times a day ; whereupon she would take an india-rubber ball (of which she had two or three) and commence a game of throwing and catching, which would be kept up until, being completely tired out, I would say, 'I give it up.' Then her rich musical laugh would be heard ringing through the house, as she exclaimed, 'Oh, Mr. Barnum, you are too fat and too lazy ; you cannot stand it to play ball with me.'

But even the best of friends must fall out, as well as part, and soon one of the 'meddlesome advisers' mentioned above succeeded in persuading Miss Lind that she could do better for herself than under Barnum's management. So after the ninety-third concert she terminated the contract, paying the forfeit agreed on in the event of such a contingency. They met frequently afterwards :

She was always affable. On one occasion she told me she had been sadly harassed in giving her concerts. 'People cheat me and swindle me very much,' she said, 'and I find it very annoying to give concerts on my own account.'

Barnum could afford to bear no malice. The Nightingale had made 176,675 dollars 9 cents ; the Showman pocketed 535,486 dollars 25 cents.

Let it be recorded that the great singer devoted the whole of her profits of the tour to the founding of art-scholarships and charities in her native land. No wonder she is everywhere remembered with an affection given to no other singer—perhaps because we think of her less as a great artist than as an amazingly generous woman, which is a rarer and more valuable bird.

Everybody knows that Jenny Lind married Otto Goldschmidt while in America. Here is Barnum's deliciously patronising reference to Goldschmidt :

. . . Mr. Otto Goldschmidt, a German composer and pianist, to whom she was much attached, and who had studied music with her while in Germany. He played several times in our concerts. He seemed a very quiet, inoffensive gentleman, and I have no doubt he makes Miss Lind a good husband.

Here Barnum must make his bow, as space will not permit of further extracts from his naive autobiography. With all his mixture of simplicity and duplicity, piety and pushfulness, he was a good fellow and an astounding all-rounder, able to do almost anything, from blacking his face and taking a negro singer's turn at a few minutes' notice (with encores), delivering a temperance lecture, or hoodwinking a crowd. But on the whole, he never showed his enterprise and ability to greater advantage than when he dropped his freak museum in favour of a prima donna, and for nearly a year carried through with brilliant success the first great musical stunt in a land of stunts.

'FESTE.'

Occasional Notes

The preliminary announcement issued by the Philharmonic Society promises a season of varied interest. The following is a brief extract :

November 4
'Le festin d'Araignée'	...	...	Roussel
Symphony	...	...	Franck
Concerto in B flat minor	...	...	Tchaikovsky
Soloist : Siloti.
November 25
Violin Concerto	...	...	Elgar
Soloist : Heifetz.
Jewish Poems	...	...	Bloch
December 16
Symphonic Poem, 'November Woods'	...	...	Arno'd Bax
Choral works by Sweetinck, Prætorius, Calvisius	...	...	and Gibbons
January 27
Violin Concerto	...	...	Hamilton Harty
Soloist : Miss Murray Lambert.
'The Fountain of Rome'	...	...	Respighi
February 24
Symphonic Variations	...	...	W. H. Bell
March 10
Pianoforte Concerto	...	...	Mackenzie
Soloist : Miss Myra Hess.
'Appalachia'	...	...	Delius
'Prometheus'	...	...	Scriabin

The conductors are Mr. Albert Coates, Mr. Hamilton Harty, and Mr. C. Kennedy Scott.

The season of Queen's Hall Symphony Concerts now in progress has attractions both for the musician and for the general public. César Franck's Symphony is to be given on November 6; Casella's Rhapsody 'Italia' on November 20 (for the first time in England); Elgar's Violoncello Concerto on January 15 (with Miss Beatrice Harrison as soloist); Vincent d'Indy's 'Symphonie Montagnarde' and Delius's 'Dance Rhapsody' on January 29; the first performance of Sibelius's fifth Symphony and the first in England of Novak's 'In der Tatra' on February 12.

Readers who were so fortunate as to be present at Miss Dorothy Silk's concert of old music at Wigmore Hall in June last, will be interested to hear of four similar events promised for the present season. The first was announced for October 30 at Steinway Hall, with selections from cantatas by Schütz, Tunder, Bach, and Ritter. The second programme will be given in St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, on December 11, when the scheme will include some chorale preludes of Bach, a cantata by Tunder, and Bach's Cantata for soprano solo, strings, and trumpet, 'Praise God in all lands.' The two remaining concerts will take place at Steinway Hall on February 5 and 19, with selections from the same composers plus J. C. Bach, Purcell, and Martini. All the events begin at 3.15 p.m. This enterprise is worthy of cordial support. The rescuing from oblivion of fine old works is only a little less important than the production of fine new ones. Schütz and Tunder were two pre-Bach composers who are almost unknown to-day, but we believe that the best of their music will come as a revelation to many. Musicians sometimes complain that such music is not easily accessible. They can take the first steps towards making it so by supporting such concerts as these. The progress of events is simply acquaintance—appreciation—demand—publication.

We are asked to give publicity to the following appeal :

SIR,—A committee was constituted some time ago to reorganize the brass bands and other musical societies in the devastated and formerly occupied territories of France. Having had the honour of being appointed by this committee as delegate for England, and knowing the great interest you have always taken in such matters, I make a special appeal through your valuable columns to the societies in England for any help they may be able to give by organizing concerts in aid of this work of reconstruction.

An immense territory was covered by the German army of occupation, and every vestige of instrument—not only brass, but all other instruments, as also material—has vanished, and an effort is now being made to reconstitute these societies.

Any gift of music and instruments will be highly appreciated, and full particulars sent to any organization willing to help these deserving institutions.—Yours, &c.,

20, High Holborn, W.C.1.

H. BONNAIRE.

October 6, 1920.

The Elgin Courier and Courier, commenting on the interview with Mr. Kennedy Scott which appeared in our October number, remarks that the use of music at municipal functions opens up possibilities. The writer gives an extract from the programme of a nomination meeting in Elgin Town Hall in 2070, in which the Burgh Treasurer's announcement of an increase in rates is preceded by 'Sound an alarm,' and followed by the choral society's performance of 'And the children of Israel sighed,' and 'They oppressed them with burdens.' Our contemporary, however, goes on to agree with Mr. Scott that 'there are many municipal functions and ceremonies the dignity and interest of which would be enhanced by the judicious introduction of choral and instrumental music.'

In this connection we note with interest that at a recent reception of Freeman at the Mansion House the Lord Mayor sang several songs, including 'I'll sing thee songs of Araby' and 'Annie Laurie.' Lady Cooper accompanied, and was also heard in pianoforte duets played with Mr. H. Carte de la Fontaine—Gounod's 'Faust' Ballet music, and Chaminade's 'Intermède.' The Chief Commoner, Mr. Deputy Harry Bird, also sang. We wish musical performances by civic dignitaries were so common as to call for no remark. When our Mayors and Mayoresses as a body can do their part in the musical side of municipal social gatherings, we shall find the art receiving from local governing bodies the encouragement due to so powerful a factor in the life of the community. And we shall be spared such futilities as this little bit of dialogue quoted by Mr. Scholes in the Observer of October 17 :

Councillor — pleaded that the new septet should give lighter music than the old orchestra.

The Chairman : That will necessarily be so with the smaller number of instruments.

As Mr. Scholes says, if the musical resources were still further reduced to a mere body of four string players, Councillor Dash would no doubt be happy to hear such light music as a Beethoven quartet.

Municipal music is an old theme of discussion and by no means new as a practice. It has had to meet opposition, amounting at times to angry clamour, from non-musical ratepayers and the councillors who mentally represent them, and now and then it has fallen before the onslaught. There are centres where it is permitted to live, either on condition of bowing to popular taste or as possibly reacting to the benefit of a town by attracting visitors. Wherever it goes beyond 'light music'—Mr. Godfrey's Symphony Concerts and his wonderful work for British composers at Bournemouth give the brightest example—it must first have a reason for existence which will serve without recourse to ideals. No instance—until recently—comes to mind of a municipality which has provided concerts with no other apparent object or validity but that of educating musical taste. This is new ground for a town council, and honour is due to the councillors of Battersea for venturing upon it. Their musical head of affairs, Mr. George Lane, is a practical idealist, and they have given ear to his plea that music in its highest forms is worth cultivating for its own sake, and, granted the opportunity, can make itself wanted. By giving their protection to chamber concerts the Battersea authorities narrow their aims to the single purpose of doing their best for music and its appreciation. There is no hope of a profit. The concerts are expected to pay for themselves and to call for no assistance other than the free use of the Town Hall.

The concerts for the present season form a series of twelve, brief particulars of which were given in our last month's 'Occasional Notes.' The first took place on October 13 with the Grimson Quartet and Miss Dora Labbette as artists. The Town Hall—a spacious building—appeared about half full. The number of empty seats was no index of future prospects; English people are not venturesome in sampling a new form of entertainment, and probably the potential audience was at home waiting the verdict of the pioneers. The promoters of the concert were well satisfied with their beginning.

A circumstance in connection with Sir Edward Elgar's visit to Amsterdam a few weeks ago should be placed on record. On Saturday, October 2, a telegram was received by Messrs. Novello asking for full scores and band parts of Elgar's second Symphony, 'In the South,' Violoncello Concerto, 'Falstaff,' and Introduction and Allegro, 'to be sent by special messenger, if necessary.' As the telegram arrived after business hours, nothing could be done until the following Monday. At 11.30 that morning the copies were handed to the Lep Transport and Depository, Ltd., Castle Street, Long Acre, who despatched them by the 1 o'clock Handley-Page, and they were delivered at Amsterdam about three hours later. Readers who imagine that air transport is prohibitively expensive will be surprised to hear that the charge was a mere 1s. 3d. per pound. This is probably the first time Mercury has thus come to the aid of Apollo.

Richard Strauss's 'Ariadne in Naxos' has had an eventful history. In its first version—produced by Sir Thomas Beecham at His Majesty's Theatre—it was a sort of appendix to 'Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme'; then it was played as an independent work, all reference to Molière being left out. Later, Hugo von Hoffmann wrote new introductory scenes, and this third version is final. In the new version the scene is in the house of a Viennese noble who has ordered a play for the entertainment of his guests. The preliminaries are made the vehicle for satire on exacting and hysterical composers and artists and inartistic patrons. The idea of a serious opera and an Italian comedy played simultaneously is retained. Indeed, the changes in 'Ariadne' itself are of the slightest, and do not go beyond what is made necessary by the elimination of Molière. In Germany the work has been more successful in the new form than in the old. An English translation is being prepared by Mr. Alfred Kalisch. The version made at short notice for the London performances was not fitted to the music. The vocal score will be published with the new translation.

A letter headed 'Gramophone Records' on p. 766 contains an excellent suggestion that we hope makers of gramophone records will adopt. This and other correspondence on the subject serves to remind us that the gramophone is now an important factor in the musical and educational world. So many of our readers, especially in remote districts, send us inquiries, that we have decided to include in our future issues, beginning next month, a brief article dealing with new records, choosing for comment only such as are of distinct musical or educational value.

Few concert-giving organizations are more entitled to public gratitude than the London Chamber Concert Society, which, as we briefly announced last month, has arranged a series of five concerts to take place at Wigmore Hall on Tuesday evenings in November. This is no academic society for the preservation of classical routine, nor for indulgence in modernism for its own sake. The programmes are a wise choice of the good and tried and of the deserving unknown, as the following selection from the season's list of works amply demonstrates:

Trio for pianoforte, clarinet, and viola	...	...	Mozart
String Quartet	...	...	Ethel Smyth
Quintet for strings and clarinet	...	...	Herbert Howells
(First performance.)
Trio for pianoforte, violin, and flute	...	...	Bach
Sonata for violin and pianoforte	...	...	Medtner
Sonata for flute and pianoforte	...	...	Reinecke
Violoncello Sonata	...	...	Cervetto
Violoncello Sonata	...	...	Dupuis
Sonata*	...	...	Florent Schmitt
(First performance in England.)
String Quartet	...	...	Ravel
Clarinet Quintet	...	...	Mozart
String Quartet	...	...	Elgar
Violoncello Sonata	...	...	Jean Huré

* Instrument not specified.

The artists include the Philharmonic, Allied and English String Quartets, the Misses d'Aranyi, Mrs. Norman O'Neill, Mr. Charles Draper, M. Florent Schmitt, and others who help to set our best standards.

From a contemporary:

'Mr. — writes:

I have a boy who insists (or, rather, whose mother insists) on playing a bugle for the local Scouts. As I am of opinion that this is detrimental to his breath control, I am opposing it. I should therefore like to have some other choirmasters' views on the subject.

If mamma insists on blowing the bugle—or even the sackbut—for the local Scouts, what right has the choirmaster to interfere?

The Westminster Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Vincent Thomas, has a full programme in prospect. Its scheme includes first performance of Walthew's 'Ode to a Nightingale,' S. Liddle's 'The Mermaid,' and three choral ballads by Quilter. Purcell's 'King Arthur,' Stanford's 'Stabat mater,' and Cowen's 'Rose maiden' make up an excellent list.

The prospective arrangements of the South London Choral Association, under Mr. L. C. Venables, are as follows: December, 'A Tale of Old Japan' and C. H. Lloyd's 'Hero and Leander'; March, 'St. Paul' (Part 1) and Bath's 'The Wedding of Shon Maclean.'

London Concerts

By ALFRED KALISCH

PROMENADE NOVELTIES: BAX'S VARIATIONS

Though the season of regular concerts is now in full swing, the most interesting music was still (at the time of writing) that which was to be heard at the Promenade Concerts. I will take the novelties produced since the last issue in chronological order.

On September 21, Eric Fogg's Ballet Suite for orchestra was conducted by the composer. He is a very young man, the son of a highly esteemed musician, and has music in the blood. At present he is entirely under Neo-Russian influences, but he has more sense of grace and charm than some of his models, and the cleverness with which the music is put together is undeniable. At the same time, until he chooses to swim without the Stravinsky life-belt, it is impossible to predict how he will progress when he casts aside such external aids.

We next come to a work which seems to be by far the most important heard during the season, and the one most likely to become a permanent possession. Arnold Bax's Symphonic Variations for pianoforte and orchestra are to all intents and purposes a Pianoforte Concerto. The theme is full of possibilities, both in respect of formal treatment and emotional content. In some of the variations the theme is very much disguised, and it was not possible at a first hearing to trace it through all its wanderings or to penetrate all its disguises. Each variation has a title. From these it may be gathered that the programme is much of the same type as that of Strauss's 'Heldenleben,' and covers as wide a range of emotions. One of the great merits of the work is that while each variation makes the impression of being finely proportioned in itself, it fits well into the broadly outlined and well-balanced whole. There is one poetical reflective passage at the end of the second variation which appeals as a genuine inspiration. The variation headed 'In the Temple' has, in spite of the suggestion of Debussy's 'Cathédrale,' a personal note and is inspired by high idealism. There is splendid vitality and a piquant virility (contradictory as the two ideas may seem to be) in the variation entitled 'Play,' while the 'Final Triumph' is an imposing close. The orchestra played admirably under Sir Henry Wood, and by her playing of the solo part, Miss Harriet Cohen made a very great forward step in her career. Except in some of the passages which demand the full strength of unusually powerful male muscles, it could hardly have been better played.

AN UNPLEASANT REFLECTION

My conviction of the importance of the work must be my excuse, if any is needed, for dealing with it at unusual length. One other fact in connection with it should be mentioned. Reflections not altogether pleasant are suggested by the fact that, in spite of the almost unanimous verdict of the press and the exceptional cordiality with which it was received by the audience, there is nowhere a vestige of suggestion of a second performance.

The programme in question contained also Elgar's 'Dorabella' variation, Holbrooke's 'Three Blind Mice' variations, and Ireland's 'Forgotten Rite.' Four such native works are calculated to inspire confident views as to British music.

Mr. York Bowen's Violin Concerto in E minor was conducted by the composer on September 28, and the solo was played excellently well by Miss Marjorie Hayward. It is a graceful and genial work and gives the soloist good opportunity. Mr. York Bowen is not one of those composers who worry about the state of his own or other people's souls—or at any rate, if such worries assail him he does not translate them into music. He is never at a loss for something agreeable to say which sounds quite plausible, even if it does not take the argument any further. If one wished to be unkind one would say it was the musical equivalent of an after-dinner conversation of an estimable and quite well-connected family which thinks excessive cleverness bad form. From this it follows that the music is somewhat reminiscent. The Concerto has at least two good tunes, and the scoring will be praised as effective by all except those who find the manner of the day after to-morrow is the only good setting in music.

Two days later, Mr. Herbert Howells's 'Merry Eye' was produced. The composer explains its significance in a note which is less easy to understand than the music itself. The title is derived from a hero of fairy-tale or folk lore, whose cheerful life is varied by some grim episodes. From this it would appear that he must have some points of resemblance with our old friend 'Till Eulenspiegel.' The same wayward-hero and 'Petruchka' have indeed stood godfather to him. At the same time, the music is far more individual and personal than one would infer from this criticism. Mr. Howells gets his effects by exploiting the individual characteristics of each instrument rather than by piling masses of sound, although he can make the welkin ring with a good climax when he is so disposed. The whole work gives the impression that the composer has a true vein of poetry.

On October 7 we had the first performance in London of Gabriel Fauré's Orchestral Suite 'Masques et Bergamasques.' It is very graceful and finely polished music, reminding one of a famous criticism: 'Il ne dit pas grand chose, mais il le dit rudement bien.' The printer of an esteemed contemporary caused innocent amusement by calling it 'Masques et Burgomasters,' which is unkind, because if the music is one thing less than another, it is that it is not German.

Mr. Frederick Laurence is another young English musician who has all ultra-modern music at his fingers' ends, and in his 'Dance of the Witch-girl' he has made effective use of his knowledge. It is well put together, and some of the orchestral effects are fresh and picturesque. Here too the music affords no grounds for prophesying as to his future. The public liked the work extremely.

On October 14 Miss Johanne Stockmarr played the solo of Palmgren's Concerto 'The River.' The Finns seem inclined, if their music is a true indication of their typical soul-state, to take a gloomy view of life, and this particular river pursues a stately if not sprightly course. Very different is the 'Vltava' as pictured in Smetana's symphonic poem which was close to it in the same programme. The composer handles the variation form with skill, and the scoring is rich and solid. The pianoforte part is devoted mainly to arabesques and picturesque suggestions of flowing water, and was admirably played by Miss Stockmarr.

On October 19 we had the last and not least important novelty—Mr. Eugène Goossens's 'The Eternal Rhythm.' He sought his inspiration in a poem by Terence Grey, the subject of which is—according to the programme:

The connection that exists between the elemental rhythm of all visible and invisible natural forces and the responsive emotional vibrations to which it gives rise in the soul of the free, unfettered, and fully developed human being—the human being in this case being a woman.

The work is divided into three sections, of which the second, the dance of the woman in response to the call of nature, is the most important. The best passage in the work, because the most personal, is the end of the first section. Had it all been on that level, it would be a great work. Unfortunately, however, the themes are after the usual ultra-modern pattern, and much of the music is reminiscent in turn of Debussy, Scriabin, Strauss, and Stravinsky. In the central section the dance of Elektra and the supernatural dance in 'Zarathustra' are frequently suggested. One can, however, admire the composer's mastery in handling great masses of sound, and the skill with which he exhausts the emotional possibilities of insistent rhythm. If he varied his discords with a few concords now and again, the effect would be greatly enhanced. This is a truth which many of our younger composers fail to realise. At the same concert we heard Eric Cundell's song with orchestra, 'Our Dead,' which had previously been sung only at a Patron's Fund Rehearsal. It is a fine song, obviously the work of a composer who has something of his own to say and knows how to say it, as he proved also in his 'Serbia.' We shall be glad to hear more of him. Mr. Gervase Elwes sang it admirably.

During the month Sir Henry Wood continued giving large Wagner excerpts, including the whole of the first Act of 'The Valkyrie' and the opening and the closing scenes of 'Rheingold.' These programmes drew enormous audiences, especially the 'Rheingold' on October 18, and they will doubtless become a permanent feature of the Promenade concerts.

OTHER ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS

Most of the series of Ballad concerts are now orchestral. Messrs. Chappell set the example by calling in the services of the Light Orchestra under Mr. Alick Maclean at Queen's Hall, and Messrs. Boosey followed their example at Central Hall, Westminster, where Mr. Julius Harrison conducts an Orchestra, while the London Symphony Orchestra plays under Mr. Hamilton Harty at the Albert Hall.

The first of the Queen's Hall Symphony Concerts took place on October 9, when the only novelty was a Pianoforte Concerto by Steinhammer, played by Miss Stockmarr. It is a sound and workmanlike composition with a strain of romance, but somewhat lacking in distinctive characteristics either personal or national. The pianoforte part is brilliant and effective, and Miss Stockmarr played it very finely. The programme also included Elgar's Symphonic Prelude, 'Polonia,' which has some loftily inspired and characteristic moments, especially at the beginning and close, but cannot be reckoned amongst the composer's greatest works. Mr. Gervase Elwes sang two Bach Arias with his usual complete artistry.

Mr. Quinlan's series of symphonic concerts began at Kingsway Hall on October 15. It is incorrect to speak of this as the opening up of a new hall, for popular concerts have been given here for some time past. The West End is superior in these matters, and knows nothing about them, but it was obvious that the hall has a public of its own which swelled the audience for the first concert. The same phenomenon has been observed at Central Hall, Westminster, and it is a good thing. The acoustics of Kingsway Hall are good, but if anything too sonorous. The British Symphony Orchestra was conducted by Mr. Adrian Boult, who has already proved that he deserves to have such a chance of developing his gifts, and he will no doubt profit by it to his own and our great advantage. At the first concert the orchestra unfortunately had comparatively little to do, and that little—a Brandenburg Concerto of Bach, and Tchaikovsky's fifth Symphony—was very familiar. Madame Renée Chemet played Lalo's Violin Concerto, which is seldom heard because of the greater attractiveness of the Symphonie Espagnole. Its ideas are not on a large scale, but they are treated with skill and taste and the whole are polished to the last degree. The slow movement, which contains more heart-felt music, was beautifully played, the whole performance of Madame Chemet being on a very high level. Mr. Rosing's singing was immensely popular.

Amongst the most interesting new works heard in the earlier part of the season was the Violin Sonata of Ildebrando Pizzetti, played by Miss Kathleen Parlow and Mr. Charlton Keith. Here we have music with a character of its own. The opening movement is based on an austere modal theme handled with great ability, but it suffers from too much insistence and lack of variety. The second movement, 'A Prayer for the Innocents,' is in lofty vein, and the Finale, with its cheerful suggestions of folk-music, is very good to listen to.

In quite a different vein is Max Reger's portentous introductory Passacaglia for two pianofortes, played by Mr. Frank Merrick and Madame Hope Squire at the recital of the former on October 12. It lasts thirty-five minutes, and there seems no reason why it should not have lasted fifty or fifteen. Max Reger is one of those composers who will not let his hearers off anything. He worries his themes until there is nothing left of them. It is all a matter of brain, and he carries to excess the theory held by German minds of a certain type, which is the reverse of lovable, that anything approaching charm or lightness is an artistic sin. That is the opinion held of this composer by a great many of his compatriots; and to call Reger, as some have done, the '19th century Bach' shows a rare faculty of mistaking externals for essentials and a complete undervaluing of the broad humanity of the old master.

SONG RECITALS

There have been not a few recitals of British songs. Mr. Douglas Marshall's recital was interesting, for he is a young singer with a conspicuous gift for interpretation. The scheme of having the words of a song recited before it is sung is more attractive on paper than in reality, but is at the same time not devoid of interest. Mr. John Buckley is another singer of unusual ability for interpreting native songs. His chief asset is a gift of reproducing varied moods and giving an idea of completeness to each song. He should beware, however, of a tendency to lapse into speech or something too closely akin to speech. This is no doubt due partly to technical usage as much as to deliberate intention.

Miss Ursula Greville is an unusually pleasing singer who is rapidly developing. She has given two recitals, at one of which Mr. Leigh Henry expounded his views on the development of the Aria. Much that he said was useful and much was over-subtle. Her second appearance was at a concert organized by Messrs. Curwen on October 15. The songs sung were on a very high level, though not all were new. Mr. Gerrard Williams's 'Inconsequent Ballad' brought to our notice a young composer who deserves watching carefully. Martin Shaw's 'Heffle Cuckoo Fair' is another song to be remembered, and Francis Toye's 'Hans Andersen Song' was attractive. Miss Greville had the assistance of Georgio Corrado, a Finnish baritone who made a good impression in the summer, which he confirmed at his own recital last week. His singing of English, though not yet by any means flawless, is remarkable for one who has been so short a time in England. He has a powerful voice and abundant temperament.

The new Russian Choir conducted by M. Saminsky has the excellent object of helping Russian exiles in this country. It is as yet not fully trained, but has made considerable strides in the short time. The chief item in its first programme was Moussorgsky's Cantata 'Joshua.' One does not associate Moussorgsky with Biblical subjects, and indeed he discarded them when his artistic individuality was fully matured. It is not to be wondered at that he is at his best here when he ceases to be Biblical and begins to deal with some very good material derived from Hebrew folk-songs.

A few other concerts must be mentioned briefly. The Chopin recitals of Miss Myra Hess and Miss Irene Scharer served to begin the season well from the point of view of native executive work. A recital has also been given by Mr. Mark Hambourg, and naturally drew an overcrowded audience to Wigmore Hall. M. Siloti made a welcome reappearance after many years. As he is making some more appearances next month, criticism may be deferred. The recital of Captain Herbert Heyner still further consolidated his position.

The playing of the Flonzaley Quartet at its only concert on October 18 was as near perfection as possible. It is true that these artists have had special opportunities, and that our own quartets with equal chances would play as well from the point of view of technique and with a little more individual impulse, but the fact remains that they are unapproachable at present. Their playing of Beethoven's Posthumous Quartet, Op. 135, was a marvel of lucidity and extraordinary in its combination of strength and beauty.

One curious little concert remains to be mentioned. Messrs. Rudall Carte & Co. invited a party of friends to hear a combination of twenty-four flutes, played by some of the best flautists in London. The instruments were made for a band in the North of Ireland, where they will doubtless play their part in the political crisis. The variety of tone-colour which can be produced by such a combination occasioned far more surprise amongst students of orchestral timbres than the fine dynamic shades which the players commanded.

The thirty-fifth season of popular chamber concerts at South Place was arranged to open on October 3. These concerts, whose reputation for a high standard is well based, take place every Sunday. Last season the subscriptions brought in by five concerts in memory of John Saunders provided £800 for a 'John Saunders Scholarship' at the Guildhall School of Music.

Opera in London

BY FRANCIS E. BARRETT

'OLD VIC' OPERA: LONDON'S NEEDS

The operatic honours of the month have been with the Royal Victoria Hall, for beyond those helpful representations there has been no opera heard in London. At the 'Old Vic,' as the place is affectionately called—a sure sign of approval—performances of opera are made a regular feature. To my mind the fact is somewhat significant, as it implies recognition of the educative value of opera. Of the attractive nature of opera there can be no doubt, provided it is understood. It is on the question of understanding that so much depends. The repertoire at Waterloo Bridge Road is wisely kept to works that can be readily comprehended both from a musical and dramatic point of view. Still, as the undertaking is admittedly educational in its aims, I should like to make sure that these enthusiastic audiences are perfectly clear upon what the thing is all about. I think a brief description beforehand of the operas to be heard should be given by some competent hand of sufficient worldliness to be able to put himself in the place of those who are listening to the example for the first time. It is no use going to all this trouble and exhausting all this enthusiasm if the result is to be anything like that of one instance I know of in connection with a performance of Wagner's 'Tannhäuser.' The listener admitted having derived great pleasure from the performance, but was foggy as to the meaning of it all—so foggy, in fact, that he was led to inquire, in reference to Elisabeth's movements in the last Act, 'What was she doing at the pigeon 'ouse?' I should like no element of doubt as to story or characters left in the mind of the listeners. I think the 'Old Vic' would add a distinctive value to its excellent work if it saw to it that the plot and import of the operas were well understood.

THE NEED FOR OPERA

One way and another we shall have a good deal of opera in London this autumn, and all of it crammed into a very small space. As I write there is news that the performances at the Surrey Theatre are to be resumed by a company styling itself 'The National Opera Company,' which is stated to have 'acquired and reorganized' the Fairbairn Mihn Company. The interpretation put on the term 'National' is apparently 'meeting the wishes of the general public,' for this is stated to be the aim. Then in November the Carl Rosa Company with commendable enterprise and some cost has arranged to give us a month's representation of its repertoire at Covent Garden. This is where the Old Vic comes in with its help in bringing about the understanding of opera. It should take care that such operas as are given are well understood, so that when patrons go to see other representations by other companies they will be in the wholly exceptional position of knowing what these are about. In these days when there is an admitted tussle going on between the stage and the cinema, attention may well be given to opera as a more attractive form of entertainment than either. It combines many arts in one, and not the least of them is music. But to neglect to make clear what the meaning of it is, is to play at once into the hands of the cinema, which never runs an inch of reel without an explanation either in the

(Continued on page 761.)

FULL ANTHEM FOR CHRISTMAS.

Matt. ii. 6 ; Psalm lxxxv. 1, 2 ; Isaiah ix. 6.

Composed by F. W. WADELY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Con moto maestoso. ♩ = 100.

ORGAN.

mf Gt.cres.marcato.

TENORS AND BASSES.

mf

And thou Beth - le - hem, . . in . . the land . . of Ju - da, . .

sfmf

. . art not the least a-mong the prin - ces of Ju - da: for out . . of . .

cres.cres.

thee shall come . . a Gov - er - nor, . . that shall rule . . my . .

ff

Copyright, 1920, by Novello and Company, Limited.

peo - ple, . . My peo - ple Is - - ra - el. . . .

Tranquillo e sostenuto.

Lord, Thou art become gra - cious un - to Thy land, Thou art become

Lord, . . .

Lord, Thou art become

Tranquillo e sostenuto. $\text{♩} = 84$.

p Sw.

gra - - cious un - to Thy land; . . . Thou hast turn - ed a - way the cap -

Thou art become gra - cious un - to Thy land; Thou hast turn - ed, turn - ed a - gra - - cious un - to Thy land; . . . Thou hast turn - ed a - way . . the cap -

Thou hast turn - ed a - cres.

tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for-giv'n the of - fence, the of - fence of Thy

cres.

way . . the cap - tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for - giv'n the of - fence of Thy

cres.

tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for-giv'n the of - fence, the of - fence of Thy

cres.

way the cap - tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for-giv'n the of - fence of Thy dim.

peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all . . their sins.

dim.

peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all . . their sins.

dim.

peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their sins.

dim.

peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their sins.

Solo or Ch.

mp

For un - to us a Child is born, . . un - to us . . a Son . . is cres. sempre.

For un - to mf

mp Gt.

cres. sempre.

First system of the musical score. It features a vocal line and a piano accompaniment. The vocal line begins with a rest, followed by the lyrics "For un-to us a Child is". The piano accompaniment starts with a rest, then enters with a melody. The lyrics "us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is giv'n, un-to" are spread across the vocal line. The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. The system ends with a crescendo marking "cres. sempre."

cres. sempre.
For un-to us a Child is us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is giv'n, un-to giv'n, un-to us a Son is giv'n, un-to Second system of the musical score. The vocal line continues with the lyrics "For un-to us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is". The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. The lyrics "born, un-to us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is" are spread across the vocal line. The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. The system ends with a crescendo marking "cres. sempre."

cres. sempre.
For un-to us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is born, un-to us a Child is born, un-to us a Son is us a Child is born, a Son, a Son is us a Child is born, a Son, a Son is Third system of the musical score. The vocal line continues with the lyrics "giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the". The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. The lyrics "giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the" are spread across the vocal line. The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. The system ends with a crescendo marking "cres. sempre."

cres. sempre.
giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the giv'n: and the gov-ern-ment shall be up-on His shoul-der, the

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING

ANTHEM FOR CHRISTMAS

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY REV. LAUCHLAN MACLEAN WATT, D.D.

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

ALFRED HOLLINS.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Andante espressivo.

BASS OR ALTO SOLO.

mfcres.

O world in sor - row sleep - ing, One

Andante espressivo. $\text{♩} = 72$.p Sw. soft 8 ft.Ped. soft 16 ft. Sw. coupd.

star its vi - gil keep - ing— God's pi - ty for poor men!— Till heav'n her grace be giv - ing, The dy - ing and the liv - ing, And love be born a - gain,— mf poco rit.poco rit.

Più mosso.

SOPRANO SOLO.

Lo! mid-night's gloom is clear - ing, The dawn of prom - ise near - ing; And

Più mosso. $\text{♩} = 88$.mf

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

through the sun-der'd dark, The hosts of Au - gels wing - ing With won - der of such

f

sing - ing, Men stay'd their breath to hark!—

ad lib. Lento. pp Sw.

Allegro con spirito. ♩ = 69.
Full Sw.

Taba or Gt. 8 & 4 with Full Sw. coupd. (8ves. ad lib.)

increase Ped.

CHORUS.

f sf

"Glo - ry, Glo - ry! Spread the won-drous sto - ry, On thro' all earth's

f sf

"Glo - ry, Glo - ry! Spread the won-drous sto - ry, On thro' all earth's

f sf

"Glo - ry, Glo - ry! Spread the won-drous sto - ry, On thro' all earth's

f sf

"Glo - ry, Glo - ry! Spread the won-drous sto - ry, On thro' all earth's f Gt. senza Org. ad lib.

Gt. to Ped.

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ; Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n !

shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ; Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n !

shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ; Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n !

shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ; Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n !

Gt. 4 ft. off.

Ped.

f Peace and goodwill to men be giv'n, — cres. Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is ff

f Peace and goodwill to men be giv'n, — cres. Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is ff

f Peace and goodwill to men be giv'n, — cres. Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is ff

f Peace and goodwill to men be giv'n, — cres. Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is ff

cres. add 4 ft. ff

rit. born, . . since Christ rit. is born ! " . .

rit. born, . . since Christ rit. is born ! " . .

rit. born, . . since Christ rit. is born ! " . .

rit. born, . . since Christ rit. is born ! " . .

Adagio. p Sw. soft 8 ft.

rit. senza Ped.

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

Andante poco tranquillo.

SOPRANO SOLO, OR SOPRANOS IN UNISON.

p

Sing, sing, a - gain, ye choirs of ho - ly

Andante poco tranquillo. ♩ = 76.

p

Ped. soft 16 ft. Sw. to Ped.

an - gels! Joy too long has had her meed of

mf cres.

tears, Sing of hate's o'er throw-ing,— Sing of mer-cy grow-ing Through all

mf f

f dim. espress. rall. p lands . . and a - ges, hu-man griefs . . . and fears. . .

dim. rall. p

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

a tempo.

QUARTET OR SEMI-CHORUS.

p molto espress. cres.

Peace! peace that ma - keth wars to cease, . .

Whisp - 'ring Hope's sweet

Peace! peace that ma - keth wars to cease, . .

Whisp - 'ring Hope's sweet

Peace! peace that ma - keth wars to cease,

Whisp - 'ring Hope's sweet

Peace! peace that ma - keth wars to cease,

Whisp - 'ring Hope's sweet

a tempo.

p senza Org. cres.

prom - ise o - ver wide - flung waves, . . Wa - king Love's red prom - ise o - ver wide - flung waves, . . Wa - king Love's red prom - ise o - ver wide - flung waves, . . Wa - king Love's red prom - ise o - ver wide - flung waves, . . Wa - king Love's red ro - ses o'er re - mem - ber'd graves; . . Hush - ing all our ro - ses o'er re - mem - ber'd graves; . . Hush - ing all our ro - ses o'er re - mem - ber'd graves; . . Hush - ing all our ro - ses o'er re - mem - ber'd graves; . . Hush - ing all our

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

poco cres. espress. cres.

sor - row In the dawn-ing mor - row When God shall call, shall call His

poco cres. espress. cres.

sor - row In the dawn-ing mor - row When God shall call His

poco cres. espress. cres.

sor - row In the dawn-ing mor - row When God shall call His

poco cres. espress. cres.

sor - row In the dawn-ing mor - row When God shall call His

p pp poco lento. ppp

chil - dren home be - yond the dy - - ing years.

p pp poco lento. ppp

chil - dren home be - yond the dy - - ing years.

p pp poco lento. ppp

chil - dren home be - yond the dy - - ing years.

p pp poco lento. ppp

chil - dren home be - yond the dy - - ing years.

p pp poco lento. ppp

Allegro con spirito. ♩. = 69.
Full Sv.

Tuba or Gt. 8 & 4 with Full. Sv. coupd.

(8 res. ad lib.)

increase Ped.

CHORUS.

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

f sf

"Glo - - ry, Glo - - ry! Spread the won - drous sto - - ry,

f sf

"Glo - - ry, Glo - - ry! Spread the won - drous sto - - ry,

f sf

"Glo - - ry, Glo - - ry! Spread the won - drous sto - - ry,

f sf

"Glo - - ry, Glo - - ry! Spread the won - drous sto - - ry,

f

Gt.

lit. to Ped.

On through all earth's shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ;

On through all earth's shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ;

On through all earth's shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ;

On through all earth's shad - ows . . till the fur - thest break of morn ;

senza Org. ad lib.

f

Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n! Peace and good - will to men be giv'n, -

f

Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n! Peace and good - will to men be giv'n, -

f

Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n! Peace and good - will to men be giv'n, -

f

Glo - ry to God in high - est heav'n! Peace and good - will to men be giv'n, -

Gt. 4 ft. off.

O WORLD IN SORROW SLEEPING.

cres. ff rit.

Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is born, . . since Christ

cres. ff rit.

Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is born, . . since Christ

cres. ff rit.

Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is born, . . since Christ

cres. ff rit.

Sin o'er-cast, and sor - row past, since Christ is born, . . since Christ

Maestoso. fff

is born ! " Glo - ry to God in high - - est heav'n.

fff

is . . born ! " Glo - ry to God in high - - est heav'n.

fff

is born ! " Glo - ry to God in high - - est heav'n.

fff

is born ! " Glo - ry to God in high - - est heav'n.

Maestoso. $\text{♩} = 92.$ fff

gov - ern - ment . . shall be up - on His shoul - der, . . the gov - ern - ment .

gov - ern - ment . . shall be up - on His shoul - der, . . the gov - ern - ment .

gov - ern - ment . . shall be up - on His shoul - der, . . the gov - ern - ment .

gov - ern - ment . . shall be up - on His shoul - der, . . the gov - ern - ment .

. . shall be up - on His shoul - der; and of His king - dom, of His king - dom

. . shall be up - on His shoul - der; and of His king - dom, of His king -

. . shall be up - on His shoul - der; and of His king - dom, of His king - dom

. . shall be up - on His shoul - der; and of His king - dom, of His king - dom

there . . shall be no end, there shall

- dom there . . shall be no end, . . .

there . . shall be no end, there shall there . . shall be, . . shall be no end, . . .

dim.

dim. sempre.

be no end. poco rit.

mf there .. shall be .. no end. poco rit.

be no end. poco rit.

mf there .. shall be .. no end. poco rit.

a tempo.
sost.
Lord, Thou art become gra - cious un - to Thy land, Thou art become p sost.

Lord,

p sost.
Lord, Thou art become a tempo.

p Sw.

poco cres.
gra - cious un - to Thy land; . . . Thou hast turn - ed a - way the cap -

poco cres.
Thou art become gra - cious un - to Thy land; Thou hast turn - ed, turn - ed a -

poco cres.
gra - cious un - to Thy land; . . . Thou hast turn - ed a - way . . the cap - mp sost.

Thou hast turn - ed a

poco cres.

- tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for - giv'n the of - fence, the of - fence of Thy

- way the cap - tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for - giv'n the of - fence of Thy

- tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for - giv'n the of - fence, the of - fence of Thy

- way the cap - tiv - i - ty of Ja - cob. Thou hast for - giv'n the of - fence of Thy peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their peo - ple, and cov - er - ed all their sins.

sins.

sins.

sins.

Lord, Thou art be-come

poco rit.

Ch. Clarinet.

Lord, Thou . . . art . . be-come
 Lord, Thou art be-come
 Lord, Thou art be-come gra - - - cious, gra - cious un - - - to Thy land, Thou . . art be - come . .
 gra - cious un - - - to Thy land.
 gra - cious, gra - cious un - to Thy land.
 gra - cious, gra - cious un - to Thy land.
 gra - cious, gra - cious un - to Thy land.
 gra - cious, gra - cious un - to Thy land.

poco rit.
pp
poco rit.
pp
poco rit.
pp
poco rit.
pp

(Continued from page 752.)

English or the American language. Let us have opera by all means, but it must be understood.

THE WANT OF UNDERSTANDING

To-day it is a new public that fills our places of entertainment, and I hold very strongly that, as regards opera, this public has to be educated. For this reason the recent seasons in English at Covent Garden have been deplorable. They probably frightened away more people than they attracted. My view is that the process of educating the public has to be begun all over again. I say begun again, because up to a period I will place at about ten years ago, the London public as regards representations in the vernacular—thanks largely to the efforts of first the original Carl Rosa Company, with its annual seasons at Drury Lane, and afterwards of the Moody-Manners Company with its summer representations at the Lyric Theatre, where opera in English probably reached a higher stage of perfection than ever before or since—understood opera better than it does now. The reason was that these organizations gave all types of works. There was something for everybody in their répertoires. It has been the fault of later day efforts that they have ignored the fact that there is always a proportion of the audience that has never heard an opera before. To such, 'Tristan' would be incomprehensible; not so 'The Bohemian Girl.' To-day with the new public the need for help in understanding opera is great. If there is to be any future for opera in English in this country it will only come about because people understand it. They can be helped to understand it by a gradual unfolding of its development, and not by the more or less adequate representation of its latest phase. Therefore there is much to be said for an undertaking like the Old Vic. There is just as much to be said for other undertakings doing similar work provided they are as permanent—which is everything.

A CALL FOR PERMANENCE

It is just this question of permanence that is the snag in the stream. We have had a good deal of opera. The Carl Rosa Company has done London admirable service with the really helpful Lyceum seasons, and the performances at the Surrey in the early part of the year brought opera to the people's door. But what of the future? What is wanted is a London opera giving us spring and autumn representations of all types in English. Why London should be without opera for the greater part of the year is one of those things 'no feller can understand.' It is inconceivable that a huge city like ours should be without representation of this art-form while the provinces have it in varied contrast all the year round, and every little place in Germany has its own opera, over four hundred companies tour Italy, and France has representations everywhere and, in the big cities, by the best artists from the Paris Opéra.

In the meantime all that the month of October has done to satisfy the positive demand on the part of the public is to give two performances a week, brought about by the immense enthusiasm and never-ending labour of the few enthusiasts at the Old Vic. Miss Baylis and her lieutenant, Mr. Charles Corri, deserve our warmest thanks for their efforts. So far they have given Gounod's 'Faust,' Bizet's 'Carmen,' Balfe's 'The Bohemian Girl,' and Wagner's 'Tannhäuser.' In these Miss Muriel Gough, Miss Irene Ansley, Mr. Ben Morgan, Mr. Joseph Farrington,

Mr. Robert Curtis, Mr. Sumner Austin, and others, to say nothing of those ardent zealots who form the chorus, have all done sterling work which has produced definite results of attracting the public. But this is only a drop in the ocean comprising at least seven millions of potential opera-goers. It is time somebody took the matter up. Next month will see a little more opera giving with the Covent Garden and Surrey undertakings, but, I repeat, it is not enough.

I should like to add a word of thanks to Mr. H. W. Gray for his interesting letter published last month on the subject of British opera. I am in perfect sympathy with his valuable suggestion that 'Caractacus' would make a good opera. Like all of Sir Edward Elgar's music there is a strong dramatic vein underlying the work which would bear transplanting to the stage. It is only necessary to bear in mind the extraordinary effect produced by Mendelssohn's 'Elijah' as transferred to the stage after over sixty years' familiarity as an oratorio. But it was put on by a master-hand—that of Mr. Charles Manners—and there was a company to perform it. Given again the aid of such a hand—certainly the best since the ever lamented Augustus Harris—and provided a company to perform it, I think with Mr. Gray that we should certainly find 'Caractacus' something towards the great desideratum, a really British opera as distinct from the ancient British music-drama which bores and does not elevate.

Chamber Music for Amateurs

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur chamber musicians who wish to get into touch with other players. We shall be glad if those making use of the scheme will let us know when their announcements have borne fruit. Failing such notice, advertisements will be inserted three times.

String Players (amateur) wanted to co-operate with choir in recitals during next winter. Opportunities for study and performance of chamber music, accompaniment of choral works, &c.—Herbert C. R. GALER, St. Andrew's Church, Whitehall Park, N. 19.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist to form trio for weekly practice. She has a number of classical and modern trios. London, S.W. district.—L. G. K., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wanted to complete quartet, Monday evenings 7.30 to 10. Brownswood Park, N. district.—'Amateur,' c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist desires to join trio or quartet for practice of good music. Birmingham district.—B. S., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to form trio (violin, 'cello, and pianoforte) for the study of classical and modern works of moderate difficulty—e.g., Haydn's Trios. Monday or Thursday night, or Sunday.—W. M., 'St. Mary's,' Heathcote Street, Hull.

A few more string players are required for an amateur orchestra that has recently been formed at Bermondsey. Rehearsals on Fridays, at 8.0, in the Fort Road Institute, Bermondsey. Conductor, F. J. HUBBARD, 41, Trafalgar Road, S.E. 15.

Good 'cellist wanted for pianoforte trio.—Mrs. H. A. KERR, 15, Wickham Road, Brockley, S.E. 4.

Lady pianist would like to meet with 'cellist and violinist for practice with view to getting engagements.—MABELLE FREKE, c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist to form trio. Music of all schools. Leamington and Warwick district.—'Harmony,' c/o Musical Times.

Violinist, good sight-reader and sympathetic player, required to fill vacancy in quartet. Modern works, e.g., Ravel. Crouch End, N.—MR. A. MARRIOTT, 32, Drayton Park, N. 5.

Violinist-pianist (young lady) would like to meet advanced or fairly advanced violinist-pianist (either lady or gentleman) for interchange of practice at Nottingham. Any morning or Thursday evenings.—MISS POOL, 53, Sneinton Road, Nottingham.

Lady viola player seeks practice with chamber music or orchestral players. Streatham or neighbourhood preferred, or could arrange West End if on Monday or Tuesday afternoon.—'OMEGA,' c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (male) wishes to meet others to form a trio or quartet party for mutual practice of classical works. North London district.—'ENSEMBLE,' c/o Musical Times.

[Will 'Ensemble' kindly send his address to the Editor?]

SOME NEW PART-SONGS

Not very many years ago one part-song was pretty much like another. The words generally dealt in an obvious way with such natural phenomena as the shades of evening or the rising, shining, or setting of the sun or moon. The form was that of a melody at the top with three useful but unenterprising parts beneath. The difference between a part-song and a madrigal was understood to lie in the fact that the first was harmonic and the second polyphonic. The part-song of to-day reaches out a hand in various directions. It may be as polyphonic as a madrigal, as tuneful as a ballad, as impressionistic as a piece of instrumental programme music, or as simple as a hymn-tune. It has the further advantage of being set almost invariably to real poetry instead of to rhymed platitudes.

A batch of five part-songs just issued by Messrs. Novello illustrates these remarks. In two the main interest is melodic, in two it is melodic-cum-polyphonic, and in one it combines these characteristics with some striking pictorial effects. As to the poetry, it need only be said that John Masefield is responsible for the words of three, and that Shakespeare and Robert Greene are drawn on for two.

Edward German's 'London Town' (Masefield) is so characteristic of the composer that we may imagine him writing one of his usual spontaneous and attractive song-tunes, and then adding vocal parts instead of a pianoforte accompaniment. This is not to imply that the added voice-parts lack individuality. On the contrary, they contain many deft touches that give them character without destroying their simplicity. The setting is not difficult. It fits the jolly words like a glove, and almost sings itself. Audiences will revel in it, and hum bits of it on the way home.

E. T. Sweeting's 'Tewkesbury Road' (Masefield) shows a good deal of the same tuneful quality, though it is less straightforward owing to the points of imitation. It is only moderately difficult, and has the right pleasant open-air feeling.

W. McNaught's 'Ah! what is love?' (Robert Greene) and J. A. Sowerbutts's 'Sigh no more, ladies,' are excellent specimens of free and tuneful part-writing. The style is that of which Parry and Stanford gave us so many examples—a modern and very attractive substitute for the madrigal, with all the polyphonic interest of the old form plus a more general lightness of touch and a warmer harmonic scheme. Mr. McNaught's part-song has a slender texture well in keeping with the quasi-humorous words, and his occasional hints of modal harmony are also in the picture. Among the happiest touches are the treatment of the word 'snore' on page 5, and the piquantly simple final cadence.

Mr. Sowerbutts's idiom is more vigorous, as befits his text. There is plenty of harmonic interest. The grinding of the inverted pedal on the word 'sigh' may perhaps be a trifle too aggressive for the word, but it is an excellent musical effect. The change of key at 'Sing no more ditties,' and the bold treatment of 'The fraud of men,' are also well-made points.

A very original piece of work is H. Balfour Gardiner's 'An old song resung' (Masefield yet again). The first verse runs:

I saw a ship a-sailing, a-sailing, a-sailing,
With emeralds and rubies and sapphires in her hold;
And a bosun in a blue coat bawling at the railing,
Piping through a silver call that had a chain of gold;
The summer wind was failing, and the tall ship rolled,
A-sailing, a-sailing, a-sailing.

The composer employs a melody of the shanty type, and treats it freely with fine descriptive results. The close of the first two verses, for example, with the opening melodic phrase handed from part to part, is a striking example of what may be done with the simplest of material. There is a good deal of division of parts in the vigorous second and third verses, though the music is not very difficult. A real thrill is provided in the last page by the realistic treatment of 'a-sinking,' with a despairing 'ah!' from S.A.T. in five parts. A foot-note suggests that in small choirs this may be omitted. Certainly it is the kind of point that must be made to perfection, or left alone. 'An old song resung' is one of the most telling and original part-songs we have seen for a very long time. In fact, it is a second 'Cargoes,' and we shall be surprised if its vogue is not at least as great.

The above works, with those of Gerrard Williams reviewed in last month's Musical Times, afford welcome proof that in this peculiarly English form there is likely to be no falling off either in quantity or quality.

Church and Organ Music

MEMORIALS TO CHARLES HARFORD LLOYD

The many friends of the late Dr. Lloyd will be interested in the following letter which appeared in a recent issue of the Eton College Chronicle. (A second letter appeared on October 14, stating that a sum of fifty pounds had already been subscribed, and that the fund would be closed at the end of the year.)

'MEMORIALS TO DR. LLOYD.

'To the Editor of the "Eton College Chronicle."

'Sir,—Etonians past and present may be glad to know that on the north wall of the Screen in College Chapel, by the staircase leading to the organ loft, a brass tablet has recently been placed in memory of Dr. Lloyd.

'The Latin inscription, appropriately simple, is but a plain record of an active life, yet it contains two words which happily reflect the charm of his nature and the brilliancy of his genius.

'In dulcem memoriam Caroli Harford
Lloyd A.M. D. Mus. qui apud Ecclesiam
Cathedralem Gloucestrensem anno

MDCCLXXVI organista factus ibi sex annos exegit dein apud Ecclesiam Cathedralem Christi Oxoniae eodem officio functus annos x Collegii Etonensis Praecentor usque ad annum MCMXIV. eminebat, denique anno MCMXVII Capellarum Regiarum musicae docendae praefectus est.

Natus die XVI^{mo}. Oct. MDCCCLXIX.

Obiit eodem die anno MCMXIX.

'Some of his friends who wish for a memorial of more than twenty years' service to Eton have suggested that a School prize for organ playing should be founded. It is felt also that, if sufficient money were available, some further memorial might fitly be placed in the choir vestry now in course of construction. I will gladly receive any contributions from friends or pupils towards these objects, and will state later how far it is possible to carry out the schemes which have been suggested.

'Your obedient servant,

'A. M. GOODHART.

'Walpole House, Eton College.'

We append a translation of the inscription :

'To the dear memory of Charles Harford Lloyd, M.A., Mus.D. Appointed organist of Gloucester Cathedral in 1876 he held that post for six years. Afterwards organist of Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, for ten years (1882-92). He held with distinction the post of Precentor (and Musical Instructor) at Eton College from 1892 to 1914. Finally appointed Organist (and Composer) to H.M. Chapels Royal; 1917.'

Born October 16, 1849.

Died October 16, 1919.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC

Office for the Holy Communion (in G). By Charles Macpherson; Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis (in G). By Charles Macpherson; Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis (in B $\flat$). By Ernest Bullock; 'Bread of the World' (Anthem). By H. A. Chambers; 'By the waters of Babylon' (Anthem). By Palestrina; 'Rest in the Lord' (Anthem). By C. Lee Williams.

[Novello & Co.]

A healthy sign of the times is the steadily growing supply by our leading Church composers of music worthy of being associated with the various offices of the Church, and at the same time suitable for general use in ordinary parish churches. There is a call everywhere now for music that is dignified and ecclesiastical in style and not unduly prolonged by over-elaboration and verbal repetition.

Dr. Macpherson's new setting of the Office for the Holy Communion in G is a model of what such things should be. Here we have music which, it is scarcely necessary to say, is admirably written for the voices, and which will nevertheless present no difficulties to the average parish church choir. It is straightforward and diatonic in style, and flows easily onwards from start to finish, with no uncomfortable halts and no repetition of words. A noteworthy feature is the finely-written organ part. This is everywhere excellent, alike in the strong, flowing, forte passages and in the admirably contrasted treatment of the quieter sections. A striking passage for the organ occurs at 'And the third day He rose again,' where over a sustained pedal an ascending sequence of harmonies leads through some interesting modulations to a triumphant climax. This passage appropriately recurs at 'And I look for the Resurrection.'

In the Benedictus the organ is mainly reserved for the building up of an imposing finish; in the opening part it is used only to connect, by soft passages for manuals alone, the unaccompanied vocal phrases. Very charming is the accompaniment to the Agnus Dei, with its persistent syncopated part for the left hand and soft solo work on another manual. This beautiful little movement, by the way, may be sung by A.T.T.B. if desired. It is laid out for soprano or contralto (solo or chorus), tenor (solo or chorus), and finally S.A.T.B. (or A.T.T.B.). An alternative setting for four-part chorus, chiefly unaccompanied, is provided.

The vocal writing, though simple, is always interesting, the middle section of the Gloria, for example, being admirably designed to provide vocal contrast by simple means. Short phrases for sopranos alone are answered by altos, tenors, and basses in three-part harmony, with tenors divided and altos singing with first tenors.

There is room for more and still more of the type of music here provided by Dr. Macpherson. Combining as it does musicianship of a high order with simplicity and directness of treatment, it should be sure of a warm welcome by choirs and congregations alike.

Dr. Macpherson has also set the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis 'to simple phrases in the key of G intended for congregational use.' The music is dignified in style, and there is a refreshing absence of that squareness of rhythm usually associated with settings of this sort. Variety is obtained by a judicious mixture of unison and harmonized verses and passages for men or boys alone. In those churches where congregational practices are a regular feature, the people could soon be got to appreciate and take an intelligent share in singing such music as this.

Dr. Bullock's setting of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis is for men's voices (T.B.). The composer's methods here are in striking contrast with the reflective treatment adopted by him in his setting of the same Canticles in D, recently reviewed in these columns. The result, however, is equally successful. The vocal writing is very effective, and is supported by a well-developed organ accompaniment. Dr. Bullock's style is interesting and unconventional, and tenors and basses will thoroughly enjoy singing this work.

Bishop Heber's words have been treated simply and expressively by H. A. Chambers in his short full anthem 'Bread of the world in mercy broken.' The part-writing is melodious and flowing, and is nowhere difficult. The organ accompaniment does little more than duplicate the voices, which, however, are occasionally left alone with good effect.

Lovers of the old unaccompanied polyphonic music will be grateful to Dr. G. J. Bennett for his admirable adaptation of Palestrina's music to English words. Everything that is possible appears to have been done by the editor to secure an intelligent rendering by the singers, and to prevent them from falling into the various pitfalls—wrong accentuation, &c.—which await those inexperienced in interpreting this kind of music. It should present no great difficulty to an average well-balanced choir.

'Rest in the Lord'—words by Bishop E. H. Bickersteth—is a short anthem for quartet or chorus. Mr. Lee Williams's music, intended for unaccompanied singing, is sufficiently simple to be well within the powers of choirs of modest attainments.

G. G.

A NONCONFORMIST CHORAL FESTIVAL

Readers of musical journals, even of those dealing with Church music, may be forgiven if they confess ignorance of the present standard of choice and performance in our Nonconformist Churches. Records of organ recitals and oratorio performances are fairly frequent, but information as to the music of the ordinary services is rarely found. The reason may be, that effort to increase musical interest usually aims at performing some larger work, and little endeavour is directed towards the better rendering of the weekly services. If so, it cannot be said that the Nonconformists are singular in this respect.

The Wellingborough and District Nonconformist Choir this year numbered six hundred voices, drawn from the principal choirs of the district, and the annual service consisted almost solely of works used or suitable for use in the yearly round of services. It is to the credit of the committee that the Service Book for the thirty-sixth Choral Festival, held on Saturday, October 9, shows no departure from the original object, the material being soundly chosen, and lying well within the capacities of the various choirs, to whom it should be of permanent use.

The Evening Service opened with a setting of the Sanctus by the conductor, Mr. F. Heddon Bond. The hymn 'Stand up, stand up for Jesus,' sung to the tune 'Thornbury' (Basil Harwood) appears in the second supplement A. & M. Psalm 97 was sung to Josiah Booth's chant in A flat, and the well-known chant of Troyte was used for 'The strain upraise.' Two short anthems were included, Stainer's 'The Lord our God be with us,' and A. H. Brewer's 'Blessing, Glory, Wisdom, and Thanks,' with 'The Heavens are telling' as the principal item. Other hymns were 'Fling out the Banner,' to the 'English Hymnal' tune of W. H. Bell, which afforded welcome rhythmic relief; and for the congregation 'How firm a foundation,' to J. Stanley's 'Montgomery.' The closing hymn was 'O when shall we behold,' to the conductor's tune 'Launceston' from the new Congregational Hymnary.

The choir reached a high standard, especially in Haydn's chorus. The trio was artistically sung by a semi-chorus composed of members of the Raunds choir.

Chanting has been a feature at these Festivals in recent years, and the result on this occasion showed efforts to treat freely the rhythm of the chant, considerable success in this respect being achieved.

A high standard of hymn-singing was naturally expected, and though the results obtained from such a body were at times magnificent, one felt that most of the choirs have yet to realise what can be done if study is given not only to the notes but to the rhythm of the words, and above all to real musical tone. The writer is certain that the conductor was disappointed to find at the rehearsal that the tunes were not note-perfect. The choir that is above giving attention to the smaller parts of the service can never hope to become first-rate.

High praise is due to the Festival committee, to the organist, Mr. G. H. Woolston, and to the hon. secretaries, Mr. A. Early and Mr. F. C. Rice.

W. C.

A WONDERFUL FAMILY

Mr. James Boydell has just celebrated his jubilee as organist of Christ Church, Leigh. He preceded this fifty years of service by five years at St. Thomas's, Bedford. During his long term at Leigh, Mr. Boydell has missed only about eight Sundays through sickness. But even this record has been beaten by another member of the family, his grandfather, Joseph Kerfoot, having been organist at Leigh for fifty-four years without a single absence from duty, though he was blind from three years of age! He had a great reputation as a player, especially of fugues. He died in 1860. His brother Thomas was also an organist for over fifty years, holding posts at Warrington Parish Church, Boston (Lincolnshire), Hereford, and Armagh. The best known of this remarkable family, however, was Joseph Kerfoot, who was organist at Winwick Parish Church for fifty-two years and ten months, being appointed in 1837. He was never once late, and died in 1894, aged seventy-five, within a few yards of the spot where he was born.

THE CANADIAN GUILD OF ORGANISTS

The above organization is changing its name, and will in future be known as the Canadian College of Organists. Centres are being established throughout the Dominion, with Toronto as the headquarters. Dr. Albert Ham is retiring from the presidency, having held that office since the Guild's inception in 1909.

The Bristol branch of the Church Music Society preceded its annual meeting on October 12 by a service at All Saints. There was a large attendance, and the impressive effect of the service was largely due to the fact that it was preceded by a congregational rehearsal lasting nearly an hour, conducted by Mr. Arnold Barter. The result in the Canticles, with Byrd's Fauxbourdons, was particularly fine. The branch is in a flourishing condition, and has arranged the following lectures, &c., for the coming winter: October 25, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, 'Proportion in Church Music'; November 9, Mr. Harvey Grace, 'Style in Church Music'; December 30, Sir Henry Hadow, 'Hymns and Hymn-Singing'; January 27, Captain Francis Burgess, 'The Beginnings of Christian Church Music'; February 12, a Hymn Festival conducted by Prof. H. Walford Davies. Mr. Athelstane Riley will lecture on 'Sequences, Proses, and Tropes' on a date not yet arranged.

There is a welcome tendency in the direction of leavening organ recitals with string music. In some cases the leavening is so liberal that the result is a chamber music recital in which the organ is merely one of the team. An excellent programme of this type has just reached us. The recital took place in the Church at Ormesby, a small village near Middlesbrough. The building was packed, and the pleasure of the audience was unmistakable. Not many village organists would have the courage to put so good a scheme as this before their hearers:

'Solemn Melody' (strings and organ)	Walford Davies.
'Hear ye, Israel'	Mendelssohn.
Slow movement from String Quartet	Egar.
'Inflammatus'	Desvignes.
Two Bagatelles for Organ, two violins, and 'cello
String Quintet in B flat (two movements)	Mendelssohn.

The vocal solos were accompanied by the strings, the organ filling in the wind parts. The organist, Mr. G. S. Pelmar, and his group of players and singers are to be commended for their refusal to believe that in order to attract and please a crowd one must play and sing third-rate music.

At St. Mary's Church, Tenby, two performances of 'Messiah' have recently been given to very large congregations, under the conductorship of the organist, Mr. W. Cecil Williams. The service choir was augmented for both occasions. Mr. Cecil Williams has also just concluded a series of organ recitals. On October 17 he will have concluded twenty-five years' service at Tenby.

The late Canon Rawnsley left £1,000 to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle Cathedral as a fund towards building a vestry for the Cathedral, or for purposes in connection with the Cathedral Choir School, and £1,000 to the Vicar and Churchwardens of Crosthwaite Parish Church for educational objects and the provision of a salary for the organist, or to aid the curates' fund.

Bournemouth visitors who are interested in organ music should note that Dr. H. Holloway has recently started a series of recitals at St. Stephen's. These will be given on the first and third Wednesdays in each month during the winter (our informant does not give the time of day).

Mr. Quentin Moraren Maclean will give a series of organ recitals at All Souls', Langham Place, on Fridays at one o'clock, beginning on November 5.

As a war memorial a new organ is being erected in Crediton Parish Church at a cost of £4,800, of which considerably over £3,000 has already been subscribed.

ORGAN RECITALS

Mr. Ernest E. Chastenev, Cromer Parish Church (four recitals)—Barcarolle, Sterndale Bennett; Grand Chœur alla Handel, Faulkes; Fugue in G minor, Toccata and Fugue in D minor, and Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Bach; 'Cloche du Soir,' Chauvet; March in E flat, Willy; Marche Pontificale, Lemmens.

Mr. John Pullein, St. Martin's, Lincoln—Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Berceuse and Carillon, Vierne; Preludes, 'Rockingham' and Croft's 136th, Parry; Three Miniatures, Pullein; Chant Pastoral, Dubois; Final-Marche (Suite No. 2), Boëllmann.

Mr. Paul Rochard, Kendal Parish Church (four recitals)—Imperial March, Elgar; Passacaglia and 'The Wild Hills of Clare,' Cyril Scott; Schiller March, Meyerbeer; Fantasia on 'Urbs Beata,' Faulkes; Grand offertoire in D, Batiste.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Choral in G minor, Vierne; Two Choral Improvisations, Karg-Elert; Finale from Symphony No. 4, Widor.

Mr. Frederick W. Large, Camden Parish Church—Concert Overture, Lyon; Sea Song, MacDowell; Sonata No. 4, Guilmant.

Mr. Henry C. J. Churchill, Bromley (Kent) Congregational Church—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor; Allegretto and Toccata in F (Symphony No. 5), Widor; Postlude in D, Smart; 'Question and Answer,' Wolstenholme.

Mr. A. G. Mathew, St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta—Imperial March, Elgar; Solemn Melody, Walford Davies; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Allegro Appassionata (Sonata No. 1), Harwood.

Mr. J. A. Meale, Central Hall, Westminster (five recitals)—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Air with Variations from Symphony in D, Haydn; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann; Holsworth Church Bells, S. S. Wesley; Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Overture to 'Oberon'; Concert Overture in C minor, Hollins; Fugue on a Trumpet Theme, Krebs.

Mr. Alan Burr, Blakeney Church, Norfolk—Choral Improvisation, 'Nun Danket,' Karg-Elert; Elevation and Offertoire (Messe Basse), Vierne; Song without words, Holloway; Villanella, Ireland; Préludium in G, Toccata and Fugue in D minor, and Fugue in E flat, Bach.

Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Stephen's, Walbrook—A Bach Programme. St. Nicholas, Cole Abbey (three recitals)—Cantilène in F, Rheinberger; Overture, 'Occasional' Oratorio; Sonate Pascale, Lemmens; Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Andante from Quartet in F, Haydn.

Mr. Alex. McConachie, Christ Church, St. Kilda—Sonata in C minor, Guilmant; Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Pensee d'Automne, Jongen; Scherzoso (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. H. Cyril Robinson, St. Mary's, Haverfordwest—Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn; Three Miniatures, Pullein; Choral Improvisation No. 66, Karg-Elert; Prelude, Theme, Variations, and Finale, Guilmant.

Mr. E. E. Vinnicombe, St. Peter's, Sudbury—Concerto in B flat, Handel; Legend, Harvey Grace; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; An Evening Song, Baird; 'La Cathédrale Engloutie,' Debussy; Schiller March, Meyerbeer.

Mr. R. E. Redman, Clapham Congregational Church—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; 'The Curfew,' Horsman; Andante Cantando (Symphony in E minor), Holloway; Concert Overture in C minor, Redman.

Mr. Fred Gostelow, Luton Parish Church—Fugue in D, Bach; Pean, Pearce; Suite in F minor, Driffill; Passacaglia, Cyril Scott.

Mr. Stanley E. Lucas, Presbyterian Church, Canonbury—Offertoire No. 5, Willy; Fantasia in C minor, Bach; Andante from the Violin Concerto, Mendelssohn; Marche Héroïque, Saint-Saëns.

Dr. Henry T. Pringuer, St. Michael and All Angels, Lyndhurst—Allegro en forme d'Ouverture, Smart; Impromptu in F, Coleridge-Taylor; Fugue in G, Krebs; Toccata (Symphony No. 5), Widor.

Dr. R. Walker Robson, Christ Church, Crouch End (four recitals)—Basso Ostinato, Arensky; Minuett, Dvorak; Coronation March, Tchaikovsky; Scherzo in E, Gigout; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann; Toccata in the Dorian Mode, Bach; Nocturne in D flat, Baird; Allegretto in E flat, Wolstenholme; Prelude and Angel's Farewell from 'Dream of Gerontius.'

Mr. Claude A. Forster, St. John's, Forfar—Romance in D flat, Lemare; Fugue in G, Bach; Canzonetta, Nicodé; 'The Seraph's Strain' and Carillon, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Norman Collie, Stoke Newington Parish Church—Funeral March and Hymn of Seraphs, Guilmant; Toccata in F, Bach. St. Stephen's, Walbrook—Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Andante from String Quartet and Arabesque in E, Debussy; Largo and Finale from 'New World' Symphony.

Mr. Herbert E. Knott, St. Anne's, Moseley, Birmingham—Fugue in G, Bach; Prelude, J. H. Moore; 'Finlandia'; Scherzo Caprice, Rowley.

Dr. W. G. Alcock, New College Chapel, N.W.—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Cantilène, Rheinberger; Choral in A minor, Franck; Andantino, Wolstenholme; Preludes on 'Adorn thyself, dear soul,' Bach, 'In deepest need,' Karg-Elert, and an 18th century hymn-tune, Parry.

Mr. W. R. Anderson, St. Laurence Jewry—Musette and 'Solitude' (Arcadian Idyll), Lemare; Prelude on a Theme of Tallis, Darke; Andante Tranquillo, Stanford; Nocturne and Finale, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Bertram Hollins, St. Laurence Jewry—Intermezzo, Rheinberger; Angelus du Soir, Bonnet; Toccata in F, Bach; Prelude on 'Old 104th,' Parry. Beckenham Congregational Church—Grand Chœur in G minor, Hollins; Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Menuet, Moszkowski; Cortège, Faulkes.

Mr. F. J. A. Eccles, Aston Villa Wesleyan Church—Arcadian Idyll, Lemare; Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Prière et Berceuse, Guilmant; Finale, Wolstenholme.

Dr. F. H. Wood, De Montfort Hall, Leicester—Concert Overture in F, Faulkes; Minuet Nuptiale, Lemare; Finale (Sonata No. 1), Mendelssohn.

APPOINTMENT

Mr. Stanley E. Lucas, organist and choirmaster, Trinity Presbyterian Church, Canonbury, N.

Letters to the Editor

THE IDEAS OF M. VINCENT D'INDY

SIR,—I find a great mistake in the translation of my little work, 'Les idées de M. d'Indy' (Musical Times for August, p. 524). I read:

When Beethoven wrote:

we find:

'Tis the contrary!

The second writing is Beethoven's; the first (altered) is the writing of M. d'Indy.—Very truly yours,

C. SAINT-SAËNS.

Rue de Courcelles 83 bis, Paris.

'SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION'

SIR,—I am not by any means a hide-bound conservative in matters musical, and I should not be greatly averse to changing the notation even of established masterpieces if there were some real gain, in clearness or convenience, through doing so. I cannot help feeling, however, that some of the examples of 'improvements' put forward by Mr. Elliot Button (and quoted by you in your October number, p. 688) are, to say the least, rather unfortunately chosen. Take, for instance, the opening of the Schumann Romance in F sharp. Is it not perfectly apparent that in Schumann's version the melody stands out far more clearly to the eye than in Mr. Button's? (I think also that here 6-8 is preferable to 3-4 as time-signature.) The example from Bach (Toccata in D minor) seems even more unfortunate. Surely everyone will agree that the impression produced on the eye, by the original, differs absolutely from that produced by the 'amended' version: and who will be bold enough to assert that this will not make itself felt in performance?

May I add that while, in German music, the method of notation often appears clumsy and heavy, yet I have generally found on examination that this proceeds from a genuine and essential turgidity of thought, and cannot therefore be altered without producing a clear incompatibility between the thought itself and the means adopted for its outward manifestation.—Yours, &c.,

A. R. CRIPPS.

10, Ambrose Place, Worthing.

October 14, 1920.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE RISING SEVENTH

SIR,—Will you allow me to correct a slight omission, which however serves to obscure the sense, in my letter on the 'Chronology of the rising 7th' in your last issue? Line 3 of p. 701 should read: With regard to the first [i.e., of the two progressions mentioned] I find it first mentioned, &c.—Yours, &c.,

F. T. ARNOLD.

University College, Cardiff.

October 17, 1920.

THE NEW WAGNER POLICY AT QUEEN'S HALL

SIR,—Forgive me for alluding to this matter once more, but I find it very difficult to square Mr. Kalisch's statement about Bayreuth refusing its permission for excerpts of this kind, with one by 'Schaunard' in Musical Opinion who says: 'The idea is old enough; in the provinces it has been a commonplace for at least a generation . . . There however the practice of giving in concert-form a whole Act from the Wagner music-dramas has an equal vogue.' In justice to Mr. Kalisch I must say that during a year's stay at Munich (1912-13), where there were Wagner concerts every week, I never heard anything else except the usual snippets. If on the other hand 'Schaunard' is right—and I think that you will agree that even Cæsar could not lay down one law for London and another for the provinces—then Mr. Kalisch will have to find a better excuse for this extraordinary lack of enterprise on the part of the Queen's Hall authorities.

As this is a 'Prom.' subject, may I tack on a 'Prom.' question, which however has nothing to do with the above matter? Would it in your opinion be a worse libel on Sir Henry for the Underground Railway to publish a poster showing a likeness of him, than it actually is to publish one caricaturing the excellent leader of the first violins, who however only very occasionally conducts at the extreme end of a concert when an overworked Sir Henry is tired out?—Yours, &c.,

ROBERT LORENZ.

14, Craven Hill, W. 2.

October 17, 1920.

BIRMINGHAM TOWN HALL ORGAN

SIR,—I was interested to read in your September issue, p. 635, of the contemplated alterations to the Birmingham Town Hall organ, and the fixing of 439 A as the pitch. I cannot, however, understand your correspondent when he states that Mr. Perkins has been compelled to play a semitone higher, unless the organ pitch was below 435 A. As you are aware, the British Music Society has passed a resolution asking for the adoption of 435-4 A as the standard pitch.

This will mean that all organs and concert pianofortes must be tuned to 439 A, to allow for the sharpening which occurs with the wind instruments. Singers would be most grateful to know that they can always rely on having the same pitch. We performed the 'St. Matthew' Passion with the 'high pitch' in 1906, and I am glad to say that the principals and choir survived. After much persuasion, the Hanley Corporation adapted the organ to 439 A; this was done after consultation with Sir Henry Wood, Mr. Perkins, and other musicians. We have had the Queen's Hall, London Symphony, and Hallé Orchestras, and have found the above tuning most satisfactory.—Yours, &c.,

JOHN JAMES.

Mons House, Havelock Place,

Shelton, Stoke-on-Trent.

September 15, 1920.

GRAMOPHONE RECORDS

SIR,—As one who lives in a remote place, and has little chance of hearing good music, might I suggest through the medium of your paper how welcome records of the great Elizabethan madrigal-writers would be to those who, like myself, have a love for this beautiful music, but, owing to circumstances, never get a chance of listening to it?

This class of music is a closed door to many of us who do not live in centres where it is performed, and there are many who pine to hear a great heritage in music, a type of music in which England excelled and has had few rivals. Apart from the pleasure of hearing it, even on a gramophone, such music would be helpful and instructive to those who are 'fed up' with listening to records of modern music, much of which we cannot understand and probably never will. There are many (I know plenty) who would hail with delight and buy records of such masters as Gibbons, Benet, Wilbye, Bateson, and others. The demand at first might not be great, but it would increase directly the opportunity was given for hearing these classics.—Yours, &c.,

Seascale, Cumberland.

R. T. RICHMOND

September 12, 1920.

(Country Doctor).

DR. PERCY BUCK'S RETIREMENT FROM DUBLIN UNIVERSITY

SIR,—Since I resigned the post of Professor of Music in Dublin University I have been asked in many quarters if there were any unpleasant reasons for my action. Will you allow me to say that I had only one reason for resigning. The desirability of the post lies, I think, in the distinction it confers on its holder; and having enjoyed that distinction for ten years, I thought it reasonable that it should be passed on to someone else, and not be 'held up' indefinitely.

From first to last I met with such kindness, friendship, and hospitality within the walls of Trinity College (and, for that matter, outside of them), as to make any attempt at acknowledgment ludicrously inadequate. Whoever my successor may be, he may set his mind at rest as to the goodwill awaiting him. I envy him his assured happiness.—Yours, &c.,

PERCY C. BUCK.

Harrow-on-the-Hill.

October 9, 1920.

'THE LETTERS OF GREAT COMPOSERS'

SIR,—Mr. Pearson, in his article on 'The Letters of Great Composers' in the September issue, expresses regret that a volume containing Mendelssohn's letters is not published. I have the 'Letters of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, from 1833 to 1847,' edited by Paul and Dr. Carl Mendelssohn, and translated by Lady Wallace. The book was published by Longmans in 1863, but is probably now out of print.—Yours, &c.,

F. SINCLAIR TERRAS.

Woodville, Newton Road,

Ashton-on-Ribble.

September 12, 1920.

BOY CHORISTER ACTORS

SIR,—Muriel Silburn's interesting article in the Musical Times for August on 'Kidnapped Choristers,' alludes to their being employed as actors in addition to their sacred duties at the Chapel Royal and St. Paul's Cathedral. Her account takes us back only as far as 1626. It is not quite clear that the chorister boys resumed their occupation as stage performers after the restoration of the Monarchy in 1660, but it is certain that the Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal were so engaged, and continued to be until Queen Anne forbade the practice for reasons similar to those expressed in the warrant of 1626 quoted by your contributor. We learn, however, from Dr. Burney that on Wednesday, February 23, 1731, Handel's oratorio 'Esther' was represented in action by the Children of his Majesty's Chapel Royal at the house of Bernard Gates, their master, in St. James's Street, Buckingham Gate, the chorus being placed after the manner of the ancients between the stage and orchestra. Amongst the boys who performed on this occasion were John Beard (afterwards the famous tenor singer), John Randall (afterwards Doctor of Music and Professor of Music at Cambridge), and Thomas Barrow (afterwards Gentleman and music copyist in the Chapel Royal). The oratorio was also publicly performed by the same singers at the 'Crown and Anchor' Tavern, but does not appear to have been then given in action or on a stage. Exactly twenty-four years after the performance in St. James's Street—viz., on February 23, 1755—Horace Walpole wrote to Richard Bentley as follows:

'Garrick has produced a detestable English Opera which is crowed by all true lovers of their country. To mark the opposition to Italian operas, it is sung by some cast singers, two Italians and a French girl, and the Chapel boys; and to regale us with sense, it is Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, which is forty times more nonsensical than the worst translation of any Italian opera books.'

The opera spoken of was produced at Drury Lane Theatre on February 3, 1755, under the title of 'The Fairies.' The piece was concocted by Garrick out of Shakespeare's play by excising the comic characters and adding songs from others of Shakespeare's pieces and elsewhere. He also wrote—and himself spoke—a prologue to the opera. The music was composed by John Christopher Smith, the friend and amanuensis of Handel. The boys who took part in the piece as principal performers were Master Rheinhold (who afterwards became a celebrated bass singer), Master Moore, and Master Evans. The remaining Chapel boys probably appeared as fairies in the chorus. The other singers employed were Beard, Champness, and Miss Young. The Chapel boys were at that time under the mastership of Bernard Gates. I should be glad to know whether this was the last occasion on which choristers appeared on the stage in public; and if so, whether their further appearance was prohibited by any—and what—authority. I might add that in recent years the choristers of St. Paul's have given theatrical performances every Christmas at their school in Carter Lane.—Yours, &c.,

J. E. ADKINS.

Preston.

P.S.—From a poetical epitaph by Jonson we learn that one of the celebrated boy-actors of his time—Salathiel Pavy—was famed as the representative of old men. He died about the year 1601 at the age of thirteen. This boy was probably a chorister as well as actor.

'BACH'S ORGAN WORKS': THE PASSACAGLIA AND FUGUE IN C MINOR

SIR,—I have greatly enjoyed Mr. Harvey Grace's articles in the Musical Times on 'Bach's Organ Works,' and was particularly interested in his remarks on the Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor. This work, more perhaps than any other of Bach's, affords wide scope for originality of treatment. I have lately been trying various ways of registering the Passacaglia, and would like to proffer a suggestion as to the method which seems to me most in accordance with the spirit of the work as a whole, and with the character of the individual variations.

Instead of gradually increasing the power of the organ throughout the piece, and ending with the full organ—which seems to be the orthodox way of playing most of Bach's organ music—I prefer to treat Variation 16 as the climax of the piece, and I have found the following plan of registration to be very effective:

Variations ...	I to II ...	Various quiet combinations of stops.
Variation ...	12 ...	Great Small Open Diapason.
" ...	13 ...	Great Large Open Diapason.
" ...	14 ...	Full Swell.
" ...	15 ...	Great 16, 8, and 4, with Full Swell. (Played strictly legato.)
" ...	16 ...	Full Organ.
" ...	17 ...	Great 16, 8, and 4 (without reeds).
" ...	18 ...	Great Diapasons.
" ...	19 ...	Swell or Choir mf .
" ...	20 ...	Swell p .

Begin Fugue on Great Diapasons, 'thumbing' the first note C; this enables one to make the entry of the Fugue easily and effectively on the third beat of the last bar of the Passacaglia, and avoids the sense of anti-climax caused by beginning the Fugue on Diapasons immediately after the use of the full organ. The last variation has a most charming misterioso effect when played on suitable quiet Swell stops.—Yours, &c.,

B. T. P. HOLLINS.

Beckenham, Kent.

September 15, 1920.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

JAMES RICHARD SIMPSON, of the well-known Edinburgh firm of Methven Simpson, Ltd. Edinburgh owes much to his long-sustained activities in concert-giving. He promoted the Edinburgh Classical Concerts which continued a healthy and useful existence from 1906 to the war, and have since been resumed. The Beethoven Festival under Baling was a development of this series.

MAX BRUCH, born in 1838, composer of symphonies, concertos, oratorios, a large number of smaller choral works, and operas. He was known in this country chiefly by his frequently-played Violin Concerto in G minor, and in a less degree by his 'Kol Nidrei' for violoncello and orchestra, and a Violin Concerto in D minor. From 1880 to 1883 he lived in England as conductor of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society. In 1893 he received an honorary degree from Cambridge University.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of November, 1860:

GLoucester CATHEDRAL.—There is a Vacancy in this Choir for a BASS (not Baritone) VOICE, who will be appointed Probationary Lay-Clerk. His duties will be to attend Divine Service twice daily, and practising whenever required by the Precentor. The emoluments will be a fixed stipend of £10 a year, and 1s. 6d. for every attendance at Church; and an additional sum of £10 yearly will be set aside, and, with the accumulations of interest, will be applied for his benefit in such way as the Chapter shall think best, on his retirement from his office, with the consent of the Chapter, provided his conduct has been satisfactory. The Candidates likely to suit will be required to appear before the Dean and Chapter on some day which will be signified to them. Applications for the situation, stating the age and place of residence of the applicant, with testimonials as to moral and religious character, powers of voice, and musical capacity, to be forwarded to J. A. Whitcombe, Esq., Chapter Clerk, on or before the 21st of November next.

By order of the Dean and Chapter,

I, Barton-street, Gloucester, JOHN A. WHITCOMBE.
October 20, 1860.

THE LONDON TONIC SOL-FA CHOIR will give their FIRST CONCERT at St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, on Tuesday, 27th November, 1860. Conductor, Mr. W. S. Young. Admission, 1s.; Reserved Seats, 2s. 6d.; Sofa Stalls, 4s.

SUNNY-BANK LAUNDRY AND BLEACHING-GROUND.—All Linen BLEACHED ON THE GRASS. No bleaching chemicals or brushes made use of. Woollen and Coloured articles Washed in RAIN WATER, free from soda, and treated with care. Sunny-bank (leading from Hornsey-lane), Highgate (N.).

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—The newspapers from this colony give a very flourishing account of the progress of music. The Cape Choral Society has now about 30 members, and they have recently given two public concerts, which were well attended. Every lover of music must be gratified to hear that the taste for music which prevails here is almost universal. Nearly every house has its piano, and there are some good performers. Instrumental music seems to be cultivated more than the human voice, but the Choral Society is doing much to improve the art.

HUDDERSFIELD.—On the evening of the 2nd ult., the ceremony of re-opening the organ in Buxton-road Chapel, which has recently been thoroughly repaired and re-voiced by Mr. John Hunton, was performed by Mr. Walter Parratt, in the presence of a very large audience, who were admitted by ticket. The programme comprised selections from different masters, and was gone through by Mr. Parratt with much taste and judgment.

BAPTISM: an ORATORLETTE by S. HATHERLY. Subscribers' copies (price one guinea) are now ready. Liverpool: 4, Sandon-terrace, Upper Duke Street.

ONE KIND WISH BEFORE WE PART.—Parting Song. Price 2s. Dedicated to Madame CLARA NOVELLO. Composed by W. H. LONGHURST, and sung with great applause by Miss FANNY ROWLAND.

Cramer & Co.; and Author, Canterbury.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

As a result of the large number of students who entered at the Michaelmas term for the Training Course for Teachers it has been found necessary considerably to increase the number of classes in some of the subjects, so that every student shall have the opportunity for gaining experience in actual teaching, under supervision, which it is one of the chief objects of this course to provide. Although it is desirable, where possible, for students to enter at the beginning of the Academical year—that is, after the summer holidays—yet this duplication of classes will make it convenient for students to begin the course at any term, without special disadvantages. In addition to these extra classes a number of new courses have been included in the syllabus, viz., lectures on the teaching of the organ by Dr. Richards, violin teaching by Mr. Spencer Dyke, and the teaching of singing by Mr. Frederick Keel, while a complete course in the teaching of elocution, including 'The Presentation of Plays in Schools,' is under the direction of Mr. Acton Bond, Miss Annie M. Child, and Miss Katie Thomas.

During the present term a course of four lectures on the 'History of music previous to the time of Bach' is being given by Dr. Frederick G. Shinn. The first lecture, which was delivered on Wednesday, October 20, dealt with the progress of music up to 1400. The lecturer referred to the music of the Greeks and the part-music played in their religious ceremonies, and went on to show how the rise and triumph of Christianity influenced the development of music in Italy, with which the names of Ambrose and Gregory are associated. He briefly reviewed the work of Hucbald, Guido d'Arezzo, and Franco of Cologne, explaining and describing the particular advances which are linked with these famous names, and concluded with a brief reference to the secular music of the different bodies of minstrels which flourished in various European countries during the Middle Ages—the Troubadours, the Trouvères, the Minnesingers, and others.

In the lecture on October 27 Dr. Shinn is announced to trace the progress of music from the rise of the Netherland School, beginning with Dufay, to the achievements of the Italian school as illustrated by the works of Palestrina. The lecture on November 3 will be upon the origin and rise of Opera, and the last, on November 10, upon Elizabethan music, when a selection of madrigals will be sung by the choir under the direction of Mr. Henry Beauchamp.

Music in the Provinces

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS)

ABERDEEN

Music is emerging slowly from the trance into which it sank during the years of the war. Glasgow and Edinburgh are again in the full tide of musical activity, and a renaissance of music is spreading through the southern half of Scotland. Some fine day it may reach Aberdeen, but in the meantime we are moving gingerly and languidly when we ought to be straining every nerve and sinew along a bold course. A golden opportunity lies waiting, but for some reason our music-makers are hastening slowly to grasp it. This is a time for enterprise and new ideas. We have held too long to the old, stupid conventions, and the old slovenly methods. Those who have in their power the fashioning and directing of music and musical taste must wake up. Greater interest and greater industry are needed, a braver policy and a more spirited bid for the support of the public. We cannot expect the help of heaven when we are doing so little to help ourselves. A little display of enthusiasm goes a long way to convince the man in the street, who cannot be expected to find a consuming interest in the business of people who take but a half-hearted interest in it themselves. If the concert cannot be made to earn a sufficient share of the money that is spent in amusement, then there is something wrong with the concert. It is lagging behind the theatre, the music-hall, and the picture-house. There is no lack of money, but it must be earned. Other forms of entertainment are earning it. The theatres and music-halls live prosperously, picture-houses multiply, and twenty thousand people turn out any Saturday to see a football match. One-tenth of the money spent in amusement in the city would keep music in affluence.

In the far-off days before the war we were more fortunate, though we were always readier to pay for other people's music than to make our own. When the Scottish Orchestra or the London Symphony Orchestra came along, which they did with more or less regularity for many years, we supported them—sometimes generously, oftener moderately. The majority of our half-guineas were reserved for the ballad concert and the stars thereof. Choral music, the music of our own making and the only road to our musical salvation, ran a poor third. The smaller choirs, having little expense, struggled along then as now on part-songs and a personal following. For our elevation to the higher planes of music we relied upon our only large choir, the Aberdeen Choral Union, and unfortunately that body has never extricated itself from the Handel-Mendelssohn rut. It has clung with touching faith to the small group of ultra-familiar oratorios with which it began in the middle of last century. Hardly a season has passed since then in which we have not been called upon to renew our acquaintance with one or two of these perennials. No great objection might have been taken to annual overdoses of Handel and Mendelssohn (the preparation of which entails little effort) if at the same time a genuine attempt had been made to keep us abreast of, or at least in touch with, the march of choral music. But performances of important modern works were as rare as angels' visits. Some of them were reached by easy stages—a section or part per annum. During its chequered career the Choral Union passed through a period of concert-promotion, in which ballads alternated with orchestra. The chorus generally had one decent show during the season, but for the most part they played the rôle of a more or less decorative background. It was found in the long run that concert promotion did not pay, and the Choral Union fell back on its own efforts. For many years these efforts have been of the most modest description, consisting mainly of repeats of the afore-mentioned hardy annuals.

It is a comfortable policy, but hardly one that musical people will regard with favour. The plain conclusion seems to be that unless some change can be effected in our musical arrangements, we are doomed to live for ever in the past. The Choral Union has never been without a few turbulent spirits who have cried annually against the 'ca canny' policy, but the ancients have always prevailed when it came to the vote.

And so the old jog-trot is continued. It is no exaggeration to say that any live choral society is and has been accomplishing as much genuine work in one season as the Choral Union does in three. Inertia, to put it frankly, is the obstacle in the path, that and a fine complacency which enables the members once a year to marvel at the apathy and neglect of the public, and to deal out a scolding all round. Has the Choral Union outlived its usefulness? Ought it not to retire in favour of a new body, more vigorous and with fresher and more progressive ideas? Is it occupying a place which could be filled with greater advantage? These are the questions which the musical citizens of Aberdeen are asking themselves and each other—have been asking for years. The answer would seem to be in the affirmative.

For the season just begun, 'Messiah' has been selected for performance, and Bridge's 'Ballad of the Clampherdown' and Nicholson's '1914' are down for rehearsal, which is not quite the same thing. Another choral work is promised later—'Elijah' is mentioned.

Various other musical activities in Aberdeen and district will be dealt with next month.

BATH

Indications are not wanting that a degree of activity is being infused into the musical life of the city, and already there is augury for a successful season.

The Pump Room concert season opened the last week in September, and it is specially interesting to note that the musical director, Mr. Jan Hurst, is arranging a series of chamber concerts for Thursday afternoons, in addition to the daily musical routine. The programme for the first of these concerts, September 30, included Dvorák's String Quartet, Brahms's Quintet for pianoforte and strings, and a Sonata by Rubinstein for pianoforte and 'cello; while on the following Thursday, October 7, Arensky's Trio (Op. 32) for violin, 'cello, and pianoforte, Mozart's String Quartet (No. 13), Schumann's Quintet in E flat (Op. 44), for pianoforte and strings, and Beethoven's Sonata in F for violin and pianoforte, were performed.

On October 8, at the Pump Room, under the presidency of Major-Gen. L. J. E. Bradshaw, C.B., the inaugural lecture of the Bath centre of the British Music Society was given by the Rev. Dr. Edmund Fellowes on 'The English Madrigal Composers.' No less interesting and instructive were the following madrigals, illustrative of the lecture, sung by a choir under the conductorship of the Abbey organist, Mr. A. E. New:

'Come, lovers, follow me'	} Thomas Morley.
'O grief, even on the bud'
'April is in my mistress' face'
'Happy, O happy he'
'The Silver swan ...'	 John Wilbye.
'Sing me at pleasure'	 Orlando Gibbons.
'Fair Phyllis I saw'	 Thomas Weelkes.
	 John Farmer.

Recitals by Mr. Harold Samuel and Mark Hambourg on October 6 and 9 respectively were thoroughly enjoyable and need no further description.

BIRMINGHAM

A great feature of the present musical season is the interesting series of Sunday evening orchestral concerts at the Theatre Royal, conducted by Mr. Appleby Matthews, which started on September 5. The programmes are modelled on the same plan as those formerly given at the Futurist Theatre, but the Theatre Royal is in many ways better suited for orchestral concerts, one of its advantages being its larger seating capacity. These concerts gain in popularity every week. On September 19 Gustav Holst conducted his latest composition, a 'Japanese Suite,' written for a Japanese dancer, who supplied most of the themes. The Suite was originally produced at Queen's Hall last December. The composer also contributed his bright Jig for strings only from the 'St. Paul' Suite, and a dance, 'The Djinn.' The triad of compositions, well interpreted by the orchestra under the composer's beat, met with the utmost appreciation, and were certainly well worth a hearing. On October 10, Gustav Holst conducted his new Suite, 'The Planets,' but only five numbers were given.

At a committee meeting of the Birmingham centre of the British Music Society, held on September 23 at the Midland Institute, it was resolved that an inaugural meeting in the form of a musical social be held in mid-November; that Lord Howard de Walden and the Lord Mayor be asked to attend; and that the programme (including a performance of the Elgar Quintet) be arranged by Mr. Johan C. Hock.

The first chamber concert of the season was given by Miss Irene Berry (pianoforte), Mr. Alfred Barker (violin), and Mr. Johan C. Hock (violin) at the Royal Society of Artists' gallery on September 23. The programme comprised Brahms's Trio in C minor, Mozart's Trio in C major, and a Trio in D minor by William Baines, in addition to César Franck's well-known Sonata for pianoforte and violin. The whole concert reached a high level of excellence.

The first of a series of six popular Saturday night concerts by the City of Birmingham Orchestra was held at the Town Hall on September 25, under the direction of Mr. Appleby Matthews. Unfortunately the attendance was discouraging, probably owing to the prevalent beautiful weather. Those present, however, had an opportunity for hearing a remarkably varied programme of music, that embraced Elgar's attractive choral work 'Scenes from the Bavarian Highlands,' and some of Brahms's beautiful Trios for ladies' voices accompanied by two horns and harp, interpreted with much charm of vocal beauty and phrasing by Mr. Appleby Matthews's well-trained choir. Miss Dorothy Richards played Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto.

The first of the five 'International Celebrity' subscription concerts, given at the Town Hall on September 28, had for its chief feature Dame Clara Butt's only appearance here previous to her forthcoming world tour. The great popular contralto is an immense favourite with the Birmingham public, and never fails to gather round her a great audience. She was supported by Mr. Kennerley Rumford, Mr. Albert Sammons (violin), Mr. Josef Hollman (violin), and Mr. William Murdoch (pianoforte). Miss Grace Torrens acted as pianist.

The Birmingham City Police Band gave a popular concert in the Town Hall in aid of the Birmingham Cripples' Union on September 30. The Hall was crowded to its utmost limit, and Mr. Appleby Matthews conducted an excellent programme of music, which included the 'Tannhäuser' Overture.

It is always a pleasure to hear a well-trained ladies' choir, and this branch of vocal art at Birmingham has been supplied by Madame Gell's Ladies' Choir, that once more exhibited its powers at the concert given by Madame Gell at the Town Hall on October 2. The tone-quality was well maintained, and the voices had an artistic and appealing ring heard to advantage in a number of part-songs by Morley, Holst, and Anderton. Songs were contributed by Miss Kathleen Davies. The instrumental portion of the programme consisted of violin solos by William Henley, a favourite pupil of the late August Wilhelmj, and pianoforte solos by Miss Doris Watkins. Mention should also be made of the vocal solos contributed by Miss Mary Bourne and Mr. Simmons.

In aid of the National Institute for the Blind, Mr. Sidney Stoddard is giving a series of Sunday evening concerts, the first of which took place at the Town Hall on October 3. The vocalists were Mr. Alban Cohen, the well-known local tenor, Mr. Robert Radford, Sydney Webb, the boy soprano, and Miss Dorothy Denton. Welcome were the pianoforte solos given by Mr. Cyril Hartshorne, the violin solo by Mr. Percy Dycke, and the organ solos by Mr. John Taylor. The accompanist was Mr. Michael Mullinar.

The month's Beecham opera season which started at the Prince of Wales Theatre on September 27, was restricted to operatic works already given here by this popular organization, the only new revival being 'The Mastersingers.'

The personnel contained several artists new to Birmingham. The conductors were Sir Thomas Beecham, Messrs. Percy Pitt, Eugène Goossens, jun., Albert Buesst, and Clarence Raybould. 'Tannhäuser' and 'The Mastersingers' drew the largest audiences of the season.

Mark Hambourg's Pianoforte Recital in the Town Hall on October 4 unfortunately clashed with the Beecham opera, a fact which no doubt accounted for the smallness of the audience. The concert-giver was in his best form, and has rarely been heard here to greater advantage.

The first of a series of five chamber concerts under the auspices of the Birmingham Chamber Concert Society, the executive again being the famous Catterall String Quartet, took place at the Royal Society of Artists' Exhibition Room on October 11. The quartets chosen were Beethoven's in A minor, Op. 132, Arensky's in G major, Op. 11, and Brahms's Op. 51, No. 2, in A minor. No finer choice could have been made, and the performers played con amore.

Some excellent and artistic part-singing by Mr. W. E. Robinson's splendid choir was heard at the Midland Institute on October 9. Especially effective and truly beautiful was the singing by the Ladies' Choir in the 'Ave Maria' by Holst, and 'Sound Sleep' by Vaughan Williams. Songs were contributed by our excellent local tenor, Mr. Arthur Jordan, and violin solos were played by Miss Astbury (in place of Mr. Hytch). Some fine dramatic recitations were given by Mr. Fred Pardoe.

A pleasing revival of Smart's cantata, 'The Bride of Dunkerron,' produced in 1864, was given by the Birmingham Choral and Orchestral Association at the Town Hall on October 9, under Mr. Joseph H. Adams's careful conductorship. Choir and orchestra were quite up to their work, and the principals—Madame Parkes-Darby, Mr. Arthur Giddins (from Manchester Cathedral), and Mr. Herbert Simmonds—materially helped to make the performance a memorable occasion.

BOURNEMOUTH

At the moment of writing the curtain has risen upon Bournemouth's twenty-sixth season of Symphony Concerts, the first of the present series having taken place on October 7. It is gratifying to feel the assurance that that which a quarter of a century's undeviating persistence has accomplished will at any rate continue for another year. If, when another twelve months have passed, opposition to the town's musical policy should again be maintained, those citizens who have the best interests of Bournemouth at heart will know how to deal with the disturbing elements.

When Mr. Dan Godfrey took his place at the conductor's desk on October 7 to open the twenty-sixth season, how many of those present must have recalled the earlier days of this bold musical experiment and the subsequent progressiveness and all-round expansion stimulated by Mr. Godfrey's wonderful work. In later years the Bournemouth Symphony Concerts have steadily become a growing force in the musical life of the country, and it is to Mr. Godfrey that we owe this increasing potency. Consequently the town's musicians should experience particular gratification in the fact that, even after so long a reign, the controlling hand is still that of the man whose unique talents and inexhaustible energy have elevated Bournemouth's musical reputation to its present high distinction.

It was also most pleasing at the first concert to see so many of our old orchestral friends in occupation of their accustomed seats. To the few newcomers we can safely attribute a measure of efficiency at least equal to that of the players they have replaced, for in the matter of compactness and general ensemble—if the opening performances are any criterion—the 1920-21 orchestra registers a substantial advance.

The programme, though it contained nothing of a startling nature, was a thoroughly sound selection, the opening item being Elgar's 'Cockaigne' Overture, wherein all the kaleidoscopic effects were admirably realised. A dignified and deeply expressive reading of Brahms's beautiful first Symphony and a sufficiently hectic one of Tchaikovsky's 'Francesca di Rimini' were further features of the concert. A novelty was forthcoming in Selim Palmgren's Pianoforte Concerto, 'The River.' There is a certain freshness of utterance about the work which is quite enjoyable, but on the other hand it induces a feeling that the material is not well knit, the design of the second half of the score proving somewhat unsatisfactory from the constructive point of view. Miss Edith Barnett played the solo music very tastefully, and imparted plenty of vigour into the intricate keyboard passages.

CHATHAM AND DISTRICT

The concert season at Chatham opened auspiciously on October 13 with a new series which is to introduce Mesdames Donalds and Elsa Stralia, and Messrs. Mark Hambourg, Mischa-Leon, Arthur Rubinstein, and Louis Levitus, amongst others, to this district of North Kent. The first recital was given by M. Alfred Cortôt, whose playing was beyond criticism and whose interpretation of the twenty-four Chopin Preludes was a revelation. He was assisted by Miss Vera Horton (vocalist).

Mr. Edward S. Mitchell, who created so much attention by his recitals of modern pianoforte music in London last season, is giving a first recital at Chatham in January.

Rochester Symphony Orchestra has resumed rehearsals under Mr. Frederick Cole, and in conjunction with Maidstone Orchestral Society is giving a concert on November 17 in aid of the West Kent General Hospital extension fund.

Maidstone Choral Union, of which Mr. F. Wilson Parish is conductor, has started rehearsing 'Israel in Egypt.'

Sittingbourne District Musical Society held its annual meeting on October 5, when the treasurer reported a balance in hand of £20, an event unique in the history of the Society. Mr. Oscar Baker was re-appointed conductor, and at the Society's two concerts 'Hiawatha' and 'Songs of the Fleet' will be performed.

New bells have been placed in Gravesend Parish Church, and in celebration a full peal of Kent treble bob major, five thousand and eighty-eight changes, was rung in three hours and twelve minutes on October 9.

CORNWALL

Lady Mary Trefusis has been elected President of Falmouth Philharmonic Society, of which the Rev. C. Daly is conductor. This Society has an excellent permanent orchestra, and has a small credit balance to carry forward.

Holsworthy Choral Society, conducted by Mr. F. J. Sleeman, has selected 'Merrie England' as its work for the ensuing session.

COVENTRY AND DISTRICT

The autumn musical season commenced at Coventry towards the end of September. The first concert was given by the Choral Society in the Corn Exchange, when Mr. John Potter conducted a programme that included 'The Singers' (Mackenzie), 'The Sea-shell' (Coleridge-Taylor), 'Out of the Silence' (Jenkins), and other items. Miss Constance Flinn contributed violin solos, and Miss M. Grinyer's dramatic powers found full scope in her recitation of Alfred Noyes's tragic poem, 'The Highwaymen.'

A season of Gilbert and Sullivan opera by the D'Oyly Carte Company, commencing on September 20, drew large audiences to the Empire Theatre. The repertoire comprised 'The Mikado,' 'The Gondoliers,' 'The Yeomen of the Guard,' and 'Iolanthe.'

Considerable numbers of local people also supported the Beecham Company in its Birmingham season of grand opera which opened on September 27.

Five Coventry choirs competed with success in the Musical Festival at Leicester on October 9, Coventry Choral Society winning first prize in the Challenge Shield Class for mixed-voice choirs. The test-pieces were 'The Ballad of Semmerwater' (Edgar L. Bainton) and 'The Death of Morar' (Granville Bantock), our local choir being awarded 188 marks out of a maximum of 200. The adjudicators were Prof. Granville Bantock and Dr. F. H. Wood. The male-voice test-piece was 'Sacramentum Supremum' (Dr. Wood). In this the Leamington Male-Voice Choir and Nottingham Harmonic Glee Society tied for first place. Upon a second performance being called, the prize was awarded to the Leamington singers. The Coventry Vocal Students' Ladies' Choir, under Miss Alice McGowran, won second prize in their class.

At the annual meeting of the Coventry Musical Club a satisfactory balance in hand was reported. The officials were all re-elected. The resignation of Mr. E. Kelsey, conductor of the club's orchestra, was received with regret.

The Armstrong-Siddeley Orchestra, under the baton of Mr. Mathew Stevenson, gave its first concert at Parkside on October 16. The programme included 'Ballet Russe' (Luigini), Pizzicato 'Sylvia' (Délibes), 'Finlandia,' and 'La Fileuse' (Mendelssohn). Miss Anne Godfrey contributed violin solos, the vocalist was Mrs. Aron, and Mrs. Gordon Vickers-Jones acted as accompanist. The programmes to be given at the four forthcoming concerts of the Coventry Chamber Music Society include quartets by Elgar, Haydn, Dvorák, Beethoven, and Debussy. In addition, Mozart's Quintet in G minor is to figure in the first programme, and Beethoven's Trio in B flat and Tchaikovsky's 'Elegiac' Trio are to be heard at subsequent concerts. The vocalists engaged include Miss Margaret Harrison and Mr. Herbert Simmonds.

Musical affairs in the district are in an active and healthy condition. Rugby Amateur Operatic Society is to perform 'The Gondoliers,' while the Philharmonic Society intends to perform three notable works in Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' 'Blest Pair of Sirens' (Parry), and Stanford's 'The Revenge.' The last-named work is also to figure in the programme of the Kenilworth Choral Society. Mr. Herbert Morris, organist of St. David's Cathedral, gave an interesting organ recital in Kenilworth Parish Church on October 5. Nuneaton Amateurs have 'The Mikado' next on their list for production. There are also promised concerts from Leamington organizations. With so many varied arrangements in view the season, which has opened so successfully in Warwickshire, should prove very satisfactory.

DEVON

Plymouth centre of the British Music Society was organized in the late summer, with Mr. A. C. Rolston as hon. secretary. The first meeting on October 9 was devoted to British chamber music, and proved an event that will be conspicuously delightful in the memory of Plymouth musicians. Harold Lake's Pianoforte Quartet, 'Dance Phantasy,' was played by Messrs. H. R. V. Ball, J. Leighton Fouracre, and Miss Winifred Blight, with the composer at the pianoforte. The same performers, Dr. Lake this time playing second violin, presented Frank Bridge's 'Londonderry Air.' A novelty was a miniature pianoforte concerto composed by a local musician, Gerald Phillips, who played the orchestral parts on a second pianoforte, Miss L. Blight being the soloist. The work revealed the highly attractive and musicianly qualities that are wont to characterise Mr. Phillips's compositions. Elgar's Sonata for pianoforte and violin was played by Miss Lillian Dyke and Mrs. Q. Spooner, the latter also contributing music by John Ireland. Variations in B minor for violoncello, by Coleridge-Taylor, were played by Mr. A. E. Bryant, and some songs represented Roger Quilter, John Ireland, and Mackenzie.

A welcome innovation in the series of weekly popular concerts in Plymouth Guildhall was made on October 9, when Mr. Charles Tree gave a lecture on 'Songs and how to sing them,' illustrated by himself and Madame Nellie Stephenson, with Mr. H. Moreton at the organ and pianoforte.

On September 30 the string band of the R.G.A., Plymouth Division, gave two concerts to raise funds for the widow and children of Band-Sergeant-Major Coventry, who recently died very suddenly. Under his direction the standard of the playing had been fully maintained. The former bandmaster, Mr. R. G. Evans, now Lieut.-Director of Music, Coldstream Guards, came to conduct some of the items, the remainder being directed by Mr. H. Eldridge, the newly-appointed bandmaster. Sullivan's 'In Memoriam' Overture, Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, the 'Casse Noisette' Suite, and Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony were in the programmes. Mr. George East played the solo in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, and Miss Copner was heard in some artistic interpretations of songs by Rimsky-Korsakov and Debussy.

Mrs. Ernest Bullock, wife of the organist of Exeter Cathedral, was the pianist at a pianoforte and vocal recital at Sidmouth on October 7, the event being one of a series of concerts organized by an enterprising committee of ladies. Mrs. Bullock played the Schumann 'Papillons,' a Brahms Scherzo (E flat minor), a Nocturne by Grieg, and closed with a somewhat startling but attractive novelty by Albeniz, a 'Fête de Dieu de Seville.' Mr. Steuart Wilson sang a group of German lieder in English, and among other things two songs by Armstrong-Gibbs ('The Linnet' and 'The Bells'), and 'Holy Thursday,' by Charles Wood. Miss E. Martin accompanied.

A series of fine 'International Celebrity' concerts has been arranged for Torquay and Plymouth. The first of these was a recital by Pachmann, given at Torquay on October 9, and repeated at Plymouth on October 11. The Chopin numbers were representative of the less hackneyed items; the Beethoven Sonata in D minor, Op. 31, No. 2, was beautiful, but not satisfying in interpretation, and the same may be said of Liszt's 'Rhapsodie Hongroise,' No. 8.

At Plymouth, the Orpheus Choir conducted by Mr. David Parkes gave an electric and wonderfully conceived reading of Elgar's 'The Reveille,' a quiet piece by David Parkes, 'When twilight dews,' and Boulanger's 'Cyrus in Babylon.'

Several choral societies in the smaller Devon towns are reviving. Crediton is one of the lucky ones with a credit balance, and has put 'The Hymn of Praise' into rehearsal (conductor, Mr. C. G. Church), to be performed in church when the magnificent new organ is completed; Braunton Choral Society has grown to a membership of sixty, and, with a permanent orchestra, hopes to perform 'Hero and Leander' in the late autumn; Ottery St. Mary (Mr. Stanley Chipperfield) has added a weekly music appreciation class to its programme, and has in rehearsal the 'St. John' Passion, 'The May Queen,' and 'Faust.' A new Society has been formed at Bideford, with Mr. E. G. Laycock as conductor. Barnstaple Male Choir (conductor, Mr. Alfred Long) has also reached a membership of sixty, and has begun the winter campaign.

The huge choir formed to take part in the 'Mayflower' celebrations at Plymouth has been placed on a permanent basis, with Mr. T. Martin as conductor. The cumbersome size of the choir may prove an obstacle to its success, as no hall at Plymouth has a sufficiently large platform. The organization mainly comprises Nonconformists, and if weeded out might do good work as a Festival Choir to raise the standard of music in religious services.

The annual meeting of Devon Music Competitions will be held next month. The present committee suggests that in 1921 competitions shall be held at Exeter and Barnstaple during the week beginning June 20.

DUBLIN

The Dublin Musical Season of 1920-21 had a most auspicious beginning on September 27 at the Theatre Royal, when Mr. Quinlan presented the first 'all-star' concert. Mesdames Calvé and Menges and Messrs. Hislop and Cortôt were surely magnets of ample drawing power, and it is satisfactory to chronicle that a full and enthusiastic house rewarded the enterprise, especially at such a troublous time in the Irish metropolis. Thibaud had been announced, but the substitution of Miss Isolde Menges amply compensated for the disappointment. Space precludes detailed criticism, but Madame Calvé was superb in all her songs, especially in the 'Habañera,' while Mr. Hislop made a most favourable impression, creating a marked effect by his interpretation of 'M'appari.' Miss Isolde Menges was truly delightful in the Rosamund Ballet music and in the Franck Sonata with Cortôt. As to Cortôt, his playing was irresistible, compelling unstinted applause in the Chopin, Schubert, and Liszt selections. Encores were the order of the day (it was an afternoon concert), and were more than generously responded to.

Prof. Percy C. Buck has resigned the Chair of Music in the University of Dublin, which is a matter for much regret.

The death, on October 6, at Loretto Abbey, Rathfarnham, Dublin, of Mother Attracta Coffey is a real loss to music, not only at Dublin, but in Ireland. This estimable lady had spent fifty years in propagating a high standard of music among her pupils at Rathfarnham, and it is an open secret that she was the prime mover in creating at that well-equipped boarding school a musical tradition that has already borne fruit. All over Ireland her pupils are bearing testimony to the zeal she displayed in furthering the cause of classical music, and particularly in fostering chamber music. Since 1900 she championed the claims of Irish minstrelsy, and published an excellent 'Tutor for the Irish harp,' followed by two books on Irish melodies arranged for the harp. For the past three years she had been in failing health, and her loss will be acutely felt in Dublin musical circles.

From a rather belated report on the 'Unpublished Irish Airs' submitted at the Feis Ceoil of last May, it would appear that the mine of unrecorded folk-tunes has been fairly well worked out. Indeed, after the labours of Neale, O'Connor, Lee, Bunting, Petrie, Levey, Forde, Pigot, Joyce, Mrs. Costello, Roche, and O'Neill, there seems little left for gleaners of the 20th century. The annual report showed a profit of £47 on the last Feis, but the adjudicators' reports, while praising the natural musical attainments of many of the competitors, commented on the weakness of sight-singing, vocal and instrumental. Miss E. Mortier was re-elected hon. secretary, with Mr. W. P. Geoghegan and Capt. H. M. Fitzgibbon as hon. treasurers, and Mr. Gerrard as hon. solicitor.

The Carl Rosa Opera Company opened its Dublin season at the Gaiety Theatre on October 18 with 'Faust.' Other operas to be produced are 'Madame Butterfly,' 'Carmen,' 'Rigoletto,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Tales of Hoffmann,' and 'Il Trovatore.'

Many musical attractions were announced for the week of the Hospitals Fête at Ballsbridge from October 16 to 23. Seven leading bands assisted, as well as stars from all the theatres, in aid of this deserving charity, funds for which are an imperative necessity.

A Dublin firm announces the arrival of a consignment of 'baby grand' pianofortes from Germany, including a Schiedmayer, priced at £300.

EDINBURGH

On October 9 Dame Clara Butt, assisted by Miss Grace Torrens, and Messrs. Kennerley Rumford, Albert Sammons, Joseph Hollman, and William Murdoch, opened the musical season here.

On October 12 a song and pianoforte recital was given by Mr. Warren Wynne and Mr. Herbert Wiseman. The latter has recently been appointed director of music to the Edinburgh Education Authority. Both artists proved themselves distinct acquisitions to the musical life of the city, and collaborated in a recital of classic and modern works which afforded evidence both of artistic taste and ability.

Miss Ruth Draper gave a recital, of original character-sketches on October 14, and on October 15 a vocal recital of 'Songs of the Hebrides' was sustained by Misses Marjory and Patuffa Kennedy-Fraser, and Miss Margaret Kennedy.

An interesting lecture was given by the London Commissioner for Music of the Boy Scouts Association, Mr. Arthur Poyser, on 'Scout Singers and Players,' on October 9.

GLASGOW

The outstanding event of the month was the Orpheus Choir's week of chamber concerts—October 4-11—by the Catterall Quartet (not the London Quartet, as announced in last month's forecast), with Miss Myra Hess as pianist. The programmes, compiled with praiseworthy discrimination, included compositions by both old and new masters, among the latter being Elgar, Speaight, Ernest Walker, Arnold Bax, Holbrooke, Frank Bridge, and J. B. McEwen. It is cheering to know that the effort of the Orpheus Choir thus to popularise chamber music met with gratifying support, the concerts being attended by no fewer than five thousand people. The Fellowes Orchestra—recently formed and conducted by Mr. Horace Fellowes (late principal first violin in the Scottish Orchestra)—is giving a series of concerts on Sunday evenings in October and November. The orchestral programmes are framed on popular lines, and are varied by songs contributed by well-known local vocalists, among whom have been Miss Nancy Weir, and Messrs. Philip Malcolm and Robert Walker. The proceeds are to be devoted to the funds of the Infirmary. An event worthy of record is the first performance on any stage of 'The Hawaiian Maid,' a comic opera by Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield, the accomplished organist of Paisley Abbey. Mr. Mansfield's tuneful work was creditably performed by the Glasgow Operatic Society at the Theatre Royal during the week October 11-16. Our distinguished townsman, Mr. Frederic Lamond, gave a pianoforte recital on October 13, his programme including a Chopin and a Liszt group, a Beethoven Sonata, and the Brahms Variations on a theme by Paganini. At his return visit in December, Mr. Lamond will play a Beethoven programme. With the exception of the Flonzaley Quartet concert at the Royal Institute of Fine Arts on October 7, other music-makings of the month have been chiefly ballad concerts, under the auspices of the Glasgow Abstiners' Union, the Young Men's Christian Association, the 'International celebrity' (at which Dame Clara Butt was the chief 'celebrity'), and Mrs. Kennedy-Fraser's recital of Hebridean songs on October 13.

HASTINGS

The month just closed saw the awakening of the fuller musical life for the winter season. A start was made on October 9 with Mr. Gardiner's private venture on St. Leonards Pier, where he announces a series of orchestral concerts under the conductorship of Mr. Norfolk Megone.

The Municipal Orchestra is established in the beautifully-equipped Royal Concert Hall, where Mr. Julian Clifford promises an extensive scheme of orchestral and other concerts. Beginning on October 30, the season was formally inaugurated by the Earl Beauchamp (Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports). British works will cover a wide field, and will include those of Elgar, Mackenzie, Frank Bridge, Robert Chignall, Julian Clifford, Arthur Hervey, Ernest Farrar, Richard Newton, Montague Phillips, Arnold Trowell, and Vaughan Williams (the 'London' Symphony).

A week will be devoted to a British Musical Festival, when the following composers will conduct their own programmes: Sir Frederic Cowen, Thomas F. Dunhill, Edward German, Percy E. Fletcher, Norman O'Neill, and W. H. Speer. The list of performer-celebrities already includes the names of Madame Marchesi, Dame Clara Butt, Miss Fanny Davies, Miss Marie Hall, Miss Isolde Menges, Miss Tessie Thomas, and Messrs. Arthur de Greef, John Dunn, Mark Hambourg, Albert Sammons, Zacharewitsch, Ben Davies, and Frank Mullings. With these and other activities in full swing there is every sign of Hastings and St. Leonards becoming a musical centre of some importance.

LIVERPOOL

The Crane Hall Musical Wednesday afternoons were resumed on October 6, when Mr. Joseph Greene gave finely individual and masterly performances of Bach's Chromatic Fantasia, César Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, and Schumann's 'Carnival,' which afforded scope for the great executive powers and intuitive musical feeling which have brought him into the ranks of really first-rate pianists. In her artistic contralto songs Miss Ethel Penhall gave pleasure, as did the violin-playing of Miss Constance le Mesurier. Mr. B. Sandberg Lee was an expert accompanist. On October 13 a clever pianist, Miss Marion K. Snowden, played Brahms's 'Handel Variations,' and the vocalists were Miss Gladys Satterthwaite and Mr. Frederic George.

Some very interesting arrangements have been made by the local committee of the British Music Society. They are to include a recital of his own works by Mr. Eric Fogg, the young Manchester composer-pianist, and on November 19 the Roche Trio will play Frank Bridge's Fantasy Trio. Local composers are allotted an evening on December 17, and on January 20 there will no doubt be an interested gathering to hear Mr. Ernest Newman, our famous townsman, speak on 'The Present State of Music.' The London P.S.Q. will give a chamber concert on February 9, and on March 22 Mr. C. Thornton Lofthouse will be heard in a pianoforte recital, assisted vocally by Miss Mollie Law. Mr. W. G. Whittaker will speak on 'Exoticism in British Music' on April 15, when illustrations will be sung by a small choir conducted by Dr. Pollitt.

In the syllabus of the Liverpool Organists and Choirmasters' Association the following speakers and subjects are announced: Mr. R. G. McLeod, of Edinburgh, 'Has the organist used his opportunities in the past—Can he use them in the future?'; Dr. Walter Carroll, 'A new outlook for the Organist'; Mr. William C. Penn, 'The Artist and his Work'; Mr. L. Simon, 'The Production of Modern Organ-tone'; the Rev. H. Dams, 'Observations on Organists'; and Mr. Gordon Stuteley, 'The Orchestra.'

The Liverpool and district branch of the Music Teachers' Association, of which Dr. Pollitt is hon. treasurer and Mr. Raymond Tobin hon. secretary, announces a series of lectures by visitors from London, including Miss Elsie E. Murray, 'How to run an Appreciation and Aural Training Class'; Miss Marion M. Scott, 'The Place of History and Literature in Musical Education'; Miss Nancy Gilford, 'Some Weak Points in the Teaching of Music through the Pianoforte'; and Mr. Alec Robertson, 'The Gramophone as an Aid to Music-Teaching.' On April 16 there will be a 'Round Table Talk,' when the chair will be taken and the discussion led by Mr. W. G. Whittaker (Armstrong College, Newcastle-on-Tyne). Membership of this most useful Association is not confined to teachers and students, but is wisely open to music-lovers generally, who may share the facilities afforded in the lending library for the examination and loan of new publications.

The Liverpool Sunday Society resumed operations in St. George's Hall on Sunday evening, October 10, when at eight o'clock the first of a new series of twenty concerts took place, the programme comprising vocal and instrumental music, and including organ solos by the City organist. Only faint echoes are to be heard of the fierce opposition cries which at first greeted the Society's operations. It is certain that no one is a penny the worse for hearing a little good music even on Sunday evening, and this the Society aims at providing, evidently to the satisfaction of many people whose own resources are not equal to the demand. At any rate, our Sundays are still sufficiently far from the Continental plan, and our services not generally modelled after those in America, which stimulate religious emotionalism by 'twilight services' in darkened temples where the organ has bells and there is a cornet soloist, a soprano soloist, a male-voice quartet, and a concealed choir, to say nothing of the histrionic artist in the pulpit. Our way of spending Sunday evening in St. George's Hall after eight o'clock, gives nothing much to weep over at present.

A new Choral Society, the Liverpool Harmonic, is well spoken of, and the intelligent and well-balanced singing of its fifty to sixty voices reflects credit on the organization and on its conductor, Mr. David Roberts. At the opening concert of a monthly series on October 9, Dudley Buck's 'Hymn to Music,' with other items, were well sung. There is plenty of scope for such a choir, whose proceedings will be watched with interest.

Mr. John Tobin, of Liverpool, has recently completed a lengthy and successful lecture-tour in America on behalf of the Chautauqua Society, for whom, as a representative professional English musician, he lectured in seventy towns in the United States and Canada. His theme was 'Modern Phases of British and American Music,' a subject upon which Mr. Tobin, as a ready and fluent extempore speaker, an accomplished pianist and organist, and well-equipped musician generally, was well able to speak. We owe much in Liverpool to the 'Tobin Trio' performances of new works by Goossens, Bridge, Cyril Scott, and Ireland, and in America, Mr. Tobin added Lord Berners to the list of British composers with whose music he is so expertly acquainted. He apparently succeeded in interesting the Chautauquans in his expositions, and everywhere found congenial and well-disposed audiences, who listened with attention, especially it must be admitted to music of the less problematic order. Coleridge-Taylor's 'Negro Spirituals,' for example, pleased them, and naturally also the music of modern American composers, notably John Alden Carpenter, whose pianoforte 'Polonaise Americaine' was an unbounded favourite in all places. Mr. Tobin had also the co-operation of an efficient small orchestra in the String Quartet and other pieces by Arthur Foote. Daniel Gregory Mason and, of course, Edward MacDowell, were also represented. At eight Canadian centres, Mr. Tobin was able to deliver his lecture in French to suit his audiences, to whom, otherwise, apart from a jealous adherence to their nationality, music proved the universal language. The engagement was one of varied incident, and Mr. Tobin appears not only to have worked hard, but also enjoyed his trip exceedingly and returned home holding in the highest estimation the cultured Americans and Canadians with whom it was his good fortune to come into contact.

MANCHESTER AND DISTRICT

The season here never gets into its full stride before mid-October, and the date of writing will permit of reference to few concerts of first magnitude. But before beginning the chronicle of events, allusion must be made to the demise of Manchester's most venerable musical society, the Gentlemen's Concerts. Dating approximately from the days of Bonnie Prince Charlie, through changing generations an essentially social function it failed adequately to adapt itself to changing needs and conditions, and although a wealthy organization in pre-war years, the rapid depreciation in its securities made its latter-day existence somewhat precarious. From a scheme mainly orchestral in its activity it passed to a virtual chamber music society; but interest waned continuously, and despite valiant efforts last summer to rekindle enthusiasm, only seven persons responded to the whip-up, and steps were accordingly taken to wind up its affairs. No longer at Manchester do artistic ventures find their main support in the old-established families. Interest here as elsewhere is more widely spread: the enthusiasm is manifest, if not the social status, and, what is vital from the box-office view-point, the newcomers have the money too. The older standards of æsthetic culture will be acquired gradually. Cosmopolitan support may not entirely cease, but I think the tendencies are all in the direction of the native shouldering the burden of maintenance, whilst gladly welcoming assistance in that endeavour from any quarter.

On the first Saturday in October the Scots Guards Band opened our season with appropriate splendour of tone and costume. Dame Clara Butt also shared the honours—her appearances in this city now being confined to Mr. Brand Lane's series.

When Mr. Thomas Quinlan was making his arrangements, the Free Trade Hall authorities were in the throes of negotiation with the City Council for its acquisition. Then no one knew to whom its possession would ultimately fall, hence Mr. Quinlan's bold transfer of his series to the Hippodrome Variety Theatre at the unheard-of hour of 2.30 on Saturday afternoons. With one exception this series promises to be a blend of chamber-music and song-recital, with the balance of interest held very evenly as between the instrumental and vocal elements. Your tip-top instrumentalist usually gives us music of a higher interest-value than does the vocalist of similar eminence. Madame Kirkby Lunn and Mr. Joseph Hislop have glorious voices, but I do not suppose I am alone in the opinion that the real, abiding interest of the audience on October 9 lay with MM. Cortôt and Thibaud, or in the view that the César Franck Sonata has ever before been played here by anybody with any approach to the intensity of appeal which it then made. The incongruity of such music so played in a variety theatre struck one after but not during its performance. Would that it might have been in some minster or abbey—say of the Severn Lands—where no garish light or tawdry decoration could detract from its austerity. No miscellaneous series this winter at Manchester is at all likely to approach Mr. Quinlan's, and there was every appearance that Manchester had taken kindly to the unusual transition of time and place.

On October 14 the Hallé season opened, a very full audience being present. Mr. Hamilton Harty has taken control, and we found an orchestra approaching pre-war size. The various ladies who came to the rescue during 1916-18 have now retired in favour of the men who have returned to peaceful pursuits. Mr. Arthur Catterall is still leader until the spring, when he goes to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We miss Mr. Walter Halton as first 'cello. The wood departments are as last year, and at the opening concert these players quite surpassed themselves. The 'Meistersinger' Overture, Beethoven's No. 7, and Strauss's 'Don Juan' provided work of nobility and splendour, and the geniality of the Strauss reading was most surprising considering that it had not been touched for seven years. Harty's 'Meistersinger' inclines rather to pomposity, and overwhelmed rather than thrilled, lacking as it did that vital magnetic quality easier felt than explained. The Beethoven was worthy to follow a great tradition, and ultra-classicists in our midst will not be able to cavil at Harty's Beethoven. It was all sane and well-balanced, and we got genuine imaginative pianissimos that were rather wonderful so early in the season, because there were frequent evidences that the band has not yet 'found itself.' Miss Agnes Nicholls was the incomparably great romantic artist in Weber's 'Ocean' aria, and in the negro 'spirituals' or plantation ditties of the cotton fields (especially 'Swing low, sweet chariot'), revealed a hitherto unexpected strain of emotionalism. I heard this very song done by a quartet of negroes on a hot October afternoon in a well-wooded grove adjoining a cotton plantation last year in Georgia. It then had a haunting, plaintive quality. Unlike some of the more famous plantation ditties, it did not strike me as being so well able to stand the transplanting process to our sophisticated concert-halls. Perhaps these things are best left to flourish in their native soil.

The British Music Society has arranged some six evenings during the winter, and is gradually extending its membership. On October 1 the Catterall Quartet played Tanéïev in A minor and Dr. Ernest Walker's 'Phantasy' Quartet.

Among recitalists prominence must be given to Miss Muriel Robinson for a discriminating series of Schubert songs, especially the 'Song of the Mill,' with clarinet obbligato; and to Mr. Eric Fogg, who is Manchester's youngest composer. Too often Mr. Fogg is regarded as being in the merely imitative period. It is not permissible for any young serious student to be ignorant to-day of Stravinsky-like orchestral devices, and if one notes the absence of any decided mark of individuality at this stage, yet the composer reveals a firm grip of the mechanics of his job, and not his severest detractor has denied that the Suite recently done in London (soon to follow at Manchester) showed considerable felicity even in its imitative qualities. How it comes about that a singer of Mrs. Bella Baillie's purity of voice and style so rarely appears on our foremost platforms is one of the incalculable mysteries of our concert-life. Mr. Fogg's thumbnail sketch Chinese song-studies were beautifully done; and Miss Kathleen Moorhouse will soon make a niche here for her violoncello-playing if I heard a fair sample of her art in Mr. Fogg's Fantasy for 'cello and pianoforte. The best noontide concert of recent weeks has been that of October 8, when Mr. Edward Isaacs and Miss D. Crewe were associated with Miss Jo Lamb, Mr. Elie Spivak, Mrs. Rawdon Briggs, and Miss Kathleen Moorhouse in a Bach Concerto for two pianofortes and string quartet. This is the sort of thing that can best be done at noontide functions like these—enough to digest and whet the appetite for more of the same sort. It is the most intelligent sort of propaganda for unknown or little-known works that are off the beaten track, or not of sufficiently ample proportions for bigger schemes.

Whilst Lancashire interest is mainly centred in the great competitive Festival at Blackpool on the last week of October, there have been here on October 2 and 9 two choral competitions, one at Belle Vue Gardens, drawing numerous Nonconformist choral organizations, and the other appealing purely to the Co-operative Society choirs. Here is another aspect of musical propaganda steadily pursued by the parent Co-operative Wholesale Society at Manchester. On October 13 the Society gave the first of four fine concerts in the Free Trade Hall, when a choir of seventy men drawn exclusively from its employees sang typical miniatures such as Hegar's 'Phantom Host,' MacDowell's 'Dance of Gnomes,' &c. Like the Quinlan concert, however, its main interest was instrumental, Miss Pierce and Mr. Chas. Kelly, formerly contemporary students here, being associated in two new and highly interesting works for two pianofortes, deserving of wider recognition—Arnold Bax's 'Moy Mell' and Mélan Guéronet's 'Tourbillon.' Miss Mignon Nevada and Mr. Edgar Coyle were the vocalists.

In towns surrounding Manchester, musical life seems this autumn to have awakened rather earlier, quite apart from the visits of touring concert-groups. At New Mills, a little manufacturing village on the Derbyshire border, but still under Mancunian influences in matters artistic, a flourishing orchestral society directed by Mr. J. Walters Baguley, brings to the artisans and residential people music of worth and distinction. 'Scheherazade' in this upland manufacturing little town was certainly something to make one rub his eyes.

At Bolton the Choral Union now has an amateur conductor of distinction in Mr. John Booth, one of the town's iron-masters. Men of this stamp, combining ardour, culture, and means, do not stick at trifles. On October 15 Mr. Hamilton Harty and the Hallé band attended, and gave the 'Mystic Trumpeter' and Strauss's 'Don Juan' as well. Mr. Charles Risegari conducts here another society, and a flourishing amateur orchestral society exists under the guidance of Mr. Andrew Morris.

The municipalization of the Hallé band continues to excite interest, judging by newspaper correspondence. Semi-municipalization has been advocated, and another quite good idea mooted would associate the band with the County Palatine, with proportionate guarantees from the towns visited, not omitting the famous seaside resorts, which provide a summer livelihood for many players.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE AND DISTRICT

The Newcastle Bach Choir promises an interesting series of concerts this season. There will be two recitals of the Church Cantatas in the Cathedral, a performance of the 'Christmas Oratorio' spread over two concerts, and two British concerts, one devoted mainly to the unaccompanied vocal works of Balfour Gardiner, while the chief item at the other will be Holst's 'Hymn of Jesus.' In addition to these, four chamber concerts have been arranged.

The first Quinlan concert took place on October 7, when Madame Pauline Donalda and Mr. Jos. Hislop were the vocalists. It is hoped that the inclusion of such songs as Bantock's 'From the tomb of an unknown woman' and Butterworth's 'Come, my own one,' in Madame Donalda's programme, is an indication that vocal concerts made up almost exclusively of Italian opera selections are becoming a thing of the past. Another welcome feature was the unhackneyed fare provided by the instrumentalists, MM. Alfred Cortôt and Jacques Thibaud (pianoforte and violin), who played César Franck's Sonata in A major and the second movement of Grieg's C minor Sonata. The first-named contributed examples from Saint-Saëns, Debussy, Albeniz, Liszt, and Chopin, while M. Thibaud took his audience into quite another atmosphere with arrangements from Couperin and Desplanès.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT

The musical season locally promises to be an exceptionally interesting one. The inaugural concert on September 28 is the only event of importance up to date, and Messrs. Boosey's concert party furnished a programme sustained by eight extremely popular artists, viz., Miss Carrie Tubb, Miss Flora Woodman, Miss Phyllis Lett, Mr. Frank Mullings, Mr. Jacques Hopkins, Mr. Harry Dearth, M. Melsa, and Mr. Harold Samuel, with a well-known accompanist in Mr. Berkeley Mason. The arrangement of the programme suggested a superabundance of the art-song, and its manifestations were not always of a too interesting or arresting character. Criticism of such well-known performers is quite unnecessary, but if it were possible to get a popular declaration of the feature of the evening, many hearers would probably indicate the violin solos of M. Melsa, whose brilliant technique found ample scope in Wieniawski's Polonaise in D major, and Paganini's 'Witch's Dance.'

PORTSMOUTH

Portsmouth is awakening to a growing appreciation of music—in fact, one might almost say that at present the town is in the throes of a musical revival. The most gratifying feature of this manifestation is its evidence of a desire on the part of a large section of the public for the cultivation of musical taste. Not many years ago the idea of arranging a series of Cambridge University Extension Lectures on 'A listener's course in music' would have received scant consideration, or would have been esteemed a dead failure beforehand. But this session the local lectures committee has boldly taken the plunge, and at the opening lecture at the Municipal College on September 24 the attendance created a record. Moreover the interest has been sustained. Mr. Percy A. Scholes is taking the course, and he has adopted as his text-book 'The Listener's Guide to Music,' recently published by the Oxford University Press.

There is another reflection of this musical feeling in the renewed interest that is being taken in the improvement of congregational singing in the churches. Mr. Martin Shaw, who is one of the leaders in this movement, paid a visit to Portsea Parish Church on October 8 in connection with the dedication festival, and not only lectured in a most interesting manner on the history of British Church music, but went on to hold a hymn festival on the following afternoon, representatives of all the Church choirs in the deanery taking part. Congregational practices have also been introduced at Portsea Parish Church after evensong.

Miroslav Shlik, a young Yugoslavian violinist, who is now on his first concert tour in England, gave violin recitals at the Portsmouth Town Hall on September 17 and 24. A pupil of Vaclav Huml, he has acquired a wonderful technique, and on both evenings he evoked a ready appreciation of his genius.

Pachmann made another farewell appearance at Portsmouth Town Hall on October 5 at the opening of Mr. Lionel Powell's 1920-21 series of 'International celebrity concerts.'

The Borough of Portsmouth Philharmonic Society opened its season on October 7 with Mr. Frederic Lamond as solo pianist in Tchaikovsky's first Concerto. In the absence of Mr. Hugh Burry through illness Mr. Arthur Bliss deputised as conductor.

On the anniversary of Armistice Day the Philharmonic Society is arranging a 'British Night,' when the programme will consist entirely of the works of British composers. Berlioz's 'Faust' is already being tackled for December 9.

On October 13 the Portsmouth Temperance Choral Union gave 'Elijah,' with Miss Elsie Suddaby, Miss Doris Manuelle, Mr. Frank Webster, and Mr. Herbert Brown as soloists, with, for orchestra, the string band of the Royal Marine Artillery, and Mr. H. C. Waite at the organ. Mr. R. P. O'Donnell, bandmaster of the Royal Marine Artillery, conducted.

SHEFFIELD

The London Ballad Concert Party provided the opening concert of a season which promises exceptional interest and activity. With Miss Carrie Tubb, Miss Flora Woodman, Miss Phyllis Lett, Mr. Frank Mullings, Mr. Jacques Hopkins, Mr. Harry Dearth, M. Melsa, Mr. Harold Samuel, and Mr. Berkeley Mason constituting the party, a high standard of performance was only to be expected, and the large and enthusiastic audience had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

Pachmann, on September 23, gave what was advertised as his farewell recital at Sheffield, and his admirers assembled in great force to hear him—and, perhaps, to see him! All the usual by-play was supplied—a delayed start, much preparation, comments and conversations between and during the items, and other characteristic touches.

Beethoven's Sonata in D minor (played with music on desk) and a Chopin group had pride of place in the programme. The enthusiasm of the audience was as great as ever, and the aged master received an ovation at the close of his performance.

Prof. Walford Davies lectured at the University on October 4, his subject being 'British National Song.' Much interest was shown in the lecture, and Prof. Davies's efforts—fairly successful on the whole—to get the audience to sing the refrains of 'Here's a health unto His Majesty' and 'Upidee' caused considerable amusement. The lecture was arranged by the local centre of the British Music Society.

The first of the Quinlan concerts took place on October 12, in Victoria Hall. With MM. Alfred Cortôt and Jacques Thibaud available it was a happy idea to include the great César Franck Sonata in the programme, though the advisability of opening the concert with such a work may be doubted. Late-comers, of whom there were many, were excluded from the first two movements, and although punctuality at concerts is no doubt desirable enough, this seems rather a heavy punishment for those who missed the opening by but a few seconds. A fine performance was given, and both artists were later heard to much advantage in groups of solos. Mr. Joseph Hislop made a great impression on his first visit to Sheffield.

The programmes of the four Sheffield Promenade Concerts are now available. Sir Henry Wood is to conduct, and M. Arthur de Greef, Miss Winifred Small, Miss Fanny Davies, and Miss Isabel Gray are to appear in that order as concerto players at the respective concerts. The programme could hardly be more attractive. The César Franck Symphony, the Schubert C major, and the Brahms C minor are included, while the Pianoforte Concertos of Grieg and Rachmaninov, Mozart's No. 17, César Franck's 'Les Djinns,' and Mackenzie's 'Pibroch' suite for violin and orchestra have their places in a prospectively delightful scheme. It is to be hoped that crowded audiences will encourage Mr. T. Walter Hall and his committee in their efforts to promote first-class orchestral music at Sheffield.

A series of Five o'clock Concerts has again been arranged by the Misses Foxon, and these, along with the Eva Rich Tuesday Concerts, promise an enjoyable addition to the city's growing musical activities.

SOUTH WALES

The various musical bodies throughout the district are busily engaged on works to be performed during the season at concerts or eisteddfodau. In the smallest towns and villages such, for the most part, are held in chapels, &c. But it is becoming more difficult to secure accommodation suitable for the holding of concerts on anything like a grand scale even in the large centres of population—towns contiguous with the great mining valleys. The 'film-fiend' is gradually annexing our halls. The fine Park Hall, Cardiff, has long been in the hands of a cinema company, and it is only by its long association that Cardiff Musical Society is favoured to hold its periodical concerts there. Recently the Albert Hall, Swansea, has been acquired for 'super'-cinema purposes, and possibly the present is the last season that it will be available for concerts. This is a serious menace to music-culture, the fine educative influence of a grand concert, with famous artists and a first-class orchestra, being to a great degree lost. Further, the question of a Welsh National Orchestra in its fullest sense must remain comparatively abortive.

Apparently the suggestion that our existing halls be acquired by public subscription in their different localities as memorial halls has not found favour.

Cardiff concert-goers are proverbially critical, but seldom has any artist received such an ovation as was accorded the young Welsh baritone, Mr. Mostyn Thomas, of Blaina, at the first Quinlan concert held at the Empire on the afternoon of October 9. He possesses a magnificent voice—rich and flexible and of fine range and power. He is temperamentally dramatic, and it would appear incredible that he was working as a miner up to the spring of 1919. Madame Calvé and Mr. Ben Davies sang with finished artistry, and Miss Irene Scharrer played excerpts from Chopin, Mendelssohn, and Liszt with delightful individuality.

The first of the four Swansea subscription concerts arranged by Mr. Gwynne H. Brader, took place on October 7, at the Albert Hall, and was a decided success. The artists were Miss Rosina Buckman and Mr. John Coates (vocalists), Mr. Felix Salmond (violinello), and the great Russian pianist, Siloti. The two latter artists played Rachmaninoff's Sonata for pianoforte and violinello with exquisite finish.

Sunday evening orchestral concerts are now quite a feature of Cardiff life, no less than five being held regularly in different parts of the city. The Comrades' Orchestra, consisting of ex-Service men, under the conductorship of Mr. Tom Jones, hold their concerts at Cory Hall, while at Park Hall the Angle Orchestra is in evidence. Cardiff Symphony Orchestra has commenced its series at the Playhouse, and Mr. Fred Roberts's string octet performed excerpts from Gounod, Brahms, &c., at the Paget Rooms, Penarth. Porth Royal Welsh Concert Party appeared at the Gaiety on October 3, and at Olympia the series of concerts in aid of the National Institute for the Blind, opened on September 26 with vocal (miscellaneous) items; at the second concert, on October 3, the London Operatic Quartet party appeared; and at the third, on October 10, Porth Madrigal Glee Party gave its services under the leadership of Mr. Joseph Bowen.

The Cardiff Chamber Music Society opened its seventeenth season on October 13 at the Girls' High School, when the Flonzaley String Quartet delighted a keen and appreciative audience with exquisite interpretations of the quartets of Haydn (Op. 76, No. 5), Schumann (Op. 41, No. 3), and Beethoven (Op. 18, No. 6). The Society deserves the greatest praise for fostering this class of music in the city.

Other concerts held were: A miscellaneous concert, on October 7, at Bethania, Dowlais, with Madame Elsa Stralia and Messrs. Walter Hyde and Herbert Brown as vocalists; while to a crowded audience at Noddfa, Treorchy, on October 11, the celebrated Williamstown Male-Voice Party, under the conductorship of Mr. Ted Lewis, and assisted by artists of local repute, performed a varied programme successfully.

At the annual meeting of the Troedryhiw (Merthyr) Musical Society, on October 5, it was decided to rehearse 'Samson' (Handel) for this season. The works selected by the Tredegar Choral Society for its next performance are the 'Creation,' and 'Young Lochinvar,' a modern work by Mr. Cyril Jenkins. A United Choir has been formed in the Rhymney Valley, and has succeeded in enlisting the services of the veteran Mr. John Price as conductor, 'Judas Maccabæus' is to be rehearsed forthwith.

Mr. E. T. Davies, Merthyr, has been appointed director of music to the North Wales University College, Bangor.

The Monmouthshire County Council has restricted the holding of Sunday concerts in its area except for purely benevolent purposes, and all applications for such are to be supported by two local members of the Council. At least ninety per cent. of the total takings must be handed to the particular charity intended, and a signed balance-sheet is to be lodged with the clerk of the Council within twenty-eight days of the concert. It will be seen that ten per cent. only is allowed for working expenses, and this means that all Sunday concerts are practically banned.

YORKSHIRE

Again we are promised a busy season, but there are those who pessimistically wonder whether this activity can last. The touring parties seem to be cutting each others' throats, and, if one may judge from the size of the audiences, do not appear to be sufficiently patronised to make any great profit for their promoters. The choral societies find their difficulties enormously increased by the advancing expenses, and though no one can grudge orchestral players receiving decent fees, the aggregate cost of an orchestra has become prohibitive, and I notice a good many societies are giving at least one concert of unaccompanied works. One good result is that this state of things will compel towns to be more self-reliant, and develop their own resources more assiduously. This has been done at Leeds with the Saturday Orchestral Concerts, at which the Leeds Symphony Orchestra is employed, and rumour says that this was the only series that paid its way last season. This year the eight concerts are to be under the alternate conductorship of Mr. Hamilton Harty and Mr. Goossens, and a safe but generally interesting programme has been arranged, consisting largely of well-known works, but including a rather larger proportion of more or less unfamiliar things. The Leeds Philharmonic Society is playing for safety, and giving 'Elijah' and 'Messiah,' reserving some interesting things for its third and fourth concerts—Parry's 'St. Cecilia's Day,' Holst's 'Hymn of Jesus,' and Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas.'

The Leeds Choral Union promises nothing new, but Bantock's 'Omar Khayyâm' and Verdi's 'Requiem,' with 'Messiah' and Gounod's 'Faust,' should prove generally attractive. The most important event of the Leeds season will, for many, be the visit of the London String Quartet to repeat its 'Beethoven Festival' next January, and give all the master's string quartets at a series of six concerts.

The Bradford Subscription Concerts promise to retain their pre-eminence in the West Riding, and in addition to the usual eight concerts, at four of which the Hallé Orchestra will appear, have arranged for a supplementary series of chamber concerts, in which the Flonzaley, London, and Catterall Quartets will take part. The Bradford Permanent Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Julius Harrison and Mr. Julian Clifford, will give five concerts, and, as usual, will pay some attention to native composers, in addition to including many familiar and welcome classics.

The Huddersfield Music Club has been as successful as it deserves to be, and consequently is able to issue an even more interesting prospectus than before for the coming season. Miss Adela Verne opened the series with a pianoforte recital on October 13, and the Bohemian and Philharmonic String Quartets, and vocal recitals by Miss Agnes Nicholls and Miss Olga Haley, form a very promising outlook. The famous Huddersfield Choral Society is giving 'Omar Khayyâm' under Mr. Bantock's own direction and with the Hallé Orchestra, at its first concert, 'Messiah' and 'miscellaneous' being the description of the other two programmes. The still more venerable Halifax Society is giving Brahms's 'German Requiem,' Parry's 'Judith' (a welcome revival), Vaughan Williams's 'Mystical Songs,' with, of course, the Christmas 'Messiah.'

The Hull Vocal Society is giving 'Elijah,' 'Messiah,' and Elgar's 'King Olaf'; the Hull Harmonic Society an equally familiar series of works in Gounod's 'Faust,' 'Messiah,' and 'The Golden Legend'—from which one concludes that Hull people will not greatly enlarge their experience during the coming season. More generally interesting is the prospectus of the Hull Philharmonic Society, which is giving three orchestral concerts, for though there is nothing at all out of the way in the programmes, they cover considerable ground in music of the 19th century, to which, as it appears, they are confined. The Middlesbrough Musical Union is preparing 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' Goring Thomas's 'Sun Worshippers,' Elgar's 'King Olaf,' and a setting of the 23rd Psalm by its veteran conductor, Dr. Kilburn, who has done such good work for music in the North of England.

Musical Notes from Abroad

AMSTERDAM

Our concert season did not commence with the 'flourish of trumpets,' so to speak, of former years, this lack of éclat being mainly due to our famous conductor, Mengelberg, having been prevented by illness from resuming his activities. He is, in fact, at the present moment still in Switzerland. Needless to say this untoward circumstance has reacted unfavourably upon preliminary arrangements, at least so far as concerns the big symphony concerts, which cannot otherwise be regarded than as the mainstay of our musical life at Amsterdam. The untimely absence of Mengelberg is the more to be regretted, since we were bound to have missed him for more than three months this season, during his tour in America. In some measure we shall be afforded recompense, inasmuch as Dr. Karl Muck, the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Concerts, is announced to take his place. For the time being the management of the Concertgebouw is trying its utmost to overcome the difficulty, but it must be said that the first concert did certainly not make the impression of a season-opener. A decided feeling of disappointment seemed to pervade the audience, nor did the conductor (Herr Hermann Abendroth, of Cologne) succeed in mitigating this feeling, notwithstanding the by no means unfavourable impression which he gave of his talents. Maybe it was that insufficient rehearsal supplied the cause for the failure of Bruckner's eighth Symphony to grip the audience. It would, in fact, have provoked mere boredom if Abendroth's brisk tempi, and some radical cuts in the last movement, had not combined to save the situation. Yet, taking everything into consideration, this work is undoubtedly the best of Bruckner's nine Symphonies. The shortcomings in his symphonic style become, however, apparent even in this work. It is matter for regret that this highly-gifted composer did not possess the faculty properly to develop his very often magnificent musical material. The working-out sections of his first and last movements often descend to little more than aimless musical meanderings. It is evident that such a work can be made palatable only when a spirited interpretation covers these defects. If the purely orchestral portion of the programme did not rouse the interest of the public, yet Madame Olga Samaroff at least managed to secure attention through her splendid interpretation of the pianoforte part in Brahms's second Concerto. A few days later she was heard in a pianoforte recital, when her readings confirmed the favourable impression of her capability. Her programme, ranging from Bach to Debussy, certainly afforded a gauge of her physical and intellectual powers. For the two subsequent symphony concerts the management had been fortunate in securing Sir Edward Elgar as conductor. The first of these events comprised a programme exclusively of his own compositions, including the magnificent Symphony in A flat—which already he had conducted at Amsterdam a few months previously—and the famous 'Enigma' Variations, which, with his 'Cockaigne' Overture, have established the composer's fame as an orchestral writer throughout the entire musical world. The latter work appeared also in the programme of the second concert, but, regretably, Sir Edward substituted in its place his Overture 'In the South,' which, in spite of its many excellences, falls short of the splendour of the first-named work. The high reputation which Elgar has enjoyed here has been augmented now that he has revealed himself as interpreter of a work other than his own. True, he cannot be ranked in the fore-front among conductors, but this in no way impeded his giving a beautiful reading of Brahms's third Symphony. The latent moods in the symphonies of Brahms need to be diligently explored, lest they should fail to be revealed in their proper light. This probably supplies a reason why there are musicians who refuse to acknowledge Brahms's decidedly individual art of orchestration, and it is to this, his alleged shortcoming, that in the majority of cases they assign the blame if their interpretation lacks interest. Bruch's first Violin Concerto completed the programme, the solo part being sustained in masterly manner by M. Zimmermann, the leader of the orchestra. We sincerely express the hope soon to renew acquaintance with Sir Edward Elgar.

The concert season bids fair to become an exceedingly interesting one, if we may judge from the prospectuses which continue to be issued. At all events there is a decided chance of everything second-rate being pushed aside for the rather prosaic reason that, on account of the rate of exchange, artists obviously prefer earning their fees here rather than elsewhere on the Continent. Besides this, we expect to hear a great many new musical works of importance.

To celebrate the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Beethoven's birthday it is proposed to inaugurate an almost unique Beethoven festival comprising no less than twenty-four concerts. Fourteen programmes alone are to be devoted to the master's chamber music, in which will be heard the whole of his string quartets, the pianoforte trios, the violin sonatas, and the violoncello sonatas. The orchestral compositions, on the other hand, will be flanked by the 'Missa solennis,' the Choral Fantasia, and the song-cycle, 'An die ferne Geliebte.' An additional feature of interest at the chamber concerts will lie in the fact that some of the most notable quartet and trio societies have been engaged to alternate with our own. The list contains among others the Quatuor Poulet (Paris), the Rosé Quartet (Vienna), the famous 'Bohemians,' and the Budapest Quartet. This novel arrangement may cause a lack of homogeneity which, however, will be amply compensated by the opportunity for comparing differences in the readings of Beethoven's works.

Not much can yet be said of the National Opera, the headquarters of which are now at The Hague. Information has reached us from thence that a new opera by Eugen d'Albert has been produced. It will probably be given at Amsterdam in the course of a few weeks. It may be said here that the term 'new,' as applied to an operatic work of d'Albert's, holds good only for a very short time, having in view the tremendous rate at which this lightning composer pours forth his ideas.

W. HARMANS.

BRUSSELS.

The season at the Monnaie promises to be an interesting one. Most of the artists last heard here have remained, but the big loss is Anseau. It is, however, not unlikely that one or more stars will appear en représentation. 'William Tell' has been revived successfully. It is to be hoped that this season we may have some virtuoso concerts. They were much missed last year.

The King and Queen of the Belgians took part in the Centenary festivities held at Verviers at the beginning of the autumn in honour of Vieuxtemps. Ysäye organized three orchestral concerts, all of which were very successful. Thibaud and Elman had been engaged to play Vieuxtemps's Concertos, an arrangement that provoked adverse comment in musical circles here, as neither of these artists was a pupil of the famous master, nor are they of his school. At the last minute Thibaud was unable to attend, his place being ably filled by Crickboom, one of Vieuxtemps's ablest pupils. Ysäye made a great speech before the first concert, outlining his experiences with the renowned master and also revealing many interesting points in connection with the master's works, particularly his Concertos. The whole event passed off amid much enthusiasm.

J. H. WOOD.

ITALY

'Dro the Aviator' may be aptly described as an essentially modern opera, considered from the point of view of its libretto. The hero, tired of his companion and ruined at the card-table, no longer seeks oblivion in suicide. A new factor has entered into life, and the aeroplane puts the soul of man into living, revivifying contact with all the hidden forces of Nature and with the purifying secrets of the sea and of the air. When finally the great machine which the aviator has constructed fails to respond to his hand, and in the awful catastrophe he meets his end, the rejected companion of his licentious days hurries to his side and finds him absorbed in the contemplation of spiritual truths that he learned in his new life.

The music, in the light of technical analysis, presents no new features, its harmonic and instrumental devices being the same that have been used—and abused—to excess. The Debussy element that is manifest does not suffice to disguise the staleness of the technical plan. Nevertheless the work makes its own effect, and, be it said in all sincerity, if 'L'Aviator Dro' is not remarkable for originality, it is praiseworthy in the outcome and a proof of the capacity of its composer-librettist—F. Balilla Pratella. The opera was presented with great success at the Rossini Theatre of Lugo, on September 4.

PALESTRINA

The greatest glory of musical Italy, Pier Luigi da Palestrina, is slowly coming into his own. So far—as I have before remarked in this column—his grave is without any record. A project was mooted to erect a monument to him in his native city, and it seems that the scheme is about to be realised. So far there is no national edition of his works, the only complete collection being that published in thirty-four volumes by Breitkopf & Härtel. But this edition is imperfect and not of practical utility. At last the Italian government has interested itself in the matter, the under-secretary for Fine Arts having appointed a commission to prepare an authentic collection of the master's compositions. It will be published in two forms, one being in modern notation. Preparatory to their work the commission will have access to the MSS. in the Casanatense Library, and the researches of Joseph Baini, in 1830, along with the later revision of these records by Monsignor Alfieri, will be placed at their disposal.

August 29 was the centenary of the famous 16th century musician, Ercole Bernabei, the occasion being observed in his native town of Caprarola by the unveiling of a monumental inscription in the market-place, and an address by the well-known Roman critic, Dr. de Rensis. In the afternoon of the same day, Dr. Cametti, maestro di cappella of the Church of St. Luigi dei Francesi at Rome, directed a concert of Bernabei's music.

LEONARD PEYTON.

PARIS

The Paris Opéra is making a bid for popularity, the (inspired) papers informing us that it is a veritable temple of Art, where the finest singing in the world may be heard! As a matter of cold, unadorned fact, the Théâtre National de l'Opéra is nothing of the kind. Many moons have waxed and waned since the representations at this overrated establishment have been able to sustain comparison with pre-war Covent Garden performances. Certainly the orchestra is excellent, the conductors know their business, the scenery is most intelligently designed, and the costumes are above criticism. Unfortunately artists of the first rank are required to complete the ensemble, and few such singers find their way to the theatre upon which Garnier has lavished so much art and skill. The average representation at the Opéra, in short, is not remarkable for singing or for voices to which critical people care to listen. Nor do the fleeting decades improve the acoustics, which are as bad as ever. One may, with luck, find a seat from which it is possible to hear the voices at their best. From most parts of the house the sounds struggle, as it were, through a dense fog.

Up till recently, the management had been content to ring the changes on those standing dishes which have adorned programmes for many a long year. Lately, however, novelties have been introduced, amongst these being Vincent d'Indy's 'La Légende de Saint-Christophe,' a work which shows the erudite composer at his best without creating in the mind of the critic any particular wish to hear it a second time. No one could fail to recognise the composer's knowledge of orchestral possibilities, while his vein of originality is always tempered by discretion. But d'Indy's music does not appeal to those who demand something more than mere musicianship.

During the past few weeks there have been two revivals, 'Guillaume Tell' and 'Les Huguenots,' the name-part in the former being taken by M. Noté, a baritone whose stentorian voice pierces the gloom of the auditorium without suggesting that its owner is an accomplished artist.

Odious though comparisons must ever be, yet it is beyond dispute that the average performance at the Opéra-Comique is more satisfying than are those which take place at the Opéra. Lafont, for example, is a basse-chanteur whose fine resonant voice and admirable singing give real pleasure to the captious listener, while he is the happy possessor of a mezzo-voice which affords a most useful object-lesson to the observant student. The company also includes two or three good basses; and if one or two elderly and voiceless tenors figure over-frequently in the cast, their impeccable diction partly compensates for time's dilapidations. M. Veuille, the baritone, is also entitled to very honourable mention, since he is an artist who uses his voice with a degree of skill recalling the most noted amongst his predecessors. The same may be said of Mlle. Vallandri, whose Susanne in 'Les Noces de Figaro' has been attracting all Paris for over a year and a-half. Indeed, Mlle. Vallandri's singing of the exquisite air in the last Act (known to Covent Garden habituees as 'Deh vieni, non tardar') is as completely satisfying as anything that the modern lyric stage can show. The pose of the voice and its beauty of tone, the artist's faithful adherence to the music as Mozart wrote it, her conception of the song—each is as near perfection as mortal singer can expect to get. To hear Vallandri in 'Les Noces de Figaro' is the fête-day treat of every musical Parisian.

Opéra-Comique performances of 'Lakmé' and 'La Bohème' have recently been rendered interesting by the appearance of Miss Mignon Nevada. This artist, who is so well-known to London and provincial audiences, made a most favourable impression, the freshness and purity of her voice, and the ease with which she overcomes the difficulties of intricate coloratura passages, gratifying the most hardened critics. Quelle revienne was the wish of Miss Nevada's hearers.

Solo instrumentalists are appearing in various provincial towns, and before audiences of gratifying dimensions. Many of these performers have made advantageous arrangements to give recitals during the winter in Riviera towns, while they have also booked their customary Paris engagements. These last-named include appearances in the vast and unlovely hall of the Trocadéro, and at the smaller—but infinitely pleasanter—Salle Gaveau. A few (principally those who are lucky) have been engaged for at-homes; and many eke out a none too remunerative calling by giving lessons, for which, however, a fair price often is paid. But Opera is the mainstay of the performer, whether singer or instrumentalist. The large towns have their opera-house, and the smaller ones are ever ready to support a travelling company. Indeed, the provincial amateurs sometimes pride themselves upon being hard to please. Rouen, for example, enjoys a reputation before which the stoutest hearts are said to quail. At its Théâtre des Arts may be heard intrepid artists who, having conquered tout Paris, see no reason why Rouen should withhold its approbation. Sometimes they are disillusioned, for the audience, while politely silent if the singer fails to please, takes uncommonly good care that the performer is not re-engaged. The local newspaper, too, has a word to say on the performance.

Meanwhile, Rouen, Marseilles, Nice, Nantes, Toulon, Lille, and other musical centres are busily preparing for their winter season of opera, the more enterprising amongst the managers having promised their patrons novelties. Lille, too, having much war-time leeway to make up, has various operatic undertakings in store. Here also a public difficile is to be found, a public which prides itself on its critical acumen. About its severity there is no shadow of doubt. Its reputed acumen, however, is a matter upon which there are two opinions.

GEORGE CECIL.

VIENNA

The 1920-21 musical season opened here as usual on September 1. The State Opera commenced its season with a Ballet evening consisting of 'Wiener Waltzer,' 'Die Puppenfee,' and 'Sonne und Erde.' For the first three weeks of the season the répertoire has been as follows: 'Aida,' 'Madame Butterfly' (twice), 'Freischütz,' 'La Bohème,' 'Tales of Hoffmann,' 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 'Pagliacci,' 'Seraglio,' 'Lohengrin,' 'Rosenkavalier,' 'Trovatore,' 'Flying Dutchman,' 'La Tosca,' 'Faust,' 'Ariadne in Naxos,' 'Tiefand,' 'Merry Wives of Windsor,' 'Carmen,' and 'Rigoletto.'

As nearly all these are familiar to opera audiences at home there is no need for further comment.

I noticed Mr. Adrian Boult was a very interested listener at the performance of 'Tiefand.' This strong musical drama of d'Albert's should certainly be heard in England.

Owing to the cost of living, &c., here it is expected that at the close of the present season most of the leading singers at the Opera will go to South America.

The concert season commenced on September 15 with a series of performances of Mahler works. These will include the whole of his Symphonies, as well as several other important pieces.

S. WINNEY.

THE LATE SIR GEORGE MARTIN

A tablet has been recently placed in the Parish Church of St. Michael, Lambourn, Berks, inscribed as follows:

'To the honoured memory of George Clement Martin, M.V.O., Mus. Doc., sometime organist of this Church. This memorial is erected by his widow. He was born at Lambourn on September 11, 1844, and died in London on February 23, 1916. His body lies buried in peace in the Crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral. His name lives in Music, whose secret he discovered at Lambourn, and whose beauty he dedicated to the worship of Almighty God during forty years when as Sub-Organist and Master of Song and Organist of St. Paul's he laboured for the power and honour of the Sanctuary. "Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy house, and the place where Thine honour dwelleth."

We extract the following from the Newbury News of September 30:

'A memorial brass recently affixed to the wall of the north aisle of St. Michael's Church will not fail to attract the attention of visitors. It refers to Sir George Martin, a Lambourn man, whose distinguished musical career conferred honour on his native town. How, starting life as organist of St. Michael's, he progressed upwards from post to post until he finally realised his greatest ambition by attaining to the highest musical position in the English Church, is a matter of history and the subject of peculiar gratification to Lambourn folk. The simple, unpretentious dedicatory service was in keeping with the character of the great musician. It took place close to the organ he ever held in affectionate remembrance. After a brief prelude by the organist, the Rev. R. Bagnall read a few prayers, and appropriate verses from the 84th Psalm. Then followed the 23rd Psalm and a dedicatory prayer composed by the Vicar. The Service concluded with the usual Grace, after which Mr. Maberly played a short piece he had written for the occasion, introducing Sir George Martin's favourite tune to "Lord enthroned in heavenly splendour." The proceedings were semi-private, some of the oldest friends of the deceased musician being present, including Lady Craven.'

Miscellaneous

NEW ZEALAND.—A batch of programmes from Dunedin tells of faithful work carried on for many years by the Dunedin Choral Society under Mr. Sidney Wolf. It is an organization which seems to live a useful life and to deserve well of the community. Since the war the Society has given 'A Tale of Old Japan' (on two occasions), 'The Spirit of England,' 'The Banner of St. George,' Stanford's 'The Last Post,' and 'The Hymn of Praise.' 'The Last Post' was sung in the Prince of Wales's presence on May 3. Smaller choral numbers given during the same period include Gaul's 'Daybreak,' the March-Chorus from 'Tannhäuser,' and a good class of orchestral music has not been neglected.

GRAHAMSTOWN, S.A.—On September 11, the Grahams-town Training College gave a highly appreciated concert at which the works played and sung represented the following composers—Mozart (the G minor Symphony), Grainger, Sinding (a movement from the E minor Piano-forte Quintet), John Ireland (part-songs), Quilter, Godard, Beethoven, Ronald, Purcell, Coleridge-Taylor, Liszt, Cowen, Rubinstein, and Lederer. The high standard of programme and performance was creditable to the College.

DURBAN.—At a concert of the Natal Musicians' Association on August 14, the choir, under Mr. J. F. Proudman, sang Dudley Buck's 'Hymn to Music' and an arrangement of 'The lass of Richmond Hill.' An orchestra and a military band played a good selection, including the 'Peer Gynt' Suite, Luigini's 'Ballet Egyptienne,' and the 'William Tell' Ballet music.

ADELAIDE.—Mr. Paul Howard's series of fifteen Piano-forte recitals, with entirely different programmes, have introduced some interesting music to Australia, including the Sonata and twenty-four Walzermasken of Godowsky.

The Council of University College of North Wales has appointed Mr. E. T. Davies, F.R.C.O., Merthyr Tydfil, to the post of director and organiser of the department of music at the College. This is the first occasion on which a full-time appointment has been made in this department. Mr. Davies will enter upon his duties on January 1 next.

At Trinity College, on September 29, Mr. S. Midgley gave a lecture advocating free chamber concerts in important centres throughout the country as an educative measure. Musical illustrations to his lecture took the form of Violin Sonatas by Elgar and Ireland (No. 2), played by Miss Bessie Rawlins and Mr. Charlton Keith.

The Festival of the London Sunday School Choir brought a large number of people to the Crystal Palace on October 16. Competitions were held for junior and senior choirs. Three thousand juveniles sang under Mr. J. Wellard Matthews in the afternoon, and in the evening the adult choir gave a concert under Mr. W. H. Scott.

A University of London Musical Society is now in being under the conductorship of Mr. R. H. Walthew. Rehearsals, choral and orchestral, are held weekly at the University of London Club, 21, Gower Street. Inquiries should be addressed to the hon. secretary of the Society, at King's College, Strand.

The Committee of the League of Peace and Freedom announces a series of chamber concerts at Essex Hall (Essex Street, Strand) to take place on Mondays from November 15 to December 20, and to be continued next year. Admission is free.

The Carl Rosa Opera Company opens a season at Covent Garden on November 22, with a bigger organization than the Company has ever yet commanded. There is promise of two new works—"David Garrick," by Reginald Somerville, and "She stoops to conquer," by Percy Colson.

A course of five lectures on 'Some obsolete musical instruments' will be given by Sir Frederick Bridge at the University of London, South Kensington, on dates from November 3 to May 6.

A lecture concert for young people is to be given by Miss Clarisse Speed at Kingsway Hall on November 27. It is hoped that a large audience of school children will be present.

The season's programme of the City Temple Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Allan Brown, consists of 'Elijah' (given on October 9), 'Messiah,' 'St. Paul,' 'The Crucifixion,' and 'Judas Maccabeus.'

Croydon Philharmonic Society performs 'Elijah' and 'Merrie England' on November 13 and February 5 respectively. The conductor is Mr. Alan J. Kirby.

The Central London Choral Society, conducted by Mr. David J. Thomas, gives 'Merrie England' on January 15, and Fletcher's 'The Deacon's Masterpiece' in the spring.

The London Trio announces a season of six afternoon concerts at Æolian Hall from November 23 to June 14.

Dr. Caradog Roberts has been appointed conductor of the Llandudno Autumn Choral Society.

Answers to Correspondents

MACKENZIE (FOREST GATE).—We strongly urge you to go to a good teacher from the start. The 'ordinary 15s. for ten lessons type will not do to begin with'—or, rather, he will 'do' you first, last, and all the time. We fancy you anticipate more drudgery than you will get. Much of the old dreaded five-finger work is now superseded by intelligent hand exercise away from the keyboard, or by the use of the 'Technique.'

A large number of readers kindly send word, in reply to 'Shakespeare,' that Elson's 'Shakespeare in Music' is published by L. C. Page & Co., Boston, U.S.A., and David Nutt, London.

CONTENTS

	Page
Extremists versus The Rest. By Ernest Newman ...	729
Some New Scales and Chords. By H. Walford Davies ...	736
Jenny Lind and the R.C.M. ...	738
The Organ Works of Bach. 'The Little Organ Book' (continued). By Harvey Grace ...	739
Interludes. By 'Feste' ...	744
Occasional Notes ...	748
London Concerts. By Alfred Kalisch ...	750
Opera in London. By Francis E. Barrett ...	752
Chamber Music for Amateurs ...	761
Some New Part-Songs ...	762
Church and Organ Music ...	762
Memorials to Charles Harford Lloyd ...	762
New Church Music ...	763
Letters to the Editor ...	765
Obituary ...	767
Sixty Years Ago ...	767
Royal Academy of Music ...	768
Music in the Provinces ...	768
Musical Notes from Abroad ...	776
The late Sir George Martin ...	779
Miscellaneous ...	779
Answers to Correspondents ...	780

MUSIC:

'And thou, Bethlehem.' Full Anthem for Christmas. By F. W. Wadely ...	753
---	-----

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this Number:

1. 'O world in sorrow sleeping.' Anthem for Christmas. By Alfred Hollins.
2. Competition Festival Record.

MR. CHARLES HURLEY

(TENOR).

(London and Provincial Concerts, St. Andrew's Hall, Glasgow, &c., &c.).

For Oratorio, Recitals, Concerts, &c.

Vacant dates and Terms—

Eliza House, Pathhead, Kirkcaldy, Fife.

SOLO TENOR WANTED for St. John the Baptist, Holland Road, West Kensington. £20 to £24. Choral Eucharist. Apply at the Church, or to Herbert H. Dawton, 14, Mayfield Avenue, Bedford Park, W. 4.

PIPE ORGAN (Three Manuals and Pedals) FOR SALE. Suit small Mission Church or private house. Also Piano Pedal Attachment by Norman & Beard. Fine condition. For particulars and appointment to view, write: "Diapason," 27, Baker Street, London, W. 1.

THE PROPERTY OF THE LATE C. J. MARCHANT, Mus. Doc., ORGANIST OF ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.

FOR SALE.—Norman & Beard Pedal Attachment, with upright iron-framed full trichord check action Piano (Pigott.) Price £75. Can be seen at Pigott's, Grafton Street, Dublin.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED, at Enfield Wesleyan Church. Morning Liturgical Service. Salary £60. Apply, J. H. Barley, 43, Ridgeway, Enfield, Middlesex.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BURGESS, FRANCIS.—"The Plainchant Evening Psalter and Canticles." Limp cloth, 1s. 6d. net. Cloth Boards, 2s. net.

EADY, H. R.—"Cantilena." For Pianoforte. 2s.

FETHERSTON, G. R.—"Light's abode, Celestial Salem." Hymn and Tune. 2d.

—"Lord, when Thy Kingdom comes." Hymn and Tune. 2d.

GARDINER, H. BALFOUR.—"An old song re-sung." Four-part Song for Mixed Voices. (No. 1387, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 6d.

GOODHART, A. M.—"Ye banks and braes." Scottish Air. Arranged for S.A.T.B. 4d.

HOLBROOKE, J.—Overture "Bronwen" (Op. 75). Full Score, 15s.

—"Selection from "Dylan." Arranged for Military Band by J. WESTON NICHOLL. 45s. 6d.

HOLLINS, A.—"O world in sorrow sleeping." Anthem for Christmas. (No. 1083, Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

JENNINGS, W. E.—Office for the Holy Communion. In G minor. 1s.

MACPHERSON, C.—"Thou, O God, art praised in Sion." Short Anthem. For A.T.B. (No. 101, Novello's Services, Anthems, &c., for Men's Voices.) 3d.

MAY, T. H.—"Vesper and a Hymn for Airmen." 4d.

MOFFAT, A.—"Four Old French Harpischord Pieces." Arranged for Pianoforte Solo. 3s.

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS:

No. 388. "Ring, Christmas Bells." J. F. BRIDGE 1½d.

No. 389. "Would I had been a shepherd." J. F. BRIDGE 1½d.

No. 390. "By Nazareth's green hills." J. F. BRIDGE 2d.

No. 391. "Sweet hours of night." H. C. DIXON 2d.

NOVELLO'S SONGS, Vol. 4.—Thirty Classical Songs by Various Composers. Both Notations. 3s.

PARRY, C. H. H.—"English Lyrics." Sets II and 12. 5s. each. (For contents see page 781.)

PONSONBY, N.—"Arise and gird thee." Motet. 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW (No. 341) contains the following music in both notations: "To Sylvia." Arr. as a Duet for Female or Boy's Voices. SCHUBERT. 2d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2326. "Cargoes." Four-part Song. Arranged for T. (or A.) T.B.B. H. BALFOUR GARDINER 3d.

No. 2327. "Sir Eglamore." Arranged as a Part-Song for T.T.B.B. H. BALFOUR GARDINER 3d.

No. 2329. "All Thy works praise Thee, O Lord." Full Anthem. ... ADAMS 3d.

No. 2330. "I would I were the glow-worm." Part-Song for T.T.B.B. HAROLD RHODES 3d.

No. 2331. "A dirge of kisses." Part-Song for T.T.B.B. PERCY E. FLETCHER 3d.

WADELY, F. W.—"And thou, Bethlehem." Full Anthem for Christmas. (No. 933, The Musical Times.) 2d.

—"Beacons." Two-part Song for S.A. (No. 101, Novello's Two-part Songs for Female Voices.) 3d.

WALKER, L. J.—"There's a pathway thro' the heather." Song. In D flat, E flat, or F. For Low, Medium, or High Voice. 2s. each.

WEISS, W. H.—"The Village Blacksmith." Arranged for S.A.T.B. by ERNEST NEWTON. (No. 1385, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 4d.

—"The Village Blacksmith." Arranged for T.T.B.B. by ERNEST NEWTON. (No. 570, The Orpheus.) 4d.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR OLD FRENCH HARPSICHORD PIECES

1. Vaudeville à danser, 1712 (Auteur inconnu)
2. Petit air tendre ... L. J. Saint-Amans
3. La Bourrée de Vincent ... J. P. Rameau
4. Tambourin Chinois ... E. G. Chedeville

ARRANGED FOR

PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR LITTLE PIECES

MAZURKA
MARCHSCHERZO
VALE

FOR THE PIANOFORTE

COMPOSED BY

J. D. DAVIS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND THREEPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE SEASON'S SUCCESS.

"CREATION'S PRAISE."

Well-balanced in Chorus, Solo, and Quartet.
Cantata by F. W. PEACE.

O.N., 2s. 6d. Sol-fa, 1s. Less 25% Discount for six copies.

ALSO

"CHRIST THE CONQUEROR."

O.N., 2s. Sol-fa, 1s.

By JOHN S. WITTY.

BLACKBURNS, LTD.,

Broadway Avenue, Cardigan Road, Leeds.

SHANGHAI MUNICIPAL COUNCIL PUBLIC BAND.

Seven additional Musicians are required for this Band. Candidates should be unmarried, and under thirty-five years of age, viz.:-

1. First Oboe and English Horn.
2. First Cornet.
3. First Horn.
4. First Trombone.
5. One leader, Second Violins, playing Clarinet or Saxophone.
6. One Baryton Soloist } Playing Violin and Cello between
7. One Euphonium Soloist } them.

Pay—Tael 180 per month for appointments 1 and 2.

165

3 to 7.

The present value of the Tael is about 5s. 4d. Exchange is however subject to fluctuation. The pre-war value of the Tael was about 2s. 6d.

Agreement for three years to date from arrival in Shanghai. Second-class passages to Shanghai are provided, and half-pay allowed during voyage.

The selected candidates will be required to leave England in December.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Council's Agents, to whom all applications should be sent at once.

JOHN POOK & Co.,

Agents for the Municipal Council of Shanghai.

October, 1920

68, Fenchurch Street, E.C. 3.

JUST PUBLISHED.

EDWARD MACDOWELL.

FROM THE XVIIIth CENTURY

(TRANSCRIPTIONS FOR PIANO OF HARPSICHORD
AND CLAVICHORD PIECES).

1. COURANTE ... Jean Philippe Rameau
2. SARABANDE ... Jean Philippe Rameau
3. TEMPO DI MINUETTO ... G. B. Grazioli
4. LE BAVOLET FLOTTANT François Couperin
5. GIGUE ... J. Mattheson
6. SARABANDE ... Jean Baptiste Loeilly

Nos. 1 to 5, 2s. net, each. No. 6, 1s. 6d. net.

These are of medium difficulty, and well varied. MACDOWELL was careful to preserve their original flavour in adapting them to the technique of the Pianoforte; and they will be found admirably suited either for recital or for teaching purposes.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W. 1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH LYRICS

BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS EACH SET.

(SET 11).

CONTENTS.

1. One golden thread.
2. The spirit of the Spring.
3. What part of dread eternity.
4. The blackbird.
5. The faithful lover.
6. If I might ride on puissant wing.
7. Why art thou slow.
8. She is my love beyond all thought.

(SET 12).

CONTENTS.

1. When the dew is falling.
2. To Blossoms.
3. Rosaline.
4. When the sun's great orb.
5. Dream pedlary.
6. O World, O Life, O Time.
7. The sound of hidden music.

The Series is now completed by the publication of the above Sets.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

*A song of joy	John E. West	4d.	*Nazareth	Ch. Gounod	3d.
And the Angel said unto them	J. P. Sweetinck	6d.	*Now is come Salvation	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*And thou, Bethlehem	F. W. Wadely	2d.	*Now when Jesus	Joseph Holbrooke	4d.
*Angels from the realms of glory, F. H. Cowen 4d.; E. Vine Hall	4d.		O come, all ye faithful (Adeste Fideles) Arr. by G. J. Tredaway	3d.
*Arise, shine, for thy light is come	Geo. Elvey	2d.	O come hither	W. Jackson	4d.
*Arise, shine, for thy light is come	G. F. Cobb	6d.	*O come, Redeemer of mankind.. .. .	Arthur W. Marchant	4d.
*Arise, shine, O Jerusalem	Thomas Adams	4d.	*O come, Redeemer of mankind.. .. .	John E. West	2d.
*Awake, put on thy strength	F. R. Greenish	6d.	O Holy Babe	A. C. Mackenzie	4d.
Before the heavens were spread abroad	Horatio W. Parker	4d.	*O Holy Night	Adolphe Adam	3d.
Behold, all the earth lieth still	G. F. Huntley	6d.	O Jerusalem I look about thee	E. W. Naylor	6d.
Behold, a star appeareth	Niels W. Gade	6d.	*O Jerusalem I look about thee	John E. West	2d.
Behold, a star appeareth	B. Luard-Selby	2d.	O sing to God (Noël). (Female Voices)	Ch. Gounod	8d.
*Behold, I bring	J. Barnby and E. V. Hall, ea.	2d.	*O sing to God (Noël). (Arranged for S.A.T.B.)	Ch. Gounod	2d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings *J. Goss and Giovanni Croce, ea.	2d.		O Thou that tellest	Handel	4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings *C. W. Smith and Vittoria, ea.	2d.		*O world in sorrow sleeping	Alfred Hollins	4d.
Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. M. Crament	6d.	*O Zion, that bringest good tidings	J. Stainer	2d.
*Behold my servant	J. Frederick Bridge	4d.	Of the Father's love begotten	E. C. Bairstow	4d.
Behold, the name of the Lord	Percy Pitt	4d.	*Rejoice in the Lord	J. B. Calkin	4d.
*Behold the Tabernacle (Two-part Anthem)	G. A. Macfarren	4d.	*Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous	Alfred Hollins	4d.
Be peace on earth	W. Crotch	3d.	*Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion	Charles H. Lloyd	4d.
Beside Thy Cradle	J. S. Bach	3d.	Rejoice, O ye people	Mendelssohn	2d.
*Bethlehem	Ch. Gounod	2d.	*Rest, weary earth	A. M. Goodhart	4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel S.S. Wesley & The Earl of Mar, ea.	2d.		*Ring out, wild bells	P. E. Fletcher	4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	C. L. Williams	6d.	Say, where is He born (Trio)	Mendelssohn	3d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	E. Vine Hall	4d.	*See, amid the winter's snow	John E. West	2d.
Born to-day (Motet. S.S.A.T.B.)	J. P. Sweetinck	4d.	Ditto (Three-part)	John E. West	2d.
Break forth into joy *H. A. Matthews and W. G. Alcock, ea.	4d.		*Silent Night (Melody by F. Grüber)	Arr. by John E. West	2d.
Break forth into joy	T. Ridley Prentice	8d.	*Sing and rejoice	J. Barnby and John E. West, each	2d.
Break forth into joy S. Coleridge-Taylor and Bruce Steane, ea.	4d.		*Sing and rejoice	Basil Harwood	6d.
Break forth	J. S. Bach	2d.	Sing a song of praise	Oliver King	4d.
Brightest and best	E. Vine Hall	6d.	*Sing, O Daughter of Zion H. W. Wareing and W. G. Alcock, ea.	4d.
*Calm on the list'ning ear of night	Horatio W. Parker	4d.	Sing, O Daughter of Zion	H. Gadsby	2d.
*Christ's Incarnation	Myles B. Foster	2d.	Sing, O heavens *H. Davan Wetton, Kent, & T. T. Trimmell, ea.	6d.
*Christians, awake	J. Barnby, 4d.; *H. M. Higgs	6d.	Sing, O heavens	A. C. Mackenzie	8d.
Christians, be joyful	Bach	4d.	*Sing, O heavens	J. H. Maunders and B. Tours, each	2d.
*Christmas Day (Choral Fantasy on Old Carols)	G. Holst	6d.	*Sing, O heavens	Bruce Steane and Arthur S. Sullivan, ea.	4d.
Come and thank Him	Bach	4d.	*Sing, O heavens, and be joyful, O earth	A. Gaul	2d.
*Come and worship the Lord	Thomas Adams	2d.	*Sing unto the Lord	Vincent Novello	2d.
*Come hither, ye faithful	H. Hoffmann	6d.	That God doth love the world	Bach	4d.
*Come, ye Gentiles, hear the story	Edward C. Bairstow	2d.	*The Angel Gabriel was sent from God	H. Smart	2d.
*Come, ye lofty	H. Elliot Button	2d.	*The Angel said unto them (Two-part. Sop. and Bass)	Brown	3d.
*Crown Him, the Virgin's Son	B. Luard-Selby	3d.	*The first Christmas (Words only, 3s. per 100)	J. Barnby	1d.
Dawns the day, the natal day	Robin H. Legge	4d.	*The Grace of God which bringeth salvation	J. Barnby	1d.
Drop down, ye heavens	J. Barnby, 2d.; J. Stainer	6d.	*The hallowed day hath shined	B. Luard-Selby	1d.
*For unto us a Child is born	Handel	3d.	*The hallowed day hath shined upon us	J. Stainer	1d.
*Give the king Thy judgments, O Lord	A. H. Brown	2d.	*The Hymn of the Angels	John E. West	6d.
Glory be to God	Bach	4d.	The light hath shined	E. Silas and C. G. Verrinder, ea.	2d.
*Glory to God	Bach, 3d.; Handel	1d.	*The Lord our Righteousness	Hugh Blair	4d.
*Glory to God in the highest *Clowes Bayley and Pergolesi, ea.	2d.		*The morning stars sang together	J. Stainer	8d.
*Glory to God in the highest	E. Markham Lee	4d.	*The morning stars sang together	G. A. A. West	6d.
*God so loved the world	J. Goss and M. Kingston, ea.	2d.	*The New-Born King	Percy E. Fletcher	4d.
*God so loved the world	J. Varley Roberts	4d.	*The star that now is shining	Oliver King	1d.
*God so loved the world	J. Stainer	2d.	*The whole earth is at rest	J. Varley Roberts	6d.
*God, Who at sundry times	Edward C. Bairstow	2d.	*The Word is flesh become	Ch. Gounod	8d.
*God, Who at sundry times	J. H. Mee	6d.	*The Word is made Incarnate	Thomas Adams	8d.
*Good King Wenceslas	Arr. by W. G. Ross	3d.	*There shall a star	Mendelssohn	8d.
*Hail! thou that art highly favoured	Arthur Carnall	6d.	*There shall come a star	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*Hail to the Christ (Carol-Anthem)	J. Barnby	4d.	There shall come forth a Rod *Ferris Tozer & F. W. Wadely, ea.	4d.
*Hallelujah! for unto us a Child is born	W. H. Monk	2d.	There shall come forth a star	O. A. Mansfield	4d.
Hallelujah! the light hath shined	Oliver King	4d.	*There was silence in Bethlehem's fields	J. Stainer	2d.
*Hark! the glad sound	Myles B. Foster and E. V. Hall, ea.	4d.	Ditto (Unison)	J. Stainer	2d.
*Hark! the herald angels sing	E. V. Hall	4d.	*There were shepherds	Myles B. Foster and B. Tours, ea.	2d.
*Hark! what news the angels bring	Oliver King	4d.	Ditto (Two-part Anthem)	Myles B. Foster	4d.
Hear, King of Angels	Bach	4d.	There were shepherds Edgar Pettman and H. W. Wareing, ea.	4d.
He cometh forth	G. A. Macfarren	3d.	*There were shepherds	Charles Vincent	6d.
How beautiful are the feet (Appendix to the "Messiah") Handel	4d.		*There were shepherds E. A. Sydenham and Healey Willan, ea.	4d.
I desired wisdom	J. Stainer	8d.	This day Christ is born (Men's Voices)	Basil Harwood	4d.
I will set His dominion in the sea	Horatio W. Parker	6d.	This is the day which the Lord hath made	J. Turle	4d.
*In a stable lowly (Carol-Anthem)	Oliver King	2d.	*This is the month	E. W. Naylor	2d.
In that day	J. F. Bridge	4d.	*Thou art My Son	Thomas Adams	4d.
*In the beginning	G. B. Allen and B. Luard-Selby, ea.	2d.	*Thou must leave Thy lowly dwelling	Berlioz	2d.
*In the beginning	Charles Macpherson	6d.	*Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts	J. Stainer	2d.
*In the beginning was the Word	E. H. Thorne	3d.	Unto us a Child is born	F. Adlam	6d.
*In the beginning was the Word	Ferris Tozer	6d.	Unto us was born (Two-part Anthem)	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
In this was manifested	F. E. Gladstone	3d.	What sweeter music can we bring	H. Walford Davies	8d.
*It came upon the midnight clear	J. Stainer	2d.	When Christ was born to earth	H. Walford Davies	6d.
*Jesus, Who from Thy Father's throne	F. C. Woods	4d.	*When Jesus was born in Bethlehem	W. A. C. Cruickshank	4d.
Let us now go even unto Bethlehem J. T. Field & E. J. Hopkins, ea.	2d.		*While all things were in quiet silence	Henry J. King	4d.
Let us now go even unto Bethlehem	Bruce Steane	2d.	*While all things were in quiet silence	Oliver King	2d.
*Like silver lamps	J. Barnby	2d.	While all things were in quiet silence	G. A. Macfarren	2d.
Lo, God, our God has come	Battison Haynes	4d.	While all things were in quiet silence	Healey Willan	4d.
Lo, star-led chiefs	W. Crotch	3d.	*While shepherds watched their flocks Geo. Elvey & E. V. Hall, ea.	4d.
*Love Divine, all love excelling	E. V. Hall	4d.	*While shepherds watched their flocks J. Barnby, 6d.; W. T. Best	2d.
*Mercy and truth are met together (Words, 3s. per 100) J. Stainer	4d.		With all Thy Hosts *John E. West and A. W. Wilson, ea.	2d.

THE "LUTE" SERIES OF CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS.

*72 Arise, shine	T. W. Stephenson	4d.	*71 Fear not; for behold	F. J. Sawyer	4d.
*95 Arise, shine	F. C. Maker	4d.	*12 Hark! what mean (Carol Anthem)	Arthur Sullivan	4d.
170 Behold! He cometh	Albert W. Ketèlby	4d.	143 How beautiful are the feet	W. A. C. Cruickshank	4d.
16 Behold, I bring	F. Aubrey Owen	4d.	144 Let us now go	A. Kempton	4d.
94 Behold, I bring you good tidings	Fredk. Peel	4d.	137 Rejoice ye with Jerusalem	Arthur Page	4d.
225 Behold, my Servant	C. Harris	4d.	170 Sing, O Daughter of Zion	H. Elliot Button	4d.
108 Behold, my Servant	Ebenezer Prout	4d.	180 Sing, O Daughter of Zion	Arthur Page	4d.
166 Behold, upon the mountains	A. W. Ketèlby	4d.	184 Sing, O Heavens	Coldham Hall	4d.
*59 Blessed be the Lord	J. Barnby	4d.	*48 Sing, O sing	Henry Leslie	4d.
204 Break forth into joy	F. Aubrey Owen	4d.	*83 There were shepherds	A. R. Gaul	4d.
*155 Break forth into joy	J. C. Bridge	4d.	192 Unto us a Child is born	H. E. Nichol	4d.
*119 Break forth into joy	Seymour Smith	4d.	191 While all things	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*23 Come near, ye nations	Michael Watson	4d.	*118 While shepherds watched	G. C. Martin	4d.
*35 Daughter of Zion	F. C. Maker	4d.

Anthems marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1st, 2d., and 3d. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

CANTATAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

BETHLEHEM

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES AND CHORUS

Interspersed with Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY

E. CUTHBERT NUNN

THE MUSIC BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

Price Four Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, Two Shillings.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE

STORY OF BETHLEHEM

FOR CHRISTMAS SERVICES, Etc.

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

THE MUSIC FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS AND ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Three Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

String Parts, 8s. 9d. ; Wind Parts and Full Score, MS.

CHRISTMAS EVE

FOR CONTRALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

NIELS W. GADE.

(Op. 40.)

Price Two Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence.

CHRISTMAS SCENES

FOR FEMALE VOICES

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Four Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

BY

J. S. BACH.

Divided into six sections, intended originally for separate performance on the three days of Christmas, New Year's Day, New Year's Sunday, and the Festival of the Epiphany.

Vocal Score, Four Shillings ; Vocal Parts, Two Shillings
each.

Parts 1 and 2, 2s. ; Parts 3 and 4, 2s. ; Parts 5 and 6, 2s.

Tonic Sol-fa (Parts 1 and 2), 8d.

Books of Words (per 100), 12s. 6d.

Parts 1 and 2 (per 100), 6s. 6d.

THE NATIVITY

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, AND CHORUS

With Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND THE MUSIC

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price Two Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, Tenpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

CHRISTMAS CANTATA

FOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

ROSE DAFFORNE BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY

JULIUS HARRISON.

Price Two Shillings.

Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

THE HOLY CHILD

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI,
CHORUS, AND ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price Two Shillings ; Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

YULE - TIDE

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ANDERTON.

Price Three Shillings.

Paper boards, 5s. ; cloth, gilt, 6s.

BEFORE THE PALING OF THE STARS

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

BY

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI.

SET TO MUSIC FOR VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

BY

B. J. DALE.

Price Two Shillings.

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise that tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.
 "Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
 "Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."
 —Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
 Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS.

	Staff Notation.	Tonic Sol-fa.
Anthem—Christians, Awake	4d.	3d.
Carol—Once in Bethlehem	3d.	2d.
Two Christmas Carols	4d.	3d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G	2s.	1/4
---------------------	-----	-----

Or, separately:—

Te Deum	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera	3d.	3d.
Benedictus	3d.	3d.
Jubilate	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.

SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1)	1/4	10d.
--------------------------------------	-----	------

Or, separately:—

Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	1s.	8d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.
Te Deum in B flat	4d.	3d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison)... ..	4d.	2d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	4d.	3d.

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)	2s.	—
---------------------------------------	-----	---

CHURCH CANTATA.

Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for General use)	2s.	1/4
---	-----	-----

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

MUSIC FOR ADVENT AND CHRISTMAS

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, MUS. D. CANTAB.

SERVICES.

CHANT TE DEUM, IN F	3d.
BENEDICITE, IN F	2d.
BENEDICTUS AND JUBILATE, IN F... ..	4d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, IN F	4d.
CANTATE AND DEUS, IN F	4d.
COMMUNION SERVICE, IN E, WITH BENEDICTUS AND AGNUS DEI—FOR FOUR VOICES	1s.

ANTHEMS.

O LORD, THOU ART MY GOD—ADVENT	3d.
IN THE BEGINNING—CHRISTMAS	4d.
TONIC SOL-FA	2d.
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME—CHRISTMAS	4d.
BEHOLD, I BRING YOU GOOD TIDINGS—CHRISTMAS... ..	3d.

FIVE SETS OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS, in Books, 6d. each.

All numbers printed separately, 1d. each.

The Composer will be pleased to send Specimens.

Address: 36, CHRIST CHURCH ROAD, NORWICH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

30th 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

A BOOK OF DESCANTS.

By ALAN GRAY.

Organ Edition, Fcap. 4to, 8s. 6d. net.

Treble Parts and Supplementary Tunes,

Oblong Fcap. 4to, 3s. 6d. net.

An interesting adaptation of the medieval arts of Descant and Faux-Bourdon has been introduced into this country in the last few years, and this volume has been compiled in the belief that, of the two systems, the Descant will be found the most useful and effective under modern conditions. The tunes, which have been pitched as low as possible to suit the average voice, are arranged, with a few exceptions, for organ accompaniment with the Descant forming the highest part.

Prospectus, giving specimen pages, on application.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS,

FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C. 4.

C. F. CLAY, MANAGER.

THE

B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO.

WE MAKE A SPECIALITY OF GOOD
MUSIC FOR TEACHERS' USE.

Through years of painstaking work we have thoroughly established the reputation of publishing the best collection of EASY AND MEDIUM GRADE TEACHING MUSIC FOR PIANO to be had in the world.

This is a strong statement, but a careful study of the contents of our catalogues will easily establish this fact; besides, the very large quantities of our publications purchased by the leading music-sellers throughout the British Isles and Colonies is another strong confirmation of the value of our publications.

This reputation has been gained through the great care which has been taken in every detail; first, in judicious selection of the manuscript to be published; second, by the conscientious but conservative editing and fingering given each work, and finally by having the best engraving, paper, printing, and binding that money can procure.

Are You a Music Teacher?

Do You Use Good Music?

Do You Believe in Pleasing Music?

Have You Seen Our Complete Catalogue?

Send in your name at once, and we will forward (post free) our Complete Catalogue, also Thematic Catalogues of Easy Teaching Music for the Piano, list of "EDITION WOOD," a Series of Standard Classics and Recreations for Teaching Purposes, nearly one thousand volumes.

THE B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO.

84, NEWMAN STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 91.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION

BY
H. ELLIOT BUTTON

WITH PREFACE BY
SIR EDWARD ELGAR.

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

As musical compositions get more complicated, elaborate, and difficult of execution, it is increasingly incumbent upon the composer to present his meaning in a manner that will help the performer to grasp that meaning with as little trouble as possible.

The object of this book is to point out to composers, arrangers, and editors, the difficulties they often unwittingly place in the path of executants, and to suggest various means of obviating those difficulties.

Price - - Three Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S SONGS.

A. HERBERT BREWER—

When all the world is young.

In D (Compass, D to E) and F.

On Wings of Delight.

In C (Compass, A to C), E flat, and F.

Price 2s. each.

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR—

Sweet evenings come and go, love.

In F (Compass, D to E flat) and B flat.

Price 2s.

BROMLEY DERRY—

The Raiders.

(A Song of the Norsemen.)

In G (Compass, D to E flat).

Price 2s.

LAXTON EYRE—

Life's Highway.

In E flat (Compass, B flat to F).

Price 2s.

ERNEST FARRAR—

Brittany.

In E flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), F, and G.

Price 1s. 6d.

EDWARD GERMAN—

Charming Chloe.

In D flat (Compass, D flat to E flat), E flat, and F.

It was a Lover and his Lass.

In G (Compass, D to E) and B flat.

Price 2s. each.

W. McNAUGHT—

The Piper.

In D (Compass, D to D) E flat, and F.

Price 2s.

W. G. ROSS—

A Daffodil Wedding.

In C (Compass, C to F) and D.

Price 2s.

LEONARD J. WALKER—

My Life is like a Garden.

In B flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), C, and D.

There's a pathway thro' the heather.

In D flat (Compass, D flat to F), E flat, and F.

Price 2s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

WILL BE PUBLISHED DURING THIS MONTH.

ENGLISH FOLK-SONGS

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

SELECTED EDITION.

SONGS AND BALLADS.

(VOLUMES I. AND II.)

Price Eighteen Shillings each.

PREFACE.

THIS Selected Edition will contain in one complete series of volumes those songs, ballads, carols, chanteys, &c., from the Author's Collection of traditional music which, in his opinion, are the most characteristic and most suitable for purposes of publication.

The Collection is the product of twenty years' work in the towns and country districts of England and among the English inhabitants of the Southern Appalachian Mountains of North America, and comprises—counting variants, and dance, as well as vocal, airs—some five thousand tunes. A certain number of these have been published from time to time during the period of collection, but, as the Somerset Series, in which the bulk of these appeared, is now out of print, and as, moreover, further additions are unlikely to be made to it, the Collection can now be reviewed as a whole unfettered by past commitments.

NOVELLO'S CHORAL MUSIC

A SELECTED LIST.

FREDERIC AUSTIN

SONGS IN A FARMHOUSE

A cycle of traditional songs, S.A.T.B. Soli and Chorus, with accompaniment for pianoforte or orchestra. 18 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

GRANVILLE BANTOCK

A PAGEANT OF HUMAN LIFE

Chorus only, unaccompanied. 15 mins.

Price Three Shillings.

J. BRAHMS

SONGS OF LOVE (LIEBESLIEDER)

S.A.T.B. Soli or Chorus with accompaniment for pianoforte duet. 20 mins.

Complete vocal score, Eight Shillings.

Vocal parts only, Two Shillings.

EDWARD ELGAR

THE MUSIC MAKERS

Contralto Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 35 mins.

Price Five Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, Three Shillings.

EDWARD ELGAR

THE SPIRIT OF ENGLAND

S. or T. Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 30 mins.

Price Five Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, Three Shillings.

EDWARD ELGAR

*THE BLACK KNIGHT

Chorus and Orchestra. 40 mins.

Price Four Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, Two Shillings.

BALFOUR GARDINER

*NEWS FROM WHYDAH

Chorus and Orchestra. 5 mins.

Price Tenpence.

Tonic Sol-fa, Fourpence.

HAMILTON HARTY

THE MYSTIC TRUMPETER

Bar. Solo, Chorus and Orchestra. 35 mins.

Price Four Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, Two Shillings.

GUSTAV HOLST

*KING ESTMERE

Chorus and Orchestra. 25 mins.

Price Four Shillings.

E. C. MACMILLAN

ENGLAND

S. and Bar. Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 40 mins.

Price Five Shillings.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

THE PIED PIPER

T. and B. Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 30 mins.

Price Four Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, Two Shillings.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

THE CHIVALRY OF THE SEA

Chorus and Orchestra. 16 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

RICHARD WAGNER

PARSIFAL

Prelude and Selection from Act I.

T. Bar. B. (B.) Soli ad lib., Chorus and Orchestra. 1 hr.

Price Three Shillings.

RICHARD WAGNER

*SCENES FROM TANNHÄUSER

Soli, Chorus and Orchestra. 1 hr. 45 mins.

Price Three Shillings.

R. T. WOODMAN

FALMOUTH

Chorus only. Accompaniment ad lib. 5 mins.

Price Two Shillings.

* Orchestral material for reduced orchestra may be hired from the publishers.

See also page 788 for list of Operas adapted for concert performance with reduced orchestra.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS
OF THE FAVOURITE OPERAS
ADAPTED FOR CONCERT USE.

1. FAUST.

Price 2s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.

*2. IL TROVATORE.

Price 3s. Tonic Sol-fa, 2s.

*3. TANNHÄUSER.

Price 3s.

*4. MARITANA.

Price 3s.

*5. THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.

Price 3s.

*6. THE DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.

Price 3s.

*7. MARTHA.

Price 3s.

* Orchestral Parts for Reduced Orchestra may be obtained from the Publishers.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWO PASTORALS

"COME YOU, MARY."

"WHO WOULD SHEPHERD PIPES FORSAKE?"

THE WORDS BY NORMAN GALE.

THE MUSIC BY
ERNEST BRISTOW FARRAR
(Op. 21, Nos. 2 and 3)

TWO KEYS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOUR SHAKESPEARE SONGS

1. HARK! HARK! THE LARK.
2. WHO IS SYLVIA.
3. TAKE, O TAKE THOSE LIPS AWAY.
4. ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE.

COMPOSED BY

REGINALD STEGGALL.

Op. 28.

PRICE, FIVE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SONGS

BY

JOHN GERRARD WILLIAMS.

"LOVE OUTWITTED"

Phantasy Duet for Voice and Pianoforte.

Price Two Shillings.

"MARCH MORNING"

For High and Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

TWO SONGS.

"ABSENCE" AND "SERENADE"

For High, Medium, or Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Sacred Songs by Joseph Adams.

"DIVINE LOVE."
"THE GENTLE SHEPHERD."
"LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT."
"THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD."
"THE NAZARENE."
"THE PROMISE OF PEACE."
"SUN OF MY SOUL."
"JESU, LOVER OF MY SOUL" (A. C. BROOKES)

PRICE, TWO SHILLINGS NET.

From all Music-Sellers, or direct from the Publisher—
JOSEPH ADAMS, 15, CANNON PASSAGE, BIRMINGHAM.

CHRYSTALLA SONG

ENGLISH AND FRENCH WORDS.

FOR MEZZO-SOPRANO, OR BARITONE,

WITH INSTRUMENTAL ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

ETHEL M. SMYTH.

	s.	d.
Full Score	6	0
Instrumental Parts	3	10
Voice and Pianoforte	2	0
Voice, Violin, and Pianoforte	2	0

"A song of great loveliness."—Daily Mail."The fine 'Chryssilla' of Ethel Smyth."—Daily Telegraph.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

A SELECTION

FOR THE

ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

Op. 30, No. I.

ARRANGED AND ADAPTED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price Five Shillings net

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ONE STRING FREE

THIS will enable you to test the accuracy of Prof. Fiorentini Astorre's fine tribute to "Summit" Guitar Strings.

The following letter needs no further comment. It is from the celebrated Prof. Fiorentini Astorre, of the School for Guitar, Bologna:—

I never succeeded in obtaining a really precise intonation until I tested "Summit" Strings (Silk and Copper), made by BRITISH MUSIC STRINGS, LTD., of LONDON.

"Summit" Strings can be tuned up to normal pitch. They give an octave and a fifth that is perfectly in tune. They sound a note that is mellow, but at the same time is robust—because their gauge is true. They yield harmonics (flute notes) of an extraordinary clearness.

"Summit" Strings possess a remarkable flexibility, which admits of a free vibration the instant they are struck—not only of the silken cord, but also of its metal wrapping. This feature is extremely difficult to find in other strings where the vibration of metal and silk is almost invariably constrained and imperfect. I recommend "Summit" Strings to all Guitar players, be they Teachers, Concert Performers, or Amateurs. (PROF.) FIORENTINI ASTORRE.

We make steel and covered strings for ALL instruments, of the same high quality as is so aptly described above by Prof. Astorre. Send us your name and address for FREE sample string. State your instrument and the exact string required. Our offer applies to Guitar, Mandoline, Banjo, or Violin. Write to-day.

CATHEDRAL STRINGS OF ALL .. SUMMIT STRINGS.. MUSIC DEALERS

Retail Prices: "CATHEDRAL" from 6d., "SUMMIT" from 3d.
CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN FOREIGN BRANDS.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS:

BRITISH MUSIC STRINGS, LTD.,
MONSELL ROAD, FINSBURY PARK, LONDON, N. 4.

Telegrams: "Cello, Finspark, London."

Telephone: North 2594.

WILL BE PUBLISHED DURING THE MONTH.

RHYTHMIC MOVEMENT VOL. I.

Development of the Rhythmic and Metric Sense of the Instinct for Harmonious and Balanced Movements, and of good Motor Habits.

BY

EMILE JAQUES-DALCROZE.

Price Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SOLEMN MELODY

COMPOSED BY

H. WALFORD DAVIES.

FULL ORCHESTRA.

		s.	d.
FULL SCORE		6	0
STRING PARTS		1	8
WIND PARTS		5	0

STRINGS AND ORGAN.

SCORE		4	0
STRING PARTS		1	8
ORGAN		0	8

PIANOFORTE SOLO		2	3
ORGAN SOLO		2	3
VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE		2	3
VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE		2	3

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PLAINSONG and its ACCOMPANIMENT.

COURSE ENSURING THOROUGH UNDERSTANDING AND PRACTICAL EFFICIENCY.

Tuition personally, or by correspondence, by

DR. GEORGE OLDROYD, D.Mus. (Lond.),

45, Boundary Road, St. John's Wood, N.W. 8.

CH. KENNEDY SCOTT (Conductor of Oriana Madrigal Choir and Philharmonic Choir), says in Musical Times, October, 1920:

"One feature of our study at Brussels I have found of utmost value ever since—Plainsong. . . . It was always important, but it was never more so than to-day, when composers are seeing the beauty of free rhythm and the old modes."

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE. A SELECTED LIST.

SONATAS AND SUITES.

EDWARD ELGAR

SONATA

Price Twelve Shillings net.

ERNEST FARRAR

CELTIC SUITE

Price Six Shillings net.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

TWO SUITES

No. 1, in D. No. 2, in F.

Price Seven Shillings each net.

ARTHUR HINTON

SUITE

Price Ten Shillings net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

PIBROCH SUITE

Price Twelve Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

SUITE PITTORESQUE

Price Twelve Shillings net.

SHORT PIECES.

JOHN IRELAND

BAGATELLE

Price Three Shillings net.

JOSEF HOLBROOKE

SOUVENIR DE PRINTEMPS

Price Three Shillings net.

H. WALFORD DAVIES

SOLEMN MELODY

Price Two Shillings and Threepence net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

BENEDICTUS

From Six Pieces, Op. 37.

Price Three Shillings net.

J. B. McEWEN

SIX HIGHLAND DANCES

Price Three Shillings each net.

W. McNAUGHT

BARCAROLLE

Price Three Shillings net.

H. WALDO WARNER

SCHERZO

Price Three Shillings net.

JOHN E. WEST

IN THE SPRING

Price Three Shillings net.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER, JUN.

SOUVENIR

Price Three Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

AIR À DANSER

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

SERENADE

From the Wand of Youth Suite, No. 1.

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE MATIN

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE NUIT

Price Two Shillings and Threepence net.

EDWARD ELGAR

PASTOURELLE

Price Three Shillings net.

The . . .
Success
of the 'Apollo'
Pedal-Reed
Organ . .

Illustrated Booklet with Specifications and Testimonials from Eminent Authorities will be sent free by Post upon application.

A Few of the Reasons.

1. The "APOLLO" being a modern 2-manual Pipe Organ Console adapted to play Reeds is the ideal instrument for Organists' and Students' home practice.
2. The "APOLLO" is the practical substitute for a Pipe Organ. Being identical in Scale, Positions and Measurements it is especially suitable for Small Churches, Chapels, Missions, etc.
3. The "APOLLO" is built by Pipe Organ Craftsmen, from standard Pipe Organ materials and fittings.
4. The "APOLLO" is endorsed by eminent Organ Recitalists and Authorities including E. H. Lemare, Esq., Caradog Roberts, Esq., Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., William Faulkes, Esq. etc.
5. The "APOLLO" possesses a true pipe-like quality of tone and embodies every artistic and mechanical feature deemed essential by cultured musicians.

Designed
and BUILT by

Rushworth & Dreaper Ltd

Church, Chamber, and Concert
ORGAN BUILDERS

Showrooms : 11-17 Islington, LIVERPOOL

Telegrams :
'APOLLO, Liverpool.

LONDON :—The CHAPPELL Piano Co., Ltd., 50 New Bond Street, W. 1.

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVICHORD)

EDITED BY

HAROLD BROOKE.

IN TWO PARTS.

Price 5s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

RÉPERTOIRE COLLIGNON.

A COLLECTION OF OLD FOLK-SONGS

ARRANGED BY BRITISH COMPOSERS.

*Set for Medium Voice to the Original Words,
With the Addition of English Translations to the French Songs.*

- No. 1. VARIATIONS ON "CADET ROUSSELLE" (Arnold Bax, Frank Bridge, Eugène Goossens, John Ireland).
 No. 2. BEHAVE YOURSELF BEFORE FOLK (Eugène Goossens).
 No. 3. TROIS ENFANTINES: "Jean, p'tit Jean," "Berceuse," "Une petite fille" (Arnold Bax).
 No. 4. SAINTE CATHARINE (Herbert Howells).
 No. 5. C'EST LE GRAND DUC DE MAINE (Herbert Howells).
 No. 6. I'M OWRE YOUNG TO MARRY YET (Eugène Goossens).
 No. 7. LE PETIT COUTURIER (Herbert Howells).
 No. 8. ANGELE AU COUVENT (Herbert Howells).
 No. 9. JACK AND JONE (Arnold Bax).
 No. 10. THE MAID AND THE MILLER (Arnold Bax).
 No. 11. O DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (Arnold Bax).
 No. 12. I HAVE HOUSE AND LAND IN KENT (Arnold Bax).

Price of each Song, 2s. net cash. (No. 3, 3s. net cash.)

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough Street, W. 1.

This Supplement is part also of the November issue of THE SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, and can be obtained with the REVIEW, price 3d.

The

Competition Festival Record

No. 148.

BLACKPOOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

October, 19-23.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

THE OPENING DAYS.

This important meeting, after being in dry-dock for seven years, has been re-conditioned and got away under full head of steam; attendances, volume of subscriptions, and size of guarantee fund all pointing to a record voyage. The venue is, as before-time, the Winter Gardens, with its numerous halls of pleasure, and on the first solo-singing day there were two overflow meetings in an adjoining Sunday school.

Tuesday, October 19, was a day of miscellaneous work, which could not be fitted into the scheme of things on any other day: girls' and boys' solos (both Schubert), some of the string classes, and the whole of the juvenile pianoforte work, with a choral element furnished by small male-voice and secondary church and chapel choirs.

Madame Edith Hands discovered a beautiful singer of eleven years during the Schubert 'Pax Vobiscum' song. As she is a Blackpool girl—Edith Dodd—it may be hoped that she will fall into good hands and not be exploited as a prodigy. Robert Southern in Schubert's 'Harper's Song' (Goethe) had a very un-boylike piece to prepare; for a youngster its complete appropriateness as a medium for natural expression is open to criticism, but he shaped uncommonly well. At Ilkley earlier in the year Jessie Hinchcliffe from Huddersfield rather astonished judges, critics, and audience by the beauty and innate finish of her fiddling. Dr. Brewer then delivered himself in unqualified language; here Mr. F. Bonavia practically said 'ditto' in a John Humphries Sonata and the presto movement from Bach's first Sonata. Here is eminently a case for authoritative intervention or assistance to the best professional teaching available. I understand that an influential Huddersfield family is interested in her development, and hopes that maturity may prove all that has been said and written to be justified. Oddly enough the string quartets and pianoforte, violin, and 'cello trios all came from the West Riding; so did the only small-scale orchestra. In professional orchestral music the North looks to Lancashire and Manchester in particular for assistance; Yorkshire would seem to be repaying the compliment by showing Lancashire amateurs how much greater is their devotion to amateur orchestral and ensemble work.

The evening concert gave us early Beethoven quartets and trios, and choral works by Cyril Jenkins and Tallis, whilst a Sunday choir (a new class) sang miniatures by Myles B. Foster and Charles Macpherson (a chorister anthem). The Jenkins 'Lament for Prince Llewellyn' is a well-conceived work with fine contrasts of mood. Some choirs tried to make us think it was either very dark or very light; not even the winner convinced us that the conductor had seen the end from the beginning. It was a stiff test, too stiff for the third and fourth choirs, and I am sure Nos. 1 and 2 will not have completely explored its emotional content in another twelve-month Selection committees might consider it for more important occasions.

Tallis's 'If ye love Me, keep My commandments,' in quiet village Nonconformist chapels! Food for thought here. They all felt it was serious work, but it was so remote from their habitual experience of Church music (more's the pity!) that their solemnity almost ran to tedium; everybody was on the slow side. One choir from Blackpool got the serenity and peaceful atmosphere of the closing page; others imparted something of the too-prevalent artificiality of treatment, and one was glad to note the audience's perception of this point by its comparative coolness of reception. No choir mustered more than nine men, whilst the women's contingent varied from eleven to sixteen. Dr. Thomas Keighley, of Manchester, judged these choral works, Madame Edith Hands was characteristically helpful in her handling of the children's efforts, and Mr. F. Bonavia spoke with authority on the string-playing. People asked, if the first-night audience was this size, what would the final night be like?

The second day was entirely given up to about half of the solo-singing competitions, the remainder occupying Thursday. Over six hundred candidates presented themselves for criticism at the hands of Madame Edith Hands, Madame Lillie Wormald, Messrs. F. Austin, F. Bonavia, Plunket Greene, Ernest Newman, P. le Vallon, and Dan Price.

Those of us who are able to compare with 1913 standards agree substantially that the voices quod voices are better than seven years ago. The average standard of training has advanced; breath control and resonance are markedly superior; intelligent phrasing has not advanced proportionately, nor has the mental conception of the test-piece as one and indivisible. Indeed, I am inclined to say that in this latter aspect we shall have to begin again from the bottom, and insist that these big songs are not composed of so many water-tight compartments quite unrelated to each other. Elgar's 'Swimmer' and Bantock's 'Angel of Sheraz' particularly exposed this weakness. But it was a shock to find that Schumann's 'Night in Spring' (Frühlingsnacht) was not handled as a thing of swift, unbroken flight; some of the candidates thought it a fitting medium for the display of silly ballad tricks of distorted rhythm and artificial pauses. Rightly the criticism was most severe on this point. Elgar's 'Swimmer' called for the combination of voice of ample resource and long-breathed phrases; the combination was not forthcoming, and quite justly Mr. Plunket Greene preferred those whose phrasing was well expressed rather than the bigger voices—somewhat to the consternation of the audience! but they, too, will learn in time.

The dramatic or operatic soprano solo voices were really fine, and the five who emerged in the 'Caro Nome' test were stunners. Blasé folk like Messrs. Austin and Newman do not enthuse, but they had some reason to speak handsomely of the beautiful purity and animation of all this singing. Mr. Herbert Gamble, of Nelson, was almost too vehement in the 'Rigoletto' aria, 'Cortigiana,' and towards the close his voice was not so perfectly the obedient servant of the temperament as it was at the commencement.

Like the Schumann and Elgar items on Wednesday, the numerous Bach aria and Salce ('Otello') candidates had to be subdivided, the best five from each group being re-heard by the two adjudicators in conference.

The pick of each class (lyrical and dramatic) in each voice were heard in succession on Thursday evening with a view to determining who was regarded by the judges as the finest singer in these two forms. Of course there can be no rigid line of demarcation between the lyric and the dramatic song—the authorities can only roughly classify them, and leave the purists to pick holes in each other's classification—a game which the critics greatly enjoy; but your average listener is not greatly concerned with such niceties.

The tenor singing in Bach's 'Lift up your heads on high' displayed more virile qualities than did the 'Mastersinger' Trial Song. The cessation of such gatherings as these has revealed a greater decline in the tenor work than in any other section; candidates will have to realise that toying with composers' rhythm is the greatest of artistic crimes. Mr. Plunket Greene's homily on this and kindred points was well worth any candidate's journey to Blackpool. Mr. F. Austin had a heavy task with Senta's ballad. (This message is sent before his comments were made, and the exigencies of time prevented any lengthy personal expression on this class.)

This message must be despatched before the 'Rose Bowl' competition just mentioned, this and the remaining features of the week being considered in the December issue, when a summary of the results will be given.

THE NORTH LONDON FESTIVAL.

Great interest is being taken in the new competition Festival to be held at the Northern Polytechnic on November 23, 24, 25, 26, and 30 and December 1. The most remarkable thing about the syllabus is its completeness, which is probably unique in the case of a newly-formed Festival. It is perhaps too much to expect that North London musicians of all kinds should come at the first invitation and fill every one of the seventy-nine competitions with a good entry list. But it is a matter of experience that in a large populous region a good supply can create a demand, and the existence of competitions can foster the competing habit. North London certainly impresses one as a district ripe for a competition Festival.

The following selection from the list of test-pieces is an index of the artistic standard which the promoters have in view:

OPEN CHORAL CLASSES.

Mixed-voice:

- 'Fire, fire, my heart' (Morley).
- 'The challenge of Thor' (Elgar).

Male-voice:

- 'Invictus' (Protheroe).

Female-voice:

- 'Sound sleep' (Vaughan Williams).
- 'Follow me down to Carlow' (Fletcher).

VOCAL SOLOS.

'Orpheus with his lute' (Sullivan), 'Thy hand in mine' (Frank Bridge), 'A blood-red ring' (Coleridge-Taylor), 'Blow, blow, thou winter wind' (Quilter), 'The lute player' (Allitsen), 'Sylvan' (Landon Ronald), 'Harp of the woodland' (Easthope Martin), 'Prelude' (Cyril Scott), 'My life's delight' (Quilter), 'Hatfield Bells' (Easthope Martin), 'Song of Hybris the Cretan' (J. W. Elliott).

MORECAMBE.—April 28, 29, 30.

Last May the organizers of this famous meeting made a gallant attempt against prevailing adversity to live up to old standards. Next year's Festival, the syllabus of which is now issued, can be expected fully to restore the old prestige. The greater part of the music is wisely chosen from the well-tried stock that has helped to build up the artistic traditions of these northern Festivals. We subjoin a list chosen from the open classes.

CHURCH AND CHAPEL CHOIRS.

- Anthem, 'Almighty and everlasting' (Gibbons).
- A Chant and a Hymn.

FEMALE-VOICE CHOIRS.

- 'How dear to me this hour' (Brearley).
- 'Ophelia' (Berlioz).

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS.

Class A.

- 'O! who will worship the great god Pan' (Coleridge-Taylor).
- 'Lament for Prince Llewellyn' (Cyril Jenkins).
- 'The riders' song' (Cornelius).

Class B.

- 'After many a dusty mile' (Elgar).
- 'The righteous live for evermore' (C. E. Miller).

MIXED-VOICE CHOIRS.

Class A.

- Madrigal, 'Sing, shepherds all' (Nicholson).
- 'I thought that love had been a boy' (Byrd).
- 'The surrender of the soul' (Cornelius).

Class B.

- Madrigal, 'Trust not too much, fair youth' (Gibbons).
- 'Deep in my soul' (Elgar).
- 'Ring out your bells' (Vaughan Williams).

Class C.

- 'Rest, sweet nymphs' (Pilkington).
- 'How sleep the brave' (Rathbone).

ORCHESTRAS.

- 'Elegie' from Serenade, Op. 48 (Tchaikovsky).

The adjudicators are Mr. S. H. Nicholson, Mr. Ivor Atkins, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, and Mr. Adrian C. Boulton.

BELLE VUE, MANCHESTER.—October 2.

If there was a slight falling-off in the number of entrants for the nineteenth annual Belle Vue choral contests, there was none in the size of the audience which crowded the huge and draughty King's Hall. The eight choirs in the Mixed-Voice Class appeared in the following order:

- 1st. High Peak Choral Society (Mr. N. Waterhouse).
- 2nd. Ryecroft Vocal Society, Ashton-under-Lyne (Mr. Jack Ramsden).
- 3rd. Ramsbottom Choral Society (Mr. Thomas Wolstenholme).
- 4th. Leigh Choral Union (Mr. James Hudson).
- 5th. Atherton Baptist Choral Society (Mr. George Meadows).
- 6th. Radcliffe Bridge Wesleyan Choir (Mr. F. W. Clay).
- 7th. Stocksbridge Choral Union, near Sheffield (Dr. W. M. Robertshaw).
- 8th. Golcar Baptist Choir, near Huddersfield (Dr. T. E. Pearson).

The tests were Richard Knight's mellifluous 'Love Symphony' and the final chorus from Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion. As stated in the programme, much latitude was allowed in the interpretation of the latter work in such matters as accent, dynamic force, enunciation, tone-colour, and, to a reasonable extent, tempo also—a license of which conductors readily availed themselves, and as a result there were as many diverse readings as there were choirs.

Of the fourteen choirs which appeared in the Church and Chapel Choir Class, the following five were selected to sing in the final:

- Bedford Wesleyan, Leigh (Mr. R. O. Williams).
 3rd. Matlock Primitive Methodist (Mr. L. G. Wildgoose).
 Woodnook Baptist, Accrington (Mr. George Rigby).
 2nd. Plymouth Grove Wesleyan, Manchester (Mr. C. A. Wycherley).
 1st. Hesketh Lane Church, Southport (Mr. P. Whiteside).

'O give thanks' (Goss) is an anthem which readily tempts singers to make a 'joyful noise,' and it was the choirs that resisted this temptation, and exercised a laudable restraint, that proved the most successful.

The four solo-singing classes brought in upwards of two hundred competitors.

A strong quintet of judges was found in Mr. R. H. Wilson, Mr. Walter S. Nesbitt, Dr. Thomas Keighley, Mr. John Holgate, and Mr. Samuel Broughton.

LEICESTER.—October 8, 9.

This Festival—the second at Leicester since the end of the war—was well supported, and it is calculated that two thousand people took part as competitors. The vocal solo classes were a remarkable feature, with their hundred and sixty-eight entries and exacting test-pieces.

The male-voice choral contest produced a list of no fewer than nineteen choirs, and at the end an improvised massed performance by a choir of eight hundred singers was given under the adjudicator, Dr. F. H. Wood, who was also the composer of the test-piece, 'Sacramentum Supremum.' Leamington Male-Voice Choir and Nottingham Harmonic Glee Society tied with 97 marks, and Pye Hill and district was close behind with 96 marks.

In the mixed-voice class Coventry Choral Society was slightly superior to the William Woolley Choral Society from Nottingham. The tests were Bainton's 'A ballad of Semmerwater' and Bantock's 'The death of Morar.'

Other choral contests were those for mixed-voice Industrial Choirs, won by Mansfield Boot Works, Northampton; for Church and Chapel Choirs, with eleven entries, Rockingham Road Wesleyan, Kettering, being the winners; for Ladies' Choirs, with the William Turner Choir from Nottingham as the best of four entries; and for Children's choirs, among whom Charles Street Baptist was successful.

An enjoyable evening concert by winners and massed choirs concluded the proceedings. The adjudicators were Prof. Granville Bantock, Dr. Wood, Mr. Malcolm Sargent, and Mr. Walter Jones.

MANCHESTER CO-OPERATIVE FESTIVAL, ALBERT HALL.—October 9.

Prior to the war choral singing at Co-operative Festivals aroused such great interest that it was nothing unusual to find the number of entrants at the annual choir contests running into 'teens. But at the twelfth Annual Choir Competition organized by the North-Western Section of the Co-operative Union, only seven appeared in the Mixed-Voice Class, a falling off due in great measure to the prohibitive railway fares. These choirs sang Elgar's 'O happy eyes' and Davies's jovial 'When summer's merry days come in,' in the following order:

- Accrington and Church (Mr. E. Whittaker).
 St. Helen's (Mr. A. Jones).
 1st. Sheffield and Eccleshall (Mr. J. Burgess).
 Leeds (Mr. S. Hust).
 3rd. Halifax (Mr. W. A. Horsman).
 Bolton (Mr. A. Knight).
 2nd. Failsworth, Manchester (Mr. J. E. Smith).

Four male-voice choirs also sang 'Oh, my love's like a red, red rose' (Brewer) and 'Full fathom five' (Dunhill), a piece which, as Dr. Coward observed, was extremely difficult. One cadence, he said, almost defied analysis, but it had sung better than he had ever heard it before—indeed it was the first time he had ever heard three choirs in rotation render it successfully. The winners were C. U. S., Manchester (Mr. A. Higson). Dr. H. Coward was the adjudicator.

CO-OPERATIVE CHORAL ASSOCIATION, NORTHAMPTON.—October 16.

There was a good entry for this event, and a large and keen attendance of hearers. The solo-singing classes were weak on the interpretative side, few beyond the four successful competitors doing much more than singing the notes. The standard reached by the choirs was high, though here, too, the strength lay rather in technique than in ability to realise the mood of the music. The tone was almost uniformly good, and there was magnificent power, but this latter asset was frequently discounted by a tendency to display it too lavishly. Choirs must resist the temptation to turn f (and especially mf) into ff. The organization, as usual at these meetings, was admirable. Mr. H. W. Tupper and Mr. Harvey Grace adjudicated.

The test-pieces and results in the choral classes were as follows:

MIXED-VOICE CHOIRS.

Tests: 'My bonnie lass she smileth' (German).
 Madrigal, 'Hark! hear you not' (Bateson).

- 1st. Mansfield (Mr. H. Ward).
 2nd. Peterborough (Mr. W. J. Roberts).
 3rd. Ilkeston (Mr. G. Hancock).

FEMALE-VOICE CHOIRS.

Test: 'Sound sleep' (Vaughan Williams).

- 1st. Long Eaton (Mr. Woolley).
 2nd. Starchley (Mr. W. E. Leech).
 3rd. Northampton (Mr. F. A. Facer).

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS.

Test: 'The Assyrian came down' (Cyril Jenkins).

- 1st. Mansfield (Mr. H. Ward).
 2nd. Northampton (Mr. F. A. Facer).
 3rd. Derby (Mr. T. A. Bennett).

COMPETITIONS IN 1921.

WITH NAMES OF SECRETARIES, &C.

BERKS, BUCKS, AND OXON.—April 15 and 16.

COLERAINE.—May 10, 11, 12. Mr. Huston, Ulster Bank, Coleraine. Adjudicator, Dr. R. R. Terry.

CORNWALL (TRURO).—May 25, 26, 27. Lady Mary Trefusis, Falmouth. Adjudicators, Mr. Harvey Grace and Mr. Geoffrey Shaw.

LEITH HILL.—April. Mrs. Edward Tatham, Towerhill Manor House, Gomshall.

MANX (DOUGLAS).—April. Mr. W. A. Craine, North Cliff, Douglas. Adjudicators, Dr. Bairstow, Mr. Field Hyde, and Mr. Frederic Dawson.

MORECAMBE.—(See above.)

PEOPLE'S PALACE.—February 22, 26 (children's choirs) and May 11, 12, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. The Rev. C. J. Beresford, 392, Commercial Road, E. 14. Adjudicators, Mr. Martin Akerman, Mr. T. F. Dunhill, Mr. Harvey Grace, and Mr. Geoffrey Shaw.

PONTEFRAC.—May 10, 11, 12. Adjudicator, Dr. A. H. Brewer.

SOUTH-EAST LONDON.—April. Acting hon. secretary, Miss A. M. Durnford, Hogarth Hotel, 19, Queensberry Place, S.W. 7.

STRATFORD.—April 16, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23. Mr. John Graham, 74, Park Hall Road, N. 2. Nine adjudicators.

WEST LOTHIAN.—April 7, 8. Adjudicator, Dr. Vaughan Williams.

WIRRAL AND EDDISBURY.—April 28, 29, 30. Mrs. H. Mitchell, Salings Bank, Grosvenor Road, Chester.

[Secretaries of competitions are requested to send their syllabuses, or advance particulars, to the Editor of the Competition Festival Record, 160, Wardour Street, London, W. 1., at the earliest opportunity.]

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION OF PART-SONGS

SELECTED LISTS OF RECENT PUBLICATIONS

MIXED VOICES

(S A.T.B. unaccompanied or accompaniment ad lib. where not otherwise indicated.)

*Alexander (Humorous) A. H. Brewer 2d.	*Lullaby, A C. Lee Williams 2d.
Autumn G. Tootell 2d.	*March of the Cameron men, The ... Granville Bantock 4d.
*Beacon, The Adam Carse 4d.	My dear mistress has a heart ... John E. West 3d.
*Beyond C. Lee Williams 2d.	*O can ye sew cushions ... (arranged by Granville Bantock) 4d.
Boy, The A. H. Brewer 4d.	*Oh! the noble Duke of York (arranged by N. F. Byng-Johnson) 2d.
Cryes of London, The R. Deering 8d.	*Rolling down to Rio Edward German 6d.
" " Orlando Gibbons 8d.	*Soldier, rest... .. David Stephen 4d.
" " T. Weelkes 6d.	§*Song of the grey seas (accompanied) ... Percy E. Fletcher 8d.
*Deil's awa' wi' the exciseman, The E. T. Sweeting 4d.	*Song of the thrush, The (accompanied) ... R. Walthew 6d.
*Echo Song Oliver King 2d.	Sweet Day, so cool... .. David Stephen 3d.
*Frog, The (arranged) Ernest Newton 6d.	Sweet Western Wind John E. West 2d.
From the lone Shieling Malcolm Maclean 4d.	Tell me where is fancy bred ... John Pointer 2d.
Gather ye rosebuds John Pointer 4d.	Tewkesbury Road E. T. Sweeting 4d.
Here a pretty baby lies J. A. Sowerbutts 2d.	*There is a lady sweet and kind... .. Harold E. Darke 2d.
*How happy the lover John E. West 2d.	Three Sleeps John Gerrard Williams 2d.
Hunting Song John Gerrard Williams 4d.	Tide rises, The Adam Carse 2d.
*I love my love in the morning Bernard Johnson 2d.	Water Party, A C. H. Lloyd 4d.
Islet, The Percy E. Fletcher 2d.	*Weep you no more Arthur Somervell 4d.
*John Peel (arr. by John E. West) 4d.	§*What shall we dance F. H. Cowen 6d.
*Lass with the delicate air (arranged) Michael Arne 2d.	Where shall the lover rest E. C. Bairstow 6d.
Longing Haydn Keeton 3d.	*Wi' a hundred pipers (arr. by John E. West) 4d.
*Love is a sickness A. W. Mareant 2d.	*World is too much with us, The ... Granville Bantock 4d.
Love the Harlequin H. W. Wareing 4d.	Youthful, charming Chloe W. McNaught 4d.
Love wakes and weeps B. Luard-Selby 2d.

MALE VOICES

(T.T.B.B. unaccompanied or accompaniment ad lib. where not otherwise indicated.)

*Alexander (Humorous) (T. (or A.) T.B.B.) ... A. H. Brewer 3d.	*Lullaby (Op. 49, No. 4) Brahms 2d.
§Bacchanalian Chorus J. W. Elliott 6d.	*Mad Dog, The (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.)... .. C. H. H. Parry 6d.
*Ballade Granville Bantock 6d.	*Marching (Op. 41, No. 4) (Humorous) Brahms 3d.
*Boy, The (Humorous) (T. (or A.) T.T.B.) ... A. H. Brewer 4d.	*Night March, The (Op. 62, No. 1) Schumann 4d.
*Cargoes H. Balfour Gardiner 4d.	*Oh! the noble Duke of York (arranged by N. F. Byng-Johnson) 4d.
Crossing the Bar T. F. Dunhill 3d.	Orpheus (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.) C. H. H. Parry 4d.
Dirge of Kisses, A Percy E. Fletcher 4d.	*Pibroch of Donnill Dhu Granville Bantock 6d.
*Duncan Gray (T.T.B.) A. M. Richardson 4d.	Queen of my heart, The A. H. Brewer 4d.
Early one morning (arr. by T. F. Dunhill) (A.T.B.B.) Folk-Song 3d.	*Riders of the night, The Laurent de Rillé 6d.
Echoes T. F. Dunhill 3d.	*Sailor's Return, The Percy E. Fletcher 6d.
*Festival Song Granville Bantock 6d.	Sally in our Alley (A. (or T.) T.B.B.) ... H. Elliot Button 4d.
*Full fathom five T. F. Dunhill 4d.	Sir Eglamore (arranged) H. Balfour Gardiner 4d.
*Glories of our Blood and State, The ... Granville Bantock 4d.	*Sleeping Edward German 4d.
He that hath a pleasant face (arranged) Hatton 3d.	Softly fall the shades of evening (arranged) ... Hatton 4d.
Hymn to Harmony Laurent de Rillé 6d.	*Soldier, rest... .. A. Somervell 4d.
I fear thy kisses (A. (or T.) T.B.B.) ... A. H. Brewer 3d.	*Song of Freedom (Op. 62, No. 2) Schumann 4d.
*I would I were the glow-worm Harold Rhodes 4d.	That very wise man (Humorous) (A.T.B.B.) ... C. H. H. Parry 4d.
*Laird o' Cockpen Granville Bantock 6d.	There was an old man (Humorous) ... A. H. Brewer 4d.
Lament, A (arr. by H. Elliot Button) 3d.	*United are we (Op. 41, No. 2) Brahms 3d.
*Land of the leal, The (arr. by H. Elliot Button) Scotch Air 3d.	§*Viking Song... .. Julius Harrison 6d.
Lass of Richmond Hill, The (A. (or T.) T.B.B.) A. H. Brewer 4d.	*Walpurga (Op. 30)... .. F. Hegar 8d.
Let the hills resound (arranged) ... Brinley Richards 6d.	Ware, Wire! C. Lee Williams 4d.
*Little Sandman, The (arr. by John E. West) 4d.	Who rides for the King Reginald Somerville 4d.
*Lotus Flower, The (Op. 33, No. 3) Schumann 3d.	Winter is gone, The (arr. by R. Vaughan Williams) Folk-Song 3d.
*Lucifer in starlight (6 parts) Granville Bantock 8d.

§ Orchestral Accompaniment.

* Also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

If you have room for an upright piano you have room for : : :

The Weber Small Grand Piano

Length:
4 ft. 10 ins.,
Width:
4 ft. 10 ins.

This instrument is the latest product of the famous Weber factory at Hayes, Middlesex. It is a triumph alike for its producers and for British craftsmanship, for never have any foreign makers succeeded in obtaining so rare a tone in an instrument of such limited proportions. Less than five feet in length, it occupies almost the same space as an ordinary upright piano, but has all the advantages of tone and appearance that characterise the Grand type of piano.

The tone of the Weber Concert Grand Piano has made that instrument the choice of the world's chief pianists, and in this miniature model all the beauties of the Weber tone are preserved. This wonderful new piano may be seen and played in our showrooms; it is obtainable upon easy payment terms that make it as accessible as an upright piano.

THE AEOLIAN COMPANY, LTD.,

(Formerly, the Orchestral Co.)

Aeolian Hall, 131-7, New Bond St.,
LONDON, W. 1.

THE PURCELL SOCIETY.

Committee.

SIR C. VILLIERS STANFORD, D.C.L., M.A., MUS. DOCT., MUS. PROF., CANTAB.
SIR J. FREDERICK BRIDGE, M.A., MUS. DOCT., C.V.O., GRESHAM PROFESSOR OF MUSIC.
G. E. P. ARKWRIGHT, Esq.
ROBERT BRIDGES, Esq., M.A., M.B., D. Litt., LL.D., Post-Laureate.
E. J. DENT, Esq., M.A., MUS. BAC.
J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND, Esq., M.A., F.S.A.
ALAN GRAY, Esq., LL.M., MUS. DOCT.
AUGUSTUS J. LITTLETON, Esq.
CYRIL B. ROTHAM, Esq., MUS. DOCT.
W. BARCLAY SQUIRE, Esq., M.A., F.S.A., F.R.G.S.
Hon. Sec.

THE FOLLOWING VOLUMES HAVE NOW BEEN PUBLISHED:—

- | | |
|---|---|
| I. "The Yorkshire Feast Song." | XII. "The Fairy Queen." |
| II. "Dido and Æneas." [Athens.] | XIV. "Sacred Music"—Part II. |
| III. "The Masque" in "Timon of Athens." | XV. "Welcome Songs for Charles II. and James II."—Part I. |
| IV. "Ode on the Duke of Gloucester's Birthday." | XVI. "Dramatic Music"—Part I. |
| V. "Twelve Sonatas of Three Parts." | XVII. "Sacred Music"—Part III. |
| VI. "Harpsichord and Organ Music." | XVIII. "Welcome Songs"—Part II. |
| VII. "Ten Sonatas of Four Parts." | XIX. "The Indian Queen," and "The Tempest." |
| VIII. "Ode for St. Cecilia's Day, 1692." | XX. "Dramatic Music"—Part II. |
| IX. "Dioclesian." | XXI. "Dramatic Music"—Part III. |
| X. "Three Odes for St. Cecilia's Day." | |
| XI. "Birthday Odes for Queen Mary"—Part I. | |

Subscription Price ... One Guinea per Volume net.

Most of the back numbers are offered to new subscribers at special rates.

Owing to the advisability of keeping, so far as possible, the chronological order of the Anthems, and of printing the contents of the important autograph volume from Buckingham Palace Library while it was deposited at the British Museum for the use of the Society, it has been decided to defer for the present the issue of Vol. XIII., which will contain earlier Anthems than those in the Buckingham Palace Manuscript.

The names of new subscribers should be sent to the HON. SEC. (W. BARCLAY SQUIRE, British Museum), who will also be glad to hear from any members willing to assist in the Society's work, either by collating and copying, or by subscribing to a small fund which has been raised for defraying the editorial expenses.

Marshall & Rose

SUPERB GRAND & UPRIGHT PIANOFORTES

THE PIANOS WHICH INSPIRE

THOSE who purchase the Superb Marshall and Rose Pianoforte can always be confident that their instrument will win the highest measure of praise on account of its superlatively sympathetic qualities. The Marshall and Rose Pianoforte in the making has been treated with the same care and tenderness as a rare violin; it is the supreme outcome of years of experience and steady striving after an ideal; every part of it has literally been trained towards perfection, and the result is an instrument which is almost human in its responsiveness.

The artist who avails himself of this wonderful instrument as a means of self-expression will find that his message never fails in its appeal when given to an audience in such an exceptional manner. Real connoisseurs of Music are convinced that the magic and beauty of the immortal works of the great Composers can only be adequately realised when interpreted on the Piano of Perfection—the instrument which bears the name of MARSHALL AND ROSE.

The Marshall and Rose Grand and Upright Pianofortes can also be obtained containing THE WORLD-FAMED ANGELUS PIANO-PLAYER, which gives you a Piano possessing every musical quality and the ability to play it.

Kindly call or write for Illustrated Catalogue No. 112 to the Manufacturers

SIR HERBERT MARSHALL & SONS, LTD.,
Angelus Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent St., London, W.

Chappell Pianos

GRAND & UPRIGHT

Not to be excelled for
TONE, TOUCH,
AND DURABILITY.

*Acknowledged by a discriminating
Public throughout the world as the
FINEST ENGLISH MAKE.*

Chappell Player-Pianos
GRAND AND UPRIGHT.

Agents in all the Principal Towns.

CHAPPELL PIANO CO.,
LIMITED.,
SHOW-ROOMS—
50, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.-1.

No.
934

FOUNDED 1844

DECEMBER 1, 1920

The WIGMORE HALL & PIANO GALLERIES Ltd.

DIRECTORS: F. H. DERRINER - F. S. OLIVER - F. H. S. CHANDLER - G. M. WRIGHT

HAVING acquired the West End Premises of Messrs. J. & J. Hopkinson, Ltd., are opening

NEW SHOW ROOMS AT 52, WIGMORE STREET

for the Sale of Pianos
by the best
English Makers

WIGMORE HALL
32-40, WIGMORE STREET,
== LONDON · W · 1 ==

Tunings & Repairs effected by a skilled staff of Piano Makers.

Pianos Stored in a special storage warehouse which is kept at an even temperature throughout the year. Insurance included in the storage rates.

Piano Removals
by experienced men in our own motor vans.
TELEPHONE:
MAYFAIR 1761.

The Name of

J. & J. HOPKINSON

Stands for the HIGHEST ATTAINMENTS
in THE WORLD OF MUSIC

REMARKABLE FOR THE EXQUISITE QUALITY OF

J. & J. HOPKINSON, LTD.

44, FITZROY ROAD, PRIMROSE HILL,
LONDON, N.W. 1

SONGS and MUSIC of DISTINCTION.

"The Harvesters' Night Song"

First introduced to the public by Mr. NORMAN ALLIN, the well-known Lancashire Bass. A great Blackpool favourite.

"The Minster Bell"

A song with a refrain that has positively jumped into fame. Ask your music dealer to play it over.

"Rest at Eventide"

An unusual combination of real musical merit and popular appeal. Suitable for all voices.

"My Lady Charming"

Charming by name and charming in character. Just a delightful little entr'acte for piano.

"Dream Sprite"

An intermezzo for pianoforte. Dainty in construction, melodious, and effective.

Of all Music Sellers, price 2/- net; or direct from the Publishers, post free, 2/1½.

THE NEWMAN PUBLISHING CO., Ltd.

7, Newman Street, London, W. 1.

THE MOST NOTED HOUSE FOR REALLY MUSICAL NUMBERS.

SAMES

HIGHEST QUALITY
GRAND & UPRIGHT
PIANOS

WILLIAM SAMES, LIMITED,
Ombersley Road :: BIRMINGHAM.
LONDON SHOWROOMS: 126 NEW BOND ST.

— THE — SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW

A Monthly Periodical devoted to the interests of Music in Schools.

ISSUED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

PRICE THREEPENCE

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, INCLUDING POSTAGE, FOUR SHILLINGS.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 934.—Vol. 61
Registered at the General Post
Office for Canadian Postage

DECEMBER 1 1920

Price 6d.; Postage 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

Conductor: SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., M.A., MUS. D.

FIFTIETH SEASON, 1920-1921.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 18, AT 2.30.

CAROLS

MISS FLORA WOODMAN.
MISS ROSA RUBEY.
MISS CARMEN HILL.
MR. JOHN BOOTH.
MR. TOPLISS GREEN.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 1, 1921, AT 2.30.

MESSIAH ————— HANDEL

MISS RUTH VINCENT.
MISS PHYLLIS LETT.
MR. BEN DAVIES.
MR. ROBERT RADFORD.

At the Organ ... MR. H. L. BALFOUR.
Full Chorus and Orchestra.

Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.;
Unreserved, 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W. 1.

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal: Sir A. C. MACKENZIE, Mus. Doc., LL.D., F.R.A.M.

A SPECIAL TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE, to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, has been instituted.

FORTNIGHTLY CONCERT, Saturday, December 4, at 3.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT, Queen's Hall, December 6, at 3.

A JUNIOR DEPARTMENT is now open.

J. A. CREIGHTON, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W. 7.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1883.)

Telegrams:

"Initiative, Southkens, London."

Telephone:

"1160, Western."

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH ALLEN, M.A., D.Mus.

Honorary Secretary: GEORGE A. MACMILLAN, Esq., D. Litt.

The EASTER TERM will commence on MONDAY, JANUARY 10, 1921.

The ENTRANCE EXAMINATION will take place on THURSDAY, JANUARY 6.

A Junior Department is established for Pupils under 16 years of age. Syllabus and Official Entry Forms may be obtained from the Registrar.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC PATRON'S FUND (Founded by Sir Ernest Palmer, Bart.). For the encouragement of British Composers and Executive Artists.

Particulars may be obtained from the Registrar of the College.

CLAUDE AVELING, Registrar.

KING GEORGE'S HALL

(LONDON CENTRAL Y.M.C.A.).

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, W. 1.

ON DECEMBER 22ND, AT 7.30 P.M.

THE NOVELLO CHOIR

(Conductor: Mr. HAROLD BROOKE).

WILL GIVE A

CHRISTMAS CONCERT

The entire proceeds of which will be handed to

ST. DUNSTAN'S.

ARTISTS:

MISS ETHEL FENTON (CONTRALTO).
MR. EDWARD HALLAND (BASS), and MR. CHARLES FRY (RECITER).

Tickets, 2s. 4d. reserved, and 1s. 3d. unreserved (including tax), may be had at Messrs. NOVELLO'S, 160, Wardour Street, or from the Hon. Sec., Novello Choir, Novello Works, Soho, W. 1

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC

(CORPORATION OF LONDON).

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C. 4.

PRINCIPAL ... LONDON RONALD.

PRIVATE LESSONS in all musical subjects. STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Stage Dancing, Fencing.

HALF-TERM began MONDAY, 1st NOVEMBER.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £9 9s. and £12 12s. per term, comprising principal and secondary Subjects. Harmony, Sight-Singing, and/or Orchestra.

Performances of "Veronique," School Theatre December 2nd, 3rd, and 4th.

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Local School Examinations (open to general public), free on application.

Telephone: Cent. 4459.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS.

Examination Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Sec.

Kensington Gore, S.W. 7.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.

FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A)

Examinations in Theory held in March and November at all In Practical Subjects in March-April at all Centres, and in the district and certain Provincial Centres in November-Dece Entries for the March-April Examinations close February 9th, 1921.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS I)

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year April, June-July, and October-November. Entries April, Examinations close Wednesday, February 2nd. Theory papers set in Examinations of past years (School) can be obtained on application. Price 6d. post-free.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITION R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Entry Forms, and any f may be obtained post-free from—

JAMES MUIR

14 & 15, Bedford Square

Telegrams: "Associa, London."

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE. SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A.

SESSION 1919-1920.

The Session consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 23 to December 27); WINTER TERM (January 20 to April 5); SUMMER TERM (April 7 to June 25).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Patroness: HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

President: Sir THOMAS BEECHAM, Bart.

Principal: Dr. ADOLPH BRODSKY.

Special Houses of Residence recommended for Students.

Students are required to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the Training of Teachers included in the curriculum.

Opera Class—Miss MARIE BREMA.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

STANLEY WITHERS, Registrar.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

FOUNDED 1892.

Principal: ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.

The oldest institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All Branches of Music taught. Day and Evening Private Lessons.

Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras, Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, &c., and Opera.

Students' Orchestral Concert, Tuesday, December 21, at 7.0 in the Houldsworth Hall.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from 16, Albert Square.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

Examinations for degrees in Music are held as follows: Matriculation, January, July, and October; First Mus. B., March and September; Mus. B. and Mus. D., September only.

For particulars, apply Secretary of Examinations, University Offices, Durham. Copies of former Examination Papers, 1s. 6d. per set.

THE INCORPORATED LONDON ACADEMY OF MUSIC, 22, Princes St., Cavendish Square, W. 1.

Branches: Hampstead Conservatoire, N.W. 3,
and 117, Seven Sisters Road, N. 7.

Principal: T. H. YORKE-TROTTER, M.A., Mus. Doc. (Oxon.).

Rhythmic Method of Music Teaching. Special Classes for Teachers. Special Training in Music and Elocution. Private and Class Lessons in every subject by the best Teachers.

CHAMBER AND CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES WEEKLY.

Students' Concerts. Examination in Music and Elocution, December. Spongy Rhythmic Dancing. For Prospectus and full Syllabus apply to the ACADEMY, 22, PRINCES STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W. 1.

ADON COLLEGE FOR CHORISTERS.

7, BLUMFIELD CRESCENT, PADDINGTON, W. 2.

Founder: Mr. JAMES BATES.

Chorus Boys supplied at short notice for Church
Telephone: Paddington 5990. Sec., ARTHUR G. BATES

COLLEGE OF VIOLINISTS. LTD.

ARTIN'S LANE, LONDON, W.C. 2.

EXAMINATIONS

VIOLONCELLO, AND THEORY OF MUSIC

held in JUNE and DECEMBER

Application to E. E. JACKSON, Hon. Secretary.

LONDON COLLEGE OF MUSIC. GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

Patron: HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF LEEDS.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION:

DR. HORTON ALLISON Mus. D. Dublin; Mus. B. Cantab.; F.R.A.M.
DR. F. J. KARN, Mus. Bac. Cantab., Principal.
G. AUGUSTUS HOLMES, Esq., Director of Examinations,
(Staff of Fifty-five Examiners. For full list see Syllabus.)

EXAMINATIONS—LOCAL AND HIGHER.

The NEXT EXAMINATION for Certificates in Pianoforte, Violin Singing, Elocution, Organ, Theory of Music, &c., will be held in London and at over 400 Local Centres in the United Kingdom in APRIL. Last day of entry, March 8th.

SYLLABUS, and Forms of Entry, on application to the Secretary. Silver and Bronze Medals and Book Prizes are awarded at the Examinations in accordance with the printed regulations.

The HIGHER EXAMINATIONS for the Diplomas of Associate (A.L.C.M.) and Licentiate (L.L.C.M.) take place in April, June, July, and December, and for the Diplomas of Associate in Music (A. Mus. L.C.M.), Licentiate in Music (L. Mus. L.C.M.), and Fellowship (F.L.C.M.), in June, July, and December.

LOCAL CENTRES may be formed in districts unrepresented, either in the United Kingdom or abroad; particulars on application. SCHOOL CENTRES may also be arranged.

In the Educational Department students are received and thoroughly trained in all musical subjects under the best Professors at moderate fees. Lessons may commence from any date.

For full information apply,

A. GAMBIER HOLMES, Secretary.

Telegrams: "Supertonic, Reg. London." Telephone: Central 3870.

VICTORIA COLLEGE OF MUSIC. LONDON.

Governors: Directors of the Victoria College Corporation, Ltd.
INCORPORATED 1891.

158, HOLLAND PARK AVENUE, KENSINGTON, W. 11.

President: THE MOST HON. THE MARQUIS OF ANGLESEY.

Board of Examination:

Principal: J. H. LEWIS, D.C.L., F.E.I.S., Mus. Doc.

Chairman: J. M. BENTLEY, Mus. Doc. Cantab., Hon. F.R.A.M.

Hon. Director of Studies: CHURCHILL SIBLEY, Mus. Doc., F.I.G.C.M.

Registrar: J. G. COOPER, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.

ROBERT FOX FREW, Mus. Doc. Dunelm.

Rev. NOEL BONAVIA-HUNT, M.A. Oxon.

Secretary: H. PORTMAN LEWIS.

Metropolitan and Provincial Examinations in all subjects, including the Diplomas of A.V.C.M., L.V.C.M., F.V.C.M., also for the Teachers' Professional Diploma in the Art of Teaching, April, July, and December. Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for Competition. Local Secretaries required for towns not represented. Lessons given in Pianoforte, Singing, Elocution, Harmony, Counterpoint, and all other subjects connected with the culture of Music. All communications to be addressed to The Secretary.

INCORPORATED GUILD OF CHURCH MUSICIANS.

Founded 1858.

Incorporated pursuant to Act of Parliament XXX. and XXXI.
Victoria, Cap. cxxxi. § 23.

President: THE RT. REV. BISHOP J. E. C. WELLDON, D.D.
DEAN OF DURHAM.

Vice-Presidents:

THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON OF MIDDLESEX.

THE REV. CANON W. DOUGLAS SPRINGETT, D.D. Oxon.

THE REV. SIR GEORGE RALPH FETHERSTON, BART., J.P.

Warden:

DR. J. H. LEWIS, D.C.L., F.E.I.S., Mus. Doc.

Chairman (Board of Examination):

DR. J. M. BENTLEY, Mus. Doc. Cantab., F.R.A.M.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING AND RITE OF INDUCTION
Monday, January 24th, 1921.

ASSOCIATE (A.I.G.C.M.), LICENTIATE (L.I.G.C.M.), FELLOWSHIP (F.I.G.C.M.) EXAMINATIONS in London and at approved Provincial Centres in April, July, and December.

COMPETITIONS, 1920.

SILVER MEDALS are awarded for the best INTRODUCTORY
VOLUNTARY for the ORGAN, and EVENING SERVICE.

BRONZE MEDALS for the best HYMN-TUNE, TE DEUM
(Chantwise), Harmonized Setting of the GUILD OFFICE.

Organists (Members) have the FREE use of the Register of Vacant Appointments.

Calendar (gratis) and further information of Dr. LEWIS, Warden,
158, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, W. 11.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

MANAGER: HILTON CARTER.

A GRAND

EVENING CONCERT

WILL BE GIVEN BY

MONSIEUR

MARCEL DUPRÉ

(Organist of the Cathedral of Notre-Dame-de-Paris),

ON

Thursday, December 9, 1920, at 8 p.m.

IN AID OF THE FUNDS OF

THE OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE FESTIVAL CHOIR

OF THE

GREGORIAN ASSOCIATION

WILL SING, CONDUCTED BY

CAPTAIN FRANCIS BURGESS.

BOXES: Grand Tier, £3 15s.; Loggia, £3; Second Tier, £1 17s. 6d.
Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.;
Balcony (Unreserved), 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.

TICKETS at the ROYAL ALBERT HALL, and the USUAL AGENTS, or from THE OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION, 1, Regent Street, S.W.1.

MORECAMBE MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVAL.

APRIL 28th, 29th, 30th, 1921.

THE SYLLABUS OF COMPETITIONS IS NOW READY.

Price 7d. post free.

Apply to—

W. C. FAWCETT, Secretary,
25, VICTORIA STREET, MORECAMBE.

ST. JOHN

AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION,

BACUP CENTRE,

TOWN HALL, BACUP,

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29th, 1921.

MUSICAL FESTIVAL—£50 IN PRIZES.

Competitions for Male-Voice, Mixed, and Childrens' Choirs. Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Bass Solos, also Pianoforte Solos. All Competitions OPEN except Childrens' Choir; this competition confined to Rossendale Valley. Entries close January 3, 1921. Entry Forms and Syllabus (price 2d. each, post free 3d.), containing all necessary information, may be obtained from the—

Hon. Asst.-Secretary, MISS SHEPHERD,
THE HOLMES, BACUP.

MENDELSSOHN SCHOLARSHIP.

A Scholarship of £100 per annum, subject to yearly renewal, is now vacant.

Candidates of either sex, between the ages of 16 and 25, being single and natives of, or domiciled in Great Britain or Ireland, are eligible for election.

The qualification is "a decided talent for music, exhibited in composition."

Candidates should apply in writing, enclosing certificates of birth and testimonials, to the Hon. Sec., Mr. J. F. R. Stainer, The Old Rectory, Ashted, Epsom.

The list of entries will be closed on February 1st, 1921.

THE PHILHARMONIC CHOIR.

Hon. Conductor: CHARLES KENNEDY SCOTT.

Rehearsals on Wednesdays, 6.15 to 7.45 p.m., at the Ethical Church, 46, Queen's Road, Bayswater, W.

Vacancies for Singers in all "parts."

Applications to—

GRANVILLE HUMPHREYS, 145, Elms Road, Clapham, S.W.4.
Phone: Brixton, 3076.

MR. CHARLES TREE.

Beethoven's "Faust." Sheffield, November 4, 1920. "Mr. Tree, as Mephisto, achieved a triumph. At times sneering with effective subtlety, then singing like an angel and culminating in a hideous yell of triumph. A ringing voice, in every respect equal to the exacting rôle.—Independent."

"He was almost too Mephistophelian, but his interpretation was abundantly clear in intention and unfaltering in presentation.—Telegraph."

"Gerontius." Cardiff, November 5, 1920. "He sang with fervent and solemn dignity."—S. W. News.

"He gave impressive renderings, his powerful voice being used with admirable effect."—W. Mail.

RECITAL-LECTURES ON VOICE-PRODUCTION.

It is not sufficiently realised that a ringing, keen, quality of voice largely depends on nasal resonance. The one danger is nasal quality—a most insidious fault. On nasal resonance, too, largely depends the life of the voice.

We have perhaps twenty singers who, with thirty years of heavy work behind them, have kept their voices pure and fresh. But during those thirty years, twenty, thirty thousand have been "trained."

Mr. Tree in his Lectures shows definitely the cause of this loss.

"How to acquire ease of voice-production," by Charles Tree (5s.).

(If difficult to obtain, write direct to author.)

Concerts, &c.: Address, 14, Courtfield Gardens, Kensington, S.W. 5.

BRITISH MUSIC SOCIETY.

(NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL.)

19, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Patron: THE RT. HON. A. J. BALFOUR.

President: THE LORD HOWARD DE WALDEN.

Hon. Director: DR. A. EAGLEFIELD HULL

£15,000 WANTED.

FOR THE FOSTERING AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF
BRITISH MUSIC AT HOME AND ABROAD.

YOU CAN HELP

By sending a Donation to the Foundation Fund.

By becoming a Member.

(Membership is open to Professionals and Amateurs.)

By forming New Branches.

By assisting Centres and Branches already formed.

Full particulars from

THE GENERAL SECRETARY,

19, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Y. M. C. A. MUSIC SECTION.

Chairman: SIR JOHN D. McCLEURE, LL.D., D.Mus.
Committee: Prof. Percy C. Buck, M.A., D. Mus.; Prof. H. Walford Davies, LL.D., D.Mus.; A. A. Fitzsimmons; Harvey Grace, F.R.C.O.; J. T. Lightwood; Sydney H. Nicholson, M.A., B.Mus.; Percy A. Scholes, B.Mus.; A.R.C.M.; Miss Phoebe M. Walters, A.R.C.M.; Mrs. Z. F. Willis. Secretary: Major J. T. Bayin.

All information regarding its aims and plans for the introduction and maintenance of good music in the Y.M.C.A. as an educational and recreational feature, may be obtained from The Secretary, Y.M.C.A. Music Section, Shakespeare Hut, Malet Street, W.C.1.

ADVISORY BOARD FOR COMPOSERS.

FEDERATED BOARD OFFICES: 101, MORTIMER STREET, LONDON, W.1.

Director: DR. A. EAGLEFIELD HULL.

Advisory Board:

MESSES. ARNOLD BAX, YORK BOWEN, FRANK BRIDGE, ALBERT COATES, EDWARD J. DENT, EUGENE GOOSSENS, DR. EAGLEFIELD HULL, HAMILTON HARTY, JOHN IRELAND, DR. R. R. TERRY, DR. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS.

Advice, criticism, and appraisal of Composer's MSS., with suggestions for publication and performance if worthy.

Particulars from Mr. L. C. MORRIS, M.C., Secretary, Advisory Board for Composers, Federated Board Offices, 101, Mortimer Street, W.1.

THE IDEAL METHOD OF MEMORY-TRAINING FOR MUSICIANS.

A SYSTEM OF STUDY WHICH QUICKENS AND STRENGTHENS THE MUSICAL MEMORY, THE IMAGINATIVE AND PERCEPTIVE POWERS.

A CORRESPONDENT WRITES:—

"I could not play one piece from Memory. Now I can play from Memory every piece I learn."

Write for particulars:—

C. G. WOOD, MUS. BAC.,

SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 25, LOXHAM STREET, BOLTON.

THE TECHNIQUER

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS.

Invented and Patented by MR. R. J. FITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned teacher HERBERT WALENN, Esq., F.R.A.M.

London School of Violoncello,
10, Nottingham Place, W.

"I have given the 'Techniquer' a full trial, and feel that if used as fully set out in the scheme of exercises it is of value and benefit to students of the violoncello. I cordially wish it every success."

October 25, 1920.

HERBERT WALENN.

Send for full particulars and list of testimonials.

No earnest student should be without a Techniquer.

"Hand Development," post free, 7d. Set of 15 photos, 4s.
The Secretary, 33, Orchard Street, W.1.

ABERDEEN EDUCATION AUTHORITY.

The EDUCATION AUTHORITY invite Applications from duly qualified persons for the post of SUPERINTENDENT OF MUSIC. The successful applicant will be regarded as Adviser to the Authority on all matters pertaining to instruction in Vocal and Instrumental Music in the Primary Schools, and held available for such duties in connection with the Secondary and Higher Grade Schools as the Authority may determine. He must be prepared to take an active part in teaching, if required, as well as in the work of organization and superintendence. The salary offered will depend on the qualifications and experience of the successful applicant, but it will not be less than £600 nor more than £650 per annum.

Twenty-two copies of the prescribed Form of Application (which may be had on request), accompanied by twenty-two copies of testimonials, should be lodged with the Director of Education on or before December 15. Appointments to the service of the Authority are subject to the passing of a Health Examination. Canvassing, directly or indirectly, will disqualify a candidate.

R. BOYD FINLAYSON, Clerk.
Education Offices, Aberdeen, November 22, 1920.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal:

MR. A. MCALISTER, B.A. (Cantab.).

MATRIC.

Successes - 52

For one fee Tuition is given for Matric., 1st M.B., Ex. and Final. The average student requires from 4 to 6 months for Matric., but many students make considerable progress with 1st M.B. whilst studying for Matric.

MUS. BAC.

MUS. BAC.

AND

B.A.

This Course has been specially prepared for students who wish to qualify for a Cathedral appointment. An average student can cover both Degrees in from 4 to 5 years.

This Course has been arranged so that Students can cover both Diplomas in 12 months. Carefully graduated papers are given in Orchestration from the outset.

A.R.C.O.

AND

F.R.C.O.

A. Mus. T.C.L.

AND

L. Mus. T.C.L.

A.R.C.O.'s can take this Diploma by passing in the Art of Teaching. Special combined Course for both Diplomas.

By working through the combined Course a student can gain both Diplomas in 12 months.

A.R.C.M.

L.R.A.M.

201, ILKESTON ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

How to play difficult music with ease. . . .

Pianists who wish to play the music which affords the greatest enjoyment and relaxation—the compositions of the world's greatest musicians—and who are averse to the drudgery of wearisome keyboard practising in order to obtain the necessary technical proficiency, will find the "Brain to Keyboard" method of the greatest possible help.

Practice on this system, much of it away from the keyboard is never wearisome, and after some weeks of it, spending quite a short time every day, a degree of technical proficiency is obtained which would be otherwise impossible, even after years of keyboard practising for several hours daily.

Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., has strongly recommended my System, the advantages of which, he stated, he could cordially endorse from his own personal experience. More than 12,000 successful students add their testimony.

"From Brain to Keyboard"

Macdonald Smith's System
of Pianoforte Playing.

My illustrated book, "Light on Pianoforte Playing," will be gladly sent to any pianist. It fully explains the principles and advantages of the methods used in the System. When applying, please state whether comparative beginner, average, or advanced pianist. The book will be sent free of charge, and post free.

M. MACDONALD SMITH, 19, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C. 1.

A. E. MILGROM'S CONCERT AGENCY.

Recitals, Concerts, &c., arranged. Over 400 artists for Opera, Oratorio, Concerts, &c.

Orchestral Conductors, Instrumentalists, Accompanists, Entertainers, Concert Parties in Costume.

For terms, please write—

A. E. MILGROM'S CONCERT AGENCY,
'Phone: Mayfair 4123. 324, Regent Street, W.1 (near Queen's Hall).

D.M.S.

STANDS for DIAL (compass) MUSIC SHORTHAND.

Composers, arrangers, and students save time and materials by drafting music on common paper. Easily learnt and transcribed.

Outlines, 1s. 2d.; Illustrated Supplement, 2s. 2d. Also —3— Short-hand for Harmony, 1s. 2d., post free.

A. SOUTHEY & Co., 146, FENCHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C. 3.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPosed AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glennholme, The Common, Hesse, E. Yorks.

EXPERT MUSICAL REVISION.

Reviser of long experience to publishing Company undertakes to revise MSS. and prepare them for publication.

Accompaniments written, orchestration and all branches of arranging. Lyrics set. No hackneyed melodies. Write, Walter Stewart, 46, Aldridge Road Villas, London, W.11.

BACH'S CHRISTMAS ORATORIO. Parts I., II., III., at St. Anne's, Soho, with full Orchestra and Organ. Saturday afternoons, December 11, 18, and January 8, at 3.30. Tickets for Nave and West Galleries can be obtained by sending stamped addressed envelope to The Rector, 28, Soho Square, W.1. (North and South Galleries free).

MEMORY.—MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, L.R.A.M., undertakes, by her method to develop perfect musical memory. Course of Six Lessons, £3 3s. Lessons by correspondence if desired. 21, Upper Cheyne Row, S.W. 3.

CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

Mus. Doc. (Lond.)

DIPLOMA PAPER WORK.

Mus.Doc., Mus.Bac., A. and F.R.C.O.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A. and L.T.C.L.

COURSES ALSO IN

MUSICAL APPRECIATION,

GENERAL MUSICAL [KNOWLEDGE,

SINGLE SUBJECTS

(HARMONY, FORM, TEACHING, Etc.).

For Terms, List of Successes, &c.—

48, LINDEN ROAD,
REDLAND, BRISTOL.

TELEPHONE: BRISTOL 3033

MR. W. H. BREARE

VOCAL ADVISER AND TEACHER OF SINGING
TO STUDENTS AND THE PROFESSION.

Author of "Vocalism," "Elocution: Its First Principles," "Vocal Faults and their Remedies." Now Published: "Vocal Technique: How it feels to Sing." 3s. 6d. each, post 3s. 10d.

"The most complete guide to singing in English."—"Lancelot," in the Referee.

"One of the sanest of sane expositions."—Musical Courier, N.Y.

"Is a reliable expert in all branches."—Gentlewoman.

"A magnificent guide to both teachers and students."—Eastern Morning News.

"Do not hesitate to commend."—Glasgow Herald.

"His technical knowledge is minute, wide, and accurate: what he has to say is well worthy of consideration by public singers and music teachers."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"Common-sense in all he utters."—Leeds Mercury.

"Is an acknowledged authority. . . ."—Western Morning News.

"I have not the slightest fear of contradiction when I say that no one knows more about the voice and vocal production than Mr. W. H. Breare."—"Counterpoint," in the Newcastle Journal.

Address: "HERALD" BUILDINGS, HARROGATE.

SCHOOL SINGING.—MR. JAMES BATES,

Lecturer on Children's Voice-Culture and Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, will give a Holiday Course of Lecture-Lessons to Teachers and Choir-Trainers on Up-to-Date methods of conducting the School Singing Class, at 22, Princes Street, Oxford Circus, on January 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, from 10.30 to 12.30. For full particulars, address, 6, Blomfield Crescent, London, W.2.

THE SINGER'S ART (just Published). By

Agnes J. Larkcom. Price 2s.

London: Novello & Company, Limited.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES.

MISS CELIA DAVIES (SOPRANO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.
51, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W. 1.

MISS GERTRUDE MACAULAY (CONTRALTO).

Concerts, Oratorios, &c.
23, Hawley Place, London, W. 2.

MOUNTFORD SCOTT (TENOR).

Assistant Vicar-Choral, St. Paul's Cathedral.
44, Cranbrook Park, Wood Green, N. 22.

MR. ERNEST A. FLAMBE (BASS).

Concerts, Oratorios, Receptions, &c.
"Judas Maccabaeus," "Messiah," "Elijah," &c.
67, Ashbourne Avenue, Mitcham, Surrey.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O.,
A.R.C.M. (Double Dip.), L.R.A.M. (Double Dip.), Class A.

COMPLETE TRAINING BY CORRESPONDENCE:—

Courses of "Singing Papers," "Form and Teaching," "Touch,"
and "Accompaniment"; also "The Art of Teaching."
Over 500 Successes at Exams."Recitative and its Rendering," 1/6. "The Singer's Vade Mecum," 6d.
Prospectus and particulars, 21, Boundary Rd., St. John's Wood, N.W. 5.

MISS FRANCES BUMFORD

THE BRILLIANT SOPRANO.

Pupil Madame Albani and Jean de Reszke, of Paris.

Open for Engagements, Concerts, Oratorios, &c.

Vacant dates, apply—

Mr. W. T. Llewellyn, 275, Gladstone Road, Barry.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

A.R.A.M. CONTRALTO.

15, Albion Road, London, N.W. 6. Tel.: Hampstead 5797.

MR. SAMUEL MASTERS

(TENOR).

Address: 164, Bank Buildings, Ewell Road, Surbiton.

WILLIAM BARRAND

BASS (ETON COLLEGE).

Oratorio, Ballads, Lessons.

35, Ragstone Road, Slough: or usual Agents.

OSWALD PEPPERCORN

(Bass-Baritone). Specialist in Singing (Italian Method) and Breathing.

Audition and Advice free.

For appointment, write to, c/o "Studios," 60, Berners Street, W. 1.

HERBERT TRACEY

(BASS).

8, Cavendish Mansions, Clapton Square, E. 5. 'Phone: Gerrard 7:53.

MRS. J. R. MAITLAND,

PIANIST, A.R.C.M.C.M.

ASSOCIATE MADRID CONSERVATORIO OF MUSIC.

Pupil of Backhaus, Egon Petri, Dr. Walter Carroll, &c.

Busoni Method.

Lesson in advanced Piano-forte Technique and Interpretation at Wigmore Studios, 110, High Street, Marylebone, and
"Lusitania," Curzon Avenue, Beaconsfield, Bucks.

MR. AMBROSE COVIELLO

Associate and Professor of the Royal Academy of Music, is now
demobilised, and arranging times for Private Tuition in Piano-forte
Playing and Teaching, at his studio, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore
Street, W. 1.

MUSICAL REVISER TO MESSRS. NOVELLO FOR THIRTY-FIVE YEARS.

COMPOSERS' MSS.

REVISED AND PREPARED FOR PRINTING.

H. ELLIOT BUTTON, "Harewood," Ardwick Road, N.W. 2.

* * * The late Sir HUBERT PARRY kindly permitted his name to appear, along with those of the following composers to whom reference is kindly permitted:—Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O.; Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.; Prof. H. WALFORD DAVIES, Mus. Doc.

PLAINSONG and its ACCOMPANIMENT.

COURSE ENSURING THOROUGH UNDERSTANDING AND PRACTICAL EFFICIENCY.

Tuition personally, or by correspondence, by

DR. GEORGE OLDROYD, D.Mus. (Lond.),

45, Boundary Road, St. John's Wood, N.W. 8.

CH. KENNEDY SCOTT (Conductor of Oriana Madrigal Choir and Philharmonic Choir), says in Musical Times, October, 1920:"One feature of our study at Brussels I have found of utmost value ever since—Plainsong. . . . It was always important, but it was never more so than to-day, when composers are seeing the beauty of free rhythm and the old modes."DR. ALLISON instructed by Post Candidates who OBTAINED DEGREES OF MUS.D. and MUS.B. at Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, London, and Durham Universities, Diplomas of F.L.C.M., L.Mus.L.C.M., A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O. (1910), and L.R.A.M., Gold Medals, Silver Medals, Scholarships, Prizes,
"Honours," and Pass Certificates (of the Colleges of Music) to the number of eight hundred and eighty-five. Dr. Allison is willing to teach those who neither require nor desire to pass examinations. Harmony, Counterpoint, Orchestration, and Analysis of Composition by Post, to correspondents anywhere. Personal instruction in Theory, Singing, Organ, and Piano. 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester.

REVISION OF MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Dr. Horton Allison, 24, Park Range, Victoria Park, Manchester

SINGING, PIANO-PLAYING, AND AURAL
TRAINING. Dr. A. P. Alderson visits 60, Berners Street, W., every week for Private Lessons. Coaching also by Correspondence.
34, Knight's Park, Kingston-on-Thames.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

- (1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
- (2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
- (3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments,
Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-20 ... 160 Correspondence Pupils successful.

A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-20 ... 39 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,

c/o FORSYTH BROS., Deansgate, Manchester.

In response to many requests, Mr. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

- (1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
- (2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work
- (3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work.
- (4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments,
Harmony, and Counterpoint.

(Address as above.)

DR. CROSSLEY.—Singing, Piano, Composition.

Special Coach for Degrees, &c. Lessons by Corresp. And at FORSYTH BROS., Manchester. Terms, &c., Radcliffe, Manchester.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SPECIAL COACHING by

L. ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Pianist.
Paper-work Postal. Address, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

MR. ALBERT GARCIA gives LESSONS IN

VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING. Special Coaching in Opera and for Recitals. Address 55, Queen's Road, St. John's Wood, N.W. 8 Telephone: Hampstead 4597.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. 'Dunelm.,

F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE
TUITION. 380 Successes. 3, De Burgh Park, Banstead, Surrey.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAM-

INATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W. 11.

DR. F. J. KARN (Mus. Bac. Cantab.; Mus. Doc.

Toronto) continues to give lessons in Harmony and other
Theoretical subjects, and prepares for all Musical Examinations.
Compositions revised and Analyses written. Candidates prepared by Dr. Karn have gained the Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at the Universities and diplomas from the Musical Colleges.

Address: 106, Haverstock Hill, London, N.W. 3.

DR. LEWIS, Mus. Doc., F.E.I.S., Warden, Incorporated

Guild of Church Musicians, gives LESSONS. Personally or by Post, in HARMONY and COUNTERPOINT. 158, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, W. 11.

DR. LEWIS' TEXT-BOOKS:

HARMONY. (2 vols.) 5s. each, net.

COUNTERPOINT. 5s. net.

DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. 5s. net.

FUGUE. 1s. 6d. net.

ELEMENTS OF MUSIC. 2s. 6d. net.

DEVELOPMENT OF ANGELICAN CHURCH MUSIC. 2s. net.

PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.

DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. 6d. net.

MATERIAL OF MELODY. 3d. net.

IMPROVISATION. 1s. 6d. net.

The above, complete, will be forwarded (carriage paid) for £1 5s.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS PREPARES for

L.R.A.M. and other Examinations. Pianoforte, Harmony,
"Form and Teaching," &c. Lessons (oral or by correspondence). Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes.
L.R.A.M., &c. Pianoforte Classes, 10, Matheson Rd., West Kensington.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.,

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Twenty-five years' experience in Private Tuition and Coaching for Degrees. More than 500 of Dr. Middleton's Pupils have obtained Degrees at the Universities, R.A.M., R.C.M., and R.C.O. Address, 60, Berners Street, W. 1.

D.R. TAYLOR gives LESSONS by correspondence in all Musical Subjects, Elementary or Advanced. Diploma and Degree work. Manuscripts revised. Accompaniments written, &c., &c. Terms moderate. Portland Place, Lancaster.

L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M.—TEACHING SINGING
Exams. Special Correspondence Course and personal tuition. Complete preparation. Pupil writes: "Your Course is excellent, and my singing work has greatly improved, thanks to your tuition.—A.F." Mr. W. Lee Webster, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teaching Singing), 22, Lucknow Avenue, Nottingham.

D.R. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O., SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.

RECENT SUCCESSES:

2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918.
4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918.	2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918.
1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919.	3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919.
4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.	10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920.
3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920.	6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920.

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

WANTED, in January, two SOLO boys for a Choir School in the country. Education, board, and lodging free. Age about eleven or twelve. Evelyn Countess of Craven, Ashdown Park, Shrivvenham.

ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, Windsor Castle.
TENOR Lay-Clerkship VACANT. For particulars, apply to H. Deane, Esq., Cloisters, Windsor Castle, Windsor.

HEREFORD CATHEDRAL.—TENOR singer WANTED. Good sight-reader essential. Cathedral experience desirable. Church of England. Salary £110. Applications, stating age, and whether married, and enclosing not more than three testimonials, to be sent to the Chapter Clerks, 30, Castle Street, Hereford, before December 9.

SOLO TENOR WANTED for St. John the Baptist, Holland Road, West Kensington. £20 to £24. Choral Eucharist. Apply at the Church, or to Herbert H. Dawton, 14, Mayfield Avenue, Bedford Park, W. 4.

CATHEDRAL TENOR, who has studied with Mr. William Shakespeare and Sir Charles Santley, and has had 26 years of Cathedral experience, seeks a Cathedral appointment, or any other musical position. G. H. Ferrins, Stanhope Street, Hereford.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, Oxford.—Academical Clerkship VACANT. Bass (not baritone). For particulars apply to The Dean of Divinity.

WANTED, an ORGANIST & CHOIRMASTER for a City Church. Salary £50 per annum. Applications, with not more than three recent testimonials, to be made on or before Monday, December 8, 1920, addressed to the Clerk, St. Sepulchre, London, Church Porch, Holborn Viaduct, E.C. 1.

WANTED, a young single man as ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for a private Chapel and Choir School. Salary, £75 a year, with board and lodging. Apply, stating qualifications and experience, to the Rev. H. E. Malden, Ashdown Park, Shrivvenham.

WANTED, for Holy Trinity Church, Swansea, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Salary £100. Apply, Rev. E. D. Henry, Holy Trinity Vicarage, Swansea.

PIANOS.—An important Manufacturing Firm, making PIANOS, GRAMOPHONES, &c., are prepared to stock enterprising Retailers having premises in prominent thoroughfares. Liberal commission on both cash and system sales. Part rental will be paid. All replies will be treated as strictly confidential. Address, by letter, Box 202, Gosden's, 11, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C. 2.

PIANOS.—A Firm of Piano and Gramophone Manufacturers with a capacity of 35/45 weekly, are open to appoint agents on commission, calling on Dealers in large centres. Address, by letter, Box 27, Gosden's, 11, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C. 2.

LYRIC AUTHOR is prepared to submit original MSS. to professional composers. Write, "Lyricus," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Redwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

STANDARDISED ORGANS (Pipe).—TWO MANUALS and Pedals, as built to order, by Richardson's, specially to meet the requirements of the times. 100 to 500 guineas: in nine sizes. Entirely new introduction. These Organs are voiced and toned and adapted according to size, &c., of Church. Specifications and Estimates, W. E. Richardson & Sons, Central Organ Works, Manchester, S.W.

PEDAL ORGAN for SALE, by Bishop. 10 stops, tremulant; electrically blown. Seen and tried, by appointment, at 84, Oxford Gardens, W. 10. "Brewer."

BOOKS

FOR

GIFTS AND PRESENTATIONS.

HAROLD REEVES has the largest and most varied stock of Musical Literature of any Bookseller in Europe.

HAWKINS (Sir John).—"History of the Science and Practice of Music." With the Plates, and Music Examples throughout. A fine copy of this celebrated work, in half-calf. Five thick quarto volumes. London, 1776. £5 5s.

J. S. BACH. By A. Schweitzer. Preface by Widor. Translated by Ernest Newman. Newly bound in half-brown niger leather, gilt tops. Two vols. Nearly a thousand pages. Handsome set. £3 3s.

BOOKS ON CONDUCTING:—"Weingartner on Conducting." Translated by Ernest Newman. 5s. (Scarce.) Berlioz's "The Art of the Conductor." Cloth, 3s. "Wagner on Conducting," translated by Dannreuther. Cloth, 6s. 6d.; Crecer, "Notes on Conductors and Conducting." Cloth, 2s. 6d.

IMPRESSIONS THAT REMAINED. Memoirs by Ethel Smyth. With numerous Portraits and Illustrations. A finely bound copy in half-crimson leather, gilt tops. In 2 vols., £2 2s. Suitable for gift or presentation.

WAGNER AS MAN AND ARTIST. By Ernest Newman. Newly bound in half-blue calf, gilt top. 17s. 6d.

CELEBRATED PIANISTS, PAST AND PRESENT. A Collection of 116 Biographies of Great Pianoforte Players. By A. Ehrlich. With 114 Portraits. Includes lives of many modern pianists not found elsewhere. Thick crown 8vo, cloth, 10s.

MODERN FRENCH COMPOSERS. Illustrated Biographies in French, as follows:—"Claude Debussy et son Œuvre." Par Chennueviere, 3s. 6d.; "Vincent d'Indy, sa Vie et son Œuvre." Par Borgex, 3s. 6d.; "Saint-Saëns, sa Vie et son Œuvre." Par Bonnerot, 4s. 6d.; "Paul Dukas." Par Samazeuilh, 3s. 6d.; "Roger-Ducasse." Par Ceillier, 3s. 6d.; "Maurice Ravel et son Œuvre." Par Manuel, 3s. 6d.; "Gabriel Faure." Par Vuillemin, 3s. 6d.

POPULAR MUSIC OF THE OLDEN TIME.—Ancient Songs, Ballads, and Dance Tunes of England, with critical and Historical Notes on the Airs, Composers, music of the period, &c. By W. Chappell. Two thick vols. bound in half-morocco, neat gilt tops. £3 10s. (Scarce.)

MUSICAL ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY.—A complete Set of the Publications of this Society, which include the principal Works of the Great Elizabethan Madrigal Composers. Sacred and Secular, in 19 volumes, together with the 17 supplementary volumes of pianoforte arrangements to accompany the vocal works, these latter seldom met with. The set of 36 (all issued), fol., hf. bd., neat. £15 10s.

A SET OF MINIATURE SCORES of Beethoven's nine Symphonies. As new, for 38s. 6d.

A MINIATURE FULL ORCHESTRAL SCORE of Wagner's "Tristan." The complete opera. The words in G., E., and F. Over a thousand pages, tastefully bound in half-blue calf, gilt top. £2 10s. (or bound in cloth, 35s.)

A TREATISE ON BYZANTINE MUSIC.—By the Rev. S. G. Hatherley, Mus. Bac. With music Examples throughout. 161 pp., 4to, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VIDAL, LES INSTRUMENTS A ARCHET, Les Feseurs, Les Jouers d'Instrument, leur Histoire sur le Continent European, with the fine series of Etchings of Portraits, Instruments, and Labels. One of the finest works ever produced on musical Instruments. Only 500 copies printed. A remarkably fine uncut copy, bound in crimson morocco, gilt tops, three thick quarto volumes. £22 10s. (Rare.)

CHAMBER MUSIC BARGAINS.—Set of Haydn's String Quartets, the folio Paris Edition of Janet et Cottle, 4 vols., half leather, £3 10s. Quartets for Piano, Violin, Viola, Cello, Chausson, Op. 30, 24s. net for 14s. 6d.; Saint-Saëns, Op. 41, 20s. net for 10s. 6d.; Quartets for 2 Violins, Viola, Violoncello, Debussy, 20s. net for 10s. 6d.; Faure, 1st in C minor, Op. 15, 30s. net for 16s.; César Franck in D major, 24s. net for 12s. 6d.; Roger Ducasse, 20s. net for 13s. 6d.; Ropartz, 2nd, 20s. net for 10s. 6d.; Trios, Piano, Violin, Violoncello, César Franck, No. 1, 24s. net for 12s. 6d.; Ropartz, 24s. net for 12s. 6d.; Saint-Saëns, Op. 18, 21s. net for 10s. 6d.; also 2nd, Op. 92, 24s. net, 12s. 6d. All have the separate parts complete. Many other interesting items. Write for CATALOGUE No. 25.

Postage extra on all the above works.
Call and inspect the Unique display of Music and Musical Literature, Old and Rare, Second-hand and New. Catalogues Issued. Libraries and small parcels of music purchased for cash.

HAROLD REEVES,

210, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.C. 2.

(Next to Princes Theatre.)

Phone: Gerrard 8398. Telegrams: Olmuscus, Westcent, London.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

(INSTITUTED 1872.)

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P.

Chairman of Board:

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O., M.A., Mus. D.

Director of Studies: C. W. PEARCE, Mus. D.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

December 1st, at 3 p.m.—Students' Invitation Concert.

December 2nd, at 3 p.m.—Concert of Chamber and Choral Music, and Selections by the Dramatic, Operatic, and Elocutionary Classes.

December 6th. Last day of entry for the Diploma Examinations to be held in January.

December 8th, at 3 p.m.—Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W. (Sole lessee of the Hall, Chappell & Co.)

January 6th.—Lent Term begins.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Elocution. The lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student: pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

A Special Course of Training for Music Teachers has been instituted to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, and has been approved by the Council.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open also to sufficiently competent persons who are not College students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

There are between Forty and Fifty Scholarships tenable at the College and open to all British subjects up to certain age limits, and the Cambridge Pianoforte Scholarship, value £100 per annum; also Eighteen Scholarships which provide complete preparation for the Degree of Bachelor of Music.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., Admission Cards to Concerts, and the Syllabuses of the Higher and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CYRIL SCOTT.

YOUNG HEARTS

(PIECES FOR CHILDREN).

Series I., 2s. 6d. net.

1. SEE-SAW.
2. LAMENT FOR A BROKEN DOLL.
3. MUSICAL BOX.
4. EVENING PRAYER.
5. QUICK MARCH.

Series II., 2s. 6d. net.

1. MARCH OF A TIN SOLDIER.
2. SUNDAY MORN.
3. CONCERTINA.
4. LONELINESS.
5. THE BOY WITH THE PIPES.

"To the enterprising teacher who takes his art seriously, and who is ambitious to keep his little pupils en rapport with modern thought, we can honestly recommend Cyril Scott's 'Young Hearts' Suite."—Musical Opinion.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE—

SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS. 9d.

- | | |
|--------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Ring Out. | 4. Christmas Day. |
| 2. A Babe ys Born. | 5. When Christ was born. |
| 3. Welcome Yule. | 6. Yonder in Bethlehem. |

Separately, 3d. each.

THOMAS ADAMS—

SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS. 9d.

- | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. 'Tis at Christmas. | 4. Born is the Babe. |
| 2. No more Sadness. | 5. Christmas Bells. |
| 3. Into this World. | 6. How bright was the Glory. |

Separately, 3d. each.

THE BOSWORTH CAROL ALBUM

1s. 6d. net.

"Many Old and New Friends."

A wonderful collection. 25 Carols. 48 pages.

JUDE—

SIX ORIGINAL CAROLS. 9d.

BRIDGE—

BIRTHDAY BOOK. 5s.

(Shakespeare and Music.)

Now again in print. A very suitable Christmas Present.

BOSWORTH & Co., LTD.,

8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1

JUST PUBLISHED.

FOUR OLD FRENCH HARPSICHORD PIECES

- | | |
|------------------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Vaudeville à danser, 1712 | (Auteur inconnu) |
| 2. Petit air tendre ... | L. J. Saint-Amans |
| 3. La Bourrée de Vincent ... | J. P. Rameau |
| 4. Tambourin Chinois ... | E. G. Chedeville |

ARRANGED FOR

PIANOFORTE SOLO

BY

ALFRED MOFFAT.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

DECEMBER I 1920

EDITORIAL

THE end of a volume—our sixty-first—gives us an opportunity for saying a few words as to our plans for the immediate future.

The first duty of a musical journal is towards the music of its own country, and we think it will be conceded that the Musical Times has not been lacking in this respect. But it has other duties as well, one of the most important being that of keeping abreast with developments of the art abroad. French, German, and Russian music has had ample consideration in our pages. If Italy has apparently been neglected, it is because for generations past that country has produced little beyond operatic works of a type that needed no propaganda. The past few years, however, have seen the beginnings of a school that has thrown the operatic tradition overboard, and is resolutely developing on instrumental and choral lines. The examples of the work of this school so far heard in England have not all proved convincing, but they have given ample evidence of the existence of a group of writers with all the vitality—as well as some of the faults—of youth.

Believing as we do that the renaissance will be watched with sympathetic interest in this country, we have arranged with Signor Guido M. Gatti, one of the foremost of Italian musical writers, to contribute a series of articles on the subject. Signor Gatti will deal with Casella, Castelnuovo, Malipiero, Mangiagalli, Pizzetti, Respighi, Sabata, Tedesco, &c.

Among other important articles that will appear shortly are a study of Parry as a song-writer by Mr. H. C. Colles, a discussion of the manuscript of Gounod's 'Faust' by M. Camille Saint-Saëns, and some contributions by Mr. Edwin Evans on a subject not yet decided.

We are glad to announce also a series of articles by Mr. Ernest Newman. The first few of these will deal with the question of modernism and its relation to tradition. The history of music has contained few periods free from conflict on this topic. It has rarely been discussed with profit, however, because the disputants have as a rule confined themselves to purely contemporary aspects of the problem, instead of regarding it merely as one of a long series of inevitable phases. Sometimes the modernists were pioneers; sometimes they took a path that, opening with every promise of high adventure, led to a dead end. We are passing through a phase of this kind to-day. How are we to distinguish between the pioneers and the dead-enders? Or is the decision one that only posterity can make? Mr. Newman will endeavour to arrive at something like a reasoned answer to these and kindred questions.

The output of new music and musical literature is now so great that in order to cope with it we shall largely increase the space devoted to reviews. This increase, and the demands made by the series of articles mentioned above, as well as by the extension of our provincial and foreign news departments, will call for some economy elsewhere, so we have arranged for 'Feste' to combine the 'Occasional Notes' and 'Interludes' in an informal—and no doubt frank—discussion of current topics, under the title 'Ad Libitum.'

'JEAN-CHRISTOPHE': SOME MUSICAL ASPECTS OF THE WORK

BY W. WRIGHT ROBERTS

II.—FRENCH MUSIC AND ITS IDEALS

Our first article described the mental revolution of John Christopher Krafft against the sentimentality and pedantry of musical Germany. We have now to describe the result. M. Rolland's hero charges, head down, at the Philistines. In journalism, in his music, in all his actions, he tells them only too plainly what he thinks of them. He loses all his appointments: in the end he bows before the storm of derision. Paris becomes his musical home for the rest of his life.

As the canvas becomes more crowded, it is not always easy to keep a definite musical issue before us. For our present purposes, however, we may treat the remainder of the novel-cycle as a disquisition on French music, its tendencies and ideals. Christopher is again to a large extent the author's mouthpiece; and French music, next to his own art, is Christopher's prime concern.

In the fifth section of the work—'The Market-Place'—the hero takes stock of his new surroundings. This section is the complement of the previous one, 'Revolt.' A brilliant picture of musical Paris is unrolled before us; it flashes with wit and sarcasm. Of course, no one who has read 'The Awakening,' that masterly survey of the French musical renaissance in 'Musicians of To-day,' will question M. Rolland's pride in the achievements of French music during the last fifty years. But in 'The Market-Place' the author's task is to view these things with his hero's German eyes; he turns on them also the white light of his French critical spirit. His rôle, this time, is not indeed that of devil's advocate; it is rather that of a free-lance distributing thrusts pretty generally, at the Société Nationale no less than at the Schola Cantorum.

We see musical Paris as it was in 1902. With the production of 'Pelléas' at the Opéra-Comique the revolt of French musical art against long-established Wagnerism had just been plainly declared. The name of Franck had passed from obscurity to legend. Berlioz, the thirty-years-dead pioneer, held pride of place on Colonne's programmes, with Saint-Saëns not far behind him.

M. Rolland gives a trenchant summary of the orchestral fare of those days :

Practically nothing earlier than Beethoven. Practically nothing later than Wagner. . . . Five or six great German names, three or four French names. . . . No contemporary German music, with the single exception of Richard Strauss. . . . Most surprising of all, practically no contemporary French music. And yet everybody was talking about it mysteriously, as a thing that would revolutionize the world.

In what spirit does the iconoclast Christopher begin his musical survey—subsisting for a long time, poor Bohemian, on hack-work for a music publisher? His voice is soon heard in cafés, upholding in its German-French jargon those very classics he had denounced in his native land! His 'crisis of healthy disgust' is over. Not that for many years he can tolerate Brahms. But still less can this true German hear the names of Bach, Beethoven, or Wagner decried by Frenchmen. There is no more natural touch in the whole work.

In due course our hero visits the Société Nationale, 'the cradle and sanctuary'—as M. Rolland calls it—of modern French musical art. A twilight art this seems to him, anæmic and fastidious; its literary and picturesque suggestion seems too often childish. Its composers wander in a forest of new inventions: they lose heart and come out again on the high-road, or they 'sit down and fall to musing under a tree.' (This last little image is cruelly suggestive of the later Debussy.) The author dwells on the French lack of musical tradition, and on the anarchy which is the reverse side of French intellectual freedom. He leaves us speculating on what Berlioz might have been with some sort of tradition to help him on his way—not just a voice crying in the wilderness, strained and wearied before its time; and on what Saint-Saëns might have been under happier circumstances—not the great eclectic merely, wandering among all the styles, but with a chance of giving his music the personal touch, the note of inevitableness it so often lacks.

Christopher's first visit to 'Pelléas et Mélisande' symbolises his whole attitude to French music in these early Paris days. His companions drag him there as to a musical revelation. His verdict on the first Act staggers them:

No music. No development. No sequence. No cohesion. Very nice harmony. Quite good orchestral effects, quite good. But it's nothing, nothing at all.

Listening carefully, in the end he judges the work much as other good judges have done. It is the product of an artist who is naturally Wagner's opposite. If Wagner constantly lacks taste and measure, Debussy is all modesty, all economy, 'the genius of good taste.' But one need not be hopelessly Germanised to see that the ideals of the two composers do not balance. What most worried the young Rhinelander in this opera was the lack of 'Schwung'—the impulse, not merely rhythmic, but emotional and intellectual, which courses through Wagner's work like healthy life-blood, and flutters and limps through Debussy's. The declamation, 'simple, modest, rather dragging,' sounded false to his ears, and monotonous, which it undoubtedly is. He appreciated the marvellous delicacy of the treatment, in this drama of whispering passions, of 'love and death inarticulate.' But the whole moral atmosphere troubled him. Was the 'Franco-Belgian sickliness' any better than the Wagnerian sort?

Nowhere a trace of will-power. No one knew what he wanted. No one knew what he was doing. All through the five Acts, which took place in a perpetual half-light—forests, caves, cellars, death-chambers—little sea-birds struggled, hardly even that. Poor little birds!

Debussy, of course, is not to be blamed for the languid fatalism and moral helplessness of Maeterlinck's play. His opera has its place, which should be permanent, because the music interprets and intensifies so wonderfully the peculiar 'new shudder' which Maeterlinck in his earlier phase brought into literature—the sense of the futility of life, the pathos of the fate of human souls that wander like children lost in the dark. On the other hand, Maeterlinck cannot well be blamed for all the unhealthy languor, the misty, comatose quality which gradually invaded Debussy's music after his freshest younger days.

Christopher's first 'reaction' to French music is then on the whole a hostile one. His introduction to the French musical public is also singularly unfortunate. He goes back to his Montrouge attic, and buries himself in his German classical scores.

Section VII., 'The House,' tells of his friendship with the young poet Olivier Jeannin. This exquisitely-drawn character, a type of the refined intellectual, shows him the true line of approach to an art that has baffled him. He tells him the story of the awakening of French music since 1870. He shows him those poets whose writings had so deep an influence on that music. He tries to make him appreciate its wealth of invention, its play of wit and fancy, its careful impressionism and delicate newness of mood, and with all this the purity of line, the disdain of noise and emphasis, so characteristic of the French tradition in art. But a time was bound to come when Christopher's strong sense, getting to work on the new knowledge he had thus gained, would revolt as much as ever against certain features of French music. He unburdens his soul, towards the end of this section, in a long diatribe which has 'dated' in places, but has by no means lost its sting. His chief point is the unhealthy remoteness of this music, its rarefied, aristocratic air. Was this the music for a great democracy?

'Make sunlight for yourselves!' [he cries]. 'There has been rain enough. Your music gives me a cold . . . The public are sick of your crepuscular art, your harmonized neurasthenia, your contrapuntal pedantry. The public goes where it can find life, however coarse and gross. Why do you run away from life?'

For some years, now, French music seems to have been moving definitely into the sunlight, as if it had followed Christopher's advice. Or rather, the world knows better now the music of other men, born in some cases before Debussy, and for a while overshadowed by him. We know the exuberance of Chabrier, the verve of Dukas, Ravel with his wit and his poetry, the banter of Satie, de Sévérac, bathed at times in sunlight and the breathing life of the pastoral earth. Seldom could the work of such men be called 'crepuscular.' The mists of 'Pelléas' have lifted, and are rolling away.

That kindred ideal of a musical art that should also be democratic is, needless to say, very near the heart of M. Rolland. No doubt the gulf between musical art and the people is to be bridged largely from the people's side. But should not musicians beware of their coteries and hot-house culture, and think more of directness of appeal? It is hard to resist M. Rolland's arguments on this point, and his championship of his favourites, Handel and Beethoven, who at their loftiest never lose touch with humanity.

Christopher, however, does more than preach. He embodies his ideals in a colossal work, 'Gargantua,' an epic setting of scenes from Rabelais. To discuss the music of a fictitious composer is a thankless task; even M. Rolland cannot quite convince us of the greatness of his hero's art by merely telling us about it. But assuming that Christopher was a genius of the great sort, it is significant to find him turning to Rabelais for inspiration. The amount of truth in his indictment of French music can be roughly gauged by the question: Has there ever been a French composer who could measure himself with Rabelais? Berlioz had some of his tremendous breadth, his irreverence and sarcasm; hardly his joie de vivre, his unquenchable optimism. Smaller, sunnier geniuses—Bizet, Chabrier—group well under his great shadow; but could anyone else even be mentioned? Here are some features of Christopher's 'Gargantua':

Great symphonic pictures with soli and chorus, mock-heroic battles, riotous country fairs, vocal buffooneries, madrigals à la Jaquequin . . . a storm at sea, the Island of Bells . . . finally a pastoral symphony full of the air of the fields, and the blithe serenity of flutes and oboes, and the clean-souled folk-songs of old France.

Yes: in spite of its French madrigals and folk-songs the work sounds German; Straussian in fact. This should help us to realise the main musical issue in these later sections of 'Jean-Christophe.' The hero does not propose anything so crude as a new subjection of French music to German influence. But he revolts against a too narrow ideal of French musical art. In their joy over their newly-risen Debussy, some of his countrymen forgot that he did not embody the whole French spirit in his work. He embodies it no more than does Racine. The French spirit in music is not only Rameau and the clavicinistes plus Debussy and his narrower disciples. It is Berlioz too, and Bizet and Chabrier, as in literature it is also Rabelais and Molière and Victor Hugo.

Force, bigness, prodigality, the gros rire, the democratic appeal—these must find a place in French art, literary and musical, unless some of the greatest names are to be ruled out. French music must find room, too, for mysticism, unless César Franck, who re-discovered its lost soul, is to be ruled out on shallow grounds of Belgian birth and German ancestry. The typical grand siècle ideals—of moderation and clearness, of wit as opposed to humour, and the rest—may still be cheerfully put in the very centre and citadel of French art. But M. Rolland has shown that his personal leanings are to the other side, to the side which is German as well as French.

We can follow no further in this article the history of Christopher the artist and the man—the humanising influences of 'Love and Friendship,' the terrible moral crisis of 'The Burning Bush,' the calm idealism of his last days. But we can touch finally on one larger issue. He is in himself a link between French and German musical art. In his own mature work, their union is accomplished. And beyond his musical ideals he can see greater ones: with Europe a 'vast armed vigil' he can think only of the ultimate communion of the free spirits of France and Germany. For such a man, as for Romain Rolland himself, nations exist only to pour out their varying treasures of mind and soul for the enrichment of common humanity.

MUSIC AT THE CINEMA

By ARTHUR L. SALMON

The present-day picture-house is undoubtedly playing a very prominent part in our social life. People have always loved pictures; they formed the first substitute for literature, and pessimistically we might fear that they will also prove the last. Regarded calmly, the cinema appears as a grand opportunity that has not been converted to the best use. It gives scope for endless variety, endless change; there seems no limitation of its possibilities. Whether it makes for true culture is a point which cannot be discussed without cynicism that might become offensive. The cinema has become the reading, the art, the music, and the drama of the average individual. It has hit the legitimate stage hard by its creation of a new artifice; it has injured the lending-library, closed many music-halls, and affected the concert-room. As concerns real literature the damage has been slight; those who read rubbish before now go to see rubbish, procuring their cheap excitement with even less effort than that of perusing a book. The taste for maudlin sentiment, worthless melodrama, unhealthy sensation, is being strengthened and confirmed. Improbability of happening, not to say impossibility, runs riot; there is little truth of nature, no psychology, no characterisation, in the typical film-fiction of the day, which drugs and stultifies the seniors, and vitiates the juniors by scenes and ideas unfitted to their years. In these aspects the cinema may be considered disastrous, though usually a step removed from the lower-class music-halls which it has largely displaced. Yet the defects, which we all recognise, are not inevitable; with a little care the picture-house might become elevating and educative as well as amusing.

But in one perhaps unexpected aspect the cinema appears to be doing good work. In very many cases it is giving the opportunity of hearing good music to many who never heard good music before. I use the word 'good' with caution and with reservations. The highest developments of music, the symphony orchestra, the purest chamber-music, are of course debarred, though we find the latter in a limited degree. Some of the houses have really excellent quartets or even larger instrumental combinations; and though the purity of the performance may be somewhat discounted by the fact that one of the combination is a pianoforte, the effect is often admirable when we remember the purpose and the place. There are also individual pianists, with possibly a single violin to assist them, who do work by no means to be sneered at; and the picture-house whose music is absolutely bad is fast losing its reputation with all but the roughest audiences. I have myself heard interpretations of Tchaikovsky, Schubert, Sibelius, Liszt, Wagner, and others, that were more than tolerable; and though a special kind of composition has come into fashion which we characterise—not always with flattering intent—as 'picture-house music,' the performers have at least escaped from the old convention of accompanying the pictures in a strictly 'programme' subservience. There is still room in many places for much improvement; but the fact remains that the wise cinema-manager is caring more and more for the musical portion of his entertainment, and is more and more reaping his reward. One cannot expect to find the rare best; yet it is certain that, the picture-house is really doing good work as a musical educator and as a leader towards better things. There are places in the provinces where it is almost impossible to hear good music at all except at the cinema; and it has become quite common to hear people say that they do not go for the pictures at all—they go for the music. In this sense the picture-hall provides an inexpensive evening of pleasure, even to those who dislike the nonsense that is too often pictured. We cannot expect music to be the foremost consideration of the managers; their first care is to fill their seats with those who love thrilling and sensational scenarios. But they have learned that the music is a very important second to the films—that it actually comes first with a fairly large minority of their clientèle; and they are arranging accordingly.

The really important result is not as concerns those who are already consciously musical, and who naturally seek what they desire; it is the result on those who did not know that they could love music till it has been thus actually thrust upon them. Little by little the music has made its way with those who were in any degree susceptible; interest has been aroused and dormant possibilities have been awakened. Those who never paid attention to music before, because it did not come home to them, develop a liking. They say: 'I wish you'd play that piece I heard at the pictures the other night'; or they exclaim: 'Oh! I like that—I've heard it at the pictures.' And so the influence works; and it is an influence almost infallibly in the right direction. Poor music may be heard often enough at the cinemas, but those who know good music are never corrupted by it; while the individual who has before known nothing but bad, or has suffered the privation of knowing no music at all, is gradually led to a sense of appreciation and begins to respond to the appeal of the musical. The average heard is in most cases a little better than that known in the ordinary home; and in many cases it is quite equal to the average of the amateur or even the professional concert.

We have heard the cinema much abused by æsthetic and artistic critics, as well as by moralists; probably we have shared in abusing it. Too often the censure has been deserved. The entertainment has not risen to the level of its possibilities. But it is a pleasure to be able to say a good word for it in one direction; and if frank recognition is given to its present attainment of musical merit, there will be encouragement to managers to persevere in the right way. Many towns in England have no permanent orchestra, and would not maintain one if they had the chance; but all towns of any size, even many large villages, have their picture-houses, and in these we have a machinery already established for the popularising of good music. If we cannot get municipal orchestras or established winter-gardens, we can, under the pretext of picture-showing, get something that shall in some measure supply their place. The picture-house is always open, and always needs a musical staff. We must not expect too much; it is always better to take the half-loaf than go without bread at all. Nor must we expect that all people will be made musical, even if every cinema provides the best of performances. There are some who might hear good music every day of their lives and remain entirely untouched. But there are degrees, and many can be weaned from a taste for rubbish to something that is at least second-best. As a nursery for young musicians, as a support for otherwise indigent performers, as an education for young and older hearers, the picture-house has a great place to fill; and every manager should be taught that it pays to give good music. No lover of the cinema, however unmusical, was ever kept away by the music; and many who do not care for pictures are attracted by it. Proprietors and managers are not philanthropists—we cannot expect it; but they are usually sound men of business. The inference is obvious.

VINCENT D'INDY AND THE MINOR MODE—II.

BY RICHARD CAPELL

Questions of modulation and of contrapuntal Imitation and Inversion are raised by M. Vincent d'Indy's theory of the minor mode, as sketched in these columns recently. Briefly to sum up this theory from the 'Course of Composition' of the Schola Cantorum:

The minor common chord derives from the lower harmonic series (Nos. 1 to 6) just as the major chord derives from the upper series. Nature thus outlines the two symmetrical modes, upward or downward (vulgarly 'major and minor').

The constituents of the diatonic major (upward) scale are found in the upward harmony of a given prime (say C E G), plus that of its upper 5th or dominant (G B D), plus that of its lower 5th or subdominant (F A C). Here are the constituents of the scale of C major.

The corresponding minor (downward) scale will then be found in the downward harmony of a given prime (say E C A), plus that of its lower 5th or dominant (A F D), plus that of its upper 5th or subdominant (B G E). Here we have the true relative minor of C. It was a scale freely used in the polyphonic period, e.g.:

Ex. 1. 'Peccantem Me,'

PALESTRINA.

The fruits of M. d'Indy's conception of the

Ex. 2.

The above shows us the scale of C and its relative minor, and the axis is—not the mediant in the diatonic order but the mediant 'in the order of 5ths,' otherwise the second diatonic degree common to the two modes. In inversion this degree remains invariable, and all other notes take up positions on its farther side at the exact interval. Any theme, strictly reproduced thus, preserves all its intervals intact, and naturally at the same time changes its mode.

A CRITICISM OF BACH

The chapter on Fugue is a temptation to linger for the freshness of many of its statements. A fugue is by principle monothematic. The form admits of no 'established' modulation. The answer even in a 'real' fugue can never be in exact imitation, for even when its intervals are those of the subject its tonal functions necessarily differ. It is instinct and musical taste that must make the choice of a good answer, rather than the minute minor mode begin to appear in the chapter (vol. ii. of the 'Course of Composition') on Canon. In most canons and fugues the device of inversion achieves not real inversion but merely approximate 'contrary motion.' Composers have usually been content with satisfying the eye. Their inverted Consequents take an exact step downwards, as seen on the staff, where the antecedent went up; but that is not the same as stepping out the same musical interval, since the same apparent interval on the staff may mean a semitone, a tone, or even a tone-and-a-half. The weight M. d'Indy attaches to exact imitation by inversion may seem excessive if one has not come to sympathise with his view of the art, in which looms so large nature's strange and inspiring gift of the two modes outlined in the two radiating series of harmonics. He sees in the modulated and inverted imitation of contrapuntists no mere play of ingenuity, but a sign of half-instinctive obedience to nature's hint—to gaze, as it were, first turning to the northward view, then south, from the mountain-top of the tonic. M. d'Indy, then, offers his student a substitute for the old and merely empirical mechanism of inversion* (namely, the use of the mediant as an axis or pivot between tonic and dominant; giving the tonic and dominant each an appoggiatura, one has a scale of a sort—harmonic minor, or major with flattened 6th—which belongs to no true mode but permits of possible though not perfect inversion). From his harmonic principle of 'the single chord in its double aspect' M. d'Indy derives his substitute:

rules of the text-books. Wondrous as was the great efflorescence of the fugue (and the Bachian fugue he has elsewhere called 'The Old Testament of the Bible of Music'), the form was nevertheless afflicted by 17th century evils:

From its outset [he says] an unexpected obstacle hindered the expansion of its rhythmic processes. The bar, the horrid bar, was not long in usurping for itself a ruling place by favour of that misunderstanding which endowed it unduly with all the prerogatives of rhythm. Thenceforward all grows restricted and poverty-stricken in the usage of independent and characteristic rhythms. Contrapuntal imitation and canon subsist, but the free play of their rhythmic derivatives (augmentation, diminution, and so on) is constantly hampered by the omnipotence of the bar.

* The 'old mechanism' mentioned is thus:

In the period of the monodic cantilena rhythm alone, represented by the form of the neumes, ruled as sovereign lord over music. Polyphony necessitated the use of signs indicating where the different parts dovetailed, but rhythm still did not lose its rights, and the rudimentary bar in no wise hampered the rhythmic march of the vocal parts. In the 17th century—the Renaissance of pride and vanity—the mensuralists made of the bar not a simple graphic sign, but a periodic pull-up of rhythm, all of whose liberty and elegance were thus spoiled.

But the capital proceeding of this metric period was harmonic padding, or the rigorous and servile reproduction of a design at regular and constant intervals, which henceforth was to supply the requisite sloppy mortar for those weird constructions known as 'scholars' fugues.'

Alone, perhaps, J. S. Bach still can offer us in his admirable 'Art of Fugue' a masterly example of rhythmic variations; but in his work as a whole he appears none the less to have submitted to the metric influence of his day, and the harmonic padding—though it comes from his pen with comparative reserve and discretion—nevertheless remains to our mind the one part of his fugues which seems to have suffered from the tooth and claw of Time.

BACH AND THE MINOR MODE

Harmonically the fugue is one big cadence. This character excludes real modulation, and any apparent harmonic movement in a fugue can have no other effect than to reinforce the one tonality. In this big cadence the various harmonic formulæ which go to affirm a key are replaced by enunciations of the subject with its usual adjuncts (answer, counter-subject, and so on). Thus is to be explained the eminent logic of the tonal order of fugal expositions as immemorably practised. M. d'Indy analyses Bach's organ fugue in C on this subject:

A great cadential formula which offers, so to speak, the synthesis of all others.

And the tendency of the analysis is to show that our major mode at least is valid, tonal stability being thoroughly maintained after the fairly complete circuit undertaken in this Fugue. The point of criticism occurs in reaching the entry in the relative minor.

In this fugue [says M. d'Indy] the subject being comprised within a 5th, no very apparent re-shaping is involved by the transposition to the relative minor, the mediant alone being modified. But it would not have been the same with the answer to this imitation if Bach had sought to replace exactly the tonic by the dominant and vice versa. For then he would have been obliged to use the uncertain and unstable formulæ of the so-called melodic minor scale, which could not have failed strangely to deform the answer.

The first fugue of 'The Forty-Eight' offers excellent examples of the grave modifications involved in an actual imitation of the answer in the relative [melodic] minor. This subject was capable of taking on in A minor a natural enough transformation which, however, Bach does not use. But neither the imitated answer he does use [see bars 12 and 13, tenor] nor the D minor transposition [tenor, bars 17 and 18], together with yet other alterations, can really pass for masterpieces of elegance and melodic grace!

M. d'Indy's suggestion of 'a natural enough transformation which Bach does not use' is the following:

THE MINOR MUDDLE

If tonal stability is eminently satisfactory in major fugues which follow the formula of the Bach organ fugue mentioned, or variations of that formula, it is far otherwise with fugues in the usual minor mode, for their symmetry with the major fugues is merely apparent and arbitrary. No serious difficulty, it is true, arises when the minor fugue employs only the tonal functions of tonic and so-called dominant, as in so many of 'The Forty-Eight.' Here the harmony of the upper 5th is to be regarded as the subdominant, and the fugue's harmonic formula is simply that of a plagal cadence (plagal in M. d'Indy's sense, of course).

But suppose the big formula of the organ fugue with its seven expositions (the dominant and tonic pedals count as such in M. d'Indy's nomenclature) be transposed down a 3rd with the same key-signature (A minor for C major):

Then instead of the exposition in the relative (No. 3) we are involved somehow in the subdominant of the relative—which is in no wise the same from the tonal point of view. And instead of the relative of the subdominant (No. 5) we see appear a truly weird key having for its base the chord which the text-books call the diminished 5th!

So that will not do. And adaptation by corresponding change of mode in each exposition likewise offers antinomies which M. d'Indy points out:

Nevertheless it offers a sufficiently tonal formula, if one makes allowance for the inherent imprecision of the vulgar minor mode, and some of the best authors of fugues, even J. S. Bach himself, have been content with it. Minor fugues in this and analogous forms remain admirable chiefly for the consummate art expended by their authors to remedy such tonal defects.

And as an example of their devices, M. d'Indy cites the fugue in Bach's sixth Partita, pointing out how, to buttress up the imperfections of the cadential formula, Bach has solidly built up a huge peroration (dominant and tonic pedals), almost equalling in extent the prelude from which its designs are borrowed.

But one might cite even in Bach—and still more in his successors—many other minor fugues built on the same plan, but lacking the correctives necessary for their original lack of tonal cohesion.

The trend of course is towards a recommendation of the inverse mode (see Ex. 1) as a true remedy for the inconveniences of the usual minor.

His 'inverse' formula, corresponding to the major of the Bach organ fugue, is the following :

- (1.) Principal exposition, tonic subject (A minor); dominant answer (D minor); tonic, dominant;
- (2.) Counter-exposition, dominant, tonic;
- (3.) Relative major (C major, answer imitated in F major);
- (4.) Subdominant (E minor);
- (5.) Relative subdominant (G major);
- (6.) and (7.) Pedals.

And why, asks our author, should not this cadence inspire to-day the true minor fugues. symmetrical with major ones both from the tonal and the modal points of view? Fugues of this sort would simply be a logical extension of the process of inversion. But hitherto the substitution of mode which results from inversion has hardly ever been used with consciousness and integrity, on account of incomprehension of this truth: that the only exact transposition of a theme from one mode to another consists in rigorous inversion of all its intervals, implying that of its harmonies.

Rigorous inversion was rarely practised by Bach, though contrary motion appears frequently in his works. But inversion can be practised in any and every fugue. The results are extremely curious and instructive from the point of view of tonality, whole passages remaining at least as harmonious and musical as in the original text.

While sensible to the scant justice this sketch does to M. d'Indy's argument, one feels that (in the absence of a full translation) it may be found stimulating here and there in England where our teachers have perhaps not too faithfully faced the awkward problems of the minor mode. Thus Sir Hubert Parry :

In the minor concords the minor 3rd does not correspond with any of the really perceptible harmonies of the root chord, and the triad cannot in any position be free from false combinational tones;

which would appear to relegate the minor mode to the position of an illegitimate, unexplained offshoot or Darwinian 'sport' among musical phenomena. And there is the suggestion in a dictum of Prof. Walford Davies, who, while not undervaluing the first six upper harmonics as an explanation of the harmonic basis of the art—accounting for the importance and finality of the major triad—can find no reason for the acceptance [as a concord in counterpoint] of the minor triad and chords of 6-3 which could not be advanced in favour of the rejected 6-4.'

POSTSCRIPTUM.—A curious coincidence comes to my notice. Working in complete ignorance of M. d'Indy's theory of the minor mode, a Liverpool musician, Mr. Douglas Miller, arrived at a very similar conclusion which he has stated in a pamphlet, 'The Problem of the Minor Scale and its Solution' (London: Joseph Williams, Ltd., 1915). He too was disconcerted by the history of the mode and by the arbitrariness of our minor scales; his starting-point, however, was not the lower harmonic series (which he does not mention), but more empirically such observations as that the conventional dominant of a minor key tends to form a fresh tonic, just as does the subdominant of a major key. Mr. Miller touches on several points not in the 'Cours de Composition'—the reason, for instance, why the false tonic (minor) has tended to supplant the real principal note both harmonically and melodically. Nor is he content, like M. d'Indy, to accept unquestioningly the tempered scale, and indeed in a country where choral singing is seriously practised (they have no notion of it in France) it is difficult to see how the phenomena of the natural scale can ever be so disregarded. Mr. Miller's pamphlet is full of interest, and also is graced by this most happy epigraph: 'All true and fruitful natural philosophy hath a double scale or ladder, ascendant and descendant' (Bacon, 'Advancement of Learning').

THE ORGAN WORKS OF BACH

(Continued from November number, page 744)

BY HARVEY GRACE

IV.—THE LATER WEIMAR PRELUDES AND FUGUES

A group of Bach's finest preludes and fugues dates from the close of his stay at Weimar—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor (? Cothen), Prelude and Fugue in G major, Toccata and Fugue in F, Prelude and Fugue in A minor, and Prelude and Fugue in C minor. Some of these movements were undoubtedly written at a much earlier period, but the works as a whole probably took on their final form shortly before Bach went to Cothen in 1717—his thirty-third year.

It is more than usually difficult to settle the chronological order of the members of this group, because in several cases we know that the prelude and the fugue were written at different periods. Thus, the C minor Fugue is a good deal earlier in date than its Prelude, and an even greater length of time separates the A minor pair. Similarly, there can be little doubt that the Toccata in F was composed some years later than the fugue which it so effectually overshadows. On the whole, however, we shall not be far wrong if we regard the Prelude and Fugue in A minor as the first of the group, and the G minor Fantasia and Fugue as the last.

The early origin of the A minor prelude (vii., 42) is clearly shown in its pronounced Buxtehudian features—the arpeggio opening, and the scales, shakes, pedal solo, and manual passage-writing in bars 22-36. But it is all far better than similar Buxtehude movements in its mixture of freedom and organization, though the perfect essay in this field was not to come until some years later in the shape of the G minor Fantasia. Note, in passing, that a few bars from the end contain a hint at the last two variations of the Passacaglia. Schweitzer tells us that one of the manuscripts—that of J. P. Kellner—has the opening in this form :

Certainly the later and simpler version is much to be preferred.

The subject of the fugue is comparatively early in style, especially in bars 3-5. We have seen Bach in his later Weimar days discarding long florid subjects in favour of simple and compact specimens. Evidently this fugue is an early work very much rewritten, or it is a middle period essay in a style suitable for concert purposes. Schweitzer, on the authority of Reinhard Oppel in the Bachjahrbuch of 1906, gives the following as the original form of the subject :

This rambling effort is used for a three-part clavier fugue, in which (we are told) 'the plan of the [organ] fugue and its main incidents are already pre-figured.' At first sight the two subjects seem to have little in common, though after all they are little more divergent than some of the early attempts and finished products in Beethoven's sketch-books.

The A minor Fugue is deservedly one of the most popular of all Bach's organ works. It lacks the breadth and feeling of the great works of the composer's last years, but it shows a splendid combination of the brilliance and vitality of youth and the weight and mastery of maturity.

It demands a straightforward energetic method of performance. Only one manual change is called for, though others are frequently made—sometimes with detriment to the flow of the music. The long episode is best played on the Swell, few English organs possessing a Choir of sufficient fire and body. As to the point at which we should leave the Great, opinions differ. Here is the plan suggested in the preface to the Widor-Schweitzer edition :

But there is a good deal to be said for the scheme in the Best-Hull edition, whereby the left hand remains on the Great until bar 57, going over to the Swell with the fourth semiquaver. For the return to the Great we may choose between Mendelssohn's plan of dropping on to the long E in bar 94 and letting it ring out for a bar before transferring the left hand, or we may make the change at bar 90, the left hand going to the Great at the second half of the bar, the right joining it at the beginning of bar 91. We then work up to the final climax.

The cadenza is sometimes played on the full Swell. Widor and Schweitzer are emphatically in favour of remaining on the Great, which by this time is of course full. They say scornfully 'There are even Apostles of Pettiness who do not hesitate in measure 146, the beginning of the cadenza, to start in on manual III., and thereafter find their way over into the fortissimo of manual I. during the further progress of the 32nd note figure.' But a good deal depends upon the Swell at our disposal. Given one of great power and brilliance we cannot deny the effectiveness of its use here, nor the impressiveness of the return to the full Great for the final chords.

In the Prelude and Fugue in C minor (vii. 64) we have a notable pair of pieces, the Prelude being far and away the finer of the two. It shows Bach at his ripest, and was probably written at Leipsic during the revision of his organ works, in order to take the place of an earlier prelude. The form is well worth study. The material consists of two well-contrasted ideas: (a) an introduction of twenty-four bars, beginning broadly and increasing in animation, and (b) the fugal treatment of a simple subject which walks up from the tonic to dominant and back again. This fugal section carries on the feeling of the opening, the triplet figuration being continued as an accompaniment to the subject, and the key remaining the same. A full close in the dominant is reached at the end of page 65, and we appear to be entering on a repetition of the opening matter, but Bach gives us only four bars of it, and then goes ahead once more with the fugue, this time with the subject delivered in thirds, and with the triplet counter-theme below instead of above. During the next three pages the discussion of these two constituents is so welded that we are hardly conscious of passing from one to the other. The work is splendidly rounded off by a repetition of the first page. No movement of Bach shows a happier blend of variety and homogeneity. The manual writing is frequently of a type rarely met with in organ music of the period, e.g. :

the harmony is rich and bold, and the whole is full of irresistible vigour and fling. The movement is well fitted for performance alone. It makes a brilliant recital item, and will appeal to hearers who have so far had no use for Bach.

One is surprised to find a marked difference of opinion as to the pace of this prelude. The speed in the edition before us—♩=84—is decidedly on the slow side. The Peters edition is still more sedate—even funereal—with ♩=66! The Best-Hull suggestion is ♩=108—a good round speed, but not a bit too fast, surely. The last-named edition is rather lavish with indications of manual and other changes of power. After all, the piece is not long, so we may stick to the Great with no fear of monotony, reserving the reeds for the opening and closing pages, and for a brief climax here and there. Most authorities are agreed that the  should be played  when used in conjunction with quaver triplets.*

Played immediately after the prelude the fugue perhaps seems stolid, whereas it is merely solid. It has a fine subject of the terse and weighty type that Bach favoured in his later Weimar days, and the five-part treatment of the first section is massive without turgidity. The manual section beginning at bar 59 at first sight appears to be announcing a new subject, but the little seven-note figure has already been anticipated, first in the tenor counter-subject in bars 41 and 42. It is present in almost every bar during this lengthy episode, and save for a brief spell plays a prominent part throughout the rest of the movement. The only serious blemish on an otherwise splendid fugue is the episode preceding the final entries. The fact that it has no connection with what has gone before would matter little if it increased or at least maintained the interest. But it lets us down rather badly by dropping the counterpoint and giving us a tame figure over a kind of Alberti alto, and a bass that does little beyond marking time until the end of the episode, when it steps out to meet the pedal entry of the subject. Another irregularity, of which, however, the hearer is less conscious, is in the number of voices. Bach clearly intended to write a five-voiced fugue, but after the first section we meet with no more five-part writing until the closing bars. Despite its imperfections, however, the fugue contains much that is fine and attractive, and the majestic gravity of its opening, and the beautiful flow of its counterpoint, will ensure it place in the repertory, especially for use as a voluntary. It should be played at a good pace, Alla breve, the first section with plenty of diapason tone, the manual passage on fairly quiet Swell or Choir. We may make the weak episode tolerable by slightly quickening the pace and working up a good crescendo to full organ for the final twenty bars.

A very bold and effective work that is perhaps less widely known than it deserves to be is the Prelude and Fugue in G major (VIII., 112). Its chief motive is :

announced by the pedals after eleven bars of brilliant flourish, chiefly on the tonic chord. The figure appears only as a bass until rather more than half way through the movement, when the treble takes it over and delivers it four times as a rising sequence, after which we hear it no more, though we feel it is at the back of the rhythm and harmony from time to time until the end. Short as it is the prelude is full of good points. Note, for example, how the repeated chords over the florid pedal are answered by the animated manual parts over the drumlike pedal of repeated notes. Delightful, too, are the clashing 2nds in the upper parts at the beginning of page 115, and the numerous semiquaver passages in 6ths and 10ths. It is one of the most genial and breezy of Bach's organ works, and, like the C minor Prelude dealt with above, is excellent for propaganda purposes. Nobody hearing it played with the right spirit will again think of Bach as a merely dry composer.

The fugue is only a little less animated. Its subject is a major and slightly extended version of that used in the opening chorus of the cantata, 'My spirit was in heaviness.' The cantata was written in 1714, whereas the organ work evidently dates from some years later. (Widor and Schweitzer are of opinion that it was composed at the same time as the cantata, but it is so far ahead of Bach's other fugues of the period that Prof. Sanford Terry's suggestion of 1724 is more likely to be right.) A glance will show that owing to the repeated notes, as well as to the fact that the second portion is a mere duplication of the opening a third higher, the subject :

is one that might well have led to a monotonous fugue. But the treatment is so full of resource, and the polyphony so vital, that the result is never in danger. A fine stroke in the final portion is the use made of a figure that first appeared in the pedals in bar 27. From bars 60-66 it reappears as a counter-subject, at first handed from part to part, and then played as a rising bass under a

* But see an interesting letter on this subject in our correspondence columns.
B

stretto. Here are a couple of bars, showing the energizing effect of this figure :

An unusual feature is a dramatic pause on a discord in bar 71, after which some further excellent strettis bring the fugue to a close.

A straightforward registration scheme seems to meet the case. The lengthy manual episode may be played on the Swell or Choir, but a moderately loud Great, with Swell uncoupled or very much reduced, is even better. The end of the episode should be worked up in power and perhaps slightly in pace. The full organ should be reserved for the climax in bar 71, and should then be continued to the end. All who know the work well will agree with Widor and Schweitzer that 'over this Prelude and Fugue something like a sunny sky seems to be spread. They are eloquent with a great serene confidence that banishes care from troubled hearts.' The two movements were probably written at about the same time. Not only are they alike in mood, but (what is even more unusual in the organ preludes and fugues) they have a thematic connection. The kinship between the fugue subject and the little theme of the prelude is unmistakable. (Exx. 5 and 6.) Even more definite is the reference to the fugue subject in bars 61 and 62 of the prelude :

The only other example of such anticipation is the G minor Prelude and Fugue in vol. viii., 120. I suggest that the preludes were improvised on occasions when Bach needed some such introduction to the fugues, and that, with the latter at the back of his mind, he made natural—though perhaps unconscious—reference to the subjects.

(To be continued.)

LOVE FOR MUSIC

BY TOM S. WOTTON

The editor of a popular journal has recently inquired of painters and literary men as to whether they liked music, and the answers received have given rise to a certain amount of discussion. But no one seems to have thought of inquiring of musicians as to whether they liked music. It might be of interest if the question were asked, though there would probably be difficulty in obtaining truthful answers. A man in trade has no compunctions in expressing his candid opinion of the occupation by which he gains his bread. And although a doctor or lawyer might deem it inadvisable to declare that he abominated medicine or law, a soldier or sailor has usually no scruples in giving his ideas on his profession. But an artist of any description would, as a rule, be as loath to admit that he had no liking for his art as for a priest to proclaim that his calling did not appeal to him. Yet M. Combarieu, in his 'Histoire de la Musique,' is possibly not far from the truth when he says, apropos of the Italian master's almost complete musical silence from the production of 'Tell' in 1829 till his own death in 1868, 'Rossini belonged to a category of composers less common than one might suppose : he cared but little for music.'

Naturally the test of a musician's love for music must be the same as that applied to a literary man, who presumably is neither a composer nor an executant. A love for music must be taken to mean a love for listening to music—enjoying music as an ordinary person enjoys a sunset, without troubling himself as to what weather it betokens, or as to the precise shades and colours composing it, or as to the scientific reasons that may account for it. If it be objected that this is not the correct way to enjoy music, it must be insisted that this is the only way a literary man can be reasonably expected to enjoy it. It may also be pointed out that we were in this position when first we realised that we loved music. We may have been born into a musical household and imbibed a love for music with our mother's milk ; or we may have been brought up in an unmusical circle, and a coup de foudre in shape of our first symphony or quartet revealed to us our love. But in neither case were we first carefully primed in the mysteries of the art. We heard the music, and loved it, long before we knew how it was made.

But granted that a musician when listening to music must take more interest in it than is possible for any literary man, we must differentiate that interest from pure and unadulterated love for music. The contemplation of flowers is of more interest if we know their names, and if our knowledge of botany enables us to place them in their proper order, species, and variety. But we must not label our interest as 'love for flowers.' Our original love has been overlain—maybe at times smothered—by a number of very different things, and things we may love in themselves without reference to the flowers. So with music. We may take more interest in listening to it if we know something of the different instruments and can recognize their tone, if we can follow the form of the work and can appreciate the various contrapuntal devices employed by the composer. But we must not confuse our interest with simple love for music.

A love for listening to music was no doubt the original cause of the majority of performers learning to play an instrument. Later they loved playing for itself—loved the sheer physical delight in manipulating the keys or strings, the 'sweet incense of the public's applause, and that internal glow of satisfaction we all experience at having done something well. It does not require a vast stretch of imagination to realise that it might be possible for them to lose their original love for listening to music and still obtain the greatest pleasure from interpreting it. 'But,' it may be pertinently asked, 'How can a performer interpret music efficiently unless he does love it? We should at once detect his insincerity.' Is that quite certain? We have the classic instance of Ernst's rendering of Berlioz's 'Rêverie et Caprice,' with the composer complimenting him on having thoroughly grasped his meaning, while the violinist was whispering to Mendelssohn that he did not know what the music was intended to convey. A properly trained musician ought to be able to do as Ernst did, in the same way that a properly trained actor may make much of a part he personally abominated if it happened to suit his idiosyncrasies. It is this that matters. After all, the number of composers that a performer interprets really efficiently is very limited. We consider one as the player of Chopin, we regard another as a player of Beethoven, a third as the apostle of Brahms or Schumann. He may play other composers well because he has been thoroughly trained, but he plays one composer wonderfully, and this, to a large extent, because he cannot help himself. His idiosyncrasies run parallel to those of that particular composer. He plays the works as though they were his own. He has the joy of creating them anew.

Our hypothetical performer may listen to the music-makings of others for the purpose of picking up hints and suggestions, but he is only really happy when he is in charge of the instrument himself. His choice of pieces often betrays the fact that his love for playing is greater than his love for music, since they seem chosen more on account of the technical difficulties they present than for their charm as music pure and simple.

The case of a composer may be much the same. He commenced by loving to listen to music. From that he arrived at creating it, and in his case the derivative pleasure is stronger than it is with the mere interpreter. It is two-fold. There is the pride of creation, and there is the joy of self-expression. It is not difficult to imagine a composer belonging to the same category as Rossini—supposing M. Combarieu's statement to be correct—in that he may care but little for music. The difference is that he usually still loves creating it, a love that Rossini seemed to have partially lost. His 'Stabat Mater' and even his jeux d'esprit for the pianoforte prove that it was only partial, and, on the other side, we must place his proverbial laziness, and his belief that he would never improve on his operatic masterpiece.

The case of a musical writer is even simpler. He is often a literary man who, from force of circumstances or his own inclination, has chosen music as his theme, instead of human nature or moral philosophy. One has only to dip into the books and pamphlets written about Wagner to realise that it is possible to be a 'musical writer' without having any knowledge of, and in some cases apparently any real liking for, the art of music.

In all three classes of musicians there must be many who have preserved their original love for listening—merely listening to music. But before we carp at the ordinary literary man for his non-appreciation of our art, it might be as well to try to analyse our own sensations, in the same way as the curious 'howlers' of musicians themselves should soften their attitude towards the musical blunders of novelists.

It will not be disputed that every musician of middle life has ceased to care for some of the music he enjoyed in his youth. How much, is a question that can only be answered by those who have the courage to speak the truth to their own consciences. Some of the music that thrilled us in early years we may now declare bores us. This may be perfectly true, or it may be merely a pose. We may think that the confession of a sneaking affection for Meyerbeer or Mendelssohn would ruin our reputation for being considered 'advanced.' Or, we may have championed the music of some particular composer so fiercely that we have not the strength of mind to admit that we have lost our faith in him. But whatever our public attitude, and however much we may try to deceive ourselves, the fact remains that we have ceased to love some of the music of our youth—in some cases because our ideals and emotions have altered, in others simply from the weariness engendered by constant repetition. Love for music with most means a love for a portion of music, and often but a small portion. Members of the general musical public are seldom very catholic in their musical tastes, and perhaps musicians are apt to move in an even more restricted circle as regards their musical likes. However wide their sympathies when they started on their career, they end by becoming specialists, and things outside their range do not appeal to them. The organist too often cannot see over the pipes of his instrument, and the pulses of the string-players fail to respond to the tone of the wind-instruments.

Nobody would trust in the sincerity of a philanthropist whose 'love for mankind' turned out to be a love for himself and his own immediate belongings, i.e., a love for a small portion of mankind. And, by the same reasoning, we cannot credit a composer with any great love for music if his love extends only to his own productions and to those of a limited number of other writers. To say that such a one was not musical would be absurd. To doubt his interest in music, or rather in the things derived from music, would be erroneous. But it does not follow logically that because someone possesses the attributes of a musician, and takes pleasure in the myriad offshoots of music, that of necessity he must love music per se. On the other hand, in music as with other things, it is possible to have a sincere love for the art without being endowed by Nature with the true artistic instinct, or sufficient intelligence to grasp the significance of the things appertaining to the art. The result is often disastrous.

In reading the lives and letters of various composers, one cannot fail to observe how few were the other composers whose works they really loved and how many composers who stirred their youthful emotions ceased to move them in their later years. The cultured musical amateur with fairly catholic tastes regards as monstrous the hatred Wagner and other big composers showed towards certain works, which assuredly contain much good music, though based on different principles and inspired by ideas different from their own. Their attitude would hardly impress the ordinary literary man or painter as evincing a love for music.

There certainly seems much to support M. Combarieu's statement as regards composers. Whether his category would include a large number of other musicians is, maybe, a more difficult question. I have endeavoured to show the possibility of a musician taking more interest and pleasure in the exercise of his art than in the art itself, but it must rest with the individual as to how he would answer the question put to the painters and literary men: 'Do you love listening to music?'

BRITISH VIOLIN MAKERS

BY F. BONAVIA

Violinists and lovers of the violin will welcome this second edition of the Rev. W. Meredith Morris's valuable volume on British violin makers.* In the first place the subject is as attractive to the lay mind as to the expert, for violin making is much more of a rite than the making of pianofortes or brass instruments. Then there is the still unsolved mystery of the early Italian makers to cast the light of romance upon the theme. Mr. Morris devotes a good chapter to the theories that have sprung up about the so-called 'Italian tone' without advancing any definite theory of his own. But he lays bare the fallacy of theories advanced by others. And this is also a most useful contribution to the controversy that has been kindled again and again around the Cremona makers. If it is desired to get to the heart of the Stradivari mystery, then obviously we must first clear the ground of all heresy and misconception. Mr. Morris's views are no less valuable for their authority than for the worth they derive from the writer's outspoken sincerity. 'I must confess' (he tells us) 'that I know very little more about the mysteries of the Italian tone now than I did thirty-five years ago when I first took up the study of the subject.' The word of a man who openly acknowledges as much is worth tons of statements from those who boast that they know all about it. Indeed, the mass of people interested in violins can be divided into two classes: to the first and most numerous belong those who know everything and are only prevented from surpassing Stradivari by their natural modesty; the second is composed of a small band of makers and enthusiasts who admit that their knowledge is utterly out of proportion to the love they bear to their subject. Amongst the first are the makers of freak violins and the advertisers; amongst the latter a few enthusiasts, and the makers on whom hopes for the future rest.

Will the future ever equal the glories of the past? That is the great question. It may be that the secret will be discovered by a scientist. More likely, however, a new star will arise in somebody's ken and upset all the theories and the researches of the past years. There was science—of a kind—in the days of Stradivari. But there was also a good deal of casuistry and superstition. We are to-day sufficiently enlightened to know that it is not always wise to scoff at superstition. Possibly some little detail which modern science ignores gave Stradivari his power. It is permissible to suggest that the much more limited technique of Corelli and his contemporaries did not impose upon the new fiddle the strain it would have to stand to-day if it fell into the hands of even a player of average skill. Perhaps a young violin needs gentler treatment than a seasoned one. But we may speculate ad infinitum and string together theories—a fascinating game—some of which may contain just a grain of truth. Mr. Morris does well to dismiss all such theories with short and pithy comment. They are matter for the curious and the gossip—not for the genuine inquirer. It is pleasant to think of Stradivari in connection with the music of the spheres, but such thoughts will not speed along the maker in his workshop.

To the workshop we must go to learn whatever is to be learnt about the great art of fiddle-making. Part II. of Mr. Morris's volume takes us through all the workshops in England past and present to meet good workmen and indifferent workmen—men whose claim to inclusion in such a record rests on hearsay, and men whose name will long be honoured as it is honoured to-day. This is the most important section of the work, for it contains in compact form much and reliable information—the result of long and careful research. We pass in review the great makers. Thus we have Forster, a contemporary of Dr. Burney—Burney, who nearly became Dr. Johnson's biographer, and would have robbed Boswell of his glory; (if there is something of Johnsonian probity in the exemplary life of the great historian of music there is a touch of native pride and honesty in Forster's refusal to pass off new instruments as 'old masters' while others felt no scruple in so doing); Banks, who worked under the shadow of Salisbury Cathedral, far from the noise and bustle of the capital, and produced work bearing the stamp of that tense concentration which is the mark of genius; and Duke, third of the great trio of English 18th century makers. And if neither of these equalled the best of the Italians, no country except Italy has three names to put by the side of them. To recall violin makers naturally brings to mind some of the players—their contemporaries, known and unknown—John Collett, composer of a Sonata which in its sparkling vitality and delightful freshness stands without parallel amongst the music of the time, Humphreys, and Thomas Vincent. What relations were there between makers and players? Did the performer appreciate the work of the maker? What society did they live in, and what was the small talk? These are among the questions which perhaps some day the historian will answer for us. The evidence points to an activity which is but imperfectly appreciated to-day.

The makers immediately preceding our own contemporaries are of interest in that they show us that the art of violin-making flourishes and takes root wherever music achieves a certain importance in the social life of the community. There are many names in this Dictionary of contemporary Scottish makers because the Scottish Orchestra upholds in the North the high traditions of English orchestral playing. Many makers are to be found at Manchester, home of the Hallé Orchestra. It is not an uncommon thing, passing along the unlovely streets of that great, industrial city, to see in a window violins which would be the pride of a Bond Street exhibition-room. The Chanoit establishment at Manchester lies close to the noisiest and darkest spots of a noisy and dark city—yet its work is valued wherever the distinction between the art and trade of violin-making is appreciated. Truly the place does not make the man, nor does the place make the fiddle, in spite of little Cremona.

* London: Robert Scott.

By the side of the violin makers are found inevitably the bow makers, whose art is not less fascinating and legendary than that of the former. If there is a mystery about Stradivari so there is about Tourte. Why is it that although Vicheron at Paris and Weicholtz at Dresden have made some excellent bows neither can rival Tourte? The phenomenon exists under our very eyes in London to-day, for the bows of Tubbs are—apart from the Tourte bows—the best of all that have come within notice of the present writer. The description Mr. Morris gives of a visit to Mr. Tubbs's is worth quoting :

The enthusiast or scribbler who enters the little shop with the intention of 'drawing' its occupant is certain to go away a disappointed man. Tubbs is invulnerable, and criticism or praise are equally lost upon him. On one point only is it possible to arouse his susceptibility. If you confuse his name with that of any other bow maker of the name of Tubbs, you are likely to drop in for a warm time of it. He is a 'character,' is James Tubbs. He is a man of the good old school, plain, simple, straightforward, with a rather crusty exterior, but with a solid heart and plenty of sober sense. He is very different from the typical business man of to-day, who is essentially a man of the world.

So far Mr. Morris. Well, one somehow imagines all great workmen to have resembled in varying degree the picture the author has drawn of James Tubbs. The best work is never done in the limelight. And perhaps the explanation of the great mystery of violin making and bow making lies in the fact that, like music itself, it is first of all Art—then science ; and that success depends more on genius than on actual knowledge of facts and scholarship. The first writer of epic poetry found many imitators, a very few of them gifted with a power equal to his own, and in a similar way the work of Stradivari and Amati has been imitated. In spite of the advance of science we seem, on the whole, to have gone further away from that ideal because, like epic poetry, Stradivari fiddles need a kind of cerebral activity rarer now than it once was.

A PEEP AT PEPUSCH

BY MURIEL SILBURN

The recent revival of the 'Beggars Opera' recalls the half-forgotten name of John Christopher Pepusch, who so successfully arranged and scored the airs of this work, which enjoyed such popularity for a remarkably long period. Pepusch was the son of a poor Protestant minister, and was born at Berlin about 1667. A natural musical gift triumphing over poverty enabled the youth to take an appointment at the Prussian Court at the age of fourteen. Some sixteen years later Pepusch decided to abandon his native land. One reason given for this desertion—in the light of recent events—appears so in keeping, that one is tempted to say si non è vero è ben trovato. The story runs that the musician witnessed an act of barbarous despotism and cruelty committed by the king, which made Pepusch vow he would seek a country 'where human life was not in danger of destruction by the unbridled will of an individual.'

Holland was the emigrant's first choice, but he came to England about 1700, and there remained for the rest of his days. He appears to have quickly secured an appointment in the orchestra of Drury Lane Theatre, first as a violinist, then as accompanist and composer. About 1710 the Academy of Antient Music came into existence, and Pepusch was a prime mover in this association, in which he took a keen interest all his life. The greater part of his library he bequeathed to the Academy, which came to an end in 1792. In 1712, the Duke of Chandos (the musical Mæcenas of his day) appointed Pepusch organist and composer to his chapel at Canons. Although a capable and talented musician, Pepusch apparently lacked the supreme fire of genius : at any rate his contemporary, racy Mrs. Delany, declared his music was 'very humdrum.' Whether the Duke agreed with the lady we are not informed ; we know only that Pepusch was displaced by Handel at Canons in 1718. Time's inexorable whirligig went on twirling till in 1727 it brought the 'Beggars Opera,' which took London by storm and spelt disaster to Handel and his operas. Handel fought a losing fight bravely, and when his 'Royal Academy' was forced to close its doors he set out on a Continental tour with the object of procuring new singers. When Handel's fresh vocalists and his opera 'Lotario' failed to achieve success, Mrs. Delany indignantly protested against the 'vile taste of the town. They love nothing but minuets and ballads ; in short, the "Beggars Opera" and "Hurlothrumbo" are only worthy of applause.' The first-named work, and its innumerable successors, revolutionized musical taste, serious music became a drug on the market, and Handel's defeat—at least for a time—was accomplished. Pepusch occupied the post of musical director at Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre for many years, and in this capacity wrote several Masques. In 1724 he set out for the Bermudas with the intention of founding a college, but shipwreck damping his ardour, he returned to England.

When a certain Italian singer named Margarita de l'Epine appeared in this country, in company with a German musician, the wits of the day called the lady 'Greber's Peg.' She was a brilliant vocalist and an excellent musician. Her exertions were rewarded by considerable pecuniary results, for she brought to Pepusch a dowry of £10,000 on their marriage about 1718. From all contemporary descriptions, Margarita was far from being beautiful : this probably accounts for the fact that no portrait of her exists. According to Dr. Burney, Pepusch was in the habit of calling his wife 'Hecate,' in reference to her swarthy and unattractive appearance. Such marital playfulness, though not in the best of taste, might be excusable, but Swift's rudeness is less pardonable. In his 'Journal to Stella' he writes of going to hear 'Margarita and her sister and another drab !'

In 1730 appeared an anonymous 'Treatise on Harmony,' supposed to have been written by Pepusch's pupil, the Earl of Abercorn. As it contained the rules taught by Pepusch, he adopted the work and published a second edition, with the necessary additions, in 1731. An appointment as organist to the Charter House in 1737 filled the remainder of Pepusch's days, and he died in 1752, pre-deceased by his wife and only son. He was a fairly prolific composer, and wrote numerous sonatas, concertos, masques, odes, &c., but his only claim to remembrance in modern days lies in his share in the work of the 'Beggars Opera.'

NEW LIGHT ON EARLY TUDOR COMPOSERS

BY W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD

XIII.—THOMAS FARTHING

In the valuable list of old English composers printed by Morley, in 1597, as an Addendum to his 'Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practical Musicke,' appears the name of Farthing. Many specimens of Farthing's powers as a composer have survived, and one of them, 'In May,' is quoted by Dr. Ernest Walker in his 'History of Music in England' (1907). Yet, strange to say, up to the present no musical historian has attempted to lift the veil which hid the identity of this early Tudor composer. Not even a fairly approximate date had been furnished for the period of his musical activities, save merely a haphazard statement that he probably flourished 'under Henry VII. and Henry VIII.'—a period of sixty-two years—rather vague, indeed. As to his personality not a hint has previously been given. Hence it is with special pleasure I present the following definite information regarding the composer of 'In May,' 'The thought within my breast,' 'With sorrowful eyes,' 'I love truly,' and a nameless three-part piece. The four last-named are in the British Museum (Add. MS. 31,922).

Thomas Farthing (the name is variously written Farding and Farthyng) was born circa 1475, and in 1508 we first meet with him as a singer in the chapel of the Countess of Richmond and Derby, the mother of King Henry VII. On the decease of this noble and philanthropic lady we find that she bequeathed annuities to her retainers, including Hugh Aston,* Thomas Farthing, and others. Late in the following year (1509) Farthing was given a post as Gentleman of the Chapel Royal under William Cornish; and his name appears among those who received mourning livery for the funeral of Prince Henry, who died on February 22, 1511.

On July 8, 1511, Thomas Farthing had confirmation from King Henry VIII. of the annuity of ten marks which had been bequeathed to him by the Countess of Richmond and Derby, and in this document (printed in the 'Calendar of Letters and Papers of Henry VIII.') his name appears as 'Thomas Farding, Gentleman of the King's Chapel.' He took part in the various Masques and Disguisings played at Court during the years 1511 and 1512, and he accompanied King Henry VIII. to France in June, 1513, as one of the Chapel Royal, taking part in the magnificent choral services at Théroutanne, Lille, and Tournai in September of that year.

The name of Thomas Farthing appears as a singing-man among the list of the Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal who took part in the gorgeous pageants at the Field of Cloth of Gold,† in June, 1520, along with William Cornish as Master of the Choristers, and Dr. John Clerk as Dean of the Chapel Royal. Farthing's friend, Dr. Richard Pace, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, preached a Latin oration on this memorable occasion at the Val Doré, ever since known as 'Champ du Drap d'Or.'

In recognition of Farthing's services as a composer and singer, King Henry VIII. granted him a fine mansion house at East Greenwich on condition of a fine to the outgoing tenant, Thomas Ritter. The date of the grant is November 21, 1520, and the précis of the document is as follows:

1520. 21 Nov. Grant to Thomas Fardying, Gentleman of the Chapel Royal, and his heirs for ever, by the service of a red rose, if it be asked, of a Tenement in East Greenwich, formerly in the tenure of Robert Johns, and lately of Thomas Ritter, gent. usher of the Chamber, who has compounded with Fardying.

We next find a notice of Farthing as having taken part in the Revels at Greenwich on December 9, 1520, an entertainment at which John Heywood also assisted; but it was Farthing's last appearance in public. Three days later he was seized with illness, and his death occurred quite suddenly on December 12, 1520, at his house at East Greenwich.

It is of interest to note that the annuity of ten marks which Farthing had enjoyed from 1509 to 1520 was allotted to another Court musician, John Heywood, named above, then rising in favour. The official grant was dated February 4, 1521, and the Letters Patent may be summarised as follows: 'John Heywood, the King's servant, is to have the annuity of ten marks, as held by Thomas Farthing, deceased.'

No doubt many of the compositions of Farthing are regarded as crude, but there is a good vein of melody running through them, and it must be remembered that his creative period was between the years 1500 and 1518. Although he cannot be rated as highly as his contemporary, Fayrfax, who died in October, 1521, it is, of course, probable that much of the music by Farthing—now, alas! lost or undiscovered—may have contained beauties equal to those of Fayrfax, Browne, Dygon, Chard, Pigott, Ashwell, Hyllary, Davy, Alcock, Jones, and Whitbrook. Yet this is but speculation. As for his biography, the only known facts are those contained in the present article, mainly based on the monumental 'Calendar of Letters and Papers of Henry VIII.'

MARCEL DUPRÉ: THE MAN AND HIS MUSIC

It is said, we know not with what truth, that during a private visit recently paid to this country by M. Marcel Dupré, a famous English teacher of the organ told his pupils that they might as well go out of the business now that M. Dupré had arrived. Probably M. Dupré would be the last person in the world to agree with such a statement, for after attending a number of English services in September, 1920, for the first time in his life, he spoke in the highest terms of the organ-playing which he heard in this country. He was particularly impressed by the fact that in a great Cathedral like St. Paul's the accompaniments to the choral parts of the service were played on the 'grand organ' by no less a person than the grand organist himself, and he greatly admired the restraint with which the wonderful instrument was handled until its own moment arrived at the end of the service.

It may be desirable to remind some of our readers that in every considerable church both at Paris and elsewhere in France there are two organs. One of these is a smallish instrument placed near the choir-stalls on which the maître de chapelle accompanies the singing of his choir. The other is a much larger instrument, placed at the west end of the building.

* An account of Hugh Aston was given in the Musical Times for February, 1920.

† For an account of this pageant see Musical Times for June, 1920.

upon which the 'grand organist' plays voluntaries, interludes, and—the French are themselves responsible for the term—interruptions! This arrangement is responsible in some measure for many of the distinctive traditions of French organ-playing. It relieves an instrumental executant from the labours of choir training and choir accompaniment, and relegates those branches of the art to a specialist. It attaches to every great church a solo organist of the calibre of Widor, Guilmant, or Vierne, whose executive abilities find an outlet in the shape of improvisations, versets, and symphonic interludes which form a part of the regular order of service on Sundays and great days, and which are much appreciated by the worshippers.

It must be borne in mind that the grand organist of a great French church does not 'fill in' at random.

as it is in Palestrina's vocal 'versets.' This explains the raison d'être of a great deal of French organ music. It is founded upon plainchant themes not because of any poverty of ideas on the part of the composer, but because it is intended to be used in the manner described above.

Turning to the subject of this article, it may be said at once that M. Marcel Dupré at the age of thirty-four can boast of as long an experience as a church organist as many of us of riper years. Born in 1886, M. Dupré began his musical studies seriously at the age of seven, and a year later was able to play Bach's Prelude and Fugue in E minor (Book 3, No. 9, in the Peters Edition) sufficiently well to win the approval of Guilmant. In 1898, when twelve years old, he became grand organist of St. Vivien at Rouen, and at the inauguration of the new organ at that

MARCEL DUPRÉ AT THE GRAND ORGAN, NOTRE DAME, PARIS

He 'interrupts' to some purpose and in accordance with long and inflexible tradition. For instance, at the Office of Vespers, five psalms are sung in the choir, each psalm having its own antiphon. The liturgical chanters sing the antiphon at the beginning of each psalm, and then sing the psalm itself, both antiphon and psalm being sung in plainsong and accompanied on the small organ. But as soon as the psalm is finished the grand organ plays the antiphon as a solo piece, and although this organ 'verset' may be an extended composition on quite modern lines, it never forgets the traditional plainchant theme of the antiphon-melody which it represents. Similarly, the alternate verses of the plainsong office hymn are not sung in the choir, but are played on the grand organ. They may be, and often are, played in a free style, but the plainchant is there all the time just as truly church, Guilmant insisted that the youthful prodigy should appear in public at his side. Three years later M. Dupré's Biblical oratorio 'Jacob's Dream' was performed at Rouen by the choral society conducted by his father. In 1905 he took the first prize for pianoforte playing at the Paris Conservatoire by an admirable performance of Chopin's second Ballade and Saint-Saëns's Toccata from the 'Egyptian Concerto.' M. Dupré's crowning achievement was reached in 1914, when, at the age of twenty-eight, he won the Grand Prix de Rome for musical composition with his lyrical scene 'Psyche.' Since 1916 he has been acting as grand organist of the Cathedral of Notre Dame at Paris, in the absence, through serious and prolonged illness, of his old friend M. Louis Vierne.

In the early part of the present year M. Dupré gave a series of ten recitals of the organ works of Bach at the Paris Conservatoire, at the request of the Minister of Fine Arts. In the course of these recitals he performed the unprecedented feat of playing from memory the two hundred odd organ works of the great master, including the sonatas, chorale-preludes, and the less known compositions.

At the last of these recitals, given before a distinguished audience which included members of the Institute of France, many distinguished French musicians and the professors of the Conservatoire, M. Widor addressed the company, concluding with these words: 'We must all regret, my dear Dupré, the absence from our midst of the person whose name is foremost in our thoughts to-day—the great John Sebastian himself. Rest assured that if he had been here he would have embraced you and pressed you to his heart.'

B.

Occasional Notes

In these columns and elsewhere in the musical press the need for decentralisation in London music has often been urged. We are glad to see that more and more steps are being taken in the direction of giving concerts of what may be called West-End quality elsewhere than in that over-favoured (and not too appreciative) locality. The latest effort is being made by a new organization—The Decentralisation of Music Committee—the founder and moving spirit of which is Captain C. à Beckett Williams, backed up by an advisory board that includes Lady Cooper (the Lady Mayoress), Messrs. Adrian C. Boult, Harold Samuel, F. Gilbert Webb, and Dr. Arthur Somervell. Mr. Philip Ashbrooke, 20, Old Cavendish Street, is the concert secretary. The committee is making a start by giving concerts at Town Halls in and round outer London. The first three are announced to take place at Fulham Town Hall on Sundays, November 21, December 5 and 19, at 7.45, and it is hoped the results will justify a large extension of activities. For the first concert Mr. Mark Hambourg and other well-known performers were engaged. We shall watch the movement with interest, and with cordial wishes for its success.

The Thursday recitals at Westminster Abbey, in aid of the Restoration Fund, are drawing great crowds. Recitals will be given on December 2, 9, and 16. It is fitting that Sir Frederick Bridge should return to the organ bench to do his bit for such an object, so he will play on December 16; Mr. Ben Davies will sing. Mr. E. T. Cook, of Southwark Cathedral, will be at the keyboard on December 2. The player for the following week is not decided at the time of writing.

We are glad to learn that the Worcester Festival, so far from being the financial failure anticipated by a good many, produced a balance on the right side—a notable fact, in view of the enormously increased expenses. These were about £4,500, and the receipts amounted to £5,868. After deductions for the reserve fund, the clergy charities receive the balance of £588.

The withdrawal of Mr. Herbert Howells' Quintet from the London Chamber Concerts Society's programme at Wigmore Hall, on November 2, has led to a good deal of discussion. As many of our readers know, the rights in the work had been acquired by Mr. Oscar Street, a fact of which the intending players were unaware until the rehearsal stage was well advanced. They were then informed by Mr. Street that permission to perform the work would be contingent on (a) the acknowledgment of his rights on the printed programmes and (b) his presence at rehearsals. The performers (the Philharmonic Quartet) agreed readily to (a) but said 'no' to (b), with the result that Mr. Street demanded the return of the parts. It has been suggested that Mr. Howells' work has thus received an exceptionally good advertisement. But surely the best type of advertisement for a composition is public performance. If Mr. Street can stop one performance, he can stop all, in which case the excellence of this method of advertising is not apparent. So large a proportion of modern chamber works are the result of commissions and competitions, that the question calls for speedy settlement. Our composers will be wary and chary of writing works under conditions that apparently give the patron the right to forbid the bands, so to speak.

An event of great interest to organists and church musicians will take place in the Royal Albert Hall on December 9 at 8 p.m., when M. Marcel Dupré, a famous French organist, will give a recital, assisted by the London Gregorian Association. He will play Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, d'Aquin's 'Noel' with variations, the first movement of Widor's fifth Symphony, his own Prelude and Fugue in G minor, and a series of pieces now in the press. He will also improvise interludes between verses of psalms and hymns sung by the choir. The concert is in aid of the funds of the Officers' Association.

At a meeting of past and present members of the Royal College of Music, on November 18, it was unanimously decided that the proposed memorial to Sir Hubert Parry should take the form of a reading-room, study, and reference library, to be known as the Parry Room. We can imagine no more fitting memorial to one who so consistently urged on musicians the importance of reading. Miss Emily Daymond was appointed hon. treasurer, and Mr. H. C. Colles hon. secretary.

The Board of Trinity College, Dublin, has elected Dr. C. H. Kitson (late organist of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, and Professor of Music in University College, Dublin) as Professor of Music in Dublin University, in succession to Dr. P. C. Buck, resigned.

As we go to press we learn that Musical News has been acquired by Messrs. Curwen, who will combine it with the Musical Herald, and issue it as a weekly under the title Musical News and Herald. Mr. Edwin Evans has been appointed editor. Congratulations and best wishes! If the journal is not an unqualified success we shall be surprised.

Owing to unusual calls on our space, we are compelled to hold over reviews of new books and music, a good deal of correspondence, and the Gramophone Notes.

THE CARILLONS OF BELGIUM: SOME RECENT IMPRESSIONS

By W. A. ROBERTS

Visitors to Belgium this summer cannot fail to have been impressed by the immense activity and ant-like industry of a resourceful people in repairing the havoc wrought upon their country by the unspeakable Hun. It is an object-lesson for our disgruntled work-people in England at the present time, who moreover were spared the horrors and indignity of an enemy occupation of their country. While so much wanton destruction was done in Belgium, where stories of individual suffering and hardship are to be heard on every hand, it is a relief to bell-lovers to find that comparatively little damage had been sustained by the carillons which for long ages have been such a feature of daily life in the Low Countries. Of course, the Belgian carillons and bell-towers did not entirely escape. Those of Louvain, Termonde, Dixmude, Nieuport, Ypres, and Thourout were destroyed in the bombardments, but the principal carillons at Malines, Bruges, Ghent, and Antwerp are practically uninjured, although the 'frozen music' of the great tower of St. Rombold's at Malines with its four hundred steps—and forty-five bells by Van den Gheyn, Dumery, and Hemony—has its shell-scars to show.

If the bell-towers had been dismantled by the Germans to re-cast into war-material the big bell, 'Salvator,' at Malines, would have given them nine tons of metal, and the famous cracked 'Roland' at Ghent, made in 1314 and re-cast in 1659, would have furnished six tons, while at Bruges big 'Melchior,' the bourdon bell, together with the forty-eight chiming bells, would have added thirty-three tons of good metal, excluding the copper tambour or drum which weighs nearly another nine tons. Such a conversion of bells would indeed only have resembled the fate of many Belgian carillons during the French revolutionary period. At Bruges, all the Huns did in the belfry was wantonly to destroy the wires and connections between the clavier and the bells, which were soon restored.

The carillon concerts are now, as formerly, among the great attractions of these delightful old Flemish towns—notably, of course, those at Malines, where the carillon is specially remarkable for the brilliance of its smaller bells. Here the Belgian master-carillonneur, M. Jef Denyn, Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, displays extraordinary dexterity in manipulation, as for example in the fantasia on Verdi's 'Ernani,' with which he commenced his recital at nine o'clock on a recent Monday evening. Not only can he produce a rippling cascade of bell-tone in cadenzas almost as rapidly played as by a pianist, but his virtuosity as the 'Liszt of the bells' is guided by true musical feeling and expression in simple pieces, and especially in old Flemish and French folk-tunes and carols.

But old English melodies are similarly arresting and delightful, and one evening at Bruges, when the carillon rang out Arne's 'Rule, Britannia' with spirit and decision, it thrilled the hearts of British hearers, who included one notable personage in Sir Henry Newbolt, author of 'Drake's Drum' and many another stirring naval lyric.

Upon the famous Dumery bells at Bruges—which, taken as a whole, give the impression of a juster tonality than those of Malines—a young player, M. Antony Nauwelaerts, is making a great name as an expert carillonneur. Like M. Denyn, his talent is hereditary, but he differs from the great Malines artist in making less play with the small bells, his speciality seeming to lie in giving prominence to the middle and lower bells, upon which his firm and nervous touch produces full and ringing tones. It has to be done with judgment, of course, for the harmonics of deeper-toned bells are less negligible than those of the trebles, but one finely-effective example of Nauwelaerts's arrangements is that of Benoit's 'Rubens' March, where in the Trio the bass bells ring out the typical carillon figure of four descending notes with majestic solemnity. Far less effective was the arrangement of the same music played by the Antwerp clock-mechanism.

The carillon at Antwerp falls little, if anything, behind the famous examples at Malines and Bruges. Its great height renders the tone of the bells remote and etherially beautiful, so that during the statutory evening concerts of an hour's duration, from 9.0 to 10.0 o'clock, the compulsory stoppage of all traffic near the Cathedral is absolutely necessary. Here the carillon of forty-seven bells includes thirty-six by F. and P. Hemony (1655), three by Joris Dumery (1767), and the seven smallest by van Aerschodt (1904); and an example of the imperishable qualities of good bell-metal is given in the heaviest bell with its rhymed inscription, showing that it was founded in 1459. The carillonneur at Antwerp is the organist of the Cathedral, M. Brees, who in this latter capacity has succeeded to the post held in 1628 by our own Dr. John Bull, whose harpsichord by Ruckers, the famous Antwerp maker, can be seen in the Steen Museum, a stone's-throw from the Cathedral. At the present time Ghent has no official carillonneur.

From time to time, visits to the first-class carillons are paid by the leading bell-masters, so that on a recent occasion at Antwerp it was our fortune again to hear M. Nauwelaerts, of Bruges, who gave a masterly performance, several items in his programme being loudly applauded by the assembled crowd, who listened with whole-hearted attention. It might be that the tender old Flemish tunes, played so intimately and artistically, awakened memories, but there could be no mistake about the appreciation and applause of the Antwerp crowd—although this could not be heard by the performer seated up aloft in his belfry among the stars. In addition to popular melodies, M. Nauwelaerts gave proof of his great executive skill in such diverse music as a fantasia on 'Les Cloches de Corneville' and the Adagio from the 'Sonata Pathétique'—which was indeed exceptionally pathetic in being spoiled by the braying of a military band marching with soldiers across the Place Verte, and disappearing into the darkness. The gendarme on duty, who had in several cases stopped or diverted the traffic, did not interfere in this instance, evidently not feeling equal to tackling a commando.

In 1773 Dr. Burney wrote that in his opinion carillons were of no genuine musical importance. He was probably right in such a conclusion, considering the primitive actions and unsatisfactory bell-tunings of that day. It was difficult to get satisfactory results with bells cast at different periods by different founders who had never heard of Mr. Starmer's dictum that a bell must be in tune with itself before it can be in tune with others. Even in the best Belgian carillons of to-day there are instances of bells not sounding exactly in tune when tested in chords. Far nearer to perfection in all respects is the great carillon of forty-two modern English bells at Queenstown. The Belgian carillons certainly have their limitations, but they are rich in associations quite apart from merely scientific tests in tonality. They are bound up with the lives of the people; they have sounded day by day, year by year, and century after century. The step of time has marched to their melodies for generation after generation in the panorama of day and night. Their subtle influence has affected the lives of myriads whose comings and goings have been timed by these insistent measurements of the passing hours.

As Mr. Belloc finely puts it, their continual music renders the air sacred, and fills it with something so akin to an uplifted silence as to leave one—after passing from their influence—asking what balm it was that lulled the city's harshnesses and discords. And now when such unmistakable interest is being taken in carillons in England, and also in America, surely no more splendid war-memorial could be erected than a carillon of perfectly-tuned English bells.

A NEW FRENCH REVIEW

The handsome appearance of the new *Revue Musicale and the good reading within are welcome signs of the recovery of French musical journalism which the war had drained to a low ebb. The new review fills the place and carries on the tradition of the ante-bellum Bulletin of the French section of the defunct International Musical Society, whose editor, Jules Ecorcheville, fell in action.

M. André Pirro begins a learned study of Louis Couperin (uncle of 'the great' Couperin), some little harpsichord pieces of whom, taken from MSS. in the French National Library, are printed in a supplement. M. Pirro stresses the influence of the lutenists in that great musical revolution associated with the name of Monteverde, and in the nature of 17th century keyboard music. The technique of the lute—which was the amateur's instrument, the banjo, almost the mouth-organ of the time—was all opposed to polyphony and all in favour of accompanying chords and broken, evaporating arpeggios. In L. Couperin's harpsichord music both the liberty of cadence in the preludes and a certain formation of themes—or rather a certain absence of themes—derive from the lutenists. Thus all the beginnings and some endings of his sarabandes exist only by a diversity of harmonies without any melodic feature.

'A musician by instinct [says M. Pirro] he was bound to be attracted to these lutenist composers who had no need of any learning to write. Theory weighed even less with them than with the wandering fiddlers (ménétriers). The latter bowed the neck to polyphony, respecting the rules as best they could, till such time as they were tied in an inextricable knot which would be solved by a stroke of ignorant audacity. They did not depart from a given number of threads in their texture—as many as their "Symphony" had voices. The lutenist held to no such fidelity in the concurrent lines. To unravel with a fair continuity the main thread of his composition sufficed him, and what floats around is only the dust of harmony. Thus are many difficulties resolved. The hardest thing about lute-playing was to tune the instrument, but once the strings were rightly taut the sounds combined as though of their own accord. For that matter some pieces were so favourably contrived that almost without moving the fingers any beginner could soon equal that monkey of Mlle. Coinet (mentioned by Voiture and Tallemant), which played a saraband on a guitar—with only one mistake, but that an incorrigible one. So easy was the apprenticeship that for many in the 17th century music was the lute and nothing more. Its vogue was universal.'

A brilliant article by M. Maurice Barrès pleads for 'pleasure in music.' Let us by all means worship the sublime in music—Beethoven, Wagner; and the sublime should be worshipped in appropriate temples. But down with the pseudo-sublime and all that desert region of boring music which lies between the true sublime on the one hand and the enlivening, the agreeable on the other. M. Claude Laforêt writes on Albéric Magnard, the composer of lofty symphonies and operas, who was murdered by the invading Germans in 1914.

An account of music in England comes rather unluckily from a writer who has little good to say for any of us excepting Mr. Eugene Goossens and Lord Berners (but the mood of the day in Paris is, 'Il ne faut songer qu'à la France'). He complains, with some justice, that English audiences applaud anything and everything, but extravagantly says that it is a common thing here for one and the same person to show an equal taste for 'sugary ballads,' the conservative imitators of Brahms, the 'everyday inspiration of Scriabinism and the tasty acidity of Stravinskyism'—and all this 'with no sense of incongruousness.'

Elsewhere an article laments that just the opposite obtains in the musical life of Paris:

'It is nothing but clans, sects, and coteries. Rare, indeed, are those who, keeping a preference for one of the musical parties, are willing to recognise any interest in tendencies antipathetic to them. For musicians of different schools to despise one another mutually is in no wise surprising—it has always been thus;—but for the public to share in these passions is absurd. But to-day a critic cannot declare his admiration for d'Indy, his love for Debussy and Ravel, and his interest in the "new young men," without appearing to lack sincerity.'

R. C.

THE ART OF TEACHING SINGING

'A great deal of discussion is constantly taking place about the art of teaching singing, but hitherto it has generally been conducted by men, and in view of their activities, and remembering that the majority of singers and teachers of singing are women, it seems to me to be desirable that the subject should be threshed out from the woman's point of view.'

Thus, by way of introduction, writes Madame Larkcom in her new book on singing,* and then proceeds to do the threshing-out in a most able and interesting manner.

* La Revue Musicale. No. 1, November, 1920. Paris: 35 Rue Madame. 5 francs monthly

* 'The Singer's Art.' By Agnes J. Larkcom. No. 92, Novello's Music Primers and Educational Series.

Madame Larkcom presents her views in simple, direct language, and wisely refrains from encumbering her pages with needlessly abstruse phraseology. We are told in the Preface that this little volume is the outcome of a series of articles originally written for and read to the singers' class of the Society of Women Musicians. They were primarily addressed to women teachers, and are chiefly, though not entirely, concerned with the training of female voices. In response to many requests they have been collected and revised, and 'are now offered in the hope that their contents may be useful to young teachers of singing, particularly those who lack opportunities for discussing the many problems connected with the art of teaching singing.'

The subject is discussed under the following heads: The Art of Teaching Singing—Breathing—Training the medium voice—Registers—Resonance—Expression and diction—Recitative—The educational value of vocal music.

The author makes it clear from the outset that she has no sympathy with the mere dabbler in the art. In considering the qualifications necessary for a singer, stress is rightly laid on character, which is defined as the possession of the qualities of patience, perseverance, industry, self-control, and joy in overcoming difficulties which takes the pupil so quickly along the path of progress. . . . I often think [continues the writer] that 'character' is rarer than intelligence. So many students are clever, but flippant; they cannot, or will not, see the necessity for practice. They forget their breathing exercises, laugh at their diction exercises, and demand silly little songs or ragtime ditties, instead of trying to understand beautiful music!

With all of which most teachers will sorrowfully agree.

The student of singing is urged to aim at a high ideal—the power to 'express adequately by means of the human voice, used in conjunction with music, any or every kind of emotion.' This necessitates intelligent training, pursued patiently, methodically, and persistently. Most of the failures so frequently heard of:

the inability to endure the strain of modern vocal music, the harshness, tremulousness, and fatigue noticeable in so many voices—result from the want of sufficient technical training. Both students and teachers are in too great a hurry. . . . The training which will fit the student to become a fine and successful vocalist must deal first with the physical, and then in turn with the mental, æsthetic, and sympathetic aspects of the singer's art.

Teachers must not only possess a certain amount of knowledge of the structure of the vocal organs: their musical and general culture must also be of a high standard if they would deal successfully with every branch of the difficult art of singing. A really good teacher of singing needs a liberal supply of patience and intelligence: 'Experience is of course the great instructor, but do we not sometimes gain our experience at the expense of the pupil?' The delicate vocal organs may suffer irreparable harm at the hands of an ignorant teacher. In considering the difficulties confronting the teacher, and the dangers to which the pupil is exposed, the author thinks it would be a very fine thing if associations of experienced teachers and singers could be formed in every town and centre, who would meet together and consider the various subjects connected with the art of singing. By patient study and consultation the members of the association would probably arrive at some conclusions which all felt to be true, and on that basis could formulate some recommendations to young teachers which would perhaps assist the conscientious and enthusiastic beginner.

Suggestions are given for lectures and discussions on the subject.

Much advantage might result from meetings arranged for the purpose of studying the interpretation of standard works of art; the very indifferently understood subject of Recitative; the styles appropriate to different periods and nationalities, &c. Everyone will agree with the view that there is a great necessity for local effort for furthering the study of the art of music. We need much more decentralisation. The great joy of all artistic endeavour lies in the opportunity for producing something ourselves. We should develop our own resources, and not slavishly imitate the doings and methods of the great central schools and societies. They may have many ideas, but they often lack idealism: and it is the latter which beautifies the humblest effort and smoothes the way to the highest realms of art.

In summing up the requirements of the teacher, we are reminded that although one cannot be a good teacher without knowledge, it is quite possible to be very learned and yet fail to be able to impart. . . . The best of teaching comes from a ready perception of the pupil's needs, and rests fundamentally on sympathy, imagination, and intuition.

The chapter on breathing is full of valuable advice. The impression generally gathered from writers and teachers is, first, that there is some very mysterious way of breathing which is suitable for the singer only; and, secondly, that quantity of breath is the chief thing to be desired.

Madame Larkcom considers that neither of these views is correct:

In these days of splendidly free clothing for women, and active exercises for the young of both sexes, most healthy boys and girls will be found to breathe amply and correctly. It will be found that young people breathe downwards and outwards, and girls do not as a rule raise the shoulders and assume the aspect of pouter pigeons, as used frequently to be the case in the bad old days of tight corsets and small waists for women. . . . What the student lacks is not material, but skill in disposing of it to the best advantage. He needs to learn the value of economy of force, and the necessity for that muscular control which will enable him to give the almost endless variety of breath pressure that fine singing and good phrasing demand.

Objection is made to the exclusive use of nasal breathing when singing, on the ground that it takes a long time, is often a noisy process, and is apt to leave the tongue raised and the soft palate depressed.

In connection with this subject of breathing, reference is made to a committee—of which the author was a member—formed a few years ago as a result of a Conference on 'Voice and Speech Training,' convened by London University, and a report published in 1913 in the Lancet is reproduced.

A protest is made against the method of breathing advocated in certain circles which insists that the chest should be kept raised during the whole performance of the singer. The author considers this harmful, and quotes a letter in support of her opinion from a member of the above-mentioned committee.

In an admirable little chapter on training the medium voice the value of the exercises contained in Garcia's 'The Art of Singing' is pointed out, and their use strongly recommended. Madame Larkcom was herself a pupil of Garcia, and on the controversial subject of 'registers' she is content with setting forth in as simple language as possible the theory of registers as taught by that great master and life-long student.

Resonance is considered under the heads: The reinforcement of overtones—The resonators—The problem of vocal resonance—Taste in tone-quality—Physical obstruction (adenoids, enlarged tonsils, &c.)—The natural physical effects of the emotions—Intuition the highest gift of a singer.

On the supremely-important subjects of expression and diction, the reader will find much that is interesting and suggestive:

Words and musical signs are inadequate to convey all the meaning that lies behind the concrete signs and symbols. Only by insight and imagination can we ever hope to interpret the real meaning of great poets and musicians. . . . It is hopeless for the mean, limited, and coarse to think they can ever put before us the measure of the refined and lofty soul. . . . A fine artist interpreter may be considered to contain in himself the same kind of capacities for feeling and expression as those which animate the creative genius whose works he seeks to interpret. . . . It is pitiful to see the frivolous, pretty, uneducated singer or performer struggling with the masterpieces of art. . . . Imagination, character, and education are the first necessities for the student of really fine art, and we need not concern ourselves with the wants of those whose ambitions are satisfied with lower levels of achievement.

Again:

Words may be sung distinctly but not beautifully, beautifully but not distinctly, or both beautifully and distinctly but not expressively. . . . Clarity alone does not satisfy us. Words seem to have a life of their own. Every inflection of the voice affects their importance. . . . The colour of vowels should be varied, and different degrees of length and energy should be given to the consonants until they become the student's perfect and obedient servants.

The beauty of our own language is insisted upon:

Most of the faults met with in English singers' diction arise from a want of interest in and appreciation of the beauties of their own tongue that are quite characteristically British. Hence the common idea that English is difficult to sing.

Students and teachers whose views on the subject of Recitative are at all hazy—especially in the matter of the correct introduction and use of appoggiaturas—will find this form of declamatory singing fully and clearly dealt with. Especially valuable are the musical illustrations from Handel, Gluck, and Mozart, where the proper treatment of these appoggiaturas—with the reasons given—is practically illustrated.

In the final chapter on the educational value of vocal music, a strong plea is made for its more generous inclusion in future schemes of education. Lecture-recitals by really good singers should be given at intervals in schools and young people's clubs and institutes. In arranging programmes care would be taken that the songs should not only be simple and pretty enough to inspire the hearers with the desire to sing them themselves (which is the end in view), but also be those in which the words were of literary value, and beautiful in sound as well as in sense. . . . Such recitals will stimulate the love of vocal music, assist in a small degree in furthering a knowledge of English literature, and awaken an interest in the art of beautiful speech or diction, a part of English education which has been woefully neglected.

Listening to music, however beautiful and however well-performed, is nevertheless not enough in itself:

It is as necessary for the development of the musical sense that children and young persons should take part in making it, as it is good for them to play their games instead of merely looking on.

The writer deplores the tendency to relegate music to professional musicians:

A few to perform and thousands to listen is the ideal of the business manager. I would advocate just the opposite—as many as possible to perform, with only a few left out to criticise and applaud.

It will be gathered from what we have written and quoted that this little book contains much that is instructive and inspiring to both students and teachers of singing. The author is to be congratulated on a really valuable contribution to the literature of the subject.

G. G.

London Concerts

BY A. KALISCH

There have been many interesting and important orchestral concerts since the last issue, the Philharmonic Society and the London Symphony Orchestra having begun their seasons, with Mr. Albert Coates as the principal conductor of both.

First in order of time was the London Symphony Concert on November 1, at which there was not a vacant seat. The principal feature in the programme was the 'Scythian' Suite of Prokofiev, of which we had heard a great deal beforehand. It was a pity to have told us so emphatically in advance that we were going to be startled, because the human animal is perverse and prefers not to do as he is bidden. I do not think many people were surprised, but a great many were favourably impressed. Prokofiev is only twenty-eight now, and it is not to belittle him unduly to say that, in this Suite at any rate, he has not done much that Strauss, Debussy, Ravel, Scriabin, and Stravinsky have not done before. What he does he does very admirably, with a sense of certainty that augurs well. His great asset is the savage energy of his rhythm, which is really barbaric. At the same time I for one felt that in the 'Prince Igor' dances Borodin produces much the same effect with a far smaller expenditure of means. When Prokofiev tries to be poetical, as in the tone-picture of the 'Night on the Steppe,' he is simply cacophonous, and his lack of real melody is conspicuous. One felt almost compassion with the man in whose soul a beautiful summer night could produce only such distressful feelings. The close of the whole, representing a sunrise, is undoubtedly effective, but it somehow recalled the much more impressive opening of 'Zarathustra.' With all deductions made, however, this passage and the opening of the Suite are sufficient to stamp the composer as a man to be reckoned with.

(To digress for a moment, the impression made by the three pianoforte pieces of Prokofiev, played by M. Rubinstein at his recital on Armistice Day, was exactly the same.)

At this first L.S.O. concert M. Cortôt played Rachmaninov's fourth Pianoforte Concerto. It is an extraordinarily difficult work and very made, having a family likeness to the more third Concerto in that it is a mixture of real and specious rhetoric. In the earlier work a finer balance between the two: here the predominates. This is said to be the favourite, but a whole book might be composed of composers' erratic judgments of their beginning, of course, with Beethoven and 'Sonata.' M. Cortôt's playing was one of achievements both in respect of technical variety of colour, and magnetic vitality. He played a Bourrée of Saint-Saëns for alone, and here his technique was if anything remarkable still.

At the second concert of the London Orchestra, on November 15, Signor Liszt's 'Totentanz' with immense obvious enjoyment which he was communicate to the public. On being repeated part of it. It seems strange when it was new, solemn Respectability as blasphemous, and sensitive musicians hands in pious horror at a certain passage. At present the realism sounds but none the less the work still has a and in justice to Liszt we should strikingly new it all was at the time composed.

'THE PLANETS'

The concert was memorable for the performance of Mr. Gustav Holst's. It would be superfluous again to discuss remarkable work in detail. It is a gift to the taste of the public that at each received with greater enthusiasm. The immensely when rounded off by the 'Neptune the Mystic' (heard for the its ethereal ending, which presents human difficulty to the female chorus performance was remarkably fine, and Strauss's 'Don Juan' was also brilliant.

The principal feature of the series Kingsway concerts on October 30 was impeccably elegant and sensitive playing Concerto; and Mr. Hislop, the Scots had made his mark at Covent Garden in obtained an uproarious success by singing of operatic excerpts, which, he slightly out of keeping with the programme.

At the second of the Queen's Hall concerts, on October 23, the novelty was 'Le Festin de l'Araignée.' It is music evolved from Fabre's 'Studies of Insects' tells at considerable length how the spider flies and butterflies, behaving just like the Russian Ballet. It would doubtless effective with the stage. The diaphanous undoubtedly clever, but there is hardly substance in the music to keep the interest for so long without accessories. But it is understand why the music fascinates conductors was repeated by Mr. Albert Coates at the Philharmonic concert a week later, and I saw Toscanini is playing it all over America. At the same concert Miss Isolde Menges gave a strong yet sensitive performance of Brahms's Concerto.

layers of the time, and yet does not allow to become an end in itself. He has a critical individuality which, it cannot be sometimes in conflict with that of the one he is interpreting. This accounts for the very difference in the verdicts on his playing. He is a man, which oscillate between indictments and paeans welcoming a revelation. His Chopin is wildly romantic: his great piece was the F sharp minor Polonaise, which was an embodiment of the idea that the music presents a scene of knightly splendour. He played some pieces of Poulenc, one of the French composers which are quite pleasant, and was joined by Elaine Taillefer in a performance of two pieces written for two pianofortes called 'Open House'. They are really vivacious, and her use of the pianofortes is singularly able. She appeals to the individual writer of the group—mainly to the least self-conscious, and less oppressed by the sense of a mission. Her mannerism—which is becoming a little more of the unexpected ending.

Recitals have been given by M. de Busset which were described as farewells, then before a long tour, then simply as recitals by M. Cortôt. They drew overflowing houses. What is there to be said about them? The content of the other pianoforte recital (by M. de Busset) has been Signor Siloti, who is a great pianist with a somewhat undue fondness for arranging his own music he plays. Miss Irene Scharrer has given successful recitals; Miss Isabel Gray has given a recital at their recital for two pianofortes; and Samuel's playing of Friskin's notable Sonata was admirable. This Sonata has been taken down from the shelf oftener.

A FEW RECITALS

There have also been as the sands on the beach, Kochanzki and the charming pieces of Chopin which he played deserve special mention. There is much more than an antiquarian interest in Salmon's arrangements of forgotten music, and he plays it in a way that is difficult to make a selection from. It is difficult to make a selection from the names for mention. Madame Blanche has celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of her début on November 2; Madame Gervase Elwes have each bidden farewell before long tours; Dame Nellie Melba and Clara Butt have filled the Albert Hall; and the Blomfield has developed rapidly into a recital. Miss Dorothy Silk's programmes of old music are exceptionally interesting and instructive, and shows how to sing these compositions; Mr. Gervase Elwes, a young baritone, has made an excellent good impression. Where of chamber music we have had the elegant Flonzaley Quartet and the strongly Bohemian (now Czecho-Slovak). It is not that the Flonzaleys lack temperament or that the Bohemians fail in elegance, but the epithets describe the salient virtue of each. The Flonzaleys played the Quartet of Mr. C. Armstrong which once more shows that he is a composer to be watched. Though it is not strictly relevant it is worth mentioning here that the success of the Flonzaley String Quartet in the United States is remarkable. The American press is more enthusiastic than the critics have ever been here; and it is interesting that the writers emphasise the fact that the players have had the courage to dispense with preliminary puffs and have scored entirely on their merits.

The first concert of the London Chamber Concert Society was notable for the performance of Dr. Ethel Smyth's Quartet, which had not been heard for a long time. It deservedly made such an impression that it is not likely again to be so long neglected. A new Quintet by Herbert Howells was to have been performed at the same concert, and the reasons for its non-appearance deserve record. Mr. Oscar Street, the owner of the copyright, desired to be present at rehearsals. When the Philharmonic Quartet declared itself unable to accede to his request, he asked to have the parts returned to him. He writes saying that he has no desire to prevent performances of the work. On the contrary, he hopes to find many bodies of players willing to assent to his very modest suggestion. Will he find them? I hope so, for the sake of the composer, but I doubt it, for so far as I can gather players are unanimous in saying that the Philharmonic Quintet took the only possible course. That is certainly my own view.

The good impression made by the Meredyth Quartet should be recorded. A new organization for the performance of chamber music old and new, the music society has made a good start. Its performances take place at the St. John's Institute, Tufton Street, Westminster, at 5 p.m. on certain Tuesdays.

SOME NOTES FOR DECEMBER

Brahms's 'Requiem' will be given at Southwark Cathedral on the afternoon of December 11, this being one of the series of Festival performances there. On the same afternoon M. Cortôt gives a Liszt recital at Wigmore Hall, and Mr. Lamond a Beethoven recital at Queen's Hall. Madame Suggia plays and Signor Montesanto sings at the Kingsway Hall concert.

On December 4 M. Cortôt plays Beethoven's third Concerto and Debussy solos at Mr. Robert Newman's concert at Queen's Hall.

At the London Symphony Orchestra's concert on December 6, Vaughan Williams's 'London Symphony' will be played, and M. Kochanski plays Brahms's Violin Concerto. At the Philharmonic concert on December 16, Beethoven's 'Coriolan' Overture will be played, in commemoration of Beethoven, Arnold Bax's 'November Woods' will be produced, and the Philharmonic Choir sings unaccompanied music. The Symphony is Tchaikovsky's No. 5, and the conductors are Mr. Hamilton Harty and Mr. Kennedy Scott.

Opera in London

BY FRANCIS E. BARRETT

SOUTH LONDON EFFORT: A SUGGESTION

For the greater part of November one had to cross the Thames for any opera they, he, or she wished to hear. Only at the end—on November 22 to be exact—did Covent Garden open its doors for the Carl Rosa season. It has been a lean (operatic) month for London, and many will agree that it is time this was altered. Possibly it may be. When the Grand Syndicate gets back to work it may see its way to arranging for a winter as well as spring season of opera in English at Covent Garden. I have no doubt that the public is ready for properly constituted performances given under the direction of those who not only understand opera but are acquainted with the special requirements of its representation in the vernacular.

I fear that it is the want of such knowledge that has caused the new enterprise at the Surrey Theatre to come to grief. That the public of all kinds is ready for opera I have not the slightest doubt, but it is not wise to presuppose too much ignorance on its part or to imagine that anything will do. The company may be small, but it should be efficient. This efficiency in union with enthusiasm and determination to do the best has carried the day at the Old Vic. There opera has its place in a scheme that comprises a good deal. Its defect is that it is only sporadic. But what is done is done in a conscientious fashion that cannot fail to impress, and moreover there are people about the place who are strongly imbued with the right spirit of opera giving. It is something of a feat to include both Wagner's 'Tannhäuser' and Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro' in the same repertoire; while the absence of all partiality is shown by the fact that the season's operas include 'The Bohemian Girl,' 'Lohengrin,' 'Maritana,' and 'Tristan.' This is as it should be. The only stipulation I would lay down is that people who are making the acquaintance of opera for the first time should be cautioned not to begin with 'Tristan' or they may get a wrong conception of what opera means. As far as individual performances are concerned they are perfectly comprehensible. I liked the way in which 'The Marriage of Figaro' was given. It made it clear that the work is a comedy, and not a farce as its other version made it, and the music seemed to belong to it and to fit in with everything. In this performance Miss Muriel Gough, Miss Sarah Fischer, Miss Celia Turrill, and Mr. Clive Carey (the producer) especially distinguished themselves. Then the ever green 'Rigoletto' has been given with Miss Gough, Mr. Ben Morgan, and Mr. S. Harrison, and the operatic twins 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci' have made their appearance, Mr. John Clinto joining the company for the purpose.

One suggestion I should like to make for the betterment of the performances is in the matter of the orchestra. The force so ably directed by Mr. Charles Corri, though sufficient for Mozart, is not large enough for the works of later development. The orchestra is an essential factor in grand opera. The tyro is likely to get a wrong impression of things when he hears the Overture to 'Tannhäuser,' for example, played by a small band. Miss Baylis should call for volunteers for the orchestra. Strings are chiefly required. There should be no difficulty in finding fifteen or twenty amateur instrumentalists willing to give their services in so good a cause, to say nothing of the value the experience would be to them. Now that the undertaking has gained the good-will of the public who understand and appreciate its aims, there should be hearty co-operation from everyone who wishes well to music and desires its understanding by all classes of the community.

The W. W. Kimball prize of $100 offered by the Madrigal Club of Chicago for a mixed-voice setting of Marlowe's 'Come live with me and be my love' has been won by Mr. Samuel Richards Gaines.

Chamber Music for Amateurs.

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur chamber musicians who wish to get into touch with other players. We shall be glad if those making use of the scheme will let us know when their announcements have borne fruit. Failing such notice, advertisements will be inserted three times.

Players of all instruments, except pianoforte, are invited to join the St. Jude's Amateur Orchestra. Rehearsals are friendly, and not critical.—Mr. H. SEYMOUR, 2, Milton Road, Herne Hill, S.E. 24.

Lady pianist wishes to join trio or quartet for practice and concerts. Mortlake district.—E. L., c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist desires to join trio or quartet for practice of good music. Birmingham district.—B. S., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to form trio (violin, 'cello, and pianoforte) for the study of classical and modern works of moderate difficulty—e.g., Haydn's Trios. Monday or Thursday night, or Sunday.—W. M., 'St. Mary's,' Heathcote Street, Hull.

A few more string players are required for an amateur orchestra that has recently been formed at Bermondsey. Rehearsals on Fridays, at 8.0, in the Fort Road Institute, Bermondsey. Conductor, F. J. HUBBARD, 41, Trafalgar Road, S.E. 15.

Good 'cellist wanted for pianoforte trio.—Mrs. H. A. KERR, 15, Wickham Road, Brockley, S.E. 4.

Lady pianist would like to meet with 'cellist and violinist for practice with view to getting engagements.—MABELLE FREKE, c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist to form trio. Music of all schools. Leamington and Warwick district.—'Harmony,' c/o Musical Times.

Violinist, good sight-reader and sympathetic player, required to fill vacancy in quartet. Modern works, e.g., Ravel. Crouch End, N.—Mr. A. MARRIOTT, 32, Drayton Park, N. 5.

Violinist-pianist (young lady) would like to meet advanced or fairly-advanced violinist-pianist (either lady or gentleman) for interchange of practice at Nottingham. Any morning or Thursday evenings.—Miss POOL, 53, Sneinton Road, Nottingham.

Lady viola player seeks practice with chamber music or orchestral players. Streatham or neighbourhood preferred, or could arrange West End if on Monday or Tuesday afternoon.—'OMEGA,' c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (male) wishes to meet others to form a trio or quartet party for mutual practice of classical works. North London district.—'ENSEMBLE,' c/o Musical Times.

Violinist and 'cellist wanted for a good amateur concert to be given shortly.—S. W. HIBBS, 3, Denholme Road, Maida Hill, W. 9.

Dr. Harold E. Watts's anthem provides for some well-contrasted effects. The quiet opening section is mainly for voices alone. Some vigorous unison phrases for 'It is Thou, Lord, only,' with which is associated a strongly-marked alla marcia theme on the organ, are followed in their turn by a short section (meno mosso e dolce), 'Happy are the people.' A reference to the opening section closes the work. Dr. Watts writes easily and gratefully for the voices, and his treatment of the organ part, which contains some happy touches, is always interesting. The anthem is not difficult.

The various hymn-festivals conducted within recent times by some of our leading Church musicians have demonstrated in a striking manner that the singing of the hymns in our churches may be a really inspiring affair instead of the dull, listless performance so commonly met with. Even with a fully-equipped choir the effect of continuous singing in harmony tends to monotony. In the case of choirs of more modest pretensions the effect is, of course, even less satisfactory. Everyone knows the relief afforded by an occasional verse in unison, or in harmony unaccompanied. Within recent years another method of introducing variety has come into use which should assist materially in making our hymn-singing one of the most uplifting parts of our Church services. This is the revival, and the adaptation to our modern hymn-tunes, of the mediæval arts of Descant and Faux-Bourdon. The distinction between the two methods, as Dr. Alan Gray puts it in the Preface to his 'Book of Descants,' may be taken to be 'that in Descant a certain number of treble voices have an independent part, while the other voices sing the tune; in Faux-Bourdon the tune is placed in the tenor, while the other voices of the choir sing round it in parts.' The latter method requires for its proper use a well-balanced choir in four-parts. The former may be employed, however, with an incomplete choir or even in the absence altogether of choirmen. Dr. Gray has compiled his volume 'in the belief that, of the two systems, the Descant will be found the more useful and effective under modern conditions, though the Faux-Bourdon is perhaps the more highly developed artistic form. Those who prefer the latter will find admirable examples in the "Tenor Tune Book" (Faith Press).'

Whichever method be adopted it is necessary that the congregation should be properly enlightened as to the part they are to take. Presuming the use of the Descant method, one or two verses—the last and one other—would be treated in Descant. It should be remembered that the method is intended as a variation and should be used sparingly. Those who have heard a fine, strong melody sung in unison by a large congregation with a Descant sung by a few choir-boys soaring above the hymn-tune, are not likely to forget the thrilling effect produced by such simple means. Experience has shown that congregations hitherto apathetic become keenly interested in the hymns, their singing of which receives a wonderful stimulus.

Dr. Gray's book provides Descants for a hundred and thirty-three tunes. These include a large proportion that are in common use and to be found in all collections. In addition to the complete edition for the use of organists and choirmasters, the Descant parts of the tunes are published in a separate volume. The organ part, with the Descant at the

Church and Organ Music

NEW CHURCH MUSIC

'The Lord shall give His people' (Anthem). By Harold E. Watts. [London: Weekes & Co.]

'A Book of Descants.' By Alan Gray. [Cambridge: University Press.]

'The Plainsong Evening Psalter and Canticles.' Edited by the Rev. H. V. Hughes and Edmund W. Goldsmith. [London: The Faith Press, Ltd.]

'Send out Thy light.' Arranged as a Trio for female voices. By Gounod.

'By Nazareth's green hills' (Carol); 'Ring, Christmas Bells' (Carol); 'Would I had been a Shepherd' (Carol). By Sir Frederick Bridge.

'The Carollers' (Carol). By A. M. Goodhart.

'Sweet hours of night' (Carol). By H. Claiborne Dixon. [Novello & Co.]

top, may be used as an accompaniment, for the sake of variety, even when no Descant is being sung. The tunes have been pitched low enough to suit the average voice, so as to enable the congregation to take their part in comfort. Dr. Gray, it is perhaps superfluous to add, has done his work in a most musicianly manner, and is to be congratulated on the success he has achieved in producing Descants that are interesting and melodious in themselves. The books are admirably printed and strongly bound.

The 'Plainsong Evening Psalter and Canticles' is intended for use in those churches where it is the custom to say mattins without music, and where, therefore, an Evening Psalter only is needed. The pointing is derived from 'The Sarum Psalter' by Dr. Palmer, and is admirably clear. Signs of accentuation and pointing have been reduced to the smallest number possible, thus giving 'a fair opportunity to that free and natural rendering of plain-chant psalmody which is the ideal of all who know its true nature.' Modern notation has been adopted for the music. The Preface gives full directions as to the use of the Psalter, and summarizes the main axioms of plainsong psalmody. The inclusion of some simple Faux-Bourbons by Tallis, Morley, and others for use in occasional verses of the Magnificat is a welcome feature. The editors have done their work well, and the get-up of the book is excellent.

Many girls' singing-classes will doubtless welcome the appearance of Gounod's well-known 'Send out Thy light' in the form of a trio (S.S.A.). The vocal parts have been judiciously arranged, care having been taken not to carry the alto part too low, and an effective pianoforte accompaniment is provided. If used as an anthem, with the organ as an accompanying instrument, the organ part of the original version for mixed voices should be used.

Some new carols—all of them attractive and well written—appear opportunely. They may safely be recommended to those on the look-out for something fresh this Christmas. Particularly effective in their various ways are the three by Sir Frederick Bridge, all set to poems by Lady Lindsay.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL, LIVERPOOL

It is good to hear that the famous series of organ recitals with which the honoured name of Best will always be associated retain their popularity. From July 3 to October 16 over 30,400 people attended the Saturday performances. Deducting three Saturdays on which no recital was given this total shows a fine average. During September and October the evening recitals have drawn such crowds that the 'house full' boards have frequently been called for. Such attendances have broken all records since the recitals began in 1860. Although these evening recitals have what is called 'popular' programmes, they include a great deal of fine music—indeed, we are inclined to think that audiences so evidently capable of appreciating Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, and the Toccatas in C, D minor, and F, Harwood's 'Dithyramb,' the 'Tristan' Prelude, the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and other standard organ and orchestral works, would not complain if Mr. Ellingford omitted some at least of the fourth-rate items which are included presumably to justify the title 'popular.' It has to be remembered that the adjective now applies to a great deal of music that a few years ago would have been caviare. Most Londoners will agree that on the whole the best and most interesting all-round programmes at the Promenade Concerts are those played on the 'popular' nights. As things are now, there is practically very little difference in quality between a popular and a classical or other special programme. The popular scheme is merely more familiar, and the items are frequently shorter. Organ recitalists have such splendid opportunities for doing good educational work that it is to be hoped they will make the most of the marked improvement in public taste. They will lose few if any adherents by being just a trifle in front of the crowd, instead of a little behind it.

SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL

The musical policy of Southwark Cathedral has for some time past been notably progressive and unconventional. The annual performances of such works as the 'St. Matthew' Passion and Brahms's 'Requiem' now looked for at cathedrals have long since been supplemented by less usual fare, e.g., a lengthy 'Parsifal' selection. On November 6 a crowded congregation listened to a miscellaneous programme of great interest: Beethoven's Equali for four trombones; Parry's 'There is an Old Belief'; Elgar's 'For the Fallen'; the 'Unfinished' Symphony; and Bach's cantata, 'Let songs of rejoicing.' The Cathedral choir was responsible for the choral numbers, the accompaniments and instrumental works being played by the London Symphony Orchestra. Mr. F. W. Sutton was at the organ. The Bach cantata was, we believe, heard for the first time in London on this occasion. The choir sang admirably, and the whole performance bore testimony to the excellent work of Mr. E. T. Cook, who conducted.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL ORGAN

The organ at Gloucester Cathedral, rebuilt by Sir James and Lady Horlick in memory of their son who died on active service, was dedicated on November 19. The work has been carried out by Messrs. Harrison & Harrison, to a specification drawn up by Dr. Brewer. The instrument has now four manuals, fifty speaking stops, and eighteen couplers. At the dedication service Elgar's 'For the Fallen' was sung by the Cathedral choir, augmented by the Gloucester Festival Chorus (soloist, Miss Hilda Blake), and Dr. Brewer played Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Wesley's 'Holsworthy Church Bells,' Harwood's C sharp minor Sonata, Lloyd's Elegy in C minor, and the Allegretto and Finale from Widor's fifth Symphony. At a recital in the evening the programme included Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue, choral preludes by Brahms, Karg-Elert, and Parry, Handel's Concerto in F, and Dr. Brewer's 'Marche Hérétique.'

LEEDS PARISH CHURCH

A special musical service was held on All Saints' Day. The choral items were Harwood's 'O how glorious' and Wesley's 'Let us now praise famous men.' An excellent orchestra played the 'Egmont' Overture, Elgar's Sursum Corda, Mozart's G minor Symphony, and joined forces with the organ in Guilmant's D minor Symphony. Messrs. M. Hudson, H. Smith, J. Rodgers, and E. Parkin played Beethoven's Equali for four trombones. Dr. E. C. Bairstow conducted, and Dr. A. C. Tysoe was at the organ. Dr. Tysoe has recently been appointed to this important post. He goes thither from Northampton Parish Church, where he carried on a remarkably successful series of organ recitals. He has marked his arrival at Leeds by a scheme of orchestral and choral services of which the above is the first.

ERNEST AUSTIN'S 'PILGRIM'S PROGRESS'

The twelfth and last part of Mr. Austin's narrative tone-poem for organ received what was presumably its first performance at St. Matthias' Church, Richmond, on October 26. Mr. Ambrose Porter, the organist of St. Matthias, has played the whole of the work, printing the scheme of each part on his programmes, and also choosing the rest of the music in such a way as to lead up to it. Part 12 describes the arrival at the Celestial City, and calls for additional musical forces in the shape of solo violin, bells, and six-part semi-chorus. The work evidently made a marked impression on a large audience. A word should be said as to the excellence of Mr. Porter's programmes. They are a fine blend of good organ music and transcriptions, and it is worth noting that as a result of his policy the audiences at this series—the twelfth—have been larger than ever before.

ORGAN RECITALS FOR CHILDREN

The first of a series of terminal recitals to the school children of Ilkley and district was given at St. Margaret's, Ilkley, on October 19, by Mr. Harold Helman. The programme was drawn from Handel, in order to provide a musical illustration of the Georgian period, the history of which is just now being studied in the local schools. On the programme was printed an excellent short life of the composer, and the items played included the Larghetto from the twelfth Grand Concerto for strings, the 'Cuckoo and Nightingale' Concerto, the 'Scipio' March, and the G minor Organ Concerto. Mr. Henry Brearley sang oratorio airs. Over a thousand youngsters attended. This is an admirable move that might well be developed.

A Manchester correspondent writes: 'Dean McCormick has lost no time in getting to work on the problem of Cathedral congregational singing, and has tackled it in very thorough manner, using the pulpit as conductor's desk, and after telling his hearers what he wants and how and when he wants it, not being satisfied until the result is a reasonable approximation to his desires. My observations all point to one great difference in the equipment of congregations, Anglican and Nonconformist: in the former one rarely sees a tune-book in use outside the choir, in the latter the habit of singing from music is a growing one, especially among the younger people. Naturally this makes for a freer and heartier participation in hymn-singing. But whatever priest or people may do in this matter, the organist can make or mar it all. Who has not come across an otherwise poorly-equipped player who literally made his congregation sing, using a steady rhythm on the brisk side, enabling him, if occasion arose, to secure a broader treatment without any ponderous effect, and always, even when playing softly, carrying a firm pedal and so giving his congregation confidence? Listen in any congregation where there is indulgence in over-refined pianissimo on the part of choir and organ, and invariably the result is to stop the congregation. The Dean will have a tougher problem when tackling the chanting of Psalms.'

At the first organ concert of the season at Ashton Hall, Lancaster, Mr. J. H. Reginald Dixon played the 'Egmont' Overture, the 'Forest murmurs' from 'Siegfried,' Rheinberger's G sharp minor Sonata (complete), Grainger's 'Shepherd's Hey,' a selection from 'Madame Butterfly,' and Claussman's Pastorale and Storm Scene, the latter one of the best works of the meteorological type. Mr. Dixon was announced to play on November 10 a classical programme from Bach, Mendelssohn, &c., and on December 15 he will give a selection of modern British music.

In connection with the City branch of the Church of England Men's Society four lectures on musical subjects, with illustrations on the organ, will be given at St. Alban's, Wood Street, E.C., by Mr. G. Thalben Bell (December 3), Prof. Walford Davies (December 6), Mr. Harvey Grace (December 10), and Dr. Harold Darke (December 17). The lectures begin at 1.15.

The forty-seventh Annual Festival of the London Church Choir Association was held in St. Paul's Cathedral on November 18. The Canticles were sung to a setting in G by E. T. Cook, and the anthem was Wesley's 'The Wilderness.' Dr. Macpherson conducted, and Mr. Gerald Bullivant was at the organ.

Dr. Eaglefield Hull has set a good example by giving a recital in aid of the Westminster Abbey Restoration Fund, in accordance with the scheme already made public. He played at St. George's, Barnsley, on November 21, his programme including Elgar's 'Caractacus' March, Herbert Howells's Rhapsody, and Bonnet's 'Marche Héroïque.'

Mr. J. F. Nash, senior lay-clerk at Bristol Cathedral, completed forty years' service on November 29, having been appointed on St. Andrew's Day, 1880. From the early part of 1867 till late in 1871 he sang as treble in the same choir.

The Hither Green Choral and Orchestral Society will perform Spohr's 'Last Judgment,' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' at Southwark Cathedral on Tuesday, December 7, at 7.30. No admission tickets are required.

Mr. Harry Hoggarth, for forty-five years a member of Kendal Parish Church Choir, is the mayor elect for the coming year.

ORGAN RECITALS

Mr. Bertram Hollins, Beckenham Congregational Church—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Overture to 'Die Meistersinger'; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Marche Nuptiale, Widor. Claremont Central Mission, Pentonville—Intermezzo, Hollins; Fugue in D, Bach; Funeral March and 'Hymn of Seraphs,' Guilmant.

Mr. Leitch Owen, Edge Hill Parish Church—Storm Fantasia, Lemmens; 'Salut d'Amour' and 'Pomp and Circumstance,' Elgar.

Mr. E. Roberts West, St. Paul's, Leamington Spa—Holsworthy Church Bells, Wesley; Grand March, Best. Lieut. Sydney H. Wéale, Bar Congregational Church, Scarborough—Sonata in D minor, Guilmant; Great Fugue in G minor, Bach; 'The Storm,' Lemmens. King's Hall, Stoke-on-Trent (two recitals)—Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Two Preludes and Fugues, D minor and C, Bach; Sonata No. 5, Merkel.

Mr. Frank Greenwood, Town Hall, Rochdale—Evening Song, Baird; Sonata in E minor, Rheinberger; Prelude to 'Parsifal'; Allegro (Symphony No. 6), Widor.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Concerto in F, Handel; Rhapsody No. 3, Howells; Fantasia in E, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Harvey Grace, St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol—Preludio (Op. 167, No. 5), Rheinberger; Trumpet Tune, Purcell; Allegro Moderato, Rosengrave; Andante Pastorale, Adams; Meditation and Scherzo, Harvey Grace; Three Choral Preludes, Bach; Impression, Quasi Marcia, and 'Pax Vobiscum,' Karg-Elert.

Mr. E. Douglas Taylor, Parish Church, Chippenham—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Healey Willan; Andantino, Franck; Sonata in A minor, Rheinberger; Prelude, 'Le Déluge,' Saint-Saëns; Choral Prelude on 'St. Peter,' Darke; Prelude on a Chorale, Karg-Elert; 'The Holy Boy,' Ireland.

Mr. Harold M. Dawber, St. George's, Stockport—Madrigal and Divertissement, Vierne; Sonata in E, Handel; Chant de Mai, Jongen; Rondo Bizarre (MS.), de Courcy Smale.

Mr. Wilfrid Greenhouse Allt, St. John the Evangelist, Edinburgh (three recitals)—Fantasia and Fugue in A minor, Fantasia with Imitation and Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Andantino, Franck; Petite Pastorale, Ravel; Légende and Berceuse, Vierne; 'Finlandia'; Overture 'Occasional' Oratorio; Passacaglia, Cyril Scott.

Mr. Frederick W. Large, Camden Parish Church, Camberwell—Grand Chœur, Hollins; Légende Romantique and Madrigal, P. J. Mansfield; First Movement, Sonata in A flat, Rheinberger.

Mr. Wallace G. Breach, St. John the Evangelist, Clapham Rise—Toccata in C, d'Evry; Choral Prelude 'Jesu, the very thought,' Parry; Finale in B flat, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Lionel Wiggins, Holy Trinity, Leamington Spa (three recitals)—Sonata No. 4, Rheinberger; Prelude and 'Angel's Farewell' ('Dream of Gerontius'), Capriccio, Ireland; Choral Postlude, Kitson; Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Rhapsody, Darke; Pastorale and Finale (Symphony No. 2), Widor.

Dr. A. E. Floyd, St. Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne, Australia (two recitals)—Sonata in G minor, Purcell; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor and Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Sonata in D, Handel; 'Harmonies du Soir,' Karg-Elert.

Dr. Thomas Keighley, Albion Church, Ashton-under-Lyne (two recitals)—Two Preludes and Fugues, D minor and C, Bach; Offertoires in D and E flat, Franck; Andante Cantabile and Finale (Symphony No. 4), Widor; Nocturne, Cyril Scott; Romance, Reger.

Rev. K. H. MacDermott, St. Peter's, Selsey—Prelude to 'Lohengrin'; Prologue, Mansfield; Offertoire, Dubois.

(Continued on page 831.)

(CHRIST IN HIS GARDEN.)

FROM "CHILDREN'S SONGS," ARRANGED FOR MIXED VOICES BY THE COMPOSER.

The English Version by W. G. ROTHERY.

Composed by P. TCHAIKOVSKY.
(OP. 54, No. 5.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

Moderato.

SOPRANO

FAIR was the gar - den, blest with flow'rs, Where Je - sus strayed in

ALTO.

FAIR was the gar - den, blest with flow'rs, Where Je - sus strayed in

TENOR.

FAIR was the gar - den, blest with flow'rs, Where Je - sus strayed in

BASS.

FAIR was the gar - den, blest with flow'rs, Where Je - sus strayed in

PIANO,
(For practice only.)

Moderato.

child-hood's hours; Tend-ing the red rose blos - soms there, Meet for a child-hood's hours; Tend-ing the red rose blos - soms there, Meet for a child-hood's hours; Tend-ing the red rose blos - soms there, Meet for a child-hood's hours; Tend-ing the red rose blos - soms there, Meet for a crown for Him to wear. To see the ro - ses in their prime, The crown for Him to wear. To see the ro - ses in .. their prime, The crown for Him to wear. To see the ro - ses in .. their prime, The crown for Him to wear. To see the ro - ses in their prime, The chil - dren came at morn - ing time, They plucked the flowers in chil - dren came at morn - ing time, They plucked the flowers in chil - dren came .. at morn - ing time, They plucked the flowers in chil - dren came .. at morn - ing time, They plucked the flowers in wan - ton play, Strew-ing the pet - als on the way. "How wilt thou

wan - ton play, Strew-ing the pet - als on the way. "How wilt thou

wan - ton play, Strew-ing the pet - als on the way. "How wilt thou

wan - ton play, Strew-ing the pet - als on the way. "How wilt thou twine... a gar-land fair?... The flow'rs are dead, the tree is twine... a gar-land fair?... The flow'rs are dead, the tree is twine a gar - land fair? The flow'rs are dead, the tree is twine... a gar-land fair?... The flow'rs are dead, the tree is bare." Then He re-plied, "I sure - ly gain A crown of thorns, for bare." Then He re-plied, "I sure - ly gain A crown of thorns, for bare." Then He re-plied, "I sure - ly gain A crown of thorns, for bare." Then He re-plied, "I sure - ly gain A crown of thorns, for they re - main." Then of the thorns the chil - dren made A crown of they re - main." Then of the thorns the chil - dren made A crown of they re - main." Then of the thorns the chil - dren made A crown of they re - main." Then of the thorns the chil - dren made A crown of glo - ry, ne'er to fade, And in the red rose - blos - soms' place Were

glo - ry, ne'er to fade, And in the red rose - blos - soms' place Were

glo - ry, .. ne'er to .. fade, And in the red rose - blos - soms' place Were

glo - ry, ne'er to fade, And in the red rose - blos - soms' place Were drops of blood . . . His brow to grace. . .

drops of blood . . . His brow to grace. . .

drops of blood . . . His brow to grace. . .

drops of blood His brow * to grace, His brow to grace. . .

* In the original edition the lower Bs are given as large notes.

(Continued from page 826.)

- Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Nicholas, Cole Abbey (four recitals)—
Finale in B flat, Walmsley Little; Theme with Variations, Faulkes; Air with Variations in F sharp minor, Wesley; Question and Answer, Wolstenholme.
- Mr. W. Wolstenholme, New College Chapel, Swiss Cottage—Fugue à la Gigue, Bach; Benediction Nuptiale, Hollins; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann; Evening Song, Bairdston; Cantilène and Finale in B flat, Wolstenholme.
- Mr. Allan Brown, Park Street Baptist Church, Luton—Overture in C, Hollins; Funeral March and 'Hymn of Seraphs,' Guilmant; Fugue in E flat, Bach; Aubade, Johnson. Union Baptist Church, High Wycombe—Overture in C minor, Hollins; Finale from Sonata in F minor, Rheinberger; 'Finlandia'; Schiller March, Meyerbeer.
- Mr. J. A. Meale, Central Hall, Westminster (three recitals)—Pastorale and Finale (Sonata No. 1), Guilmant; Carillon, Elgar; Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; St. Francis of Assisi, Liszt.
- Dr. Eaglefield Hull, St. George's, Barnsley—'Caractacus' March, Elgar; Rhapsody, Howells; Toccata, Callaerts; Prelude to 'Parsifal.'
- Dr. R. Walker Robson, Christ Church, Crouch End (three recitals)—Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Minuetto in B minor, Widor; Rhapsody in D and Prelude in E, Saint-Saëns; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; 'The Holy Boy' and Villanella, Ireland; Final in B flat, Frank; Finale (Sonata in G sharp minor), Rheinberger.
- Mr. E. T. Cook, Southwark Cathedral—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Chorale No. 2, Frank; Andante from String Quartet, Debussy; Choral Prelude, 'St. Mary,' Wood; Prelude and Fugue on BACH, Liszt.
- Mr. G. Bernard Gilbert, Town Hall, Stratford—Requiem Eternam, Harwood; Siciliano and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Grand Chœur in C, Hollins.
- Miss T. V. Denman, St. Peter's, Selsey—Carillon, Wolstenholme; Triumphal March, Hollins; Chaconne in C minor, Buxtehude.
- Mr. Herbert E. Knott, St. Anne's, Moseley, Birmingham—Prelude and Fugue in F sharp minor, Buxtehude; Theme, Variations, and Finale, Lloyd; Lament, Harvey Grace.
- Mr. W. H. Steward, Church of the Ascension, Lavender Hill (four recitals)—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor and Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Sonata in C sharp minor, Harwood; Nocturne, Dunhill; Coronation March and Fantasia in E flat, Saint-Saëns; Epilogue, Willan.
- Dr. E. C. Bairdston, Temple Street Wesleyan Church, Keighley—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Elegy and Scherzo in A flat, Bairdston; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Frank; Largo and Finale from 'New World' Symphony; Légende and Scherzetto, Vierne; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart.
- Mr. Q. Mowaren Maclean, All Souls, Langham Place (two recitals)—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Trumpet Air and Poco Allegro, Purcell; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Reger; Scherzetto and Postlude, Vierne; Fabliau, Quef; Three Pieces, Frank Bridge.
- Mr. E. H. Thorne, St. Edward's, Cambridge—Chorale Preludes 'In dulci jubilo' and 'Liebster Jesu, wir sind hier,' Bach; Benediction Nuptiale, Saint-Saëns; Gothic Suite, Boëllmann.
- Mr. T. Guy Lucas, St. Edward's, Cambridge—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Andante du Quatuor, Debussy; Two Choral Preludes 'Melcombe' and 'Christe, Redemptor, Omnium,' Parry.
- Mr. Bernhard Old, St. Edward's, Cambridge—Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; Nocturne, Borodin; Voluntary on 100th Psalm Tune, Purcell; Prelude 'La Demoiselle Elué,' Debussy; 'Now thank we all,' Karg-Elert.

APPOINTMENTS

- Mr. Henry C. Hart, organist and choirmaster, St. Saviour's, Denmark Hill, S.E.
- Mr. W. Hunt, organist and choirmaster, St. George's, Belfast.
- Mr. Wallace J. Madge, organist and choirmaster, Clapton Wesleyan Church.

Letters to the Editor

'EXTREMISTS' versus 'THE REST'

SIR,—May I bore your readers, weary as they are from their November efforts, with two more reminiscences? Several years ago Sir Alexander Mackenzie gave two lectures at the Royal Institution in Albemarle Street. I forget their title, but their purpose was to excommunicate with bell, book, and candle, certain reprehensible practices which had crept into the noble art of musical composition. Will it surprise you, Sir, to learn that I placed my knowledge of the musical underworld at Sir Alexander's disposal in compiling his 'crime alley'—his array of deterrent examples? I did so for two reasons. The first is that I have a profound respect for the conservative element in music, because I cannot see how our beloved republic could 'carry on' without an Extreme Right to steady it. The only Tory I ever fall out with is the Tory who has had a vision of himself on the cross-benches. The second reason is that I well know how beneficial it is to a new set of ideas to be placed upon the index expurgatorius, especially when there are young students in the audience.

My other reminiscence is of one of those early lectures I gave on modern French music a year or two, I believe, before Mr. Newman became publicly aware of its existence. At its conclusion a gentleman walked up to the pianoforte, thumped down very loudly what he believed to be a chord, but what was an ingenious, but otherwise harmless, assembly of passing-notes, then turned truculently to me and inquired: 'There! What d'ye call that? Is it music?' I replied that the presence of ladies in the audience prevented me from putting a name to his performance, but that in any case Ravel was the victim, not the author, of the outrage.

Mr. Newman's essay in this genre now reposes in my cabinet. A malicious alphabet has placed it cheek by jowl with another cutting from your esteemed journal, wherein Mr. Frederick Corder quotes horrible examples from Schönberg, under the title, 'An Epoch-Making Composer.'

Before embarking upon his highly original procedure, Mr. Newman paid a compliment to the summary of my lectures on 'The foundations of 20th century music,' which appeared in your issue of August, 1917, saying that although I was merely drawing up a précis of the creed of a certain international group, much as a secretary might draw up a précis of his firm's views on a particular matter, the thing was extremely well done. I am a little perturbed at finding myself one day a Nationalist à outrance, and the next day secretary to a League of Nations; but let that pass. What worries me is that while it is true that some, not all, tenets of the creed I unfolded at Æolian Hall coincide with those held by a large and important section of international musicians, it so happens that the overwhelming majority of these are younger men than myself, some of whom are actually misguided enough to believe that I possess an æsthetic of my own, which had served me tolerably well for many years before I thought of making it public in a series of lectures. I should not like it to be bruited abroad that I had stolen it from them when they were in their teens, if not their cradles. It might ruin my reputation, already much compromised in these encounters.

But if my ideas are not my own—and Mr. Newman has generously granted that they are none the worse for that—at least his have the bloom of freshness upon them. Picture to yourself, Sir, a thousand scribes in the hills and dales of Europe eager to join on either side in this merry powder-play; and, until Mr. Newman thought of it, they had one and all overlooked the barrel-organ in 'Il Tabarro.' It could have been served out as ammunition indiscriminately to either party, for it holds arguments for both; but Mr. Newman has taken it for his own. Truly, Sir, the master-strokes of genius were ever simple.—Yours, &c.,

31, Coleherne Road,

EDWIN EVANS.

Earl's Court, S.W. 10.

November 4, 1920.

SIR,—Amusingly bumptious, Mr. Newman's article in your November issue exposes at once his foibles and his dubious methods of attack.

Labelling his opponents 'the little Franco-Russian-Italian group in our midst,' he claims to speak for 'the rest of England.' Undecided by a plebiscite this is but empty bombast. Of this alleged group Mr. Edwin Evans and I alone are cited. Mr. Evans has just concluded a long series of articles on British composers in your periodical: he is a recognised advocate of British music at home and abroad. My essays in some dozen periodicals during the last eight years have included Bantock, Delius, Bax, Lord Berners, Goossens, and many other British composers, dealt with appreciatively. The series in Musical Opinion, now running a year, has been about half devoted to British music, though it deals with contemporary music as a whole, irrespective of nationality. Meanwhile the self-announced spokesman of England, Mr. Newman, has been too busy with 'universal' composers, such as Erich Wolf and Marx, or such vitally British matters as 'Brahms and Wolf as Lyrists,' 'Wagner and Franz Lachner,' 'Wagner and Super-Wagner,' &c., to devote any appreciation to those who he now claims have received his profound attention. This is like the husband who affirmed that continual absence with other ladies constituted no neglect of his wife, but a proof of devotion, since 'the less he saw of her the more he thought about her.' Thus the 'Franco-Russian-Italians' are the advocates of British music, while Mr. Newman waits till he has gleaned all there is to be said, and then comes forward to claim national laurels.

His label for Mr. Evans and myself can have been conceived only because we have written appreciatively, among others, of French, Russian, and Italian composers. As I have also written of Spanish, Hungarian, and German, as well as British composers, to be consistent he must extend the label for me to 'Anglo-Franco-Russian-Italian-Spanish-Hungarian-German.' This method promises complications. When Continental developments first reached us from France Mr. Newman sought to decry the new trend by labelling his opponents Francophiles. Later, learning that the movement was more wide-spread, he extended this to 'Franco-Russian-Italian.' But as other countries in turn all undergo similar changes (and these are part of general evolution) we may expect to see him, twenty years hence, classifying his opponents as the 'little Anglo-Franco-Russian-Italian-Spanish-Hungarian-German-Polish-American-Belgian-Dutch-Danish-Czecho-Slovak-Jugo-Slav-Swedish-Norwegian-Finnish-Ukrainian-Serbian-Greek-Portuguese group': it will be interesting to see then who cares to be classed with his 'rest'—or should one say 'remainder'? Of course it is obvious that, having for years maintained a preference for a small phase of a particular nation's music,—that of Germany, now rather unpopular—Mr. Newman seeks to camouflage his position by fabricating similar race-preferences for others.

His claim to have 'most musicians of standing' with him is further 'spoof.' He makes great play with the names of Delius, the Editor of the Musical Times, and 'Autolykus' of Musical Opinion. It rather spoils his mass-effect when one knows that the two latter gentlemen are one and the same. On the other hand, I know several musicians of established standing here in England who, unless sense of humour aid them, will feel anything but pleased to be numbered among the cronies of a reactionary set.

Mr. Newman labels me 'extremist,' implying that I am blind to all save the most startling contemporary music. Facts confute him: I do not rely, as he does, on mere affirmations. I have consistently expressed in print, since I commenced writing, my affection for Bach, Mozart, Scarlatti, Couperin, Pergolesi, Weber (of the operas), 15th and 16th century Netherland polyphony, the British Tudor composers, and the 17th century Italians. Had Mr. Newman missed these contributions, he was present at a lecture recently which I expressed myself fairly fully concerning them. The difference between him and me is that, while he accepts as transcendent a particular phase of German music and musical thought—for symphonic development is one long whole,—I am more particular, not following the track of 'ninety-eight per cent.,' but preferring my own taste. One must be judged by acts, not affirmations. I have expressed open admiration for composers of that German phase, but also admit other phases as being equally important. Mr. Newman's taste (we cannot answer for what he has not made public) covers some two centuries, mine some six centuries, which seems to render him more 'extreme' than I, unless he refers to my taste: for I am extremely particular, which he, being in accord with ninety-eight per cent. of the musical population, cannot be. He forgets, however, that there are two extremes—revolutionary and reactionary. Even in modern music I admire composers diametrically opposed in thought and style.

Mr. Newman's fallacy is that he takes all he thinks and states as absolute and infallible, and that he judges in terms of gross weight—of quantity, not quality. But examination proves that his claim to speak for 'the rest of England,' or in any way save as statement of personal opinion—in which case he merely pits his against mine—is just mere pretension and bluster.

This is all I wish to say. To reply to Mr. Newman's technical challenges requires more than a letter. I am answering elsewhere, in article form.

Meanwhile I wish to say emphatically that I have never doubted Mr. Newman's erudition, as he hints. I believe I have read all his books, and most of his articles, and no one who has done this, and then compared them with what has been written elsewhere earlier can doubt the learning he has absorbed. If, however, I need to trace the source of any future brilliancy of his, and need to view his library, to do which he so courteously invites me in the phrase of Gibbon, I shall wire him—that he may be sure to be out. For I have not yet been able particularly to distinguish him among other pressmen—and unhappy complications have occurred at times through the master being mistaken for the flunkey. —Yours, &c.,

LEIGH HENRY.

SIR,—I have read with increasing interest and amusement the series of attacks by Mr. Newman upon the 'Extremists,' and would be glad if you could find space in your columns for this letter. I am not a musician myself, and it might be interesting to hear the opinion of one who stands outside, and is interested more in the argument than in music itself.

In effect, what Mr. Newman's argument amounts to is this—that Mr. Leigh Henry and Mr. Edwin Evans are concerned only in theories, that they do not concern themselves whether this or that work is a decent specimen of its own theory, i.e., that it is a real work of art. So long as the method is new, they do not care a hang about the quality of the music. Another point in his argument is (and this is the logical conclusion of the first point) that Mr. Leigh Henry and Mr. Edwin Evans approve of anything and everything that is 'modern' and have no good word to say for the masters of the past.

Probably most thinking people will admit the truism that Mr. Newman elaborates so laboriously—that the quality of the music is of more importance than the theory of its construction, interesting though the latter may be. But it is the next step in Mr. Newman's mental processes that convicts him of unwarrantable dogmatism. In effect he says, 'And those pieces of Stravinsky's of which I approve as worthy are worthy: while those which I assert are poor specimens are poor specimens.' It seems impossible for him to comprehend that others might have different values. True, he never puts this attitude into a single sentence, but he writes the whole of his long articles on that dogmatic assumption, apparently taking it for granted that his taste is absolute and irrefutable. It is true he says, with mock modesty, 'If anything is wrong with us it is with our taste,' but there is no hint in any of his articles that he has the slightest misgiving on that score. He takes it for granted that his taste is the taste, and that anyone who differs from his standard is an extremist of the worst kind.

With regard to the second point (Mr. Leigh Henry's non-appreciation of the past and his extreme appreciation of the 'modern'), I was present a short time ago at a lecture wherein Mr. Henry dealt most appreciatively with the Elizabethan madrigalists, Monteverde, Scarlatti, Pergolesi, Mozart, Gluck, Rossini, and Verdi: while in the Musical Standard of September 25 he wrote, 'I deny the imputation that I desire to see the work of the old masters destroyed. I believe in the continuity of musical art.'

This seems to imply that Mr. Leigh Henry's musical sense is not so narrow as Mr. Newman asserts. But this counting of heads, this gross summing up of units seems to me a fundamental fallacy. Taste is a personal matter, and the fact that Beethoven does not appeal to Mr. Henry argues nothing more than the obvious fact that it is practically impossible for a fastidious taste to embrace the whole of the past with a more or less even appreciation. To me, the alert mind that faces the work of the past in a critical spirit is worth more than floods of sentimental adoration and blind acceptance. Why, therefore, should not Beethoven sometimes be 'bombastic and sententious' and Brahms sometimes 'intolerably dull and utterly platitudinous'?

Another point in connection with the subject of taste. Mr. Newman seems to imply negligibility by employing the terms 'fragments,' 'mere studies' (one is reminded irresistibly of 'mere people'), and 'sketches.' But we know Sappho by fragments, and some of Da Vinci's finest things are his sketches, 'mere pages torn from a sketch-book.'

Surely bigness does not constitute greatness. Greatness of conception is the thing that matters, and this can be seen in the slightest sketch. The taste that weighs by avoidupois and relies upon a ballot to back it up is in every sense of the term vulgar. The man in the street is a dangerous person to associate with too often, and if Mr. Newman does not take care he will find himself neither prophet, priest, nor king, but the man in the street himself, with all that man's gross values and vulgar conceptions.—Yours, &c.,

C. MORTON RENDLE.

3, Glebe Road, Bromley, Kent,
November 8, 1920.

NEW SCALES AND CHORDS

SIR,—Had your article on 'Some New Scales and Chords' not been signed by so distinguished a name as that of Prof. Walford Davies I should have been tempted to regard it as in the nature of a hoax! As it is, I must admit that I have read it through twice without getting any very clear idea of what it is driving at. It seems to have set out to 'explain' or account for certain progressions found in modern music; but, to the best of my remembrance these progressions are quite as well accounted for (so far as it is necessary or possible to 'account for' them) by the theories of the late Dr. Prout or even Macfarren—whom I remember to have read with mingled awe and wonder many years ago. Prout—or was it Macfarren?—said quite clearly that it was possible to use a triad, either major or minor, over every note in the chromatic scale of any given key; and this would seem to 'account for' all the chords given by Prof. Davies at the bottom of page 736, together of course, with a good many more. . . . But, in truth, all this talk of explaining or accounting for various progressions is rather nonsensical, and leads nowhere. Surely all that need be said is that in the earlier 'harmonic' days of music musicians were content to make up their chords (for the most part) of the more obvious products of the harmonic series; whereas now they are led to 'colour' them by allowing in also the more remote products. (This is putting it very shortly; but I fear to intrude too much upon your space.)

In column 1, page 736, Prof. Davies speaks of 2,047 possible 'soundings' of groups of notes, but in col. 1, p. 738, the number is given as 2,049. There is doubtless a slip of the pen or a printer's error here, but just as a matter of curiosity one would like to know which is correct.

In saying 'the ratio 1:2 could not be imagined to cease in the created universe with the departure of a man's mind should it perish,' &c., Prof. Davies disposes in very summary fashion of what is really a fundamental philosophical problem which has vexed the mind of man for ages. The matter, however, could hardly be well discussed in a musical journal, so I content myself with merely touching upon it.—Yours, &c.,

A. R. C.

SIR,—It is true that I have not had the pleasure of reading Prof. Walford Davies's paper, addressed to the British Association, on the subject of 'Euphonic Scales,' but judging from his recent contribution to the Musical Times, I am disposed to think that his theories are unlikely to be so fruitful in good results as he seems inclined to believe.

In the first place, if the history of European music teaches one fact more plainly than another, it is that the foundation of harmony is to be found not in the so-called perfect consonances (4th, 5th, and 8ve), but rather in the three directly intelligible intervals, as Hauptmann terms them—namely, the 8ve, the 5th, and the major 3rd. In his selection of the former series, Prof. Walford Davies would appear to be influenced by the example of the ancient Greeks, especially if, as Helmholtz maintained, the four-stringed lyre was tuned c-F-G-c, which is precisely the foundation of the new 'euphonic scales.' However this may be, it was the system of tuning by 5ths which caused the Greeks to overlook (or at least to ignore) the beauty of the major 3rd, with the result that music was the one art in which they failed, comparatively speaking, to make a mark. Of course, the selection of any three intervals upon which to build up these scales must be purely arbitrary; but why Prof. Davies should return to the exploded notion of the perfection of 4ths, to the exclusion of the most beautiful interval in nature, I confess puzzles me.

Prof. Davies tells us that between the sounding of the octave and the sounding of all twelve notes of the scale together, he has found that there are 2,047 possible soundings of groups of notes. Towards the conclusion of the paper the number is given as 2,049. I have not been at the pains to ascertain which of these is a misprint. But alongside of such numbers the eighty-four scales of the Chinese appear a very little thing; although, on the other hand, the scales of Prof. Davies are as nothing when compared with the 16,000 scales of the ancient Hindus. However, it is a comfort to reflect, as Stainer said long ago, 'music has made the scales, not the scales music.'

And are these 'vast new harmonic riches' really new? Are they only 'now to be had for the asking'? Were they quite unknown to Bach, Mozart, and Beethoven? Were they not, on the contrary, there all the time? Is it not rather to be feared that these naughty boys were in the orchard before the 20th century composers got there, and wickedly appropriated the best of the fruit?

According to Prof. Davies, 'the lucid mastery of resource' to be attained by the composer (or composers) for whom the world is waiting, will be as much superior to that of Bach as Bach's was to that of Palestrina. But was Bach's 'lucid mastery of resource' really greater than that of Palestrina? I think not. Palestrina, and others of that era, produced the finest unaccompanied vocal music that the world has ever known. Wilbye and Gibbons are the last great names of a school which, for choral music unaccompanied by instruments, has never since been equalled, much less surpassed. Bach's work, although far from neglecting the glorious traditions of this school, was mainly built upon the 'new music' of the 17th century; and vocal music in combination with that of instruments finds its culmination in him. The Requiem of Mozart and the Missa Solemnis of Beethoven may possibly be placed alongside the compositions of Bach; but can a third work be named worthy of such a position? Again, in purely instrumental work Beethoven still remains supreme. Notwithstanding all that has been written since his day, no successor has been able to scale those empyrean heights. We do not expect another Milton or another Shakespeare, why then should we suppose that any amount of 'lucid mastery of resource'—in other words, any equally tempered scale, should enable some yet unknown man (or woman!) to surpass the achievements of Palestrina, Bach, or Beethoven?

But to proceed to details. As it has been admitted long ago that any chord can be employed in any key, it is not easy to perceive the necessity for selecting six, or seven, or nine, or any other number of notes from the chromatic series, since the composer is already at liberty to confine himself to any such scale, if he feels that it gives him all he requires for a certain purpose. For example, in the first Prelude of the 'Forty-eight,' Bach uses all the twelve sounds of the tempered scale; but in the following fugue he employs only eleven. Do we therefore say that these compositions are constructed upon slightly different scales? Would such a distinction be worth the mention? I am not quite clear, as to whether or no Prof. Davies intends to suggest that composers should sometimes confine their efforts to the manipulation of 'the augmented 3rd scale,' or 'the diminished triad scale,' or even to a 'six-notesounding.' But I am inclined to think not, since even in the few bars marked 'maestoso,' he has introduced b flat and g flat, neither of which sounds form part of the given scale. But in that case, what becomes of the scale?

It is obvious that Prof. Davies accepts the device of equal temperament as a foundation for his theories, his examples showing that he draws no distinction between sharps and flats. I should very much like to hear the chords on page 736 sung by a small choir—or, say, six voices, soprano, mezzo-soprano, contralto, tenor, baritone, and bass. The example in arpeggio à la Schumann certainly possesses possibilities, as Prof. Davies remarks, which become gradually obvious. I have discovered, for instance, that it sounds equally well if played al rovescio; not note by note, but arpeggio by arpeggio; only in that case the 4th with which it concludes should be played not at the beginning, but at the end; of course g-c instead of b-e.

As for the maestoso, I cannot agree that it is 'common-place,' except for the fact that I am unable to discover anything in the upper part that can be called melody. But here again, the notation is weird. The final progression, by the way, is the same as that with which 'Everyman' opens—the tonic chord preceded by one consisting of the 7th, minor 3rd, and minor 6th.

Passing on, I am again doubtful whether we are to be allowed any notes other than those of the given 'sounding,' because when speaking of 'the diminished triad scale,' Prof. Davies says 'there are no chords of the diminished 7th,' and this deprivation applies also to 'the augmented triad scale.' I agree that 'this characteristic alone would give them distinction'; but if passing-notes are allowed (as in the maestoso), might not a sinful diminished 7th perchance creep in?

As for 'the six-note sounding,' we are vouchsafed no information concerning its genesis, but clearly it is not based on the 'perfect euphonics'—perhaps this is why it is so 'entrancingly interesting.' Six common chords, to an old-fashioned musician, seem rather short allowance; but I do not suppose that the man now due, or over-due, will have any use for common chords. The 'sounding' is (again I agree) piquant and very clear, but I doubt whether it will prove also 'very useful.' I can easily imagine myself getting very tired of it.

Prof. Walford Davies tells us—he even suggests that we shall be able to discover for ourselves—that chords and scales are lasting things. Well, I always thought they were, although I never took any particular credit to myself for thinking so. But of late years I have begun to hope that some at least of the chords are not. When Prof. Davies says 'they are imperishable because there is nothing in them to perish,' he makes me feel very uncomfortable. I cannot help hoping it is not true.—Yours, &c.,

5, Richmond Mansions, ARTHUR T. FROGGATT.
Dewton Road, Twickenham.

SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION

SIR,—In my opinion Mr. A. R. Cripps's letter in your issue for November should not remain unchallenged. He has, apparently, read the Musical Times review of Mr. Elliot Button's book and not the book itself, and has chosen two of the most convincing examples in the book, viz., the opening of the Schumann Romance in F sharp, and that of Bach's Toccata in D minor. He is evidently more 'hide-bound' than he thinks, and I am not one of those 'everyones' who will agree that 'the impression produced on the eye by the original differs absolutely from that produced by the amended version.'

From time to time I have written down and published many of my musical thoughts, and I feel sure that had I followed Mr. Button's rules—which until now I had not thought of—I should in many cases have made my meaning clearer to portrayers of my compositions than I have done. Mr. Cripps seems not to have noticed that which impresses other musicians, viz., the light the book sheds on the real intentions of the great classical composers. If, for instance, the Scherzo of the 'Eroica' is 'Buttonized' the result is rather astonishing, and, as far as one can judge, it shows quite clearly Beethoven's intentions.

Personally I think that musicians and composers should be much indebted to Mr. Elliot Button for having had the courage to offer his opinions in a published book. I say quite frankly that I am firmly convinced of the usefulness of the changes advocated in 'Musical Notation.' As to that, how can we go to a higher authority than Sir Edward Elgar, whose Preface graces this most interesting publication?—Yours, &c.,

FERRIS TOZER

20, Howell Road, Exeter. November 17, 1920.

BRITISH COMPOSERS AND THE MILITARY BAND

SIR,—I trust you will allow me the hospitality of your columns for the purpose of appealing to British composers on behalf of military music. Hitherto they appear to have regarded this branch of their art as a negligible and somewhat contemptible Cinderella whom they have tacitly agreed to ignore. Either this, or they have been restrained by fear of the unknown from exploring the potentialities of the combination of wood-wind and brass of which the military band is composed. It seems to me that they are thus neglecting an important means of obtaining for their work a very wide public hearing, not only in the three kingdoms, but wherever throughout the world British units are stationed. Therefore, through your columns, may I put before them the following propositions with a view to inducing them to reconsider their present attitude.

The concert season at Kneller Hall is from the middle of May to the end of September, and during that time I will undertake to give performances of:

- (a) Original compositions for military band;
- (b) Original compositions for orchestra, arranged for military band;
- (c) Arrangements for military band of music by classical composers.

With regard to (c) it should first be ascertained by application here whether an arrangement has already been made and whether the piece selected is considered suitable.

A committee of experts will sit in judgment on all music submitted to determine whether it is worth rehearsal and performance. Compositions for consideration should be sent in on or before January 1 in each year. None can be accepted subsequently for performance in the forthcoming season.

Composers will be invited to attend the rehearsal and performance of their works, and invitations for the latter will be sent to musical critics, military directors of music, and representatives of music publishing firms. As many such works as possible will be played throughout the concert season, and a final performance of all those considered most successful will be given, at which it is hoped to secure a representative attendance of the above. Composers are advised to keep, if possible, a duplicate copy of their scores.

A library of the works performed will be formed at Kneller Hall, a list of the contents of which will be forwarded to military band presidents and directors of civil wind-bands, who for a small fee will be able to have any piece required for a specified time for performance. Any pieces subsequently published will be withdrawn from circulation.

The above scheme has the support of the British Music Society and the Patron's Fund.

Full information regarding the technique and normal composition of a military band will be forwarded on application.—Yours, &c.,

JOHN C. SOMERVILLE

(Colonel-Commandant, Royal Military School of Music).

Kneller Hall, Twickenham.

October 12, 1920.

'LETTERS OF GREAT COMPOSERS'

SIR,—The article in your September issue breaks new and fruitful ground. For a long time many of us have looked upon these lives and letters as the best light on the connection between the spiritual and the æsthetic in human personality. It is however rather remarkable that the writer should altogether have passed over the wonderful things that may be gathered from the letters of Johannes Brahms. Though perhaps in some things uncouth and rugged, Brahms was a highly intellectual and educated man, and a man who expressed more intimately than most of the great musicians some of the foundations of his faith. They, as Beethoven said of himself, spoke only in their music, but Brahms and the circle revealed by his life, his letters, and his association with the Schumanns, especially as told in Clara Schumann's life, are unsurpassed in their revealing of the inner things of a great artist's soul.—Yours, &c.,

99, Franklin Road,
Harrogate.

R. B. KETTLEWELL.

September 5, 1920.

VINCENT D'INDY'S VIEW OF HARMONY

SIR,—In his article on the above subject Mr. Richard Capell says:

'M. d'Indy's student is exhorted to weave into the very texture of his thought the existence of the series of Upper and Lower Partials (or rather of the earlier ones). If one cannot hear them in nature, one is to realise them "by second nature." He covers well-known ground by demonstrating the first six of both harmonic series, and the weight of his emphasis is of course against any lingering notion in his student's mind of a "fundamental bass."

Later he continues:

'M. d'Indy evidently finds insistence desirable to dispel from the student's mind the notion of a "bottom note," of a bass which is a foundation to an edifice—the true notion of course being that of radiation, your deepest possible "bass" ever radiating still lower as well as upper harmonics.'

It so happens that for many years I have taken much interest in the subject of harmonics, and I am quite familiar with the terms upper and lower partial tones, as used by Helmholtz. But this sense is quite different from that in which the terms are used by M. d'Indy, who evidently employs the term 'upper' in reference to the segments of the prime, and 'lower' in reference to 'partials' which are of lower pitch than the prime. As to these I should very much like to see some definite statements, and shall be very glad if you or your reviewer, or M. d'Indy himself, could refer me to some well-established facts.

I notice that M. d'Indy says expressly 'if one cannot hear them in nature, one is to realise them by second nature.' Does he mean that the 'lower partials' cannot be heard by anyone in nature, but are to be imagined?

Of course, if they are to be heard at all, they are phenomena of quite a distinct character from the 'upper partials.' These latter, as is well known, are due to actual vibrations of segments of solid material, and are governed by well-known laws. In the case of the 'lower partials,' however, there is no solid material to vibrate. We can get sounds from half the length of a wire, such sounds being an octave above the prime, because the half-length of wire is there to vibrate; but how do we get the vibrations of double the length of the wire when the double length of wire is not there to vibrate? The same remarks apply to quarter lengths of wire, and four times the length of wire, and so on.

I am not saying that such duple and quadruple lengths of vibration do not occur; I am only asking for evidence, and pointing out the difference in character of such 'lower' partials from the 'upper.'

May I also point out that, in my opinion, in the words 'ever radiating still lower as well as higher harmonics' the term radiating is not applicable to the upper partials. These are due to the breaking up into vibrating lengths of a straight wire. There is no 'radiating' about this process. No doubt the vibrations themselves from the various segments radiate in all directions, as all sounds do, but the breaking up of the wire into segments cannot be spoken of as 'radiating.' Of course I say nothing about the nature or causes of the lower partials, except that 'partials' does not seem a very apposite term, and I should suggest 'multiple tones' as more suitable.

At present, I must confess that I am somewhat sceptical as to these multiple tones, and I have reason to think that I am not alone in my scepticism. I am, however, ready and anxious to be convinced if they really are natural phenomena, and I hope that this letter may have the effect of eliciting evidence upon the subject which will enable those interested to judge for themselves.—Yours, &c.,

WALTER H. THELWALL.

3, Earl's Court Square, S.W.5.

October 13, 1920.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF THE LONDON
SUBURBAN CHORAL SOCIETIES

SIR,—The Daily Telegraph of September 1 contained an interesting article by Geoffrey Whitworth on 'The English Stage', in which he said that 'In 1914 English drama was, in spite of the usual grumbles, a fairly vigorous institution.' There have, however, been some unsatisfactory changes in English musical life, and the outbreak of the war was by no means responsible for the extinction of a once prominent feature, the London suburban choral society. The 'golden' period was from 1875 to about 1895, when almost every district, high and low, rich and poor, had its choral society. The South and South-Eastern districts of London were particularly favoured, and even the German residents had a well-trained Society at Denmark Hill. I attended with a German friend from Breslau a remarkably fine performance of Gade's 'Earl King's Daughter,' with Sir George Henschel and his gifted wife, née Lillian Bailey, as principal singers. One winter, M. Padeloup, the distinguished French conductor, came over from Paris to attend the wedding of a young lady, a relative of his and of my family, and before returning he expressed a desire to hear some choral Society performances, which, he had been informed, by Gounod, were a great feature in musical England. With the aid of the advertisements in the Musical Times and the announcements of the local newspapers I managed to make up a programme for six nights in the week—finishing up with a Sunday afternoon performance at Holy Trinity Church, Tulse Hill, under the direction of Humphrey J. Stark—without leaving the Surrey side of the Thames. One evening we attended a performance of Cowen's dramatic cantata 'The Corsair' and Bridge's short oratorio 'Mount Moriah' at Gresham Hall, Angell Town, Brixton. Both composers were announced as conductors of their respective works, but Sir Frederic Cowen was unable to attend owing to indisposition. M. Padeloup was much struck with the grandiose character of the 'Mount Moriah' choruses, and was particularly enthusiastic over the organist-composer's abilities as a conductor. 'André, you will live to see that young man become the conductor of the first choral Society in London,' he repeatedly exclaimed. M. Padeloup was no false prophet. Before leaving London, at Charing Cross Station, he told me he hoped to return soon to attend performances in the North of London, but his many engagements and increasing rheumatism made it impossible to gratify his wishes. His principal object was to write a series of articles on the subject for the long since defunct Revue et Gazette Musicale. An unfortunate sufferer by the disappearance of suburban choral societies was the once popular John Frances Barnett. I attended, when a boy, three performances of his 'Ancient Mariner' in different districts of London in one week. The last time I met him was at Baker Street Station during the summer of 1916. There was a violent air raid on that night. He had in his hand an old copy of Chateaubriand's tale 'Atala,' which he had picked up at a stall in Charing Cross Road, and said would make a fine subject for an opera. I replied there was not much chance for English opera now, 'Why not try a dramatic cantata, and repeat the success of the "Ancient Mariner"? "My dear old pupil," he replied, "composing for me is a thing of yesterday. I passed away as a composer of dramatic cantatas with the disappearance of the London suburban choral Societies."—Yours, &c.,

36, Somerleyton Road,
Brixton, S.W. 9.

ANDREW DE TERNANT.

MIXED RHYTHMS IN BACH

SIR.—In his interesting article on Bach's 'Orgelbüchlein' in your last issue Mr. Harvey Grace suggests that, in the chorale 'In dulci jubilo,' Naumann is probably correct in assuming that Bach did not intend a mixed rhythm of duplets against triplets  (Bach writes quavers instead of crotchet triplets), and in substituting  for the original notation.

I should like to suggest that there is something to be said in favour of the opposite view, though I must begin by admitting that Naumann's treatment is fully in accordance with the general practice of Bach's time. Ph. Em. Bach, in Part 1 of his 'Versuch,' &c. ('Essay on the true way of playing the harpsichord'), 1759, Section 3, §27, says:

'Since the frequent use of triplets in so-called common 4-4 time (as also in 2-4 or 3-4 time) one finds many pieces which, instead of the above indications, would often be more conveniently marked 12-8, 9-8, 6-8.

So one divides the notes in Fig. 12 with regard to the second part [i.e., the dotted notes]

as is there shown

Ph. Em. Bach therefore assumes that  will be understood to be equivalent to

The first mention which I have been able to find of and even  played independently as in modern music, is in Türk's 'Klavierschule,' 1789. Türk begins by saying, 'Whether this manner of writing is agreeable or repulsive to the feeling, I leave others to decide,' and concludes with some suggestions for the mastery of the difficulty, 'which,' he adds, 'is not one for beginners.'

It was therefore nearly forty years after J. S. Bach's death that these mixed rhythms found a place in an instruction book.

But why should not Bach have been in advance of his generation—even of his own son—in this as in other matters?

Bars 25 et seq. of 'In dulci jubilo' (omitting the pedal part) run as follows in the Bachgesellschaft edition (vol. ii. of the Organ works, pp. 12, 13), which presumably follows the notation of Bach's MS. in important particulars.

If the crotchets in bar 27 are to be played exactly as in bars 25, 26, and 28, why did Bach so carefully write them differently? Even supposing that the notation has been substituted by the editors for

(as in Ph. Em. Bach's example), it does not materially affect this question.

There is a somewhat parallel case in the organ chorale 'Vom Himmel hoch da komm ich her,' which is printed from a copy of a MS. of Bach's pupil, Kittel, entitled, 'Der anfangende Organist, bestehend in varürten Chorälen mancherlei Art gefertigt von Johann Sebastian Bach.'

The time-signature of the manual part is C 12-8, and of the pedal part, C. The fourth bar from the end runs as follows:

It was a common enough thing in the early 18th century for the bass to bear the signature C against 12-8 in the top part (e.g., in the final Allegro of Corelli's Opera quinta, Sonata No. 3), in which case  in the bass was treated as , but are we necessarily to assume that this was so in the Bach chorale just quoted?

It seems to me that there is at least the possibility of the contrary being the case. Again, in the final Allegro 3-8 of Bach's Sonata for two manuals and pedal (Peters, vol. i., pp. 42-5), the dotted semiquavers are undoubtedly to be taken as ; but what value is to be attached to the semiquaver duplets—e.g., in bar 15?

If they were to be played in the same way as the dotted semiquavers, why did Bach not write them so?

Is it possible that the dotted semiquavers were used to indicate a more marcato rendering, and that the duplets, even if not actually independent of the triplets, as in modern music, approximated to that rendering—a groping on the part of the prophetic Bach after a new effect?

It is possible to play the crotchets in 'In dulci júbilo' in such a way that they are differentiated from the  rhythm without being obtrusively independent of the triplet, and I cannot help believing, after many years' acquaintance with the Chorale, that Bach did intend a difference to be made.

With regard to the execution of dotted notes against triplets, a widespread misunderstanding prevails.

Ph. Em. Bach's rule, quoted above—which, as he himself explicitly says, applies to cases where 4-4, 3-4, 2-4 are only careless substitutes for 12-8, &c.—is often wrongfully extended to genuine 4-4, &c., time.

In the latter, so far from the short note after the dot coinciding with the last note of the triplet, it should be treated as if the note were double-dotted.

Quantz, in his 'Versuch einer Anweisung die Flöte traversiere zu spielen' ('Attempt at a guide to the playing of the flute'), 1752, Section 5, §22, gives the rule as follows:

'The above rule [i.e., playing dotted notes as though double-dotted] is likewise to be observed when one part has triplets against which the other part has dotted notes. One must therefore play the short note after the dot, not with the third note of the triplet, but after it. Otherwise it would sound like 6-8 or 12-8 time. [The italics are mine.] . . . If one played these dotted notes, which occur against triplets, in strict time [i.e., not as double-dotted] the effect, instead of being brilliant and grand, would be lame and stupid.'

It is obvious that the question must often arise, 'Is the time really 4-4 or 12-8?'

For instance, Bach's great C minor Organ Prelude obviously begins in genuine 4-4 time. Are we to suppose that with the entry of the subject:

the time changes to 12-8 interspersed with bars in 4-4 time? It seems more natural in this instance to treat the dotted notes as  than as .

Ph. Em. Bach ('Versuch,' &c., Pt. 2, 1762, ch. 29, §15) gives a very significant warning against always interpreting rules too literally. He says:

'In the notation of dotted notes there is often a lack of sufficient exactness. It has been attempted to set up a sort of general rule for the execution of these notes, which, however, is open to many exceptions. According to this rule the notes following the dot should be played as short as possible, and for the most part this precept is right, but sometimes the distribution of certain notes in the various parts, in accordance with which they must enter together at the same moment, causes an alteration; sometimes an ingratifying effect, not consistent with the defiant character otherwise inherent with these notes, is the reason why one does not linger quite so long over the dot. If one takes only one way of executing these notes as a basis, one loses the other ways.'—Yours, &c.,

University College, F. T. ARNOLD.
Cardiff.

November 8, 1920.

THE HILLER MSS. AND MENDELSSOHN

SIR.—In looking back at the Musical Times for May, 1906, I came across your review of Dr. von Ernst Wolff's 'Life of Mendelssohn—Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy'—in which you state:

'But Dr. Wolff notes two other well-springs which for the present are dry . . . viz., the composer's diaries; also the MS. literary remains bequeathed by Ferdinand Hiller to the Municipal archives of Cologne, which are not to be opened until thirty years after his death, i.e., until 1915; and these, he presumes, will throw much light on many points in Mendelssohn's life and art-work.'

Much has happened since 1915, and it is possible the custodian of the Municipal archives of Cologne has overlooked these MS. remains of Ferdinand Hiller, and that my inquiry may bring out some interesting information.—Yours, &c.,

OLIVER E. FLEET COBB.

Blean House, Victoria Road,
Sidcup, Kent.

September 8, 1920.

'STYLE IN CHURCH MUSIC'

SIR,—A Bristol paper, reporting a lecture by Mr. Harvey Grace on the above subject quotes him as saying 'Above all there should be a clear ecclesiastical atmosphere. Composers who introduced sacred music into operas were careful in this respect. The sacred music in "The Sign of the Cross" could be taken as a case in point. It had the truly ecclesiastical characteristics.' A suggestion that we should go to 'The Sign of the Cross' for our Church music ideals is astounding.—Yours, &c.,

'BRISTOLIAN.'

[Mr. Grace writes:

It is,—so astounding that I am glad I didn't make it. The reference to 'The Sign of the Cross' arose in this way. The point of the lecture was that Church music, whether ancient or modern, ought to be as definitely ecclesiastical as Church architecture, or as the diction of the liturgy. I showed how modern Church composers—e.g., Stanford, Harwood, Bairstow, Ireland, &c.—obtained their ecclesiastical colour by the use of ancient Church themes, or by motives written in imitation thereof. I further pointed out that the method was well-known to theatrical composers, giving as an example 'Shepherd of Souls' from 'The Sign of the Cross,' the opening phrase of which is merely a plain-song tone—viii. I., note for note. The rest of the music to the play may or may not be ecclesiastical in style. I have never heard it. I am glad 'Bristolian's' letter gives me an opportunity for correcting the report.]

Obituary

We regret to record the following death:

ANDREW BLACK, the famous baritone, one of the greatest singers of 'Elijah' within recent memory. He was born in 1859 at Glasgow, where he became an organist. He studied singing at first under Randegger, and afterwards at Milan. His success at a Crystal Palace concert in 1887 brought him into wide renown, and in 1892, at Leeds, he took his place as a Festival singer. Perhaps the climax of his career was his interpretation of Judas in the first performance of 'The Apostles' at Birmingham in 1903. He died in Australia, his adopted country.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of December, 1860:

BARREL ORGAN FOR SALE.—Playing 40 Psalm Tunes and Chants. Four barrels, oak case, gilt pipes. Instrument good as new. Price only 25 guineas. Apply to Mr. Dace, Professor of Music, Chelmsford, Essex.

PHILOSOPHIC WHIZ-GIG. A beautiful illustration of the phenomena of light and colour. On one side the colours of the rainbow maintain their brilliancy in swiftest revolution, on the other side the same colours produce white. Price 1s. Enclose stamps to M. A. Wheeler, Upton Scudamore, Warminster.

MADAME NOVELLO'S FAREWELL CONCERT.

Abridged from The Times.

ON Wednesday, the 21st of November, at the St. James's Hall, Madame Clara Novello sang her last notes in this country. The audience was exceedingly numerous, and every manifestation of artistic skill met with enthusiastic demonstrations of approval. . . . The irreparable loss now sustained by the musical world was deeply felt on the occasion of her farewell, and her execution of the different pieces in the programme, which we have not space more particularly to refer to, elicited unqualified admiration of her artistic refinement, and the avowal from all sides was that her voice at this, the moment of her abdicating the throne she has so long and so gloriously filled, was as clear and penetrating, as vigorous and flexible, as bell-like and silver-toned in quality, and as unerringly modulated, as ever. . . . Her final effort in the solo verse of 'God save the Queen,' brought the concert to a close with that wonderful B flat, for which Madame Novello has been so justly celebrated, and which now can be heard no more by the British public.

DEBAIN'S ANTIPHONAL, or SUBSTITUTE FOR AN ORGANIST.—This instrument can be placed on the keys of any Organ or Harmonium, and is played by a lever in conjunction with small blocks of wood, on which the piece to be performed is arranged, which it faultlessly produces, without the mechanical effect so much objected to in instruments of a similar nature. Persons without the least knowledge of music can by it play with equal facility the common hymn tune, chant, or grand chorus. Price, from 12 guineas. Hymn tunes, chants, &c, arranged from any score to order, according to length, from 2s. each.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

On Friday afternoon, November 5, the Lord Mayor (Sir Edward Cooper) as chairman of the R.A.M. unveiled a memorial tablet which has been placed in the Duke's Hall, as a tribute to the memory of fourteen ex-students who lost their lives in the war. The prayers of dedication were said by the Rev. Dr. Morrison, vicar of St. Marylebone, after which the Academy choir sang Spohr's 'Blest are the departed,' and Sullivan's 'In Memoriam' Overture was played by the orchestra, Dr. Stanley Marchant playing on the organ Sir A. C. Mackenzie's Funeral March from 'Coriolanus.' A large and representative gathering of professors, students, and officials of the Academy filled the Hall.

The fourth and last of the series of historical lectures given by Dr. Frederick G. Shinn in the Duke's Hall took place on Wednesday, November 10, and was devoted to Elizabethan music. At the outset the lecturer traced some of the principal causes which led up to that great and memorable period covered by the reign of Queen Elizabeth, referring to the influence of the discovery of the art of printing, which made possible great advances in literature and education, to the influences of the Renaissance and the Reformation, and the discovery of America with its far-reaching results upon European countries. He then sketched the general as well as the specially musical conditions of the reign, describing the instruments in use and the kinds of music—vocal and instrumental. In order that the students should obtain some idea of Elizabethan music rendered in the manner of the period, a five-part madrigal was played by a string quintet, as an illustration of music for the viols. Ayres by Dowland and Rosseter were sung by Miss Christabel Edwards accompanied by Miss Florence Edgcombe on the harp—in place of the lute—and two of Wilbye's madrigals were sung, first by a few voices, as was the Elizabethan custom, and then repeated by a full choir, the choir also singing Thomas Morley's charming ballet madrigal, 'My bonnie lass she smileth.' The choral items were under the able conductorship of Mr. Henry Beauchamp.

On November 26 and 27 the members of the dramatic class gave two performances of 'David Garrick' and a one-Act play entitled 'Op o' my thumb,' under the direction of Mr. Acton Bond, the cast being changed for each performance.

The usual terminal orchestral concert will take place at Queen's Hall on Monday, December 6, at 3 o'clock.

A number of students of the Metropolitan Academy of Music took part in concerts given by the Academy at Steinway Hall on October 23 and 27.

Music in the Provinces

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS)

BATH

The Municipal Entertainments Committee, with Mr. John Hatton as general director, is giving the public of its best, and it may be safely stated that the standard of music presented at the Pump Room concerts has never been higher. Only after due consideration did the committee feel compelled to change the traditional policy of these concerts by displacing the orchestra in favour of a septet. 'While this is to be deplored, the fact had to be faced that the attendance at the orchestral concerts did not justify the heavy and increasing cost of the orchestra. Had there been reasonably large audiences, the committee would undoubtedly have been prepared to suffer a loss, provided it was not too great.' Thus cogently and briefly the committee urges its reason for the change.

Analysis of the usual weekly programme shows that it may include a great instrumentalist, one or two well-known vocalists, a chamber concert, and ordinary concerts by the septet, with or without vocalists. Mr. Hatton has already engaged, or is in negotiation with, some of the most distinguished artists of the day, to appear up to the end of March, 1921, so that there is promise of a successful season. In addition the Russian Ballet (Noven 22-24), the Glastonbury Players in Rutland Boughton's music-drama 'Bethlehem' (January 3-5), and the English Ballet have been engaged.

Four programmes given on Thursdays from October 14 to November 4 contained sonatas, trios, quartets, and quintets by Haydn, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Raff, Reissiger, Bargiel, Grieg, Dvorák, Sganbati, Ernest Gallaard, Percy Goifrey, and Sidney Rosenbloom.

A special programme of instrumental and choral music was arranged for Armistice Day. The orchestral items, under the directorship of Mr. Jan Hurst, included Sullivan's overture, 'In Memoriam,' Mackenzie's 'Benedictus,' and Coleridge-Taylor's suite 'Othello.' The choir, under the choirmaster Mr. H. J. Davies, was heard to advantage in Holst's 'O England, my country'; Hubert Parry's 'England' and naval ode, 'The Chivalry of the Sea'; and Elgar's 'For the Fallen' and 'Fourth of August.' Madame Hilda Blake was the soloist.

Of exceptional interest was the appearance of the great French pianist, M. Alfred Cortôt. It is needless to enlarge on his unassuming demeanour, his absence of mannerisms, and his superb technique. Suffice it to say that his performance of Debussy's first book of Preludes (twelve) was a revelation in interpretative art.

BELFAST

The season of the Philharmonic Society opened brilliantly with a miscellaneous concert given on October 22. Judging by the crowded audience, the public appreciate the efforts of this old Society to provide music of the highest class selected from all periods. The principal work performed was Elgar's exquisite cantata, 'The Music Makers,' which only once before had been heard in Ireland, when it was produced by this Society in 1915. There was a very strong desire that it should be heard again, and on this occasion Mr. E. Godfrey Brown, the Society's admirable conductor, secured an excellent performance that gained an enthusiastic reception. The solo part was sung by Miss Olga Haley with perfect art. Another outstanding feature of the concert was the first appearance in Ireland of the renowned pianist, Miss Myra Hess. Finer playing than hers has rarely if ever been heard in Ulster Hall, and her selection of items was admirably conceived, comprising Schumann's 'Etudes Symphoniques,' three Etudes by Chopin, and the 'Pavane pour une Infante Defunte' and 'Alborado del gracioso' by Ravel. The contributions of the orchestra consisted of 'The entrance of the gods into Walhalla' (Wagner), Entr'acte, 'Aux Etoiles' (Duparc), and 'Pomp and Circumstance.' It should be remembered that at this concert the band for the first time played at the lower pitch used by the Queen's Hall Orchestra. The Philharmonic programmes for the rest of the season comprise 'Hiawatha's departure' (Coleridge-Taylor), Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' a new work for orchestra, 'Dunluce,' by E. Norman Hay—written expressly for this Society and never before performed—and a new orchestral work by Arnold Trowell.

The first Quinlan concert took place on September 29, when a very fine body of artists, comprising Madame Calvé, Miss Isolde Menges (who took the place of M. Jacques Thibaud), M. Cortôt, and Mr. Joseph Hislop, appeared in the programme.

The first concert of the Belfast Symphony Orchestra was given in Wellington Hall on November 13. Mr. E. Godfrey Brown, the conductor, had got together a quite efficient small orchestra, and the interest of the public was proved by a full house. The work of the Orchestra comprised the 'Marche Hongroise' (Berlioz), the Overture to 'The Mastersingers,' 'Ave Maria' by Arcadelt, very happily scored by Mr. Brown, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, in D. The solo performers were Mr. John Mundy (Dublin) violoncello, and Mr. Frederick M. Stevenson, a local baritone with a fine voice and much musical feeling. These concerts, to which the price of admission is very moderate, seem to supply a great want in the musical life of the city, and a prosperous future should be assured to the public-spirited management.

BIRMINGHAM

Mr. C. W. Perkins, the City organist, gave a special recital at the Town Hall on October 16, before the members of the Birmingham Bach Society. The programme comprised the great B minor Prelude and Fugue, a copious selection from the Choral Preludes, and the jubilant Sinfonia in D, from the cantata 'Wir danken Dir, Gott.' The occasion marked the inauguration of the Society's second season.

The second 'International Celebrity' concert of the season, given at the Town Hall on October 19, was restricted to a characteristic pianoforte recital by Pachmann, opening with Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 31, No. 2, in D minor. The rest of the programme was devoted to Chopin excerpts, in which the aged virtuoso was in his element, although the selection was somewhat disappointing.

The first of three 'Salon Concerts' arranged by Mr. Wilfrid Ridgway, a highly gifted local pianist, was given at the Royal Society of Artists' Exhibition Room on October 22. Mr. Paul Beard joined Mr. Ridgway in a virile and musically performance of Medtner's Violin Sonata in B minor, and in that of Grieg in G major.

At the Town Hall, on October 23, the Birmingham Choral Union did well in 'The Creation,' and the miscellaneous music that followed. Under Mr. Richard Wassell the descriptive character of the choral music was fully realised, and the orchestra and soloists (Miss Margaret Harrison, Mr. Hinde, and Mr. James Howell) helped to give notable effect to the performance.

Mr. Herbert Brown's first concert of a series of four attracted a very large audience to the Town Hall on October 25. With the exception of some pianoforte solos the programme was entirely vocal, and was much in the nature of a ballad concert, pleasing variety being imparted by the introduction of choral music given by the Joseph Lewis Choir, a fine body of singers especially rich in sopranos and contraltos. Their efforts were devoted to an interpretation of the new version of Elgar's 'For the Fallen,' for general ceremonial use, Cyril Jenkins's 'Out of the Silence,' and part-song arrangements of Scottish airs by Bantock and Robertson. The choir is artistically trained by Mr. Lewis, and it was a pleasure to hear such excellent singing, in spite of the preponderance of female tone. Mr. Brown was assisted by Miss Rosina Buckman, Mr. Maurice D'Oisly, Mr. Robert Radford, and Miss Irene Scharrer.

A pianoforte recital by the eminent French pianist, M. Alfred Cortôt, in the Town Hall, on October 27, served to inaugurate Mr. Max Mossel's series of four concerts and to introduce to the Birmingham public an artist whom repute rightly places in the front rank.

The first of the Quinlan Subscription Concerts—of which five will be given during the season—was held at the Town Hall on October 28, and proved a delightful musical function. On this occasion Madame Emma Calvé made her first appearance at Birmingham, and here, as everywhere else, she simply charmed her hearers. Mr. Arthur Rubinstein and M. Jacques Thibaud joined in an admirable performance of César Franck's Sonata for violin and pianoforte. Mr. Cecil Sherwood sang in place of Mr. Joseph Hislop, who was indisposed.

'Elijah,' given by the Midland Musical Society at the Town Hall on October 30, constituted the inaugural performance of this Society's season. Owing to the serious illness of Mr. A. J. Cotton, the conductorship devolved upon Mr. John Tyler, who certainly proved a worthy and efficient substitute, attaining excellent choral effects and also seeming to handle the orchestra with a sure grip. Mr. C. W. Perkins at the organ gave great assistance in the whole exposition of the oratorio. The principals were Miss Dorothy Freeman, Miss Muriel Boughton, Mr. Walter J. Ottey, and Mr. Albert E. Townsend.

Miss Beatrice Hewitt, an accomplished local pianist, gave the first of three Saturday afternoon concerts at the Royal Society of Artists' Exhibition Room on October 30, when she had artistic help from Miss Evelyn Stevenson (vocalist) and Miss Effie Rogers (accompanist). Her solos included a Nocturne (MS.) by Willy Lehmann, Arnold Bax's 'May Night in the Ukraine,' and Julius Harrison's 'Worcestershire Suite.' Miss Stevenson's choice of songs covered a wide range from Purcell to Debussy.

A somewhat novel pianoforte recital was given by Mr. Arthur Hirst at the Midland Institute on November 2. His recital was interspersed by remarks on the music, and a brief discourse on the average man's attitude towards music.

The Birmingham Festival Choral Society's first concert of the season at the Town Hall, on November 3, was of special interest inasmuch as Granville Bantock's 'The Great God Pan'—which was first heard at Glasgow last year—was given here for the first time, under the composer's direction. The poem is by Mrs. Helen F. Bantock, and when completed will comprise two parts. The first part, entitled 'Pan in Arcady,' was given in its entirety, the performance lasting over two hours. The second part, 'The Festival of Pan' has not yet been completed. From the start 'Pan in Arcady' obviously suggests that it contains all the elements essential for a stage performance. It is certainly a remarkable creation, its chief feature being the elaborate orchestral score, which abounds with technical difficulties. Want of space will not permit of any detailed description; be it said, however, that a first hearing leaves the impression of much inventive and descriptive power. The work for chorus representing Nymphs, Dryads, Fauns, Satyrs, Maenads, Earth-Spirits, and Hunters, is of somewhat abortive character. The dramatis personæ comprise Pan (Mr. Herbert Brown), Echo (Miss Lilian Rogers), a Shepherd (Mr. Charles Hill), and the Moon (Miss Astra Desmond). It was evident that the exponents had to cope with a new idiom, but the performance as a whole was not wanting in colour and technique. There is also an organ part, which was entrusted to Mr. C. W. Perkins. The work was well received by a large audience, which included Sir Henry Wood.

The Carl Rosa Opera Company closely followed the Beecham opera, giving a fortnight's season at the Prince of Wales' Theatre during November 1-13, the repertoire including 'Lohengrin,' 'The Jewels of the Madonna,' 'La Tosca,' 'Tales of Hoffmann,' 'Madame Butterfly,' 'Faust,' 'La Bohème,' 'Aida,' 'Maritana,' 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 'Pagliacci,' and 'Carmen.' The performances were of the usual standard, and highly gratifying in every respect.

The annual concerts of the City Police Band, given at the Town Hall in the afternoon and evening of November 5, under the direction of Mr. Appleby Matthews, proved conclusively that the band has made remarkable progress under its new conductor. The feature of the concert was the performance of Gustav Holst's Suite in E flat, written specially for military band, the work consisting of three parts—Chaconne, Intermezzo, and March. The new composition was enthusiastically received, as indeed was the whole of the programme. Miss Madeline Collins and Mr. Arthur Jordan were the vocalists, Mr. Paul Beard solo violinist, and Mr. Perkins was at the organ.

The Theatre Royal Sunday evening orchestral concerts continue to draw large houses, and the orchestra under Mr. Appleby Matthews gradually ripens into a body of players of eminence, which can be attained only by continuous ensemble playing under the same conductor. At one of the concerts Mr. Arthur Cooke played Liszt's 'Totentanz' for pianoforte accompanied by the orchestra.

At the third 'Celebrity' Subscription Concert at the Town Hall, on November 8, Dame Melba was the only lady vocalist. She had for coadjutors Mr. Dinh Gilly, Mr. Lionel Tertis (viola solo), Mr. Howard-Jones (pianoforte), Mr. Arthur Mason (organ), and Miss Ella Ivimey (accompanist). The great prima donna was heard in a varied and well chosen selection of songs, which found the utmost appreciation. The other artists in the programme each revealed individual talent of the highest order.

On November 10 the City of Birmingham Orchestra held its first Symphony Concert at the Town Hall, when the occasion was made distinctive by the visit of Sir Edward Elgar, who conducted three of his own compositions, namely 'Falstaff,' the Violoncello Concerto, and the second Symphony, which comprised the whole of the evening's programme. Previous to the concert a civic welcome was accorded to Sir Edward by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress (Alderman William A. and Mrs. Cadbury), at the Council house, to which some two hundred ladies and gentlemen were invited. The gathering was representative, and included most of our leading musicians. The preparation of the above three important works had devolved upon Mr. Appleby Matthews and Mr. Alex. Cohen (the distinguished leader of the Orchestra), and was thoroughly well done, for the playing revealed points of excellence which made the interpretation of these masterworks under their composer's energetic conductorship a memorable event. Mr. Felix Salmond, a master of his art, was the soloist in the Concerto. The audience was most enthusiastic and demonstrative.

BOURNEMOUTH

The Bournemouth Symphony Concerts have made a more than usually brilliant start this season, some of the works introduced into the opening programmes having aroused an interest quite in excess of the average. The orchestral playing, while taxing the powers of conductor and orchestra to the utmost, has disclosed an intimate understanding of the requirements of the various compositions, and the financial returns show an increase over those of last year—and this, too, when the town is emptier than it has been for several seasons. It may not unreasonably be assumed that such gratifying public support has to a certain extent been forthcoming as an earnest of the townfolks' determination to ensure the upkeep of the Orchestra as at present constituted. We think this consideration is a decided factor in the situation. On the other hand, there is not the slightest doubt that some subscribers of many years' standing—and subscribers of substance—have resented the increased charges, and have discontinued their patronage. Apparently there are certain people who cannot, or will not, face the logic of hard facts. It is a sheer waste of breath to recount to them the enormous advance in expenditure that the running of high-class concerts now entails. The discontented element consists mainly of those who have been spoilt, as it were, by the ridiculously low charges that formerly procured admission to these fine music-makings.

Taking the concerts in their proper order, that which was given on October 14 will be chiefly remembered for the wholly excellent performance of Beethoven's fourth Symphony—a performance replete with gracefulness—and for the revival of Hamilton Harty's Violin Concerto in D, a work of real musicianly feeling, which, however, though soundly written, cannot at the same time be acquitted of a certain laboriousness. It was played very deftly and with assured artistic insight by Miss Murray Lambert, whose intonation, however, was not always quite accurate. The 'Garden of Allah' Suite by Landon Ronald—which the composer was prevented from conducting by reason of an injury to his arm—was given its first performance here. It cannot be described as revealing a great amount of originality.

On October 21 Elgar's A flat Symphony came to a hearing, and was, of course, the central attraction of the programme. Mr. Dan Godfrey and the Orchestra rose to great heights in the performance of this composition, the playing being really magnificent. A new Pianoforte Concerto by Wilhelm Stenhammar—a work of considerable interest, though too much of a musical mosaic to be entirely successful—was splendidly performed by Miss Johanne Stockmar, whose reappearance was warmly welcomed by her many Bournemouth admirers.

The César Franck Symphony and Mr. Arnold Trowell's delightful violoncello playing in a revised version of a Mozart Concerto were the pick of the following week's programme, though mention must not be omitted of Mr. Trowell's further contribution in the shape of his exceedingly pleasing tone-poem, 'The Waters of Peneios,' which richly deserves wider recognition than it has apparently yet received.

Scriabin's second Symphony, Glazounov's 'Carneval' Overture, Paderewski's Polish Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, and Julius Harrison's 'Worcestershire Suite,' constituted a decidedly interesting programme on November 4. The Scriabin Symphony and Glazounov's Overture are now fairly familiar here, but the English composition was being played for the first time at Bournemouth. It is a work of distinct merit, the four pieces of the Suite, although in direct contrast, rivalling each other in ingenuity and general effectiveness. Mr. Harrison himself conducted the performance, and both by his talent as composer and his genuine abilities as conductor, won the unequivocal approval of all enlightened music-lovers present. The Polish composer's engaging work was played by Mr. Gordon Bryan, whose appearances at the Winter Gardens are always looked forward to with pleasure. In the Fantasia he has discovered a composition particularly suited to his style and temperament, his adroit interpretation being full of animation, while imbued with the authentic spirit of the music.

BRISTOL

Bristol Choral Society opened our concert season on Saturday, October 23, with a good but not remarkable performance of the 'Dream of Gerontius.' Mr. George Riseley, the conductor, by his significant interpretation and his avoidance of theatrical effect, succeeded in imparting a proper sense of solemnity to this impressive work. The choir, however, needs a sharper drilling than, apparently, it had received, if its work is to compare with the fine results of previous years. Tenors are of course the weak point, and the sopranos are perhaps too brilliant for the rest of the voices. Mr. Gervase Elwes was the right man to interpret the deeply devotional tenor solos of Gerontius; Miss Phyllis Lett, always capable and unfailingly careful, imparted nobility to the Angel's music; and Mr. Charles Knowles was the Priest. In the miscellaneous selection which followed, two choral dances from Borodin's 'Prince Igor' were very notable for their emphasis, and wild beauty, and Miss Phyllis Lett gave a touchingly beautiful interpretation of G. O'Connor Morris's 'Army of the Dead.'

The first Quinlan concert—which also drew a full house to Colston Hall, the cheaper seats being crowded out—was marked by the farewell of the great Calvé, an artist whose singing is always a sheer delight. Mr. Cecil Sherwood, M. Jacques Thibaud, and Mr. Arthur Rubinstein contributed in the success of a memorable concert.

On October 30, M. Cortôt came to Bristol for the first time, and an audience at Colston Hall realised that there had been no exaggeration in the reports of his greatness. On November 1, Dame Clara Butt also had a night of triumph at the first 'International Celebrity' concert. Her fellow-artists were Mr. Kennerley Rumford, Mr. Albert Sammons, M. Josef Hollmann, and Mr. William Murdoch.

Something has at last been heard of the proposal made by the Colston Hall committee of the City Council, now that the Hall has become the citizens' property, that a series of organ recitals should be given on the famous instrument installed there. There has been some correspondence and criticism in the local press, and some doubt has found expression concerning the practicability of the scheme. It has become known that the nimble ninepence will not carry a would-be patron very far, if the attendances do not equal those which organ music-lovers make at St. Mary Redcliff. Three shillings and ninepence, is, we believe, to be the top price.

On November 13, Messrs. Boosey's London ballad concert party (a group of eminent artists) gave a characteristic concert of a kind that does not often occur at Bristol.

Lastly, must be noted the ever-welcome visits of the D'Oyly Carte and Carl Rosa Opera Companies, which both drew crowded houses to the Prince's Theatre. The Carl Rosa Company, despite the absence of 'Tosca,' presented a brilliant programme comprising Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly' and 'La Bohème,' Verdi's 'Aida,' and Ferrari's 'Jewels of the Madonna,' that was splendidly mounted and received with every mark of popular approval, evidenced in long queues and tremendous applause. The month that these two companies spend at Bristol is always a notable one.

During October Mr. Geoffrey Shaw lectured to the Bristol branch of the British Music Society, his text being that Church art stood in need of reform and improvement. He stated that a good deal of Church music was of a standard that an ordinary music-hall audience would hiss off the stage. The congregation was too often choir-ridden, and the musical part of the services had in many places gravitated to a dead dull level of uniformity. Mr. Harvey Grace has also visited Bristol, and not only associated himself with the notable players whom Mr. Ralph Morgan has chosen for his excellent and valuable series of organ recitals at St. Mary Redcliff Church, but he also lectured to the Church Music Society at Clifton on 'Style in Church Music.' He pleaded that Church music should be as definitely ecclesiastical in style as Church architecture, furniture, or the diction of her liturgy, and by means of numerous illustrations at the pianoforte showed how composers attained or fell short of this style. A capable choir, conducted by Mr. A. S. Warrell, sang works by Farrant, Redford, Walmisley, Charles Wood, and Elgar.

CORNWALL

The advent in August of Mr. H. S. Middleton to Truro in the capacity of organist at the Cathedral is already having some of the results fervently hoped for. Convened by Mr. J. H. Williams, organist of St. Mary's Wesleyan Church, a Choral and Orchestral Society was formed with Mr. Middleton as conductor and Mr. Williams as deputy. For many years Truro has been moribund as regards music, the Cornwall Competitions being almost the only musical event taking place throughout the year. The new Society has put 'Messiah' in rehearsal—perhaps a wise choice under the circumstances; but we hope it does not indicate the lines on which it is intended exclusively to continue.

'Merrie England' was sung by Liskeard Choral Society on October 11, under the baton of the Rev. E. A. Saunders. The choir numbered forty, and the orchestra consisted of players from the district.

COVENTRY AND DISTRICT

The Coventry Chamber Music Society was early in the field of a long list of promised concerts. Its first programme attracted a larger audience than usual to St. Mary's Hall, Coventry, on the evening of October 26. Owing to the illness of two of its members, the Arthur Hytch String Quartet was unable to appear. Nevertheless, three excellent artists were engaged at short notice in Miss Winifred Taylor (pianoforte), Mr. Charles Bye (violin), and Mr. Frederick Bye (violoncello). Change of performers necessitated change of programme. The Elgar Quartet and Mozart Quintet, which had been anticipated, were abandoned in favour of compositions by Bach, John Ireland, Dvorák, and Arensky. The three instrumentalists succeeded in entering into the spirit of the interpretation of each item.

November brought a number of concerts all of which were crowded into the last ten days.

Of recent Church music heard at Coventry, an organ recital by Mr. Cuthbert K. Osmond, the seventeen years' old assistant-organist at Salisbury Cathedral, was of exceptional interest. He gave a well-varied programme in Holy Trinity Church, on October 17, assisted by Mr. Donald Bradshaw (vocalist).

At Leamington, the Orchestral Society has Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony in preparation for its first concert this season, while the Leamington Male-Voice Choir is to enlist the services of Mr. Robert Radford in a programme that has yet to be announced.

DEVON

Since Dr. Ernest Bullock took the post of organist at Exeter Cathedral eleven months ago he has done much to awake musical life in the city. His weekly organ recitals have made an almost unbroken series, and the music played has constituted a course of education in organ music of all periods, while attracting many hundreds of hearers. The recital on October 21 may be cited as a special event, vocal music being introduced, and a collection of £15 13s. 6d. taken for the relief of Mont Didier, the French town 'adopted' by Exeter. But even more far reaching in results than the organ recitals is the formation of an organization known as Exeter Chamber Music Club, which has just been inaugurated. The membership comprises performers and listeners, and no doubt numerous chamber music parties will be formed as a result of this means of mutual introduction. The Mayor, Mr. A. C. Roper, is president, and Mr. R. G. Rudd hon. secretary. The scheme, that owes its inception to Dr. Bullock, is an excellent one, and at the first meeting much delight was provided by the playing of a Beethoven Pianoforte Trio (in F) by Mrs. Bullock, Miss Phyllis Smith, and Mr. W. L. Sutcliffe. More particulars of the Club will doubtless be forthcoming next month.

Members of the South-western section of the Incorporated Society of Musicians met at Plymouth on October 16 to hear a recital of modern pianoforte and vocal music arranged by Mr. A. C. Faull. The outstanding features were works for two pianofortes—Saint-Saëns's Variations on a theme of Beethoven and a Theme with variations and final fugue by Rosenbloom.

The tiny fishing village of Beer, near Seaton, on the east coast of Devon, is to be congratulated on its enterprise in forming a choral society. The Lyme Regis Choral Society has been revived, and now includes the operatic element; Seaton Choral and Operatic Society has started a new era with 'Patience' in rehearsal; and Colyton amateur operatic members are studying 'H.M.S. Pinafore.' In connection with Honiton Choral Society the study circle formed by Mr. Lancelot Holden has to complete its figure for lack of larger accommodation than thirty members. On November 10, a concert-lecture was occupied with Bach, Handel, and Purcell. Mr. Walter Belgrove (Exeter Cathedral) sang vocal examples, and Purcell's Golden Sonata for violins, cello, and harpsichord was played. The Choral Society is preparing 'The Revenge,' 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (Parry), 'Ode to the west wind' (Charles Wood), and part-songs by Elgar and Boughton. Mr. Holden is also forming a music study circle at Exmouth. Sidmouth Choral Society (Mr. J. A. Bellamy) is rehearsing 'Elijah.'

The singing of Gunnislake and District Male Choir (Mr. W. Leverton) at Plymouth on October 20 was reminiscent of that of the Welsh choirs in its beauty of tone and emotional impulse. Technically the Choir has yet some way to go, but the singers are evidently out for progress. Their concert was memorable for the exquisite singing of Mlle. Fifiine de la Côte.

In the week beginning October 20, Barnstaple Amateur Operatic Society gave successful performances of 'The Pirates of Penzance.' Mr. A. Brackenbury was chorus-master, Mr. Percy Parish led the orchestra, and Mr. Manning conducted.

Liza Lehmann's cycle, 'The Persian Garden,' received a very good interpretation at Bideford on October 27, the principals being Madame Adeline Delines, Miss Hetty Gent, Mr. Gerald O'Brien, and Mr. Charles Keywood, with Mr. Vivian Langrish at the pianoforte. Each artist contributed interesting solos to two programmes, the proceeds of the concerts—organized by Miss Guerra da Fontoura—being given to the fund for rebuilding Edgehill College, which was destroyed by fire in June last. Madame Clara Butt, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, Mr. William Murdoch, Mr. Albert Sammons, and M. Hollman toured Devon in November. The three instrumentalists played the Saint-Saëns Pianoforte Trio in F quite delightfully.

The Rev. Greville Cooke, a musician of outstanding gifts, is, unfortunately, about to leave Tavistock, and a recital given on November 1 was partly in the nature of a farewell. Mr. Cooke played three pianoforte preludes by Bach, Chopin, and César Franck, and with Mr. George East (violin) played the César Franck Sonata. Mr. Orlando Jolliffe sang several songs composed by Mr. Cooke ('Two quiet songs,' 'Innisfree'), and Mr. Cooke played his own arrangements for pianoforte of 'Sealight' and 'Lagoon' (his own orchestral compositions), and sang songs by Blow, Elgar, Vaughan Williams, and Strauss. Mr. Cooke will be much missed, for in addition to adding to the musical life of Tavistock in various ways, he has also trained the girls of the Church Schools to sing very beautifully.

DUBLIN

The recently formed Irish Musical League has already given evidence of doing things—not merely projecting or talking. A series of eight Sunday afternoon concerts at the Abbey Theatre was auspiciously inaugurated on October 17, with Dr. Esposito's orchestra, and Miss Dinah Copeman as pianist. It is hoped to develop an Irish Symphony Orchestra for the performance of the best classical and modern works, with special reference to compositions of the 20th century school. The League has it in mind also to erect a suitable concert-hall, a veritable desideratum at Dublin. The second concert was given on October 31, the artists being Signor and Madame Grossi, with Mr. Percy Whitehead as vocalist. The principal novelty was a selection by Bossi, the director of the Academy of St. Cecilia, Rome.

On October 26 and 27, Dr. George H. P. Hewson, organist of St. Patrick's Cathedral, gave two organ recitals in the Cathedral in aid of the choir fund. He performed a fine selection, including Bach's well-known Passacaglia in C minor. One of the novelties was an Intermezzo by Mr. George Webster, a musical amateur of promise.

The Quinlan concert on October 25, notwithstanding the disturbed state of the city, was a great success. The four stars were Chemet, Rosing, Rubinstein, and Curzon. Madame Chemet delighted her audience, and as a graceful compliment played an interesting item by John Field. The vocal selections by Messrs. Rosing and Curzon were in good taste, and Mr. Rubinstein played brilliantly. Nor must it be forgotten that Mr. Ivor Newton did splendid work at the pianoforte.

In aid of the Cancer Hospital a rare treat was given in the Theatre of the Royal Dublin Society on October 28, when Mr. W. E. Hopkins and Mr. Walter Starkie collaborated in an organ and violin recital. Quite a novelty was Vitali's Concerto for organ and violin, but conspicuously fine was Handel's sixth Violin Sonata, wonderfully fresh after two hundred years. Mr. Hopkins is rapidly becoming one of our leading Irish organists.

At the conferring of degrees at the National University of Ireland on October 27, the degree of Mus. Bac. was conferred on Miss Annie G. Brereton, with honours in the second class.

Among the recent acquisitions by the National Gallery of Ireland is a rare portrait of John Field, of Dublin, discovered by Dr. Grattan Flood in an old Russian book found in Petrograd, and presented to him by the late distinguished musicologist, Michel Brenet.

The McNally Opera Chorus has been launched as an Opera Company under the experienced direction of Mr. Vincent O'Brien.

Miss Jean Nolan's song recital at the Abbey Theatre on November 3 was a great success, her group of songs being well chosen. It was gratifying that an exquisite old Irish melody, 'At the mid-hour of night,' could hold its own with the best Continental examples. Miss Rhoda Coghil played some acceptable pianoforte solos, and amply demonstrated her improved technique: indeed she is easily one of our best pianists. As accompanist, Dr. J. F. Larchet was all that could be desired.

Capt. Joshua F. Watson has been appointed by the Governors of the Royal Irish Academy of Music as senior professor of the violin, in succession to Signor Simonetti, resigned. The other candidates for the vacancy included Mr. Arthur Darley and Signor Grossi, the former of whom is one of the finest violinists in Ireland.

On November 7, at La Scala Theatre, the Dublin Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Vincent O'Brien, gave a very fine concert, assisted by four members of the Carl Rosa Opera Company (Miss Eda Bennie, Miss Constance Willis, Mr. Albert Bond, and Mr. Appleton Moore), in aid of the Mater Hospital. A crowded house enjoyed a feast of good things, including Grainger's 'Molly on the Shore.'

Quite a successful three weeks' season must be chronicled to the credit of the Carl Rosa Opera Company, which wound up on November 6 with Balfe's perennial 'Bohemian Girl.' It was a 'good-all-round' company, and as such afforded much satisfaction to large audiences.

The first classical recital of the season 1920-21, in connection with the Royal Dublin Society, was given on November 8 by Miss Myra Hess, the well-known pianist. Her best number was Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 10, although of course she elicited much applause by the Chopin studies and the Brahms Waltzes. On November 15 the second recital (pianoforte and string) by Dr. Esposito, Dr. Adolf Brodsky (violin), Mr. Frank Park (viola), and Mr. Walter Hatton (violoncello) was announced, particulars of which will be given in the next issue.

On November 14 the Irish Musical League gave a successful vocal and instrumental recital in the Abbey Theatre, the artists including Dr. Larchet, Miss Jean Nolan, Miss A. Lord, Miss O'Hara, Mr. Hoyle, and Mr. Schofield. On the same evening, at La Scala Theatre, the Dublin Symphony Orchestra gave a second concert in aid of the Mater Hospital. Four members of the Carl Rosa Company assisted. The programme was 'popular,' and included such items as Offenbach's 'Barcarolle,' Benedict's 'The moon has raised,' the 'Zampa' Overture, and Clay's 'She wandered down.' Mr. Vincent O'Brien was the conductor.

Miss Eurydice Draconi, the brilliant Greek pianist, kindly gave a charity performance at Palmerstown, Straffan (near Dublin), by courtesy of the Earl and Countess of Mayo, on November 12, and delighted a large and aristocratic audience with a varied selection, ranging from Scarlatti to Scriabin. She gave a Dublin performance at the Abbey Theatre on November 15.

EDINBURGH

The first Quinlan Concert was given on October 16, when Madame Calvé made her first appearance before an Edinburgh audience. The interesting feature of the concert, however, was the appearance of Mr. Joseph Hislop, a native of Edinburgh, whose reputation promises to be world-wide. Critics are unanimous in their praise, and unreserved in their use of adjectives in describing his voice and style. It would seem that Scotland has produced a phenomenal 'star.' M. Jacques Thibaud and Signor Siloti completed the concert party, their performances being of the usual high standard.

Madame Norris-Adams, who has not been heard for some years, recently gave one of her cultured and interesting song and story recitals on Scots song, her subject being 'The Women Song-writers of Scotland.' She was assisted by Miss Dewar, Miss Todd, and Miss Davidson in her illustrations.

A young contralto vocalist, Miss Alice M'Lauchlan, gave an excellent recital of classic and modern songs on October 20. Another equally enjoyable recital on October 22, of the same nature, was given by Miss Florence Johnstone, also a contralto, and Miss Jean Summers gave a vocal recital assisted by Mr. Millar Craig and Mr. De la Haye. A wide range of composers was drawn upon—e.g., Weber, Puccini, Verdi, Rimsky-Korsakov, and modern ballad writers—the concert-giver proving herself an accomplished artist. All of these ladies gave choice programmes, and the fact that this type of concert is establishing itself very firmly in the city this season augurs well for local improvement in musical taste.

Whatever success the Beecham Opera Company meet with in other provincial centres, Edinburgh leaves nothing to be desired. The booking was phenomenal, and 'house full' was the notice every evening. 'The Mastersingers' was undoubtedly the feature of the tour.

The first of three pianoforte recitals was given on October 13 by Mr. Frederic Lamond. His programme included the Paganini Variations in A minor by Brahms, the Funeral March Sonata of Chopin, and the G major Sonata, Op. 109, of Beethoven.

Mention should here be made of a project to form a Repertory Theatre at Edinburgh. The Repertory Company was projected twelve months ago to stimulate interest in dramatic art, but that is not all. It has already secured an orchestra of twenty-five performers, and it is hoped that in the future genuine musical plays may be included in the repertoire. We wish it all success.

GLASGOW

On November 4 Mrs. Curzon Watt, one of our best resident pianists, gave a successful recital of modern pianoforte compositions, the composers represented being Scriabin, Debussy, William Baines, Cyril Scott, Frank Bridge, and MacDowell. A feature of the programme—and one which might be adopted generally by recitalists—was the exceedingly concise but remarkably helpful annotations. On November 9 Mr. Jean Baptiste Toner, a young Glasgow pianist, made his first public appearance in the city. Mr. Toner has the technique of a virtuoso allied with a fine musical temperament, and these qualities should eventually place him in the first rank of pianists. His splendid powers were best exhibited in groups of pieces by Chopin and Ravel.

The Beecham Opera Company began a month's season at the Theatre Royal on November 8, and up to the time of writing everything points to the success of the visit in its artistic and box office aspects. The Company is a strong one in respect of principals, chorus, orchestra, and conductors, and the programmes are on the whole very attractive. An event of some interest here was the appearance of Mr. Andrew Shanks, a local singer whose fine reading of the part of Hans Sachs in 'The Mastersingers' created a good impression.

The season of the Choral and Orchestral Union opened on November 13, when an audience of gratifying dimensions assembled to greet Mr. Landon Ronald and the Scottish Orchestra. For this occasion the programme was fittingly drawn up on popular lines, including as it did Dvorák's 'New World' Symphony, Mendelssohn's 'Ruy Blas' Overture, Delibes's 'Sylvia' ballet, and Tchaikovsky's Theme and Variations from the Suite in G. Georgio Corrado was the solo vocalist. The personnel of the Orchestra is pretty much the same as last season, an excellent leader of the first violins being found in Mr. B. Squire, and if the playing at the opening concert is a foretaste of its normal quality, a highly successful season is in prospect. The Helensburgh Subscription Concerts, in abeyance during the war, have been resumed, and on November 12 a delightful programme was played by Mr. Albert Sammons and Mr. William Murdoch. The ever-popular 'Gondoliers' had a week's performances by Mr. Hutton Malcolm's Opera Company (amateur), the proceeds, as usual, being devoted to charitable purposes. The concerts of the Glasgow Abstinists' Union (ballad) are now being given at their old quarters in the City Hall, and are attracting large audiences. Mr. John Pulein by his monthly recitals at St. Mary's Cathedral is doing a good work in popularising organ music. He is a very accomplished performer, whose programmes have invariably the merit of freshness. Choral numbers by the Cathedral choir add variety to the occasions. Concerts by visiting entrepreneurs are represented by the Quinlan Company, which appeared on November 12, and an 'International Celebrity' company which included Dame Melba.

HASTINGS

An absence of six months at Harrogate has if anything improved the ensemble of the Municipal Orchestra, and it was patent when the musical season opened at the Royal Concert Hall on October 30 that the new surroundings are all to the good. A slight clouding of detail was more than counterbalanced by the surprising volume of tone produced by three dozen players in this building. At the first symphony concert, on November 4, Mr. Julian Clifford adapted his tempi to suit the hall, and a high standard of performance was maintained throughout Dvorák's 'New World' Symphony. Mr. Anderson Tyrer evoked unstinted admiration by his pianoforte playing in Mackenzie's Scottish Concerto, and proved that he is well able to grapple with even more exacting works.

The reading of Beethoven's C minor at the second symphony concert was not so traditional as to rob it of interpretative individuality, though Mr. Clifford's effort was both sound and dignified. Very impressive was the conductor's own tone-poem, 'Lights out' (in memory of Ernest Farrar, killed in action in 1918), where the composer's marked personality is underlined by some vivid and picturesque instrumentation. Boëllmann's 'Variations Symphoniques' brought forth a particularly fine 'cellist in the person of Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees, whose tone, technique, and rhythm are all equally beyond dispute.

Mr. Mark Hambourg was less than usually extravagant on November 6; indeed, although he shocked us with his 'Harmonious Blacksmith,' he made ample amends in Beethoven's Concerto in C minor. Here he was faithful both to the text and spirit of the music. Mr. John Dunn came and conquered on November 12. His style and tone were alike magnetic in Max Bruch's G minor Concerto.

Some hundred and fifty girls from the Municipal Secondary Schools gave a concert in the Drill Hall, and revealed what careful training can do. A well-balanced performance of Schubert's 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' in four parts, was specially commendable.

LIVERPOOL

Mr. Landon Ronald conducted the first concert of the Philharmonic Society on October 19, which opened in a rather remarkable way in the accents of a single chorus soprano (unaccompanied) in the first two bars of Balfour Gardiner's 'There were three ravens.' This cleverly constructed eight-part chorus in the modern manner was extremely well sung under Dr. Pollitt's direction. The unconventional Violin Concerto by Delius, on a first hearing revealed many moments of beauty in its harmonic modernity. It is a continuous, unbroken tone-poem, in which the orchestral background is no less interesting than the obbligato solo part, which was finely played by Mr. Albert Sammons. The conductor's orchestral Suite, 'The Garden of Allah,' is incidental music of the best type—rhythmic, tuneful, strenuous, exciting. It quite caught the popular ear. For the others, there were compensations in Brahms's 'St. Antony' Variations, finely played. Miss Madeline Collins sang with flexible art and feeling in Mozart's 'Non mi dir' and Charpentier's 'Depuis le jour.'

For the second Philharmonic concert, on November 2, Sir Henry Wood arranged a diversified programme which he conducted with characteristic energy and mastery. It contained Goldmark's beautiful 'Sakuntala' Overture, and the Symphony in B flat by Ernest Chausson (1855-99), a pupil of César Franck, whose influences are plainly to be traced in a work of great power and unflagging movement. Serious and constructive, without the tonal vagueness of the later French School, the work reveals nobility of thought and expression if not sustained inspiration. It has been previously heard here, and well-deserved such a rehearing as it received under Sir Henry's direction. A great contrast was made by Strauss's 'Death and Transfiguration.' To many, however, the chief interest centered in the singing of a young Welsh artist, Miss Leila Mégame, the possessor of a beautiful, well-trained voice.

The first Max Mossel concert on October 16 was sustained by M. Alfred Cortôt, who gave a wonderful exhibition, as one of the world's great pianists, in playing Chopin's twenty-four Preludes, Saint-Saëns's 'Etude en forme de Valse,' Ravel's 'Jeux d'eau,' and Debussy's 'La Cathédrale engloutie.' Of the latter piece, as well as of the Chopin music, M. Cortôt is surely an unexcelled exponent.

The singing of Madame Calvé at the Quinlan concert on October 23 has left an unforgettable memory of a golden voice, still in its prime, a perfect art, and a gracious presence. Signor Lenghi Cellini also found favour in his tenor songs, and the instrumental items were in the hands of great executants in M. Jacques Thibaud and Mr. Arthur Rubinstein, who collaborated with fine effect in Franck's Violin and Pianoforte Sonata in A major. Mr. Harold Craxton was an exceptional accompanist.

Mrs. M. Kennedy-Fraser, assisted by Miss Patuffa Kennedy-Fraser and Miss Margaret Kennedy, had a highly appreciative audience in Crane Hall on October 25, at their recital of 'Songs of the Hebrides.' Examples of these notable songs were given in various styles, interpreted with delightful art, both vocal and instrumental. The absence of printed programmes tended rather to heighten the interest, for Mrs. Kennedy-Fraser's spoken explanations of the various items added a personal charm in their vivid touches of romance and humour.

The Rodewald Society's concerts were resumed on October 25, when the Catterall String Quartet gave admirable performances of Beethoven's colossal A minor Quartet, Op. 132, followed by Arensky's melodious Quartet in G, which brought its hearers down to earth again. The Brahms Quartet in A minor completed a well-contrasted scheme. At the second concert, on November 8, Miss Jo Lamb (violin), Miss Kathleen Moorhouse (violinocello), with a predominant partner in Mr. Edward Isaacs as pianist, were heard in Dvorák's fine, if diffuse, Trio in F minor, in which is a captivating Allegretto. The two young string-players made an excellent impression by their deft skill in the Passacaglia by Halvorsen—founded, if one mistakes not, on a theme by Handel—and a Sonata in A for violin and pianoforte, by Mr. Isaacs, was also included in the programme.

At the concert of the Harmonic Choral Society on November 6, the singing was an example of what can be done with fresh, young material, disciplined with patience and infused with enthusiasm. Would that similar organizations were at work in all districts of the city. We should then be nearer to the solution of our social salvation. The choir possesses bright and tuneful sopranos and good contraltos; the male-voice element is hardly equal, and could be made more effective by being somewhat raised behind the ladies. Of the pieces submitted, not all were so beautifully sung as Elgar's 'My love dwelt in a Northern land,' the choir being less suited in Elgar's 'Challenge of Thor,' the vocal framework of which demands a larger number of voices and an orchestra. The same may be said of Dudley Buck's 'Hymn to Music,' which, however, was sung with spirit and precision. Less effective, and with loss of pitch in each verse, was the singing of Bantock's 'Annie Laurie,' an arrangement in which the tender old air is apt to be overlain by the vocal counterpoint. The choir bids fair to take a high place under its compelling conductor, Mr. David Roberts, and the willing obedience and interest of his well-drilled chorists in their work was pleasant to see. Such excellent singers as Miss Emily Breare, Mr. Charles Tree, and Mr. Griffith Owens, with Mr. Walter Wright's pianoforte solos, completed a successful programme, Miss Breare giving at least one object-lesson in her correct enunciation of the word 'gentle.'

Recent concerts in Crane Hall have included a pianoforte recital by Mr. Arthur Spencer, assisted vocally by Miss Iscult Morice and Mr. John Pegg; on November 4, the pupils of Miss Ethel Penhall—herself well-known as an accomplished vocalist—were heard in a successful programme; Miss Monica Scott and Miss Ethel Attwood collaborated in a song and pianoforte recital on November 5; and three clever artists, Miss Gladys Scollick (pianoforte), Miss Murray Lambert (violin), and Miss Gladys Foster (vocalist) gave an interesting programme on November 10.

Reference is cordially made to the invaluable assistance provided in Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper's local 'Concert Calendar, Music and Dramatic Year-Book,' of which the 1920-21 issue is to hand. It is, as usual, a mine of well-arranged information and a credit to this enterprising and public-spirited firm.

The first concert of the Warrington Musical Society was held on November 11, when Mr. Frank H. Crossley conducted a highly satisfactory performance of Elgar's 'King Olaf' in which the vocal principals were Miss Elsie Suddaby, Mr. William Heseltine, and Mr. Herbert Heyner. The band and chorus numbered two hundred and fifty, and the miscellaneous items included Mendelssohn's 'Hebrides' Overture.

MANCHESTER AND DISTRICT

It is already abundantly evident that under Mr. Hamilton Harty's alert and compelling conductorship the Hallé concerts are renewing their youth in this their sixty-third season. The conductor had by the third concert already secured results in ensemble which become more frequently the rule as the season approaches its mid-term. Manchester folk have not been slow to respond to this definite challenge of a musician who comes into their midst with an art-policy so clearly defined and executed. In carrying out his ideas Mr. Hamilton Harty has unmistakably gone from strength to strength. Unremitting in his zeal for choral preparation, his enthusiasm for this work naturally begets a like interest on the part of the singers. He is notoriously a specialist in Berlioz. Were any additional conviction necessary on the auditor's part, this predilection will be manifest in the forthcoming performance of 'Faust,' and 'Elijah' on February 12 has now been scrapped in favour of Berlioz's 'Te Deum' and Verdi's 'Requiem.' Mr. Hamilton Harty's reading of Brahms's No. 2 I was unable to hear, but report speaks of its being gloriously alive, far removed from the solid old readings of other days. Sir Thomas Beecham is our authority for the statement that Harty declined an operatic conductor's career, his preference being for the concert-hall. On November 6, in a concert performance of 'Carmen,' he displayed an uncommonly fine aptitude for this class of work, his impetuosity in rhythm sweeping everybody along, and an audience perhaps prepared to find the whole affair somewhat boring, quickly sat up, rubbed its eyes, and enjoyed itself immensely. The score was played better even than the best Beecham exposition, and beautiful singing from Miss Madeline Collins, Miss Astra Desmond, and Messrs. Walter Hyde and Percy Heming rendered books of words quite superfluous. The chorus was obviously happy in its task, and the conductor—who was himself responsible for this (to Manchester) innovation—has every reason to be satisfied with the effort.

One's personal feeling may be recorded that in the transition from stage to platform 'Carmen' lost less than any other opera of its essential quality, and choral societies in search of variety with the spice of novelty might follow the Manchester precedent with equally good results.

On October 28 Heifetz played with the Hallé Orchestra here (and for the first time with any orchestra in England, I believe) in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. A fortnight later he gave a recital with pianoforte accompaniment. Had the main experience of his playing in this country been with orchestra, it is reasonably doubtful whether he would have created quite such a sensation. However flawless his beautiful tone and technique may be, by no stretch of imagination can he be called a strongly emotional player. During the recital on November 12 we had a purely formal reading of a Handel Sonata, and in the 'Romance' of the Wieniawski Concerto we got a momentary glimpse of true emotional feeling, but it flickered out almost at once. Clearly at present Heifetz is preoccupied with a purely objective attitude to his music. To violinists who may hear him one might suggest a study of the way in which he continuously plays close to the bridge, using the full width of his bow, and note too, on his bow hand, the full use of his finger, knuckle, and hand muscles.

The second Quinlan concert was even better attended than the first. The reason may be found in the appearance of Rosing, but it was not one of his good days. Long recitals, in which he can balance the several phases of his peculiar art, probably exhaust him nervously and physically more than do one or two appearances in a miscellany programme in which the choice of songs appears a trifle haphazard, but nobody hearing him for the first time on November 6 could be said to have heard a fair sample. Three songs, 'Lord Rendal,' 'On with the motley,' and Moussorgsky's 'Song of the Flea,' were terrific in their drastic characterization, and made normally fine readings by other people seem almost childish. The instrumental work by Madame Chemet and Mr. Arthur Rubinstein was in a purely musical sense by far the most satisfying feature of the concert. Albeniz is not often played here, and his real individuality was quite sharply outlined by Mr. Rubinstein in the three big-scale pieces played. Was Mr. George Curzon's work quite worthy either the occasion or the musical standards achieved by his associates? His voice and enunciation were notable, but could his contributions by any stretch of imagination be considered as meriting the same description?

The Brodsky Quartet underwent its first change when Mr. Carl Fuchs was interned in Germany in 1914. Mr. Simon Speelman died last spring, and now Mr. Rawdon Briggs is to retire, so the twenty-fifth year of Dr. Brodsky's residence here finds him the only survivor of the original quartet.

Two members of the Catterall Quartet—Messrs. Bridge and Park—will play with Dr. Brodsky, Mr. Walter Hatton (violin) retaining his position vice Mr. Carl Fuchs, so for the present Messrs. Bridge and Park will be playing in two Manchester quartets. What will happen when Mr. Arthur Catterall crosses the Atlantic can only be surmised. Dr. Brodsky has shown himself thoroughly alive to and sympathetic with the great changes now going on in the appeal which chamber music is making to the wider public through the instrumentality of the noon-time recitals. His own quartet concerts this season are to be on Monday noon, November 22, December 6 and 20, in Houldsworth Hall. At popular prices, success is assured.

No more ambitious song-recital programmes are presented at Manchester than by Mr. Fred Crampton, whom we heard on October 19. An amateur with high ideals, one may wish that his voice could more surely follow the dictates of his brain when tackling work of the scope of Siegmund's Love-Song or the bigger Wolf—e.g., 'Fire Rider' or 'Ganymede.' These are obviously beyond his reach at the moment. 'The Gardener' or 'Wandering' ('Fussreiter'), from the Mörike group, were much more satisfactory evidences of his capacity. It was good to come across an accompanist (Mr. Kimberley Smith) who was weight for his task.

This mid-day concert was followed a week later by the great Op. 130 Beethoven B flat Quartet played by the Catterall Quartet, and in the following week Schubert's 'Trout' Quintet was given by Mr. Max Mayer and friends. These three occasions serve as a fair specimen of the good, steady work being done by the Tuesday Noontide Committee (who were pioneers in the early days of the war) in what may rightly be called chamber propaganda. Certainly many in these audiences would never have ventured on a whole evening at quartets, still less on a series-ticket; but now they can do so. Scores of persons present at these concerts live in towns outside Manchester, and may themselves become leaders in their own area for the stimulation of interest in the chamber-forms.

Probably no town in Lancashire has maintained a chamber music society for so long an unbroken period as Accrington. The old Bolton Society has been dissolved; interest in other centres has been spasmodic. Last season Rochdale and Blackpool commenced a few concerts in the nature of trial-runs; this season both have made more substantial arrangements. In pre-war days Southport, the home of many wealthy patrons, ran the most expensive series of any in the country. At Manchester this season the Bowdon Society will open on November 20, too late for comment this month. At Miss Edith Robinson's series the whole of Beethoven's Quartets are to be played in chronological order in celebration of the hundred and fiftieth Beethoven anniversary, and it is understood that the Hallé Society is also to mark this event in some special manner.

The Oldham Orchestral Society, for many years past conducted by Messrs. Lawton and Frederic Dawson, has this season passed under the care of Mr. Walter Mudie, of Manchester.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE

On Sunday, October 24, the Newcastle Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. E. L. Bainton, gave its first concert of the present season. The programme included Schumann's fourth Symphony, Vaughan Williams' Overture 'The Wasps,' Holbrooke's 'Three Blind Mice' Variations, and Grieg's 'Elegaic Melodies.' Mr. Arthur Jordan sang Dunhill's song-cycle 'Wind among the reeds,' and the forging songs from 'Siegfried.'

The Bach Choir, in addition to its choral activities, runs a series of four chamber concerts each season. The first of these took place on October 27, when the Edith Robinson Quartet, with the assistance of Mr. H. Mortimer (clarinet), gave charming performances of the clarinet quintets of Brahms and Mozart, together with Frank Bridge's 'Three Idylls' for string quartet alone. One beautiful feature of the quintet playing was the skilful way in which the clarinet took its place as a unit in the ensemble, not attempting to reduce the strings to the level of an accompaniment, as there might have been a temptation to do.

On November 3, the first 'International Celebrity' concert was held. The same evening the Elswick Works Orchestra, under Mr. Robert Peel, gave a programme including the 'William Tell' Overture, selections from the 'Meistersinger,' and 'Scènes Pittoresques' of Massenet.

On November 4, Misses E. Scorer (vocalist), Dallas Frazer ('cello), and A. Eckford (pianoforte) give a recital. The vocal items ranged from Scarlatti and Purcell to the British moderns, the principal instrumental contributions being a Sonata for 'cello and pianoforte by Sammartini (1705-75), and a group of pieces by F. Purcell Warren, a British composer who fell in action in 1915.

A Bach recital was given in the Cathedral on November 6 by the Bach Choir, when the programme comprised three of the Church Cantatas, viz., No. 8, 'Ah, God in Heaven,' No. 26, 'Ah how fleeting,' and No. 67, 'Hold in remembrance Jesus Christ.' The beautiful orchestration of the first-named was a feature which struck even those who had heard a good many of the cantatas. The soloists were Misses J. Fleming and A. Lawton, Messrs. Tom Purvis and E. J. Potts. A word of praise is due to Mr. Purvis, who made his first appearance in connection with the Bach Choir. The tenor arias are most exacting, and merely to sing them is no mean achievement, but the interpretation that they received was much more than a mere display of vocal dexterity. Mr. Potts seems to get right at the heart of anything he sings, his readings being always convincing. The choral singing was excellent, while the orchestral and organ accompaniments were tastefully done. Mr. Alfred Wall was leader of the orchestra, Mr. William Ellis was at the organ, and Mr. W. G. Whittaker conducted.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT

A word of appreciation is due to Mr. Bernard Johnson for the really excellent educational value of the work he is accomplishing at Nottingham. It is gratifying to find how greatly his efforts are appreciated by the immense audiences that gather for his recitals. On November 17, Miss Helen Guest was associated with the popular organist in a fine interpretation of Moszkowski's Pianoforte Concerto in E minor, compelling the closest attention for its forty minutes' duration. The People's Concerts were resumed on October 19, with a vocal recital by Madame Donalda and M. Mischa Léon, Mr. Harold Craxton accompanying with great ability and sympathy. The programme was well varied, and presented many charming features, although some members of the audience would have liked sometimes to hear a language 'understood of the people.' The first 'International Celebrity' concert, on October 26, boasted Dame Clara Butt as its main attraction. Needless to say, the great contralto was enthusiastically received. Mr. Kennerley Rumford contributed several songs with artistic effect, while Mr. Albert Sammons gave brilliant violin solos, Mr. William Murdoch evinced his technical skill on the pianoforte, and M. Hollman's 'cello solos were admirable. The Quinlan subscription series opened on October 21, the artists being Miss Agnes Nicholls, Signor Lenghi-Cellini (in place of Mr. Joseph Hislop, whose indisposition deprived Nottingham of an opportunity for hearing him), M. Alfred Cortôt, and M. Jacques Thibaud. M. Cortôt gave admirably contrasted solos which displayed his remarkable power, expression, and technical brilliance, and was allied with M. Thibaud in Violin and Pianoforte Sonatas by Franck and Grieg.

Messrs. Wilson Peck's first concert took place on October 27, when Mr. John Coates, M. Siloti, and Miss Jelly D'Aranyi appeared. The interesting programme revealed the ability of those fine performers, including as it did the 'Kreutzer' Sonata and Bach's 'Chaconne.' M. Pachmann's numerous admirers had yet another opportunity for hearing him on November 5, when the aged artist revealed a technique so faultless and an imagination so exquisite as seemingly to defy time's advance.

Mr. W. B. Haslam was associated with Mr. Johnson in a capital performance of Beethoven's 'Emperor' Concerto on November 7. The University College Chamber Music Concerts were delightfully inaugurated on November 4, and a well-filled hall showed that Miss Cantelo's popularity in her native city is assured. The Catterall String Quartet gave Beethoven's Quartet, Op. 59, No. 1, in F major, and two interesting 'Impressions' by Josef Holbrooke. Miss Cantelo's contributions were the Ballade in D major and Scherzo in F minor of Brahms, and in collaboration with the Quartet she was also heard in an entirely satisfying performance of Schumann's exquisite Quintet, Op. 44, in E flat major.

The Derby 'International Celebrity' concerts began on October 20, with the certain attraction of Dame Nellie Melba, Mr. Edward Dykes, Mr. Lionel Tertis, and Mr. Howard-Jones, and ensured a completely successful evening. Two fine audiences assembled on October 29 for the opening concerts of the fifth Derby Municipal Concert series. The Bohemian String Quartet and Miss Fanny Davies again gave immense pleasure to both afternoon and evening enthusiasts, repeating their success of last season. The fourteenth season of the Lincoln Orchestral Society was inaugurated on October 27 with a largely attended concert, when pianoforte solos were given by Miss Lilia Kanevskaya, and the vocalist was Miss Cecilia Farrar. The instrumentalists—sixty-five in number—included performers from Leeds, Nottingham, &c. An interesting programme was submitted, under the direction of Canon Scott. Miss Frances Rose acted as accompanist.

The Chesterfield Operatic Society gave several successful performances of 'A Princess of Kensington' on November 8, and succeeding evenings. The chorus numbered over a hundred voices, and Dr. F. Staton conducted.

PORTSMOUTH

A welcome addition to the present musical season is the Max Mossel series of subscription concerts, the first of which was given at the Town Hall on October 20. Mr. Max Mossel was supported by Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. John Coates, and M. Arthur de Greef. On December 1, a pianoforte and violin recital is being given by M. Alfred Cortôt—who is making his first appearance at Portsmouth—and Miss Phyllis Lett. The dates of the forthcoming concerts are February 9 and March 23. Mr. Michael Mullinar is acting as accompanist throughout the series.

A Melba concert is always a treat to be appreciated, and great numbers flocked to the Town Hall to hear the celebrated prima donna on November 2. Her fellow-artists were Mr. Edward Dykes (bass), Mr. Lionel Tertis, one of the greatest virtuosos on the viola, and Mr. Arthur Mason at the organ.

When the magnificent organ was first installed at the Town Hall, some thirty years ago, the older generation of music-lovers in the town greatly enjoyed the recitals given by Dr. Westlake Morgan. Since 1890, however, Dr. Morgan had not played at Portsmouth until November 8, when he accompanied Miss Marie Ambrose, the dramatic mezzo-soprano, at the King's Theatre, on Major Harvey Bathurst's new travelling organ, an instrument of five manuals, seventy-five stops, twenty-five pistons, 2,303 speaking pipes, drums, a set of carillons, and a glockenspiel. There was a special matinée on Armistice Day, when Dr. Morgan performed Tchaikovsky's '1812' Overture.

Mr. R. H. Turner addressed the October meeting of the local branch of the Hampshire Association of Organists on 'Art in relation to Commerce.' Madame Frederica Birch (pianoforte), Mr. Arthur Emms (violin), and Mr. C. W. Harding (violoncello) afterwards provided a musical programme.

Mr. J. H. Jackson, organist of St. Matthew's Church, Southsea, has accepted the conductorship of the Fareham Music Circle's Choral Society, and a concert is to be given before Christmas. The Choral Society is really the infant of the old Fareham Philharmonic, which it is hoped some day to revive.

The Portsmouth Operatic Society's revival of 'A Greek Slave' has been one of the features of local musical activity during the past month. The Theatre Royal—the premier theatre of the town—was placed at the Society's disposal during the week November 8-13, and the production, for which rehearsals had been in progress since July, under the direction of Mr. H. F. Ramsey, proved most successful.

The Borough of Portsmouth Philharmonic Society's Armistice Night concert will take its place among the outstanding successes of the local musical season. So great was the demand for seats that the promenade, which has been a feature of the Society's previous concerts at the Town Hall since its after-the-war revival, had to be given up to provide all the accommodation required. The programme was an all-British one, with the exception of Saint-Saëns's well-known 'Danse Macabre'—a delicate compliment to our French Allies—and opened in a manner befitting the occasion with Sullivan's 'In Memoriam' overture, the spirit of which was finely conveyed by the orchestra, which, with the Society's Glee Choir, was under the baton of Mr. Arthur Bliss. Mr. Adrian C. Boult, who made his first public appearance at Portsmouth, also journeyed down from London specially to lead the orchestra through the difficult passages of Stanford's 'Irish Rhapsody' No. 1. Mr. Edmund Burke was the vocalist of the evening, and there was also some excellent part-singing by the Glee Choir.

SOUTH WALES

Mr. Mark Hambourg gave a pianoforte recital at Cory Hall, Cardiff, on October 20, and next day he appeared at the Albert Hall, Swansea, at both places playing to crowded houses.

Owing to the Albert Hall having changed hands, only two concerts of the Quinlan series have been arranged for Swansea. The first of these took place on November 2, at the Albert Hall, the artists being Messrs. Frank Mullings, Mostyn Thomas, Jacques Thibaud, and Harold Craxton. It is invidious to single out any when all did well, but of conspicuous merit was the magnificent interpretation of Franck's Sonata by Messrs. Thibaud and Craxton. Mention must also be made of the latter's excellent accompanying.

The second concert at Cardiff of the Quinlan series was held at the Empire on November 4, when Mesdames Kirkby Lunn and Renée Chemet, and Messrs. Vladimir Rosing and George Curzon were the artists. Madame Kirkby Lunn sang some delightful ballads in her unrivalled style, and Madame Chemet played some charming old-world violin solos by Sammartini (1700-40), Field (1782-1837), and Mozart. This was Mr. Rosing's first appearance here, and his intensely emotional interpretation of some Russian items was a new and interesting experience to a Cardiff audience. Mr. Curzon was also worthily received.

The Cardiff Chamber Music Society gave its second concert of the season on Wednesday, November 3, at the High School for Girls. The Bohemian String Quartet had been secured, with Miss Fanny Davies as pianist, and the works presented were Brahms's Quintet in F minor, Op. 34, Mozart's Quartet in D minor, and Dvorák's Quintet in A major, Op. 81. The high expectations which such a combination of artists warranted were fully realised, and the charm peculiar to chamber music was preserved in the balanced and sympathetic expositions of the works chosen.

The Cardiff Sunday Concerts are proceeding as usual, with the exception of one or two which were suspended during the coal strike. On November 7, at Park Hall, the Angle Orchestra performed a new work—an orchestral suite in three movements—by a local composer, Mr. Cyril Best, who himself conducted. The audience accorded it an encouraging reception. On the same date, at the Empire, the celebrated Williamstown Male-Voice Choir (ninety voices) appeared, with Mr. Zacharewitsch as violinist, and Mr. Herbert Ware's newly-formed string orchestra (thirty-five performers). Miss Margaret Francis and Mr. Boland were the vocalists on this occasion.

The Cardiff Musical Society gave its opening concert of the season at Park Hall on November 5. The choir numbered two hundred and sixty voices, and the orchestra sixty performers, the artists engaged being Miss Astra Desmond, Messrs. John Booth and Charles Tree, with Mr. H. C. Wyman at the organ. Mr. T. E. Aylward was the conductor. Precluded by a few choice miscellaneous items, came a magnificent performance of Elgar's 'Dream of Gerontius,' principals, chorus, and orchestra according superbly with the baton of the veteran conductor, creating an atmosphere redolent of the mystic spirituality of the work and rousing the audience to subdued enthusiasm.

Cardiff is practically en fête at these concerts, and it was a relief to see a crowded hall, after the somewhat scanty attendances observed at some of the 'celebrity concerts' recently held.

YORKSHIRE

BRADFORD

At Bradford the Subscription Concerts retain their pride of place as affording at once the best music and the best interpreters to be heard in the county. They were resumed on October 8 by a miscellaneous concert in which the finished violin playing of Miss Isolde Menges and the singing of Madame Donalds and Mr. Gervase Elwes were the attractions. At the second concert, on October 29, the Hallé Orchestra appeared in a programme of exceptional interest, including Beethoven's E flat Pianoforte Concerto, of which Mr. Lamond gave a magisterial performance, and Berlioz's 'Symphonie Fantastique,' over which Mr. Hamilton Harty must have expended great pains, for a most brilliant and finished interpretation was the result. An 'extra' concert was given on November 5, to introduce to Yorkshire Heifetz, who in Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto made a most favourable impression. Seldom, if ever, has one heard such perfect, effortless playing, conveying such an impression of reserve force, and a word is due to Mr. Harty, who, with the Hallé Orchestra, accompanied the soloist with admirable closeness of sympathy. Yet another development of the Subscription Concerts has to be recorded, one of a series of three chamber concerts given in a smaller hall. At this—the first—the Flonzaley Quartet appeared on October 15, and played Mozart's Quartet in D (written for the King of Prussia), Smetana's 'Aus meinem Leben,' and little sketches by Goossens and Grainger, in which the perfect balance of tone and unity of style of the quartet were well displayed. The Bradford Permanent Orchestra opened its twenty-ninth season on October 30, when Mr. Julius Harrison conducted a very welcome revival of Haydn's 'Reine de France' Symphony and the effective 'Keltic Suite' by Mr. J. H. Foulds. Miss Kathleen Moorhouse was the soloist in slow movements from violoncello concertos by Dvorák and Haydn.

A very enjoyable concert was given on October 12 by the violoncellist, Mr. Felix Salmond, who, with Mrs. Bernard Osborn as pianist, played in fine style sonatas by Brahms (No. 2) and César Franck, whose well-known Violin Sonata seemed just as suitable to the 'cello. Mr. Neville Barber was a refined and accomplished vocalist. Some popular Saturday concerts, organized and apparently subsidised by the Corporation, deserve passing mention, since they introduce a good many first-rate soloists. On October 27 Mr. Edgar Drake gave a chamber concert with a popular programme, including the 'Kreutzer' Sonata and César Franck's Sonata, with Mr. Geoffrey Tankard as pianist, Mr. Harry Howell singing some well-chosen songs in artistic style. The Festival Choral Society, of which Dr. Bairstow is the conductor, gave 'The Dream of Gerontius' on November 12. Miss Astra Desmond and Messrs. Coates and Heyner made an almost ideal cast, and the choir sang with admirable finish and spirit.

HUDDERSFIELD

The Huddersfield Music Club, which has been organized by Dr. Hull, is introducing to the town a type of concert in which it has hitherto been deficient. A new season began on October 13, when Miss Adela Verne gave a brilliant recital of pianoforte music, and at the next concert, on November 10, the Bohemian Quartet was heard in one of the Rassoumovski Quartets, Smetana's 'Aus meinem Leben,' and Arnold Bax's Pianoforte Quintet. The Philharmonic Concert on October 2 was under a new conductor, Mr. J. Fletcher Sykes. Mozart's 'Jupiter' was the chief thing in the programme, and met with a creditable performance, as did Mendelssohn's G minor Pianoforte Concerto, though the solo part, nicely played by Mr. Harold Sykes, was somewhat wanting in fire. On October 26 the Glee and Madrigal Society, under Mr. C. H. Moody's direction, sang works, old and modern, in capital style, Miss Flora Woodman and Mr. Robert Radford being the solo vocalists. On November 12 the Choral Society gave a concert of unusual importance, Bantock's 'Omār Khayyām' being sung under the composer's direction. Miss Olga Haley, Mr. Mullings, and Mr. Arthur Crammer were the principals in a brilliant performance, to which the Hallé Orchestra contributed not a little.

LEEDS

So far there is no sign of a slump in the music of the West Riding, and though it may be doubted whether the majority of musical enterprises are a financial success, they manage to continue their good work. The record for what is practically the first month of the season is a good one, even without any reference to the touring concert-parties that visit every large town, and introduce eminent virtuosi, but whose influence on the appreciation of good music is so small as to be negligible. On October 14 Mr. George Beach gave a pianoforte recital at Leeds. A stranger to the town, he made a most favourable impression by his masterly interpretation of Liszt's music, to which his programme was entirely devoted. He is a brilliant and forceful player, with a crisp touch and a power that is never abused. It will be interesting to hear him in a more varied programme. Of the regular events the Saturday orchestral concerts were first in the field, and promise to maintain their unique success. On October 16 Mr. Hamilton Harty conducted the 'Jupiter' Symphony, and Mr. Anderson Tyrer was the soloist in Tchaikovsky's B flat minor Concerto, with which work he may be said to have made his name.

On November 6 Mr. Eugène Goossens was the conductor, and, with Miss Murray Lambert as a refined and artistic interpreter of the solo part, introduced to Leeds Glazounov's Violin Concerto, a work which arouses respect if not enthusiasm, for it seems to have everything but spontaneity. Excellent performances were secured of Mr. Goossens's little sketch 'By the Tarn' and some other pieces, and a good interpretation of Tchaikovsky's fourth Symphony, the only poor performance being of the arrangement of the Rhine Maidens' scene from 'Götterdämmerung.' On October 18 the O'Mara Opera Company came to Leeds for a fortnight, but the only approach to a novelty that was presented was Balfé's 'Puritan's Daughter'—a rather dull, uninspired work, the choice of which seems singular when so many more attractive light operas are waiting revival. It compared badly with Benedict's 'Lily of Killarney,' in which Mr. O'Mara rollicked through the part of Myles in a fashion that was irresistible. On October 23 Mr. Alban Hamer, who has been appointed organist of Bloemfontein Cathedral, gave his farewell recital at All Souls' Church, where he will undoubtedly be missed. There was also a service at the Parish Church on November 1, which took the form of an orchestral programme, with a couple of anthems included. A small but complete and efficient orchestra was heard in Mozart's G minor Symphony, Beethoven's 'Egmont' Overture, Elgar's 'Sursus Corda,' and Guilmant's first Symphony for organ and orchestra. The new organist, Dr. Tysoe, conducted, and had for his colleague at the organ Dr. Bairstow, formerly of Leeds and now of York. These musicians exchanged places for the Guilmant work, which went with brilliant effect. As a new departure the event was of exceptional interest, and it is satisfactory to learn that the collection sufficed to cover the considerable expenses, so we may look forward to further developments on similar lines. One of the best appreciated series of concerts at Leeds are the Leeds Bohemian Chamber Concerts, which began their twenty-second season on November 3. In Beethoven's Quartet in A (Op. 18), and Brahms's in A minor, and in a couple of Serenades by the Belgian composer Jongen, the quartet (Messrs. Ghent, Perkins, Moxon, and Haynes) played in musicianly style, and gave interpretations that were sympathetic and effective. Leeds University is doing a good work for art by its public lectures and recitals—Chinese art is being dealt with by several experts, mediæval music has been the subject of lectures by Dr. R. R. Terry and Dr. Frere, and the recitals already given consist of chamber music by the Leeds Bohemian Quartet party, and a pianoforte recital by Miss May Summers, who set a good example by heading her programme with one of the 'Forty-eight'—the lovely Prelude and Fugue in G sharp minor from the 1st Book. A very delightful lecture-recital by Mr. Plunket Greene, assisted by Dr. Bairstow, on October 27, also deserves mention, and the record must stop with a visit of Mr. Diaghilev's Russian Dancers on November 13, which would have been still more enjoyable had an adequate orchestra been provided.

SHEFFIELD

The chamber concerts organized by the University of Sheffield Musical Society are being continued this season, and an excellent series of programmes has been arranged. The Catterall Quartet, on October 15, gave fine performances of Beethoven's A minor, Op. 132, and Tanéïev's Op. 11, in the same key. The former, with its cryptic slow movement in the Lydian Mode, and its sketchy texture elsewhere, provided some problems as well for performers as listeners, but seemed to be generally enjoyed. The work of Tanéïev is a fine, scholarly composition, with a particularly attractive divertimento as second movement, and Messrs. Catterall, J. T. Bridge, Parke, and Hock presented the work in a most favourable light. The slow movement from J. B. McEwen's 'Biscay' Quartet, sandwiched between these two quartets, made quite a charming interlude.

The Bohemian (Czech) Quartet gave the second concert on November 12, when the programme comprised Dvorák's Quartet in A flat, Op. 105, the first of Schumann's Op. 41, and Smetana in E minor. A slight unsteadiness in the first movement of the Dvorák was the only point open to adverse criticism throughout the concert, the superb playing of these famous artists, especially in the beautiful Smetana work, giving intense pleasure to a large audience. Some two hundred and fifty members of the University were present.

The 'Kreutzer' Sonata was finely played by Miss Jelly D'Aranyi and Signor Siloti at the first of the season's Sheffield Subscription Concerts, and Miss D'Aranyi also gave a memorable performance of Bach's 'Chaconne.' Signor Siloti's best solo work was done in a group of pieces by Russian composers. Mr. John Coates sang two groups of Love-songs, classified as 'old' and 'modern' respectively, with much success, not a little of which he owed to the clever work of his accompanist, Miss Ethel Cook.

Dame Clara Butt was presumably the chief attraction to a crowded audience at the second 'International Celebrity' Concert on October 27, when her singing gave much satisfaction to the majority of her audience. Mr. Kennerley Rumford, Mr. Albert Sammons, Mr. Hollman, and Mr. Murdoch, with Miss Grace Torrens as accompanist, completed a distinguished concert party.

Mr. Mark Hambourg gave a recital here on November 8, playing the César Franck Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, and Beethoven's 'Waldstein' Sonata, a group of Chopin Studies, and pieces by Cyril Scott, Arnold Bax, Ravel, and Debussy.

The Sheffield Musical Union, with Dr. Coward in control, gave a repetition performance of Berlioz's 'Faust' on November 4, which was most successful. Miss Olga Haley, Mr. John Booth, Mr. Charles Tree, and Mr. Stanley Beckett, were all excellent as principals, and choir and orchestra did well under Dr. Coward's guidance.

The first of the Promenade Concerts took place at Victoria Hall on Wednesday, November 10. The only discouraging feature was the small size of the audience, which suggested either indifference to orchestral performances of mainly local origin, even with Sir Henry Wood as conductor, or insufficient advertisement, and we are inclined to suspect that the latter was the chief cause. A programme which included the César Franck Symphony, the 'Siegfried Idyll,' the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto, and a Suite of Bach movements, cleverly scored by Sir Henry Wood, was played with marked success, and from an artistic point of view heartiest congratulations may be offered to all concerned. M. Arthur de Greef's playing in the Concerto was masterly, and was received with quite exceptional enthusiasm.

OTHER TOWNS

The last of the Harrogate Symphony Concerts took place on October 13. During the season twenty-eight of these weekly afternoon concerts have been given under Mr. Julian Clifford's direction, and a vast amount of first-rate orchestral music—symphonies, concertos, overtures, and so forth—has been heard. They have also been the means of introducing many young artists as soloists, and have in this way had a special interest. At Wakefield Miss Ethel Hick, who has long been known as one of the ablest teachers in the West Riding, gave a concert, at which three more than promising young artists were heard. Miss Etty Ferguson is, of course, already well-known as a most accomplished contralto, whose interpretation of Lieder is always sympathetic and intelligent; Miss Connie Bee is a young and brilliant executant on the violin; and Miss Marion Brearley a pianist who has already achieved much, and has such a fine technique and refined taste that she may be expected to go even further in her art. The thirty-second season of the Wakefield Chamber Concerts, which Miss Clarkson organizes with such enthusiasm, began on October 22, when the Beatrice Hewitt Trio was heard in pianoforte trios by Beethoven, Brahms, and Arensky. The Hull Harmonic Society, of which Mr. Porter is conductor, gave Gounod's 'Faust' on November 5, and on November 11 the Hull Philharmonic Society, under Mr. Hudson, gave an orchestral programme that included the 'New World' Symphony, Miss Astra Desmond being the irreproachable vocalist.

Musical Notes from Abroad

AMSTERDAM

The concert season may at the present moment be said to be in full swing, and the amount of music distributed daily has reached a height which will hardly admit of being exceeded. Contrary to expectation, Mengelberg's state of health has not yet permitted him to return here. He was to have travelled by motor-car from Switzerland, but it seems that his physician has been averse to such an expedient. Meanwhile the news of his probable reappearance in his wonted place on November 21 was received with more than common satisfaction. Up till that date the management had to continue its policy of filling his place by inviting guest-conductors, whose efficiency, although by no means negligible, had not proved all that might have been desired. The very fact that none had conducted more than two concerts in succession, and the subsequent want of 'adjustment' that the orchestra should feel to its director, has frustrated first-rate results. Indeed, it would have been a sort of miracle if it were otherwise, seeing that no orchestra can stand such changing of hands for any length of time, and though it cannot be doubted that the ideal is in every case striven after, the initiated at Amsterdam became painfully aware that the symphony concerts were showing a tendency to vegetate rather than to thrive. As it is, the lucidity and transparency of its readings to which our Concertgebouw Orkest owes its chief fame are on the wane, and it is to be hoped therefore that the true balance may soon be restored. Apart from the above-mentioned drawbacks the present system conduces to a personal cult which on the part of the guests is not always left unencouraged. This makes itself felt in some certainly novel but not always acceptable

Ring Christmas Bells.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Poem by Lady LINDSAY.
(By permission.)

Music by
Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, C.V.O.
Bells,

Allegro. ♩ = 64.

f Ring the Bells, ring the Bells, Ring ff Bells, . . . ring the Bells, Ring
f Ring Christ - mas Bells, . . . ring the Bells, Ring mf Christ - mas Bells, Ring the mer - ry Christmas Bells, . . . And f Christ - mas Bells, . . . ring the Bells, . . .
cres. let their voice re - sound . . . f A - round, . . . a - round, . . . Till cres. o'er the leas and o'er the fells The glad-some e - cho loud - ly

Copyright, 1920, by Novello and Company, Limited.

(1)

MADE IN ENGLAND

RING CHRISTMAS BELLS.

tells, . . . How we to - day . . . Are blithe and . . .

gay, . . . And how for all sad hearts we pray.
pray, we . . .
pray.

Ring the Bells, ...
pray. Ring the Bells, ring the Bells, Ring Christ-mas Ring the Bells, ... ring the Bells, Ring Christ-mas

Bells, Ring the joy - ful Christmas Bells, Ring Christmas Bells! . . .
Bells, ... Ring the Bells,

RING CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Ring the Bells, . . .

Ring the Bells, ring the Bells, Ring

Ring Christ - mas Bells, . . . ring the Bells, Ring

Christ - mas Bells, Ring the mer - ry Christmas Bells; . . So Christ - mas Bells, . . . ring the Bells; . .

ring them high and low, . . O'er ice . . and snow, . . O'er crag - ged hills, and si - lent dells, While round the earth the mes - sage

RING CHRISTMAS BELLS.

swells, ff How we to - day . . Are blithe and gay, . . And pp how for all sad hearts we pray. pray, we . . pray. p Ring the pray. . . .

Ring the Bells, ... p ff
Ring the Bells, ring the Bells, Ring Christ-mas Bells, Ring the Bells, ... ring the Bells, Ring Christ-mas Bells, . . .

Slower.
joy - ful Christmas Bells, Ring Christ-mas Bells! . .
joy - ful Bells, . . .

readings of household works which least of all can stand being tampered with. On the other hand it cannot be gainsaid that some very good work has been done by both Herr Abendroth and Prof. Carl Fiedler. Each presented us with a novelty, which in Prof. Fiedler's case was a 'Comedy Overture' of his own. As a work of art it does not rank much above the kind that Wagner used to call 'Kapellmeistermusik.' Its make-believe frolicsomeness was, however, accepted by the less sophisticated part of the audience, the piece meeting with a favourable reception. Herr Abendroth gave us a first hearing of Max Reger's four Tone-poems after pictures by Arnold Böcklin. As an orchestral composer Max Reger reached the point of culmination in his 'Hiller-variations' (Op. 100). In the few years preceding his death he had got acquainted with the works of Debussy, and already his 'Romantic Suite' shows traces of the Frenchman's influence. After that he essayed programme music, and the Böcklin tone-pictures show him in a light which was most decidedly not destined to find a true reflection in his musical character. Of course it could have been forecasted with tolerable safety that the idea of the 'Fiddling Hermit,' when transfigured into music, would shape itself into a succession of chords founded on the ancient Church modes with a solo violin hovering about the whole. There is nothing unreasonable in such a procedure. We might furthermore have been induced to accept Reger's method of picturing a 'Bacchanale,' or the musical description of his impressions of the 'Isle of the Dead.' But surely it was a disappointment to find him having so completely mistaken the purport of Böcklin's 'Play of the waves,' for, instead of recognizing in the picture the obvious allegory on an approaching sea storm, he set about to depict in turn the several figures individually, each episode being moreover terminated by a sort of full stop, a procedure which radically severs all reciprocal coherence. Since this work, even when regarded from a purely musical point of view, furnished no occasion to hail Reger as a tone painter, we shall certainly not grumble if henceforth it be permitted to rest undisturbed on the shelves of the music library. It was reserved for the Parisian conductor Gabriel Pierné to reap the hitherto greatest success of the season. Characteristically his programmes consisted exclusively of music by French masters (Dukas, Franck, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz). He played also two works of his own—the 'Ramuntcho' overture and 'Paysages Franciscains'—of which the former (an earlier work) revealed him as a follower of Bizet and Saint-Saëns, whereas in the latter work he proved to have been influenced by Debussy. The appearance of the extremist Arnold Schönberg has been hailed with only moderate delight. He gave a hearing of his sextet 'Verklärte Nacht' (arranged for string orchestra), a work entirely influenced by Wagner and Richard Strauss. It has the merit of sounding well, which cannot by any means be said of his 'Five orchestral pieces' (composed in 1911). These certainly acted as an endorsement of René Lenormand's stricture (in 'L'Harmonie Moderne'), 'Nous osons à peine citer M. Arnold Schönberg de Vienne, dont les œuvres sont pour nous complètement inintelligibles.' We are promised more of this composer's works during the winter. Of our native composers the only orchestral composition performed was an 'Adagio mesto with variations' by Cornelis Doppe, who himself conducted his work. The extreme length of this piece, only to a certain extent relieved by ingenious orchestration, was against its success. I can devote only short notice to the many soloists who have made their appearance. The more important were Eleanor Spencer, whose choice of a Pianoforte Concerto by Rimsky-Korsakov was unfortunately a big mistake; the Hungarian violoncellist Judith Bokor, who gave a very fine interpretation of Saint-Saëns's Violoncello Concerto in A minor; the admirable Liszt pupil Alexander Siloti, who excelled in his late master's 'Danse Macabre'; and the Russian violinist Alexander Schüller, who on one and the same evening played two Concertos, one by Mozart, in D major, and another by Glazounov, the enormous difficulties of which he overcame victoriously. An account of the twenty-four concerts of the 'Beethoven Festival,' now in progress, will be given in next month's letter.

W. HARMANS.

MILAN

The talk of the musical town during the month of October is Toscanini—or, to be more precise, Toscanini and his orchestra of ninety-eight professors, that is by no means an ordinary orchestra as usually understood. Toscanini himself chose each individual player from various parts of Italy on what might well be called the selective system, inasmuch as he has enrolled the best orchestral elements obtainable. The maestro's intention was to create a nulli secundus orchestra for a tournee in the United States of America, which is being preceded by a series of concerts in different towns in Italy, and is to be followed by another series of concerts in other towns in Italy which are not at present being visited.

The first of the concerts which Toscanini is to give in the United States will take place at the Metropolitan Opera House at New York on December 28. In the meantime American tongues are wagging in speculative anticipation of the forthcoming treat, which indeed it will be for the music-loving Americans, who will be enabled to hear perhaps the finest orchestra in the world, chosen, organized, and led by the finest conductor living in his particular line. Toscanini means to make an exceptionally vivid impression by his new venture.

As soon as the news of his exceptional scheme leaked out, Toscanini was inundated with offers both flattering and profitable from a great number of concert societies in Italy. But he paid little heed to these, having his own plans well-mapped out and already embracing an Italian tournee which should precede that in America.

The Italian tournee is being made under the patronage of H. E. Rosaid, Under-Secretary of State for Fine Arts, Advocate Caldara, the socialistic Mayor of Milan, being the honorary president. The organizing committee was formed with the aid of La Scala, Ltd., the Society of Symphonic Concerts, and the Italian Touring Club.

The first of three concerts at the Conservatorium took place on October 23, when the programme comprised 'Concerto grosso per il Santissimo Natale' (F. Manfredini, 1688-1717), Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, Respighi's 'La Ballata delle Gnomidi,' Debussy's 'Iberia,' and the Prelude and Liebestod from 'Tristan and Isolde.' The second concert, on October 26, included Brahms's Symphony, No. 2, Roussel's 'Le festin de l'araignée,' Pizzetti's Suite for orchestra from the music of 'Pisanella' of Gabriele d'Annunzio, Strauss's 'Don Juan,' and Verdi's overture to the 'Vespri Siciliani.'

The orchestra was due to sail from Trieste or Naples towards the end of November on the s.s. 'President Wilson,' and to reach New York about December 14.

The Scala Theatre even at its brightest is never a cheery looking building, with its severe outlines and dull-coloured walls, but to-day with its closed doors it is gloomy and forbidding to the casual passer-by who, perhaps, observing its neglected outward appearance, does not penetrate its inward activity. Readers of the Musical Times, however, who know that this stalwart monument of operatic movement is undergoing radical structural changes so far as the stage and its accessories are concerned, would perhaps be glad of an opportunity for peeping into the interior. In a small room at the back of the theatre there are strange meetings these days, an assembly composed almost entirely of engineers, grave and mature. In the semi-darkness one can perceive a miniature Scala, a mere child's toy it would appear to be at first sight, but it becomes a thing of intense interest when the tiny fabric is illuminated. In a few inches of space appears an immense landscape, a vast horizon, all-embracing as a view obtained from some height. All the colours of the breaking dawn merge one into another with extraordinary reality. No harshness, no blinding lights, no painfully inartistic reliefs. One's eye searches a limitless sky. Shimmering screens of silk are being handled by one man—the painter, Don Mariano Fortuny. Here in this narrow little room the first experiments in the new lighting and scenography are being carried out. These systems, which are new to this country, have already been tested in some German theatres and also in a small theatre at Paris, but the conception is neither German nor French, but Spanish, and owes its origin to the above-mentioned painter Don Mariano Fortuny, son of the famous Spanish artist. Don Fortuny has now been at Milan for several years, and it was here that he first began to study scenic illumination. With him it has become almost an obsession. His system is based on indirect reflex illumination. A powerful light is directed on to silk screens of different colours graded in all shades. A mechanism permits the regulating and the changing of the screens which are required to come under the rays of the light, and the desired colours and nuances are then projected on to the stage. By means of a dome-shaped screen a wonderful impression is given of a vast expanse of blue sky. This screen is really half a dome, or a quarter of a sphere. The blue colour of the sky is projected on to the white dome from the coloured screens, and the spectator has a vivid illusion of seeing a never-ending extension of sky, horizontally, laterally, and vertically. The weather becomes threatening, clouds accumulate on the horizon, the sun sets in all the glory of a winter glow. It is sufficient merely to move the right screens into their proper positions for the effect to be either gradual or instantaneous. Side-scenes and cross-bars are excluded from the stage. Don Fortuny has constructed two types of dome, one rigid and the other folding. Owing to the peculiar formation of the back of the Scala stage, the technicians advise adopting the folding type of dome, which can be closed after the fashion of a carriage hood, and made to move forwards or backwards as occasion requires, by means of small rails on which it is mounted. The dome can be expanded to the extent required for the purpose of the stage, and can take on any shape.

E. HERBERT-CESARI.

ROME

The name of Domenico Alaleona will not be new to those readers who follow regularly the Roman notes of this journal, and I recently had occasion to write of his 'Mirra.' Alaleona's forte is revealed in the part-song, and he has particularly distinguished himself in the field of folk-music. On Sunday, October 24, he gave a successful concert at the Augusteum, when he introduced the Guido Monaco to the Roman public. This is a choral society consisting of a hundred male voices, and it is recruited from amongst the dock labourers of Leghorn. The programme was as follows:

'Night'	Schubert
'Brindisi alla gioia'	G. Castagnoli
Labourers' song	Escher
'The little church'	Kreuzer
Il Canto dell' amore... ..	Alaleona
Saluto a Rosaura (from 'Maschere')	Mascagni
Two canzoni a tre voci	Palestrina
'Mid-day quiet in the Alps'	Bossi
Hymn to Rome	Thermignon

The Canzoni of Palestrina were remarkably well rendered, and Alaleona's Canto and Bossi's chorus were encored.

AN ECHO OF SEPTEMBER 20

To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the unification of Italy, a great band contest was organized at Rome. A goodly number of bands from the provinces participated, amongst them being the well-known municipal band of Lanciano, an organization that enjoys an international fame. The victory seemed assured—but lo! the commission of judges, with Vessella as president, awarded the palm to Civitavecchia. This decision came as a surprise to the Lanciano players and their friends. A committee was hastily formed to save the laurels, a subscription list being opened with the same object, and an invitation was sent to the Civitavecchia players to meet the Lanciano band in another venue. In other words, Civitavecchia was challenged to enter a new contest, first at the Augusteum and then in one of the public squares, of which event the Roman public was to be the supreme judge. The invitation, which aroused keen interest in musical circles, was duly received and pondered by Civitavecchia, and, as was to be expected, was by them respectfully declined 'as an indirect and inconvenient affront to the scrupulous and well-weighted decision of a commission composed of illustrious masters.'

The committee of protest has now to decide what to do with the subscriptions collected. The Giornale d'Italia suggests that a part at least of the sum be devoted to the purchase of a gold medal, which may remain as proof of the estimation of the Roman public of the Lanciano band, which, if not the winner of the September competition, remains always one of the best bands in the country, and one which, says Maestro Lanella, director of the Musica Lyceum of Pesaro, 'makes itself not only admired but loved.'

LEONARD PEYTON.

PARIS

At the moment the activities of quack singing-masters are a subject of discussion in French musical circles. At Paris, as elsewhere in other countries, these charlatans abound, and during the present winter season will, as ever, irreparably damage many voices, since the law places no restriction on such teaching. One of the fraternity, who is said to flourish exceedingly, receives his victims in a well-furnished appartement, ostentatiously hung with signed photographs of famous singers of yesterday. (These artists being dead, no one can question the impostor's claim to having enjoyed the honour of their acquaintance.) A telephone is on the table, and occasionally a confederate rings up, whereupon there follows an imaginary conversation with an artist of high repute, and the simple-minded client is duly edified—'What, another engagement (at the Opéra!)? And the director says your voice is even better than before! Ah, I knew my special method would improve your voice, besides adding a couple of notes at either end!'

It would seem that the majority of these 'specialists' are accompanists—and, be it said, very good accompanists, too. Unfortunately, their legitimate calling is poorly paid, for throughout France pianists who are able to read difficult accompaniments at sight are common. So it is that, finding themselves objects of the wayside, and remembering how easily would-be Melbas and Carusos are gulled, they put up a brass plate bearing the legend, 'Maître de Chant,' and await pupils. Ignorant of the difference between singing and shouting, or between a forward and a throaty emission, and scarcely knowing one voice from another, they permit their dupes to commit every possible fault. Consequently, many a promising voice is more or less seriously damaged at the very outset.

It is to be regretted that a licensing order is not brought into force, so that a check might be imposed upon these very dangerous people. France possesses so many good judges of singing that there should be no difficulty in empanelling a jury.

Wagner, having been shelved during the war, is again tolerated. True, his works have not yet been revived at the Opéra, though there is some talk of staging them there. Excerpts, however, have lately been given at concerts in different parts of France, and received without incident. Still, there are a number of foolish people who insist that the performance of the 'Meistersinger' Overture is a most unpatriotic act, exception being taken for the same reason—or lack of reason—to the 'Tannhäuser' Overture.

In the Paris Opéra Museum, by the way, is a letter from Wagner, written in fluent idiomatic French. Though kept under lock and key, a word in the custodian's ear—and it may be seen.

A SUGGESTION

It is a pity that capable English singers and instrumentalists should never be heard at Paris, and that the cream of English compositions are not known here. Parisians in the main are under the impression that the concerts organized by the V.M.C.A. during the war advertised our best artists, and that 'Tipperary' represented the national taste in music! In fact musical France asks the most extraordinary questions about the conditions under which music is performed in England. 'Is there an opera-house in London? Have you no Conservatoire? Is there no serious music? Are all your songs written for ballad concert consumption? &c., &c.'

Is it not time that some enterprising London concert-agent enlightened Paris by giving a miscellaneous concert on propaganda lines? It would, for example, be

THE CAROLLERS

Composed by A. M. GOODHART.

Bramley, Rev. H. R. } CHRISTMAS CAROLS,
Stainer, John } NEW AND OLD.
 FIRST SERIES. One Penny each.
 Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 1s.

- *1. God rest you merry, gentlemen .. Traditional
 *2. The Manger Throne .. C. Steggall
 *3. A Virgin unspotted .. Traditional
 *4. Come, ye lofty .. Elvey
 *5. Come, tune your hearts .. Ouseley
 *6. The First Nowell .. Traditional
 *7. Jesu, hail .. J. Stainer
 *8. Good Christian men .. Old German
 *9. Sleep, holy Babe .. Dykes
 *10. Good King Wenceslas .. Traditional
 *11. When I view the Mother .. J. Barnby
 *12. The seven joys of Mary .. Traditional
 *13. On the Birthday of the Lord .. Dykes
 *14. What Child is this? .. Old English
 *15. Glorious, beauteous .. Maria Tiddeman
 *16. Waken! Christian Children! } S.C. Hammerton
 *17. A Child this day is born } rd. .. Traditional
 *18. Carol for Christmas Eve .. Ouseley
 *19. When Christ was born .. A. H. Brown
 *20. Christmas Morning Hymn .. J. Barnby

SECOND SERIES. One Penny each.

- *21. Carol for Christmas Eve .. Traditional
 *22. Jesus in the Manger .. H. Smart
 *23. The Holly and the Ivy } rd. .. Old French
 *24. The Moon shines bright } .. Traditional
 *25. The Virgin and Child .. C. Steggall
 *26. The Incarnation .. Traditional
 *27. Christmas Day .. J. Stainer
 *28. The Cherry-Tree Carol .. Traditional
 *29. God's dear Son .. Traditional
 *30. See, amid the winter's snow .. Goss
 *31. The Babe of Bethlehem .. Traditional
 *32. In Bethlehem, that noble place .. Ouseley
 *33. A Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin } J. Barnby
 *34. Christmas Song .. Dykes
 *35. Jacob's Ladder .. Traditional
 *36. The Story of the Shepherd .. J. Barnby
 *37. The Wassail Song .. Traditional
 *38. In terra pax .. Dykes
 *39. Dives and Lazarus .. Traditional
 *40. From far away .. Dykes
 *41. Carol for Christmas Day .. A. Sullivan
 *42. The Child Jesus in the Garden .. J. Stainer

THIRD SERIES. One Penny each.

43. What soul-inspiring music .. Har. by J. S.
 44. In the country nigh to Bethlehem .. G. Hine
 45. We three Kings of Orient are .. Har. by J. S.
 46. Emmanuel, God with us .. H. Gadsby
 47. New Prince, new pomp } rd. .. C. Steggall
 48. A Babe is born .. Har. by J. S.
 49. Come, let us all sweet Carols sing .. F. Champneys
 50. Let music break on this blest morn .. J. B. Calkin
 51. Carol for New Year's Day .. A. H. Brown
 52. The Angel Gabriel .. Har. by J. S.
 53. The Shepherds amazed .. A. H. Brown
 54. Noël! Noël! .. Har. by J. S.
 55. I sing the birth .. G. C. Martin
 56. Christmas Night .. A. H. Brown
 57. The Christmas Celebration .. E. Prout
 58. Arise and hail the Sacred Day .. A. H. Brown
 59. The Holy Well .. Har. by J. S.

60. The Angel and the Shepherds .. E. H. Thorne
 61. The Coventry Carol .. Har. by J. S.
 62. The Morning Star .. J. F. Bridge
 63. The Shepherds went .. J. F. Barnett
 64. I saw three ships .. Har. by J. S.
 65. Mountains, bow your heads .. W. H. Cummings
 66. Luther's Carol .. J. Higgs
 67. The Boy's Dream .. W. H. Monk
 68. Legends of the Infancy .. J. F. Bridge
 69. Let Christians all } rd. .. Traditional
 70. Immortal Babe } s. d.
 The above 70 Carols, complete, cloth, gilt 4 0
 Library Edition, with Historical Preface .. 7 6
 Roxburgh binding .. 7 6
 Illustrated Edition, 1st and 2nd Series .. 7 6
 Three Series (cloth, gilt, 2s.) .. each 1 0
 Words only, complete (cloth, 6d.) .. 0 4
 Words, each Series .. 0 1½

Helmores, Rev. T. } CAROLS FOR CHRIST-
Neale, Rev. J. M. } MASTIDE. Set to Ancient Melodies.

71. Here is joy for every age.
 72. Earthly friends will change.
 73. Gabriel's message.
 74. Christ was born on Christmas Day.
 75. Earth to-day rejoices.
 76. Good Christian men, rejoice.
 77. From church to church. } rd. each.
 78. In the ending of the year.
 79. Royal day that chasest gloom.
 80. O'er the hill and o'er the vale.
 81. Good King Wenceslas.
 82. Toll! toll! because there ends.
 The above 12 carols, complete .. s. d.
 Folio, with pianoforte accompaniment .. 4 6
 Treble part .. 0 6
 Words only .. 0 1½

Wensley, Shapcott.—TWELVE NEW
 CAROLS FOR CHRISTMAS. Three-halfpence each.

83. O holy star .. J. Stainer
 84. The shepherds .. Eaton Faning
 85. Hymn of the angels .. G. M. Garrett
 *86. The anthem of peace .. J. Barnby
 87. The desert .. Emma Mundella
 88. Bethlehem .. Myles B. Foster
 89. Daybreak .. Berthold Iours
 90. In the manger .. J. Barnby
 91. The mother and child .. Myles B. Foster
 92. Christ is born .. J. F. Bridge
 93. Christmas Day .. Battison Haynes
 *94. Sweet Christmas Bells .. J. Stainer
 Complete, 1s. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 2d.

Ten Christmas Carols. Three-halfpence each.

95. Now join we all with holy mirth .. J. Stainer
 96. Softly the night .. J. M. Crament
 97. Sleep, Holy Babe .. J. T. Field
 98. Now dies in David's City .. J. Swire
 99. There dwelt in Old Judea .. R. Jackson
 100. Good people, give ear .. J. Swire
 101. Carol for Christmas Day .. J. T. Field
 102. Ye stars of night .. J. Swire
 103. Ring out, ye bells .. J. H. Wallis
 104. Two thousand troubled years .. J. F. Bridge
 Complete, 1s. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 2d.

* All Carols marked with an asterisk are also published separately in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

MADE IN ENGLAND.

The Carollers.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Words by THOMAS HOOD.

Music by A. M. GOODHART.

In moderate time. ♩ = 90.

mf. cres.

1. Un-der-neath my win-dow, where the snow lies white, I can

mf. cres. p

hear sweet voi - ces sing-ing in the night: As the cres. cres.

night - wind va - ries, so they rise and fall, In this

poco rit. f a tempo. p quaint old car - ol join-ing one and all— "In the

poco rit. f a tempo. p

THE CAROLLERS.

cres. f

East a . . grey light pro - phe - sies the dawn, Up and

cres. f

f poco allargando.

hail . . the day - light, Christ the Lord is born."

f poco allargando.

p cres.

2. Ah ! that quaint old ca - rol, well its words I know, First p cres.

p sung in the vil - lage long, long years a - go ; In the

p

THE CAROLLERS.

cres.

grow - ing day-light, many a time, and oft, Have the

cres.

poco rit.

dark winds ren-dered back its bur - den soft—"In the poco rit. a tempo. p a tempo.

cres.

East a . . grey light pro - phe - sies . . the . . dawn, Up and

cres. f

ff poco allargando.

hail . . the day - light, Christ the Lord is born.'

ff poco allargando.

interesting, even illuminating, to know what a Parisian audience thinks of our really competent artists, such as John Coates, Kirkby Lunn, Gertrude Peppercorn, and others who are in the front rank. They might also, with advantage, be introduced to the glories of Purcell, the late Georgian composers, the best of the Victorian song-writers, and two or three latter-day orchestral composers. Our reputation demands the lifting of the veil.

According to ultra-patriotic Parisians, the finest performances in the world take place at Paris. So far as orchestral playing is concerned, there is some truth in this vaunting dictum. One could not wish for better playing than that provided by the Lamoureux and Colonne Orchestras, which have recently embarked upon their winter season under very auspicious conditions. M. Gustave Pierné and other distinguished conductors have been engaged, and the programmes are of more than ordinary interest. At a recent Lamoureux concert, for example, unusually satisfying readings of the 'Benvenuto Cellini' and the 'Flying Dutchman' Overtures were secured.

Opera in the provinces is flourishing. Each opera-house is in full swing, the support generally being all that the most grasping impresario could wish, while the singers on the whole are capable—even, in some cases, distinguished. Indeed, for all round satisfaction, the provincial representations are an improvement on those at Paris, where one expects the best, only to be disappointed. The fact is, the average Parisian star has long since ceased to scintillate; but managers apparently being loth to part with them, they continue to appear at the Opéra and the Opéra-Comique year in and year out. It is doubtful if they would be successful outside Paris. Country critics might be too much for them.

In one respect Parisian and provincial managers meet on the same ground; they all permit the same cut in 'La Traviata.' The present writer 'assisted' at performances of the tuneful work at Paris, at Rouen, and at Havre (poor Manon's port of embarkation for the penal settlement to which the foolishly-attached Des Grieux followed his deceitful enslaver). In each case the second Act, and, consequently, the whole context of the opera, was ruined by the duet for Violetta and Germont being ruthlessly relegated. As to the translation, much of it differs from the Italian text. In short, all who prefer 'La Traviata' as Verdi wrote it would be well-advised to give French performances of this opera a miss.

GEORGE CÉCIL.

Miscellaneous

MUSIC AT THE WORKING MEN'S COLLEGE

Music has long held a prominent place at this institution. A new departure is the formation of a Sunday Evening Concert Society, run on the lines of the well-known South Place concerts. The Society has arranged for the appearance of some well-known chamber music combinations and soloists. The concerts take place on Sundays at 7.30. Mr. W. W. Cobbett is the president, supported by Dr. Walford Davies, Mr. Edwin Evans, Mr. Frank Bridge, Dr. Hugh Blair, &c., &c.

GRAHAMSTOWN (SOUTH AFRICA).—On October 9 the Professors of the Grahamstown Training College gave an excellent concert in the Hall of the institution. These concerts, which are largely attended, form the most important educational musical work at Grahamstown, and their value can hardly be over-estimated. The College Orchestra played 'Sursum Corda' (Elgar) and 'Lurline' (Wallace) under the conductorship of Mr. George Wilby. Mr. Archie H. Higgs's pianoforte solos included MacDowell's 'Celtic' Sonata. Mr. George Wilby played the violin and Mr. Hayden Matthews sang. The Training College is to be congratulated on having such capable musicians on its staff.

DUNEDIN, N.Z.—The Dunedin Choral Society, which celebrates its Jubilee in 1922, gave 'King Olaf' on September 4 and 6, under the direction of Mr. Sidney Wolf. Solo parts were taken by Mrs. Astley Black, Mr. Harry Drake, and Mr. G. Stuart Thomson.

Lord Phillimore presided recently at a Conference of representatives of professional institutions and benevolent funds and other bodies in touch with the professional classes. It was reported that the Professional Classes War Relief Council had decided upon a scheme of reconstruction in order to become a permanent body for dealing with post-war distress among professional men and women and others of the more highly educated classes. The Conference warmly supported this action on their part, and a resolution moved by the Rev. Canon Deane, chairman of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers, and seconded by Mr. E. W. Monkhouse, was adopted, urging all bodies in touch with the professional classes to recognise the Council and to avail themselves of its services when likely to be of use. Among those present were Major Leonard Darwin, Sir Maurice Cameron, Mr. K. L. Woolcombe, Sir Reginald Acland, K.C., Lady Chambers, Miss Philippa Strachey, Mr. A. A. Somerville, Mr. Percy Tibbs, and Lieut.-Col. E. F. Ward, D.S.O.

The London Chamber Concert Society announces a spring series of ten concerts. The scheme includes the first performance of a new String Quartet by Arnold Bax (April 20), and a new Violin Sonata by Ruby Holland (March 9). Other British composers represented include Julius Harrison, Frank Bridge, and Katherine Eggar, and Mr. Murray Davey will sing his own songs with quartet accompaniment. The first programme (February 3) includes Schubert's Octet. On February 17 Ravel's Septet will be played, and at the same concert Dr. Ethel Smyth's vocal scene 'Chrysis,' with accompaniment for strings, harp, flute, double-bass, and triangle will be sung by Lady Maud Warrender. On March 23 Elgar's chamber works will be repeated by general request, with the artists who appeared at the original performances—Messrs. Albert Sammons, W. H. Reed, Raymond Jeremy, Felix Salmond, and William Murdoch.

The Great Eastern Railway Musical Society gave its first concert of the season at Hamilton Hall on November 3, before a crowded audience. The full orchestra of the Society, which showed itself to have still further improved, particularly in the string section, played the 'William Tell' Overture, the second movement of Dvorák's Symphony, 'From the New World,' the 'Peer Gynt' Suite, and a selection from 'La Bohème.' The soloists were Miss Maggie Inglis and Miss Sarah Fisher. The concert was conducted by Colonel W. J. Galloway.

The Duffries and Maxwelltown Choral and Orchestral Society has chosen an unusual and very commendable plan for its musical season. Besides the choral concerts which offer 'Hear my prayer,' 'From the Bavarian Highlands,' 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' and Stanford's 'Songs of the Fleet,' there is an orchestral concert with Mozart's G minor Symphony and Elgar's Serenade for strings as principal features, and a chamber concert by the London String Quartet. Elgar's Quintet is to be given, with Mrs. Douglas Barbour as pianist.

Tredegar Orpheus Male-Voice Choir, one of the premier choirs of Wales, recently honoured its conductor, Mr. J. D. Evans, by giving him a complimentary concert, concluding with a handsome presentation. During the proceedings it was stated that the choir, which was mainly composed of miners, had raised £7,000 for charity since its formation in 1909. In May last the choir scored huge successes in London at the Palladium, Alhambra, and other theatres.

The Novello Choir (hon. conductor, Mr. Harold Brooke), will give a concert of Christmas music on December 22, at 7.30, in the King George's Hall (London Central Y.M.C.A.), Tottenham Court Road. The programme will include Holst's 'Christmas Day,' a Bach selection, and carols and part-songs. The soloists will be Miss Ethel Fenton and Mr. Edward Halland. Mr. Charles Fry will recite. The entire proceeds will be given to St. Dunstan's Hostel.

The season of the Royal Choral Society opened at the Royal Albert Hall on October 30 with a performance of 'Elijah,' in which fine tone-building and broad and simple directness of expression proved again the capabilities of this choir. With Sir Frederick Bridge conducting, Mr. H. L. Balfour at the organ, and Miss Agnes Nicholls, Miss Phyllis Lett, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Herbert Brown as principal soloists, everything was a repetition of familiar experiences.

Answers to Correspondents

SIGMA.—An announcement in our 'Chamber Music' column would probably put you in touch with the people you want. You may have replies sent to this office if you wish.

ZYX.—We cannot give you the address of Messrs. Smeed & Bundy, because there is no such firm, nor is there such a book as the 'Reminiscences of Lysbeth Malpas.' We hate having to explain, but the article was a parody on Mrs. Asquith's memoirs. What has poor 'Feste' done that you should take him so seriously?

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BENNETT, GEORGE J.—Elegiac Prelude. (No. 73, Original Compositions, New Series.) 2s. 3d.

BROWNING, S.—"God's Darlings." Song. 2s.

CHAMBERS, H. A.—Te Deum laudamus. Chant form in A. (No. 1004, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 4d.

ELGAR, EDWARD.—"With proud thanksgiving." Military Band accompaniment. Arranged by FRANK WINTERBOTTOM. 9s.

—Ditto. Brass Band accompaniment. 6s.

ELLINGFORD, H. F.—The Organ. A study of its Principles and Practice. (No. 93, Novello's Music Primers.) 3s.

GERMAN, EDWARD.—"London Town." Four-part song. (No. 1388, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 6d.

GOUNOD, CHARLES.—"Send out Thy light." Arranged as a Trio for S.S.A. with Pianoforte accompaniment. (No. 471, Novello's Octavo Edition of Trios, &c.) 4d.

HARTY, HAMILTON.—"The Mystic Trumpeter." Book of words, 7s. 6d. per hundred.

HARWOOD, BASIL.—Office of Holy Communion in E flat. A Short and Easy Setting for Village Choirs and Congregations. Is. Voice Part only. 6d.

HATTON, J. L.—"Simon the Cellarer." Four-part Song for T.T.B.B. Arranged by Ernest Newton. (No. 571, The Orpheus.) 4d.

JOHNSON, J. ST. A.—"Sandy the Piper." Song for Baritone. 2s.

—"The Fiddler." Song. For Baritone. 2s.

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS:
No. 392. "The Carolers." A. M. GOODHART. 1½d.
No. 393. "The Rose and the Lily." ALEC ROWLEY. 1½d.

PATTERSON, ANNIE W.—"Once in olden time." Christmas Carol. 2d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW (No. 342) contains the following music in both notations: "Lonely Woods." Unison Song by Lully. "Old Winter's Voice." English Folk-Song. Arranged for Two-part (or unison) Singing with a part for Baritone ad lib. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS. Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A B

No. 1294. "O Mistress Mine." Traditional Melody. Arr. as a Duet for Female or Boys' Voices.

JOHN E. WEST. 3d. —

No. 1304. "Lullaby." Two-part Song.

R. BERNARD ELLIOTT. 4d. —

STEGGALL, REGINALD.—"Lullaby." Song. For

Contralto. 2s.

STOCKS, W. H.—A Selection from Thirty-one Psalms (Bible Version.) Edited and Pointed for Chanting. 3d.

STUTTON, ETHEL K.—"Our Saviour, so holy." Christmas Carol. 2d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2332. "The Boy." A Humorous Part-Song for mixed voices.

A. HERBERT BREWER 3d.

No. 2333. "O loving Saviour." Anthem for four Voices. F. W. WADELY 2d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—(continued).
TONIC SOL-FA SERIES—(continued.)

No. 2334. "O God, Who hast prepared." JOHN MUDD 2d.

No. 2335. "Wi' a hundred pipers." Arranged for mixed voices by JOHN E. WEST 3d.

No. 2336. "An old song resung." Mixed voices. (unaccompanied.) H. BALFOUR GARDINER 4d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

BACH, J. S.—"O Saviour Sweet." Arranged for Alto Solo and Chorus. 10 cents (6d.).

CANDLYN, T. F.—"O come, O come Emmanuel." For S.A.T.B. 20 cents (1s.).

—"O God of Armies." Bass Solo for Saints' Days.

CLOKEY, J. W.—"In a Norwegian Village." For Organ.

DELAMARTER, ERIC.—"Noel." A Cycle of Ancient Carols. $2 (8s.).

DICKINSON, CLARENCE.—"In the silence of the night." Norwegian Folk-Song arranged for Solo Voices and Chorus.

—"The Shadows of evening are falling." For S.A.T.B. 10 cents (6d.).

FERRARI, GUSTAVE.—Intermezzo (Musette). For Organ.

—Solemn March. For Organ.

—Fantasy on French Folk-Songs. For Organ. $2 (8s.).

ISKE, D.—"Love can die." Song.

GOUNOD.—"Serenade." Transcribed for Organ by EDWIN H. LEMARE.

JAMES, P.—"The Nightingale in Bethlehem." (A legend of the Nativity.) For Soli and Chorus.

JENNINGS, A. B.—"Springs in the Desert." Anthem for Advent or Missions. 15 cents (8d.).

LEMARE, EDWIN H.—Second Romance in D flat. For Organ.

—"Home Sweet Home." Transcribed for Organ.

—"Suwanee River." Transcribed for Organ.

—"Robin Adair." Transcribed and Paraphrased for Organ.

—"The Minstrel Boy." Transcribed and Paraphrased for Organ.

ULICH, G. R.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in F. 20 cents (1s.).

WEBBE, W. Y.—"A Norse Lullaby." Cantata for Women's Voices. 50 cents (2s. 6d.).

THREE CHRISTMAS CAROLS

BY
C. H. H. PARRY.

I SING THE BIRTH 4d.
WELCOME YULE 3d.
WHEN CHRIST WAS BORN OF MARY FREE ... 3d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TO THE PROFESSION.

FOR SALE

in readiness for January (1921) Term,
A VALUABLE PRACTICE

Cardiff as Centre.

SINGING AND PIANOFORTE

(principally Singing).

Exceptional opportunity for a capable Teacher.

Present owner giving up private Practice to take up a University Appointment.

PERSONAL INTRODUCTIONS GIVEN TO SUCCESSOR.

For particulars, apply—

"E. V." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W. 1.

HASTINGS MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

MARCH 14TH, 15TH, 16TH, AND 17TH, 1921.

YLLABUS 2d., by post, 3d.

From Hon. Secs., Station Approach, Devonshire Road,
HASTINGS.

THE ART OF VOICE TRAINING.

MR. FIELD HYDE

WILL CONDUCT HIS

Christmas Vacation Course in London

FROM WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1920, TO JANUARY 5, 1921.

TWELVE LECTURE-DEMONSTRATIONS will be given, of about one and a-half hours each.

The Course covers every important feature of Voice-Training method and is the outcome of over thirty years' experience and investigation of all the principal schools of voice-training. Lessons are given to selected voices for the purpose of showing how to treat the various defects in voice use, and a permanent printed record of the chief features of the method is provided. The course has been attended by Principals and Professors of some of the greatest musical institutions, Cathedral and other Organists, and well-known Conductors and Teachers, and their recommendation is unanimous.

A more EXTENDED COURSE is given during term on Saturdays, at the Training School for Music Teachers.

For full particulars of either Course, address:

MR. F. C. FIELD HYDE,
4, WIGMORE STUDIOS, 52, WIGMORE STREET,
LONDON, W. 1.

THREE ARTS CLUB BUREAU.
CONCERT DIRECTION.

RELIABLE ARTISTS FOR ORATORIO AND BALLAD
CONCERTS.

19a, Marylebone Road, N.W. 1.

MAYFAIR 2000

RALPH WILLIAMS (L.R.A.M.)

(TENOR).

Lackham House, Osterley Park, W.

HANDEL.—WANTED Letters, early Copies of Works, or authenticated relics of the composer. Flower, Idehurst, Sevenoaks.

WELLS CATHEDRAL.—Assistant-ORGANIST required at once. Salary, £120 per annum, with teaching connection. Single man with Cathedral experience preferred. Apply, Rev. Canon Davis, The Liberty, Wells, Somerset.

WANTED.—Beginning new year. Organist and CHOIRMASTER for St. Mary's, Guildford. Three-manual Norman & Beard organ. No week-day Services. Salary, £70. Apply, Rector, Rectory House, Guildford.

SOUTHWELL CATHEDRAL.—LAY-CLERK required (Bass). Communicant (C. of E.). Good sight-reading essential. Stipend, £80. Apply, stating age and occupation, to H. W. Tupper, Vicars' Court, Southwell, Notts.

ORGAN MUSIC FOR SALE.—Cheap. Particulars. Disabled organist. "Hardisty," 5, Princess Road, Ripon.

ORGAN PEDALS for piano. Straight, concave, in good condition, with seat. £7 10s, "W," 19, Lavender Gardens, S.W. 11.

FOR SALE.—Bridgeporte ORGAN, massive mahogany case; fine, powerful tone; 11 stops; high mirror back; thoroughly overhauled. Suit Mission or Chapel. Price £50. Stewart, Stanford Rivers, Ongar.

COSMOS CHORAL LEAFLETS.

NEW AND ATTRACTIVE CHURCH CHOIR MUSIC.

COMPOSED BY A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS.

Tonic Sol-fa and Old Notation combined.

REST AT EVENTIDE (Vesper). "Very Tuneful" 1d. each.
GRANT, WE BESEECH THEE (Introit). "Most inspiring" 1d. each.
FOURFOLD AMEN. "Charmingly original" 1d. each.
THE LORD'S PRAYER (Not a Chant). "Very Devotional" 1d. each.
Specimens sent post free for three penny stamps. Mention this paper.

A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS.

GLENHOLME, THE COMMON, HESSELE, E. YORKS.
Publisher of the "Cosmos Series" S. S. Anniversary Music.

NEW RECITAL PIECES FOR ORGAN.

ALBERT COATES

Idyll (Arr. by A. EAGLEFIELD HULL) 2s. net.

CYRIL SCOTT

(Arr. by PURCELL J. MANSFIELD).

The Wild Hills of Clare }
All through the Night } 2s. net.

(From "British Melodies.")

Passacaglia (From the Pastoral Suite) 2s. net.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,

8 & 10, BEAK STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W. 1.

JOHANN SEBASTIAN

BACH

His Life, Art and Work. Translated from the German of J. N. FORKEL, with Notes and Appendices by C. SANFORD TERRY, Litt.D. 21s. net.

"Very much more than a re-translation of an old work which was previously translated very imperfectly into English a hundred years ago. . . . It contains material for a history of Bach criticism from the beginning of the 19th century until the present day, and incidentally suggests directions which future research may follow."—Times Literary Supplement.

"Dr. Terry has done English musicians considerable service. . . . Two-thirds of what Dr. Terry magnanimously describes as 'Bach by Forkel' is Bach by Terry. My only complaint is that there is not still more Terry."—New Statesman.

BACH

CONSTABLE & Co., LTD., 10-12 ORANGE STREET, LONDON, W.C.2.

THREE-MANUAL ORGAN,

By "FATHER" WILLIS. FOR DISPOSAL.

Apply, WILLIS.

234, FERNDALE ROAD, BRINTON, S.W.9.

ORGAN.—Two Manuals, spotted metal pipes, for SALE. Price £425. Now in the Parish Church, Wembley; being replaced by larger instrument. Apply, Churchwarden, 20, Swinderv Road, Wembley.

FOR SALE.—CHURCH ORGAN. One manual, with pedals, at present used in St. Albans Road Primitive Methodist Church, Watford, where Memorial Thanksgiving Organ is being installed. Inspection and trial by appointment. H. J. Winters, 123, Leavesden Road, Watford.

FOR SALE.—AMERICAN ORGAN, by Estey. Solid Walnut case, panelled back, 24 stops, ivory keys, treble and bass couplers, knee swells, blown foot or hand. Perfect condition. Suitable small Church or Hall. £70, or offers. Seen by appointment. "Vero." Verona, Barnsley.

ECOLIAN PIPE ORGAN FOR SALE.—17 stops, 2 composition pedals, 116-note, double tracker board, two-manual. Carved black oak case. 10-ft. 6-in. high; 11-ft. broad; 7-ft. deep. Electrically driven. A most beautiful instrument. Can be seen by appointment. The present price of this instrument—which is very difficult to obtain—is £2,300. I will accept £1,700. W. Bowker, 125, Kings Road, Brighton.

FOR SALE.—Organ Pedal Attachment for Piano, with seat. Simple to fix. Practically new. £6 10s. Seen by appointment. 189, Forest Road, Leytonstone, E. 11.

FOR SALE.—Grand PIANO, by Erard. Fine instrument in excellent condition. Rosewood case. Accept 100 guineas for quick sale, as room wanted. Worth double. Apply, "M. J.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd, 160, Wardour Street, W. 1.

FOR SALE.—Steinway Grand PIANO, rosewood case. Can be inspected at 33, Southborough Road, Bickley, Kent, between the hours of 10 and 12 noon, on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Orders to view and offers in writing to Wilkinson & Marshall, Solicitors, 1, Mosley Street, Newcastle.

FOR SALE.—(Offers.) Dr. Burney's History of Music, four Vols.; Jebbs's Choral Service; Hipkins's Musical Instruments, 50 coloured plates. 18, Ayresome Terrace, Roundhay, Leeds.

THE "MUSICAL TIMES" for SALE.—Fine Collection of Forty-three bound Volumes from 1869, perfect condition. Any offers. W. H. Sturges, 28, Blenheim Crescent, S. Croydon.

BASSES AND BARITONES should buy Song "THE SILENT LAND" (Oakley). Compass A to D. Price 2s. Weekes & Co., 14, Hanover Street, W. 1.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

"Orrisdale," 418, Chorley Old Road, Bolton. DEAR SIRS,—I have opened many organs by various builders, but I wish to say this: That I have never played on a finer Pedal Board than the one which you make.

ARTHUR E. JONES, F.R.C.O., L.T.C.L.

Terms: 17 guineas net cash, or monthly payments arranged.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions, and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,

NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.

London Address: 11, Ashlake Road, Streatham, S.W. 16.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE ELEMENTS OF HARMONY

BY

JAMES LYON, Mus. D. (OXON.).

CHAPTERS: I. Introductory; II. Primary Triads, Major or Minor; III. The Secondary Triads; IV. General Information. V. The Inversions of the Diatonic Triads; VI. Sequences; VII. The Dominant Seventh; VIII. Cadences; IX. Modulation Part I: X. Chromatic Triads; XI. Unessential Notes; XII. Suspensions; XIII. Secondary Chords of the Seventh; XIV. The Dominant Ninth; XV. The Dominant Eleventh; XVI. The Dominant Thirteenth; XVII. Chromatic Fundamental Discords; XVIII. The Augmented Sixth; XIX. Chromatically Altered Chords; XX. Modulation, Part 2; XXI. Pedals; XXII. General Hints.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence net.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS.—Book 172.

SIX CHRISTMAS SONGS

(UNISON)

BY

PETER CORNELIUS

(Op. 8).

WORDS (FROM THE GERMAN OF PETER CORNELIUS) BY

W. G. ROTHERY.

844. THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

845. THE SHEPHERDS.

846. THE KINGS.

847. SIMEON.

848. CHRIST, THE FRIEND OF CHILDREN.

849. THE CHRIST-CHILD.

Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notation, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, 8vo size; B. Voice Parts only in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

PRICE EIGHTPENCE.

Tonic Sol-fa (B Edition), price Fourpence.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited.

TWO CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

1. Lowliest! Loftiest!

2. O hearken, all ye sad and lone!

WORDS BY

G. H. F. NORRIS.

MUSIC BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price Threepence; Words only, 2s. 6d. per 100.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY Limited.

IN THE PRESS.

TO BE PUBLISHED DECEMBER 13.

"CHRISTMASTIDE"

A FANTASIA FOR ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

BASIL HARWOOD.

Price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE TWELVE DAYS OF CHRISTMAS.

TRADITIONAL SONG

ARRANGED BY

FREDERIC AUSTIN.

Price Two Shillings.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ANTHEMS FOR CHRISTMAS.

*A Song of Joy	John E. West	4d.	*Nazareth	Ch. Gounod	3d.
And the Angel said unto them	J. P. Sweetling	6d.	*Now is come Salvation	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*And thou, Bethlehem	F. W. Wadely	2d.	*Now when Jesus	Joseph Holbrooke	4d.
*Angels from the realms of glory, F. H. Cowen 3d.; E. Vine Hall	4d.		O come, all ye faithful (Adeste Fideles) Arr. by G. J. Tredaway	3d.
*Arise, shine, for thy light is come	Geo. Elvey	2d.	O come hither	W. Jackson	4d.
*Arise, shine, for thy light is come	G. F. Cobb	6d.	*O come, Redeemer of mankind	Arthur W. Marchant	4d.
*Arise, shine, O Jerusalem	Thomas Adams	4d.	*O come, Redeemer of mankind	John E. West	2d.
*Awake, put on thy strength	F. R. Greenish	6d.	*O Holy Babe	A. C. Mackenzie	2d.
Before the heavens were spread abroad	Horatio W. Parker	4d.	*O Holy Night	Adolphe Adam	6d.
Behold, all the earth lieth still	G. F. Huntley	6d.	O Jerusalem! look about thee	E. W. Naylor	6d.
Behold, a star appeareth	Niels W. Gade	2d.	*O Jerusalem! look about thee	John E. West	2d.
*Behold, a star appeareth	B. Luard-Selby	4d.	*O sing to God (Noël). (Female Voices)	Ch. Gounod	3d.
*Behold, I bring	J. Barnby and E. V. Hall, ea.	4d.	*O sing to God (Noël). (Arranged for S.A.T.B.)	Ch. Gounod	4d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings *J. Goss and Giovanni Croce, ea.	2d.		*O Thou that tellest	Handel	2d.
Behold, I bring you glad tidings *C. W. Smith and Vittoria, ea.	2d.		*O world in sorrow sleeping	Alfred Hollins	4d.
Behold, I bring you good tidings	J. M. Crament	6d.	*O Zion, that bringest good tidings	J. Stainer	2d.
*Behold my servant	J. Frederick Bridge	4d.	Of the Father's love begotten	E. C. Bairstow	4d.
Behold, the name of the Lord	Percy Pitt	6d.	*Rejoice in the Lord	J. B. Calkin	4d.
*Behold the Tabernacle (Two-part Anthem)	G. A. Macfarren	4d.	*Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous	Alfred Hollins	4d.
Be peace on earth	W. Crotch	2d.	*Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion	Charles H. Lloyd	1d.
Beside Thy Cradle	J. S. Bach	2d.	Rejoice, O ye people	Mendelssohn	2d.
*Bethlehem	Ch. Gounod	2d.	*Rest, weary earth	A. M. Goodhart	4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel S. S. Wesley & The Earl of Mar, ea.	2d.		*Ring out, wild bells	P. E. Fletcher	4d.
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	C. L. Williams	6d.	Say, where is He born (Trio)	Mendelssohn	1d.
*Blessed be the Lord God of Israel	E. Vine Hall	4d.	*See, amid the winter's snow	John E. West	2d.
Born to-day (Moret. S.S.A.T.B.)	J. P. Sweetling	4d.	Ditto (Three-part)	John E. West	4d.
Break forth into joy	H. A. Matthews and W. G. Alcock, ea.	4d.	*Silent Night (Melody by F. Grüber)	Arr. by John E. West	2d.
*Break forth into joy	T. Ridley Prentice	8d.	*Sing and rejoice	J. Barnby and John E. West, each	2d.
*Break forth into joy	S. Coleridge-Taylor and Bruce Steane, ea.	4d.	*Sing and rejoice	Basil Harwood	6d.
*Break forth	J. S. Bach	2d.	Sing a song of praise	Oliver King	4d.
*Brightest and best	E. Vine Hall	6d.	*Sing, O Daughter of Zion H. W. Wareing and W. G. Alcock, ea.	1d.
*Calm on the list'ning ear of night	Horatio W. Parker	4d.	Sing, O Daughter of Zion	H. Gadsby	2d.
*Christ's Incarnation	Myles B. Foster	2d.	Sing, O heavens *H. Davan Wetton, Kent, & T. T. Trimmell, ea.	6d.
*Christians, awake	J. Barnby, 3d.; *H. M. Higgs	6d.	Sing, O heavens	A. C. Mackenzie	3d.
*Christians, be joyful	Bach	6d.	*Sing, O heavens	J. H. Maunders and B. Tours, each	2d.
*Christmas Day (Choral Fantasy on Old Carols)	G. Holst	6d.	*Sing, O heavens	Bruce Steane, 3d.; *Arthur S. Sullivan	13d.
Come and thank Him	Bach	2d.	*Sing, O heavens, and be joyful, O earth	A. Gault	2d.
*Come and worship the Lord	Thomas Adams	2d.	*Sing unto the Lord	Vincent Novello	2d.
*Come hither, ye faithful	H. Hofmann	6d.	*That God doth love the world	Bach	4d.
*Come, ye Gentles, hear the story	Edward C. Bairstow	2d.	*The Angel (Gabriel) was sent from God	H. Smart	2d.
*Come, ye lofty	H. Elliot Button	3d.	*The Angel said unto them (Two-part. Sop. and Bass)	Brown	3d.
*Crown Him, the Virgin's Son	B. Luard-Selby	3d.	*The first Christmas (Words only, 3s. per 100)	J. Barnby	4d.
Dawns the day, the natal day	Robin H. Legge	4d.	*The Grace of God which bringeth salvation	J. Barnby	2d.
Drop down, ye heavens	J. Barnby, 13d.; J. Stainer	3d.	*The hallowed day hath shined	B. Luard-Selby	4d.
*For unto us a Child is born	Handel	3d.	*The hallowed day hath shined upon us	J. Stainer	2d.
*Give the king Thy judgments, O Lord	A. H. Brown	4d.	*The Hymn of the Angels	John E. West	6d.
Glory be to God	Bach	2d.	*The light hath shined	E. Silas and C. G. Verrinder, ea.	2d.
*Glory to God	Bach, 2d.; Handel	13d.	*The Lord our Righteousness	Hugh Blair	4d.
Glory to God in the highest *Clowes Bayley and Pergolesi, ea.	2d.		*The morning stars sang together	J. Stainer	8d.
*Glory to God in the highest	E. Markham Lee	4d.	*The morning stars sang together	G. A. A. West	6d.
*God so loved the world	J. Goss and M. Kingston, ea.	2d.	*The New-Born King	Percy E. Fletcher	4d.
*God so loved the world	J. Varley Roberts	2d.	*The star that now is shining	Oliver King	2d.
*God so loved the world	J. Stainer	2d.	*The whole earth is at rest	J. Varley Roberts	6d.
*God, Who at sundry times	Edward C. Bairstow	2d.	*The Word is flesh become	Ch. Gounod	8d.
*God, Who at sundry times	J. H. Mee	6d.	*The Word is made Incarnate	Thomas Adams	3d.
*Good King Wenceslas	Arr. by W. G. Ross	4d.	*There shall a star	Mendelssohn	3d.
Hail! thou that art highly favoured	Arthur Carnall	4d.	*There shall come a star	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*Hail to the Christ (Carol-Anthem)	J. Barnby	3d.	There shall come forth a Rod	*Ferris Tozer & F. W. Wadely, ea.	4d.
*Hallelujah! for unto us a Child is born	W. H. Monk	3d.	*There shall come forth a star	O. A. Mansfield	4d.
Hallelujah! the light hath shined	Oliver King	4d.	*There was silence in Bethlehem's fields	J. Stainer	2d.
*Hark! the glad sound	Myles B. Foster and E. V. Hall, ea.	4d.	Ditto (Unison)	J. Stainer	2d.
*Hark! the herald angels sing	E. V. Hall	4d.	*There were shepherds	Myles B. Foster and B. Tours, ea.	2d.
*Hark! what news the angels bring	Oliver King	4d.	Ditto (Two-part Anthem)	Myles B. Foster	4d.
Hear, King of Angels	Bach	2d.	There were shepherds	Edgar Pettman and H. W. Wareing, ea.	4d.
He cometh forth	G. A. Macfarren	3d.	*There were shepherds	Charles Vincent	6d.
How beautiful are the feet (Appendix to the "Messiah")	Handel	8d.	*There were shepherds	E. A. Sydenham and Healey Willan, ea.	4d.
I desired wisdom	J. Stainer	8d.	*This day Christ is born (Men's Voices)	Basil Harwood	4d.
I will set His dominion in the sea	Horatio W. Parker	6d.	This is the day which the Lord hath made	J. Turle	4d.
*In a stable lowly (Carol-Anthem)	Oliver King	2d.	*This is the month	E. W. Naylor	4d.
In that day	J. F. Bridge	4d.	*Thou art My Son	Thomas Adams	4d.
*In the beginning	G. B. Allen and B. Luard-Selby, ea.	2d.	*Thou must leave Thy lowly dwelling	Berlioz	2d.
In the beginning	Charles Macpherson	6d.	*Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts	J. Stainer	2d.
In the beginning was the Word	E. H. Thorne	6d.	Unto us a Child is born	F. Adlam	6d.
In the beginning was the Word	Ferris Tozer	6d.	Unto us was born (Two-part Anthem)	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
In this was manifested	F. E. Gladstone	6d.	What sweeter music can we bring	H. Walford Davies	4d.
*It came upon the midnight clear	J. Stainer	2d.	When Christ was born to earth	H. Walford Davies	6d.
*Jesus, Who from Thy Father's throne	F. C. Woods	4d.	*When Jesus was born in Bethlehem	W. A. C. Cruickshank	4d.
*Let us now go even unto Bethlehem J. T. Field & E. J. Hopkins, ea.	2d.		*While all things were in quiet silence	Henry J. King	4d.
*Let us now go even unto Bethlehem	Bruce Steane	2d.	*While all things were in quiet silence	Oliver King	2d.
*Like silver lamps	J. Barnby	2d.	While all things were in quiet silence	G. A. Macfarren	4d.
*Lo, God, our God has come	Battisnon	4d.	While all things were in quiet silence	Healey Willan	4d.
*Lo, star-led chiefs	W. Crotch	4d.	*While shepherds watched their flocks Geo. Elvey & E. V. Hall, ea.	4d.
*Love Divine, all love excelling	E. V. Hall	4d.	*While shepherds watched their flocks J. Barnby, 61; W. T. Best	4d.
*Mercy and truth are met together (Words, 3s. per 100) J. Stainer	4d.		With all Thy Hosts	*John E. West and A. W. Wilson, ea.	2d.

THE "LUTE" SERIES OF CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS.

*72 Arise, shine	T. W. Stephenson	4d.	*71 Fear not; for behold	F. J. Sawyer	4d.
*95 Arise, shine	F. C. Maker	4d.	*12 Hark! what mean (Carol Anthem)	Arthur Sullivan	4d.
179 Behold! He cometh	Albert W. Ketelbey	4d.	143 How beautiful are the feet	W. A. C. Cruickshank	4d.
116 Behold, I bring	F. Aubrey Owen	4d.	144 Let us now go	A. Kempton	4d.
94 Behold, I bring you good tidings	Fredk. Peel	4d.	131 Rejoice ye with Jerusalem	Arthur Page	4d.
225 Behold, my Servant	C. Harris	4d.	170 Sing, O Daughter of Zion	H. Elliot Button	4d.
108 Behold, my Servant	Ebenezer Prout	4d.	180 Sing, O Daughter of Zion	Arthur Page	4d.
166 Behold, upon the mountains	A. W. Ketelbey	4d.	154 Sing, O Heavens	Coldham Hall	4d.
*59 Blessed be the Lord	J. Barnby	4d.	*48 Sing, O sing	Henry Leslie	4d.
204 Break forth into joy	F. Aubrey Owen	4d.	*83 There were shepherds	A. R. Gaul	4d.
*455 Break forth into joy	J. C. Bridge	4d.	132 Unto us a Child is born	H. E. Nichol	4d.
*119 Break forth into joy	Seymour Smith	4d.	191 While all things	Cuthbert Harris	4d.
*23 Come near, ye nations	Michael Watson	4d.	*118 While shepherds watched	G. C. Martin	4d.
*35 Daughter of Zion	F. C. Maker	4d.

Anthems marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 13d., 2d., and 3d. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

CANTATAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

BETHLEHEM

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES AND CHORUS

Interspersed with Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY

E. CUTHBERT NUNN

THE MUSIC BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

Price Four Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, Two Shillings.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE

STORY OF BETHLEHEM CHRISTMAS CANTATA

FOR CHRISTMAS SERVICES, ETC.

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY

SHAPCOTT WENSLEY

THE MUSIC FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI,

CHORUS AND ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

JOHN E. WEST.

Price Three Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

String Parts, 8s. 9d.; Wind Parts and Full Score, MS.

CHRISTMAS EVE

FOR CONTRALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

COMPOSED BY

NIELS W. GADE.

(Op. 40.)

Price Two Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence.

CHRISTMAS SCENES

FOR FEMALE VOICES

COMPOSED BY

FREDERIC H. COWEN.

Price Four Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

BY

J. S. BACH.

Divided into six sections, intended originally for separate performance on the three days of Christmas, New Year's Day, New Year's Sunday, and the Festival of the Epiphany.

Vocal Score, Four Shillings; Vocal Parts, Two Shillings each.

Parts 1 and 2, 2s.; Parts 3 and 4, 2s.; Parts 5 and 6, 2s.

Tonic Sol-fa (Parts 1 and 2), 8d.

Books of Words (per 100), 12s. 6d.

Parts 1 and 2 (per 100), 6s. 6d.

THE NATIVITY

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, AND CHORUS

With Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND THE MUSIC

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price Two Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, Tenpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

FOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

ROSE DAFFORNE BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY

JULIUS HARRISON.

Price Two Shillings.

Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

THE HOLY CHILD

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ADAMS.

Price Two Shillings; Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence.

Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

YULE-TIDE

COMPOSED BY

THOMAS ANDERTON.

Price Three Shillings.

Paper boards, 5s.; cloth, gilt, 6s.

BEFORE THE PALING OF THE STARS

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

BY

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI.

SET TO MUSIC FOR VOICES AND ORCHESTRA

BY

B. J. DALE.

Price Two Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

TO W. A. PICKARD CAMBRIDGE.

Sweet hours of night.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Words by M. GARBUTT.

Music by H. CLAIBORNE DIXON.

Andante con moto.

Andante con moto.

For Rehearsal only.

mf

mf

mf

SWEET HOURS OF NIGHT.

find our love in shi - ning gold, Re - forged by an - gels day should all man - kind re - joice, Both young and old with

mf

{ 1. We find our love, ... Re - forged by an - gels
 2. This day should all re - joice, man - kind re - joice with

mf

{ 1. We find our love, ... with
 2. Both young and old, ... with as of old, For Christ is born. } So let us sing in lust - y voice, And full ac - cord. } mf

as of old, For Christ is born. } So let us sing in lust - y voice, And full ac - cord. } f mf

as of old, For Christ is born. } So let us sing in lust - y voice, And full ac - cord. } f mf

as of old, For Christ is born. } So lust - y voice, And full ac - cord. } f mf

SWEET HOURS OF NIGHT.

an - cient mu - sick car - ol - ling, car - ol - ling,
 an - cient mu - sick car - ol - ling, car - ol - ling,
 an - cient mu - sick car - ol - ling, car - ol - ling,
 let us sing, car - ol - ling, car - ol - ling.

The first system consists of four staves. The top three staves are vocal parts in treble clef, and the bottom staff is a piano accompaniment in bass clef. The music is in 2/4 time and features a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written below the vocal staves. The piano part includes a forte (f) dynamic marking.

car ol - ling.
 car ol - ling.
 - ling, car ol - ling.
 - ling, in an - cient mu - sick car - ol - ling.
 poco rall.
 poco rall.
 poco rall.
 poco rall.

The second system continues the musical piece with five staves. The top four staves are vocal parts, and the bottom staff is the piano accompaniment. The lyrics continue across the staves. The piano part includes a poco rall. (poco rallentando) marking. The system concludes with a double bar line.

SWEET HOURS OF NIGHT

a tempo. pp

Sweet hours of night ring out a chime To

a tempo. pp

Sweet hours of night ring out a chime To

a tempo. pp

Sweet hours of night ring out a chime To a tempo. mf p

Ring out a chime, ring

a tempo. pp mf p

dim. e rall.

wake us all this Christ-mas time, this Christ - mas time.

dim. e rall.

wake us all this Christ-mas time, this Christ - mas time.

dim. e rall.

wake us all this Christ-mas time, this Christ - mas time.

pp dim. e rall.

out a chime this Christ - mas time.

dim. e rall.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise that tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6th, 1891.
 "Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
 "Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
 Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS.

Staff
Notation. Tonic
Sol-fa.

Anthem—Christians, Awake	4d.	3d.
Carol—Once in Bethlehem	3d.	2d.
Two Christmas Carols	4d.	3d.

SERVICES.

SERVICE IN G	2s.	1/4
---------------------	-----	-----

Or, separately:—

Te Deum	4d.	3d.
Benedicite, omnia Opera	3d.	3d.
Benedictus	3d.	3d.
Jubilate	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	10d.	8d.
Pater Noster from the above	3d.	3d.
Amen ditto	1½d.	1½d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.

SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1)	1/4	10d.
--------------------------------------	-----	------

Or, separately:—

Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie	4d.	3d.
Office for the Holy Communion	8d.	6d.
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis	4d.	3d.

Te Deum in B flat	4d.	3d.
--------------------------	-----	-----

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison)	4d.	2d.
--	-----	-----

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D	4d.	3d.
--	-----	-----

ORGAN.

Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)	2s.	—
---------------------------------------	-----	---

CHURCH CANTATA.

Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for General use)	2s.	1/4
---	-----	-----

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

MUSIC FOR ADVENT AND CHRISTMAS

BY

EDWARD BUNNETT, Mus. D. CANTAB.

SERVICES.

CHANT TE DEUM, IN F	3d.
BENEDICITE, IN F	2d.
BENEDICTUS AND JUBILATE, IN F	4d.
MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS, IN F	4d.
CANTATE AND DEUS, IN F	4d.
COMMUNION SERVICE, IN E, WITH BENEDICTUS AND AGNUS DEI—FOR FOUR VOICES	1s.

ANTHEMS.

O LORD, THOU ART MY GOD—ADVENT	3d.
IN THE BEGINNING—CHRISTMAS	4d.
TONIC SOL-FA	2d.
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME—CHRISTMAS	4d.
BEHOLD, I BRING YOU GOOD TIDINGS—CHRISTMAS	3d.

FIVE SETS OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS, in Books, 6d. each.

All numbers printed separately, 1d. each.

The Composer will be pleased to send Specimens.

Address: 36, CHRIST CHURCH ROAD, NORWICH.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

30th 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH LYRICS

BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

FIVE SHILLINGS EACH SET.

(SET 11).

1. One golden thread.
2. The spirit of the Spring.
3. What part of dread eternity.
4. The blackbird.
5. The faithful lover.
6. If I might ride on a puissant wing.
7. Why art thou so w.
8. She is my love beyond all thought.

(SET 12).

1. When the dew is falling.
2. To Blossoms.
3. Rosaline.
4. When the sun's great orb.
5. Dream pedlary.
6. O World, O Life, O Time.
7. The sound of hidden music.

The Series is now completed by the publication of the above Sets.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE

B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO.

WE MAKE A SPECIALITY OF GOOD
MUSIC FOR TEACHERS' USE.

Through years of painstaking work we have thoroughly established the reputation of publishing the best collection of EASY AND MEDIUM GRADE TEACHING MUSIC FOR PIANO to be had in the world.

This is a strong statement, but a careful study of the contents of our catalogues will easily establish this fact; besides, the very large quantities of our publications purchased by the leading music-sellers throughout the British Isles and Colonies is another strong confirmation of the value of our publications.

This reputation has been gained through the great care which has been taken in every detail; first, in judicious selection of the manuscript to be published; second, by the conscientious but conservative editing and fingering given each work, and finally by having the best engraving, paper, printing, and binding that money can procure.

Are You a Music Teacher?

Do You Use Good Music?

Do You Believe in Pleasing Music?

Have You Seen Our Complete Catalogue?

Send in your name at once, and we will forward (post free) our Complete Catalogue, also Thematic Catalogues of Easy Teaching Music for the Piano, list of "EDITION WOOD," a Series of Standard Classics and Recreations for Teaching Purposes, nearly one thousand volumes.

THE B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO.

84, NEWMAN STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

No. 91.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION

BY
H. ELLIOT BUTTON

WITH PREFACE BY

SIR EDWARD ELGAR.

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

As musical compositions get more complicated, elaborate, and difficult of execution, it is increasingly incumbent upon the composer to present his meaning in a manner that will help the performer to grasp that meaning with as little trouble as possible.

The object of this book is to point out to composers, arrangers, and editors, the difficulties they often unwittingly place in the path of executants, and to suggest various means of obviating those difficulties.

Price - - Three Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S SONGS.

A. HERBERT BREWER—

When all the world is young.

In D (Compass, D to E) and F.

On Wings of Delight.

In C (Compass, A to C), E flat, and F.
Price 2s. each.

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR—

Sweet evenings come and go, love.

In F (Compass, D to E flat) and B flat.
Price 2s.

BROMLEY DERRY—

The Raiders.

(A Song of the Norsemen.)

In G (Compass, D to E flat).
Price 2s.

LAXTON EYRE—

Life's Highway.

In E flat (Compass, B flat to F).
Price 2s.

ERNEST FARRAR—

Brittany

In E flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), F, and G.
Price 1s. 6d.

EDWARD GERMAN—

Charming Chloe.

In D flat (Compass, D flat to E flat), E flat, and F.

It was a Lover and his Lass.

In G (Compass, D to E) and B flat.
Price 2s. each.

W. McNAUGHT—

The Piper.

In D (Compass, D to D) E flat, and F.
Price 2s.

W. G. ROSS—

A Daffodil Wedding.

In C (Compass, C to F) and D.
Price 2s.

LEONARD J. WALKER—

My Life is like a Garden.

In B flat (Compass, B flat to E flat), C, and D.

There's a pathway thro' the heather.

In D flat (Compass, D flat to F), E flat, and F.
Price 2s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

No. 393. NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price 1d 1½d.

THE ROSE AND THE LILY

Composed by ALEC ROWLEY.

Bramley, Rev. H. R. } CHRISTMAS CAROLS,
Stainer, John } NEW AND OLD.
FIRST SERIES. One Penny each.
Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 1s.

- *1. God rest you merry, gentlemen .. Traditional
- *2. The Manger Throne .. C. Steggall
- *3. A Virgin unspotted .. Traditional
- *4. Come, ye lofty .. Elvey
- *5. Come, tune your hearts .. Ouseley
- *6. The First Nowell .. Traditional
- *7. Jesu, hail .. J. Stainer
- *8. Good Christian men .. Old German
- *9. Sleep, holy Babe .. Dykes
- *10. Good King Wenceslas .. Traditional
- *11. When I view the Mother .. J. Barnby
- *12. The seven joys of Mary .. Traditional
- *13. On the Birthday of the Lord .. Dykes
- *14. What Child is this? .. Old English
- *15. Glorious, beauteous .. Maria Tiddeman
- *16. Waken! Christian Children! .. S. C. Hammerton
- *17. A Child this day is born .. Traditional
- *18. Carol for Christmas Eve .. Ouseley
- *19. When Christ was born .. A. H. Brown
- *20. Christmas Morning Hymn .. J. Barnby

- SECOND SERIES. One Penny each.
- *21. Carol for Christmas Eve .. Traditional
 - *22. Jesus in the Manger .. H. Smart
 - *23. The Holly and the Ivy .. Old French
 - *24. The Moon shines bright } id. .. Traditional
 - *25. The Virgin and Child .. C. Steggall
 - *26. The Incarnation .. Traditional
 - *27. Christmas Day .. J. Stainer
 - *28. The Cherry-Tree Carol .. Traditional
 - *29. God's dear Son .. Traditional
 - *30. See, amid the winter's snow .. Goss
 - *31. The Babe of Bethlehem .. Traditional
 - *32. In Bethlehem, that noble place .. Ouseley
 - *33. A Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin .. J. Barnby
 - *34. Christmas Song .. Dykes
 - *35. Jacob's Ladder .. Traditional
 - *36. The Story of the Shepherd .. J. Barnby
 - *37. The Wassail Song .. Traditional
 - *38. In terrâ pax .. Dykes
 - *39. Dives and Lazarus .. Traditional
 - *40. From far away .. Dykes
 - *41. Carol for Christmas Day .. A. Sullivan
 - *42. The Child Jesus in the Garden .. J. Stainer

- THIRD SERIES. One Penny each.
- *43. What soul-inspiring music .. Har. by J. S.
 - *44. In the country nigh to Bethlehem .. G. Hine
 - *45. We three Kings of Orient are .. Har. by J. S.
 - *46. Emmanuel, God with us .. H. Gadsby
 - *47. New Prince, new pomp } id. .. C. Steggall
 - *48. A Babe is born .. Har. by J. S.
 - *49. Come, let us all sweet Carols sing .. F. Champneys
 - *50. Let music break on this blest morn .. J. B. Calkin
 - *51. Carol for New Year's Day .. A. H. Brown
 - *52. The Angel Gabriel .. Har. by J. S.
 - *53. The Shepherds amazed .. A. H. Brown
 - *54. Noël! Noël! .. Har. by J. S.
 - *55. I sing the birth .. G. C. Martin
 - *56. Christmas Night .. A. H. Brown
 - *57. The Christmas Celebration .. E. Prout
 - *58. Arise and hail the Sacred Day .. A. H. Brown
 - *59. The Holy Well .. Har. by J. S.

- 60. The Angel and the Shepherds .. E. H. Thorne
 - 61. The Coventry Carol .. Har. by J. S.
 - 62. The Morning Star .. J. F. Bridge
 - 63. The Shepherds went .. J. F. Barnett
 - 64. I saw three ships .. Har. by J. S.
 - 65. Mountains, bow your heads .. W. H. Cummings
 - 66. Luther's Carol .. J. Higgs
 - 67. The Boy's Dream .. W. H. Monk
 - 68. Legends of the Infancy .. J. F. Bridge
 - 69. Let Christians all } id. .. Traditional
 - 70. Immortal Babe } s. d.
- The above 70 Carols, complete, cloth, gilt 4 0
Library Edition, with Historical Preface
Roxburgh binding .. 7 6
Illustrated Edition, 1st and 2nd Series .. 7 6
Three Series (cloth, gilt, 2s.) .. each 1 0
Words only, complete (cloth, 6d.) .. 0 4
Words, each Series .. 0 0 1½

Helmors, Rev. T.) CAROLS FOR CHRIST-Neale, Rev. J. M.) MASTIDE. Set to Ancient Melodies.

- 71. Here is joy for every age.
 - 72. Earthly friends will change.
 - 73. Gabriel's message.
 - 74. Christ was born on Christmas Day.
 - 75. Earth to-day rejoices.
 - 76. Good Christian men, rejoice.
 - 77. From church to church.
 - 78. In the ending of the year.
 - 79. Royal day that chastes gloom.
 - 80. O'er the hill and o'er the vale.
 - 81. Good King Wenceslas.
 - 82. Toll! toll! because there ends.
- The above 12 carols, complete .. s. d. 1 0
Folio, with pianoforte accompaniment .. 4 6
Treb'e part .. 0 6
Words only .. 0 0 1½

Wensley, Shapcott.—TWELVE NEW
CAROLS FOR CHRISTMAS. Three-halfpence each.

- 83. O holy star .. J. Stainer
 - 84. The shepherds .. Eaton Fanning
 - 85. Hymn of the angels .. G. M. Garrett
 - *86. The anthem of peace .. J. Barnby
 - 87. The desert .. Emma Mundella
 - 88. Bethlehem .. Myles B. Foster
 - 89. Daybreak .. Berthold Tours
 - 90. In the manger .. J. Barnby
 - 91. The mother and child .. Myles B. Foster
 - 92. Christ is born .. J. F. Bridge
 - 93. Christmas Day .. Battison Haynes
 - *94. Sweet Christmas Bells .. J. Stainer
- Complete, 1s. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 2d.

Ten Christmas Carols. Three-halfpence each.

- 95. Now join we all with holy mirth .. J. Stainer
 - 96. Softly the night .. J. M. Cramont
 - 97. Sleep, Holy Babe .. J. T. Field
 - 98. Now dies in David's City .. J. Swire
 - 99. There dwelt in Old Judea .. R. Jackson
 - 100. Good people, give ear .. J. Swire
 - 101. Carol for Christmas Day .. J. T. Field
 - 102. Ye stars of night .. J. Swire
 - 103. Ring out, ye bells .. J. H. Wallis
 - 104. Two thousand troubled years .. J. F. Bridge
- Complete, 1s. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 2d.

* All Carols marked with an asterisk are also published separately in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

MADE IN ENGLAND.

The Rose and the Lily.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Words by AIDAN CLARKE.

Music by ALEC ROWLEY.

Moderately fast.

mf 1. When God made the flow-ers, In love, one by one,

The first system of musical notation for the song. It consists of a treble and a bass staff joined by a brace. The key signature is one sharp (F#) and the time signature is 3/4. The melody is written in the treble staff, and the accompaniment is in the bass staff. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.

He thought of the Mo-ther, He thought of the Son;

The second system of musical notation, continuing the melody and accompaniment from the first system. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.

The pure one, the li-ly, With rose-bud and thorn;

The third system of musical notation, continuing the melody and accompaniment. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.

f Sing mer-ry, ye maid-ens—Lord Je-su is born.

The fourth and final system of musical notation on this page. It concludes with a double bar line. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.

Copyright, 1920, by Novello and Company, Limited.

(2)

THE ROSE AND THE LILY

2.

MEN ONLY. UNISON. mf The Lily is Mary,
The Rosebud her Son,
The thorn is the sign
Of their sorrow begun :
p O Rose, red with loving,
Who bore the sharp thorn '
We welcome the morning
When Jesu is born.

3.

BOYS ONLY. p Be pure as the lily,
Ye maidens so sweet,
Lads, lay all your treasure
Beside the blest feet :
He trod the fair garden
At earth's hopeful morn :—
mf Sing lustily, children ;
Lord Jesu is born.

4.

FULL. HARMONY. pp Make earth, Lord, a garden Deserving Thy smile,
And give us Thy pardon
When sins do beguile :
O Mother of pity,
Lend us thy low voice,
cres. Till streets of the city
With mountains rejoice.

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

- *197. { The Anthem of Peace (O sweet the enchanting anthem) J. Barnby
On Christmas Morn A. C. Mackenzie 1½d.
Across the desert sands G. C. Martin
Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep J. Stainer
Words only, 3s. per 100.
- *198. { O Babe! in manger lying
The Virgin is hushing
What Child is this? J. Barnby 1½d.
Darkness fell
Words only, 3s. per 100.
199. Holy night! peaceful night J. Barnby 2d.
200. In excelsis gloria J. M. Crament 1½d.
201. When Christ was born J. T. Field 1½d.
202. What Child is this? J. T. Field 1½d.
203. { There were whisperings J. T. Cooper
Shades of silent night S. Gee 1½d.
- *204. The Legend of Good Saint Christopher
F. J. Sawyer 1½d.
205. I hear along our street E. Silas 4d.
206. In dulci Jubilo Pearsall 3d.
207. Caput apri defero Pearsall 3d.
*208. Holly berries, holly berries Westbrook 1½d.
209. A New Year's Carol J. Shaw 1½d.
210. { There was singing (Unison) J. Stainer 1½d.
The star in the East (Unison) H. Leslie
211. A Christmas Carol (Two Parts)
C. Reinecke 2d.
212. Glad Christmas tide J. Barnby 1½d.
213. All things were in silence J. Barnby 1½d.
214. This is the month Hugh Blair 1½d.
215. How peaceful was the night Hugh Blair 1½d.
216. There came a little child R. Jackson 1½d.
217. As with gladness C. V. Stanford 1½d.
218. One night as I was sleeping J. Swire 1½d.
219. The Golden Crown J. Stainer 1½d.
220. Joy fills our inmost heart A. C. Mackenzie 1½d.
221. Who is this Myles B. Foster 1½d.
222. See, the Morning Star E. G. Monk 1d.
223. Carol, Christians Victoria Grosvenor 1½d.
*224. On Christmas Morn A. C. Mackenzie 1d.
225. In the ages past F. A. J. Hervey 1½d.
226. We sing a song of gladness J. Swire 1½d.
227. The morn, the blessed morn is nigh
Victoria Grosvenor 3d.
228. Carol, carol, Christians Mrs. J. W. Bliss 3d.
229. O was not Christ our Saviour J. Shaw 1½d.
230. Carol, Christian children A. Moffatt 1½d.
*231. There was silence (S.A.T.B.) J. Stainer 1½d.
232. Come, all ye Christian men, rejoice
Hamilton Clarke 1½d.
233. Shepherds in the fields Hamilton Clarke 1½d.
234. Come and sing J. Varley Roberts 1½d.
235. The Christmas bells ring loud and clear
J. Varley Roberts 1½d.
236. Bethlehem J. Varley Roberts 1½d.
237. The birth ever new R. H. Legge 1½d.
238. The old news R. H. Legge 1½d.
239. Christmas Eve R. H. Legge 1½d.
240. The Christmas vision R. H. Legge 1½d.
241. The Shepherds' Carol R. H. Legge 1½d.
242. Mary's Cradle Song R. H. Legge 1½d.
243. The Angels' Carol R. H. Legge 1½d.
244. Children's Chorus R. H. Legge 1½d.

245. The Holy Quest R. H. Legge
246. The Five Kings R. H. Legge
247. Praise we now R. H. Legge
248. Nazareth town R. H. Legge
249. An ode on the birth of our Saviour Lloyd
250. See, the morning star A. Herbert Brewer
251. Christ was born A. Herbert Brewer
252. Christmas Morn H. C. Havergal
253. The Kings of the East H. C. Havergal
254. The Star H. C. Havergal
255. The Angels' Song H. C. Havergal
256. The Holy Birth H. C. Havergal
257. The Humiliation H. C. Havergal
258. Rejoice, O daughter C. Macpherson
259. The Virgin and Child C. Macpherson
*260. The Annunciation Barnby
*261. The Message to the Shepherds Barnby
*262. Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin Barnby
*263. Gloria in Excelsis Barnby
(Nos. 260 to 263 together. 8vo Anthems, No.
"The First Christmas," 3d. Words (3s. per 100.)
264. Sing the Holy Child-Christ Myles B. Foster
*265. Sleep, Baby, sleep T. Adams
*265A. Sleep, Baby, sleep (2nd setting) Adams
266. Noël A. M. Goodhart
267. What sudden blaze of song C. Harris
268. What sudden blaze of song J. F. Bridge
269. Shepherds, leave your flocks J. V. Roberts
270. Heavenly music J. V. Roberts
271. Silent night, holiest night J. V. Roberts
272. Angels singing J. H. Mee
273. Little children J. H. Mee
274. Blessed Babe H. W. Waring
275. Ring the Bells Barnby
*276. Sweeter than songs (Words only, 3s. per 100.) J. F. Bridge
277. The night in solemn stillness hung Smith
278. The Son of Mary Thomas Adams
279. Hark! all around W. A. C. Cruickshank
280. It is the day W. A. C. Cruickshank
281. Mortals, awake W. A. C. Cruickshank
282. In the field with their flocks J. E. West
283. It came upon the midnight B. Hayns
284. Royal Bethlehem W. Montgomery
285. I hear along our street S. H. Nicholson
286. The Child Jesus in the garden (and Setting) J. Stainer
287. The Prince of Peace A. H. Brewer
288. Remember God's goodness
Ravenscroft, arr. by J. F. Bridge
289. Christmas Tree Carol H. Davan Wetton
290. Christmas morn Thomas Adams
291. Child Divine Thomas Adams
292. A Christmas Song Thomas Adams
293. A lowly Babe Alfred Hollins
294. The Blessed Virgin E. C. Birstow
295. Christ is born E. T. Sweeting
296. Christian children E. T. Sweeting
297. Ring out, wild bells E. Vine Hall
298. Christmas bells W. H. Longhurst
299. In tuneful voices sing Ferris Tozer
300. Shepherds, hear Ferris Tozer
301. Not in courts of regal splendour
E. Vine Hall

* All Carols marked with an asterisk are also published separately in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

16/10/12.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH FOLK-SONGS

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

CECIL J. SHARP.

SELECTED EDITION.

SONGS AND BALLADS.

(VOLUMES I. AND II.)

Price Eighteen Shillings each.

PREFACE.

THIS Selected Edition will contain in one complete series of volumes those songs, ballads, carols, chanteys, &c., from the Author's Collection of traditional music which, in his opinion, are the most characteristic and most suitable for purposes of publication.

The Collection is the product of twenty years' work in the towns and country districts of England and among the English inhabitants of the Southern Appalachian Mountains of North America, and comprises—counting variants, and dance, as well as vocal, airs—some five thousand tunes. A certain number of these have been published from time to time during the period of collection, but, as the Somerset Series, in which the bulk of these appeared, is now out of print, and as, moreover, further additions are unlikely to be made to it, the Collection can now be reviewed as a whole unfettered by past commitments.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

RHYTHMIC MOVEMENT

VOL. I.

Development of the Rhythmic and Metric Sense of the Instinct for Harmonious and Balanced Movements, and of good Motor Habits.

BY

EMILE JAKUES-DALCROZE.

Price Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

M. MOSZKOWSKI.

IMPORTANT NEW COMPOSITIONS.

FIVE SHORT PIECES FOR PIANO SOLO.

Each 1s. 6d. net. Complete 3s. 6d. net.

MASTER AND PUPIL.

EIGHT SMALL PIECES FOR DUET, with the Left Hand on Five Notes.

Each 1s. 6d. net. Complete 4s. net.

ENOCH & SONS,

Enoch House, 58, Great Marlborough Street,
LONDON, W. 1.

And of all Musicsellers.

TWO PASTORALS

"COME YOU, MARY."

"WHO WOULD SHEPHERD PIPES FORSAKE?"

THE WORDS BY

NORMAN GALE.

THE MUSIC BY

ERNEST BRISTOW FARRAR

(Op. 21, Nos. 2 and 3)

TWO KEYS.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

FOUR

SHAKESPEARE SONGS

1. HARK! HARK! THE LARK.
2. WHO IS SYLVIA.
3. TAKE, O TAKE THOSE LIPS AWAY.
4. ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE.

COMPOSED BY

REGINALD STEGGALL.

Op. 28.

PRICE, FIVE SHILLINGS.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

SONGS

BY

JOHN GERRARD WILLIAMS.

"LOVE OUTWITTED"

Phantasy Duet for Voice and Pianoforte.

Price Two Shillings.

"MARCH MORNING"

For High and Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

TWO SONGS.

"ABSENCE" AND "SERENADE"

For High, Medium, or Low Voice.

Price Two Shillings each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Sacred Songs by Joseph Adams.

"DIVINE LOVE."

"THE GENTLE SHEPHERD."

"LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT."

"THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD."

"THE NAZARENE."

"THE PROMISE OF PEACE."

"SUN OF MY SOUL."

"JESU, LOVER OF MY SOUL" (A. C. BROOKES)

PRICE, TWO SHILLINGS NET.

From all Music-Sellers, or direct from the Publisher—
JOSEPH ADAMS, 15, CANNON PASSAGE, BIRMINGHAM.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HIAWATHA'S WEDDING-FEAST

A SELECTION

FOR THE

ORGAN

COMPOSED BY

S. COLERIDGE-TAYLOR.

Op. 30, No. 1.

ARRANGED AND ADAPTED BY

HUGH BLAIR.

Price Five Shillings net.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

VOL. IV.

NOVELLO'S CLASSICAL SONGS

THIRTY SONGS

BY VARIOUS COMPOSERS

BOTH NOTATIONS.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

VIOLIN AND VIOLONCELLO WORKS

ARRANGED BY JOSEPH SALMON.

MESSRS. G. RICORDI & Co., of 265, Regent Street, London, have great pleasure in introducing this most interesting collection of

WORKS OF THE OLD MASTERS,

Arranged for the Violin (also Violoncello). With New Pianoforte Accompaniment.

By MONS. J. SALMON, of Paris.

These important works have been played by many of the eminent Violinists and Violoncellists, and G. RICORDI & Co. feel confident that players and teachers will find them worthy to be included in their répertoire.

When ordering please state whether for Violin and Piano OR Violoncello and Piano.

THE PRICE OF BOTH EDITIONS IS THE SAME.

NET CASH PRICE s. d.			NET CASH PRICE s. d.
ANTONIOTTI (G.) (1692-1776). Sonata (G minor)...	4	6	GUERINI (F.) (1710-1780). Allegro con brio ...	3	9
ARIOSTI (A.) (1666-1740?). Sonata (E minor) ...	5	3	Sonata (G major)	6	0
Sonata (G major)	4	6	HERVELOIS (CAIX D') (1670-17..?). Gavotte ...	3	0
BIRCKENSTOCK (J. A.) (1687-1733). Sonata			Sonata (A minor)... ..	5	3
(E minor)	6	0	LECLAIR (J. M.) (1697-1764). Tambourin...	3	0
BOCCHERINI (L.) (1743-1805). Menuet (G major)	3	0	LEILLET (J. B.) (1653-1728). Sonata (A minor)...	6	0
BONONCINI (G. B.) (1680-17..?). Sonata (A minor)	5	3	Sonata (G major)	4	6
CAPORALE (A.) (16..?-17..?). Sonata (D minor)	4	6	MARAIS (ROLAND) (17..?-17..?). Sonata
CERVETTO (G.) (1632-1783). Sonata (C major):			(C major)	6	0
1. Adagio and Allegro. 2. Andante			MARCELLO (B.) (1686-1739). Sonata (D major):
cantabile and Allegro	6	0	1. Grave and Allegro. 2. Largo and Vivace	4	6
Separate: Adagio and Allegro	4	0	Separate: Grave and Allegro	3	3
Separate: Andante cantabile and Allegro ...	4	0	Separate: Largo and Vivace	2	6
Sonata (G major)	6	0	Sonata (E minor)... ..	4	6
CORELLI (A.) (1653-1713). Sonata (D minor)	4	0	Sonata (G major), No. 1	4	3
COUPERIN (F.) (1668-1733). Les Chérubins ...	3	9	Sonata (G major), No. 2	4	3
DALL'ABACO (E. F.) (1675-1742). Sonata (F major)	4	6	Sonata (G minor)... ..	4	6
DE FESCH (W.) (1695-1758). Sonata (G major):			PIANELLI (G.) (1725-17..?). Sonata (G major) ...	6	0
1. Prélude and Allemande. 2. Sarabande			PORPORA (N. A.) (1686-1766). Sonata (F major) ...	4	6
and Menuet	4	6	RAMEAU (J. PH.) (1683-1764). Gavotte from the
Separate: Prélude and Allemande	3	3	ballet Les Indes Galantes	3	0
Separate: Sarabande and Menuet	2	6	Menuet from the opera Platte	3	0
Sonata (D minor): 1. Sicilienne and Allemande.			Gavotte	3	0
2. Andante cantabile. 3. Menuet	4	6	SAMMARTINI (G. B.) (1698-1775). Sonata (G major):
Separate: Sicilienne and Allemande	3	0	1. Allegro. 2. Grave. 3. Vivace	4	6
Separate: Andante cantabile	2	0	Separate: Allegro	2	6
Separate: Menuet	2	3	Separate: Grave	1	6
DUPUITS (J. B.) (1741-17..?). Sonata (D major)...	4	6	Separate: Vivace... ..	2	0
ECCLES (H.) (1670-1742). Sonata (G minor):			SENAILLE (J. B.) (1687-1730). Allegro spiritoso ...	3	9
1. Grave and Courante. 2. Adagio and			Largo and Gigue	3	9
Vivace	3	9	Menuet... ..	3	0
Separate: Grave and Courante	2	3	Sarabande and Allemande	3	9
Separate: Adagio and Vivace	3	0	Vivace	3	9
GALLIARD (J. E.) (1687-1749). Sonata (G major)...	4	6	SOMIS (G. B.) (1676-1763). Sonata (G major) ...	6	0
Sonata (E minor)	4	3	TRICKLER (J. B.) (1745-1813). Sonata (G major) ...	6	0
GASPARINI (Q.) (1725-17..?). Sonata (E minor)	4	6	VALENTINI (G.) (1681?-17..?). Sonata (B flat
GRAZIOLI (G. B.) (1755-1820). Sonata (G major)...	4	6	major)... ..	4	6

These fine arrangements have created a profound sensation in the Concert world everywhere, as they appeal to all players of the violin and violoncello who are interested in really good music.

G. RICORDI & CO., 265, Regent Street, London, W.1.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE. A SELECTED LIST.

SONATAS AND SUITES.

EDWARD ELGAR

SONATA

Price Twelve Shillings net.

ERNEST FARRAR

CELTIC SUITE

Price Six Shillings net.

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

TWO SUITES

No. 1, in D. No. 2, in F.

Price Seven Shillings each net.

ARTHUR HINTON

SUITE

Price Ten Shillings net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

PIBROCH SUITE

Price Twelve Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

SUITE PITTORESQUE

Price Twelve Shillings net.

SHORT PIECES.

JOHN IRELAND

BAGATELLE

Price Three Shillings net.

JOSEF HOLBROOKE

SOUVENIR DE PRINTEMPS

Price Three Shillings net.

H. WALFORD DAVIES

SOLEMN MELODY

Price Two Shillings and Threepence net.

A. C. MACKENZIE

BENEDICTUS

From Six Pieces, Op. 37.

Price Three Shillings net.

J. B. McEWEN

SIX HIGHLAND DANCES

Price Three Shillings each net.

W. McNAUGHT

BARCAROLLE

Price Three Shillings net.

H. WALDO WARNER

SCHERZO

Price Three Shillings net.

JOHN E. WEST

IN THE SPRING

Price Three Shillings net.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER, JUN.

SOUVENIR

Price Three Shillings net.

A. DUTEUIL D'OZANNE

AIR À DANSER

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

SERENADE

From the Wand of Youth Suite, No. 1.

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE MATIN

Price Three Shillings net.

EDWARD ELGAR

CHANSON DE NUIT

Price Two Shillings and Threepence net.

EDWARD ELGAR

PASTOURELLE

Price Three Shillings net.

Another Craftsman innovation.

ALUMINIUM COVERED VIOLIN "D" STRINGS

THE CRAFTSMAN says: "If you don't like your present D, you will welcome our new Aluminium Covered Violin 'D' Strings. These new process Cathedral and Summit Strings play easily, and respond readily to the bow.

"They vibrate sympathetically with other strings and tones, and act as an ideal neutral agent between the soprano qualities of the upper strings and the deeper notes of the G string. They augment the tone quantity in an instrument, enliven the vibrations, and improve notes of inferior quality.

"Like the rest of the Cathedral and Summit family, these new process aluminium strings reveal exquisite workmanship and supreme quality. We shall be glad to send you a sample string on receipt of the price. If you don't like it, send it back, and we will refund your money."

PRICES: Cathedral, covered on selected gut, gut first wrapped with pure tram silk throughout, 1s. 8d. each. Summit, covered on good quality gut, 1s. each. Send for a sample string to-day, and address of nearest Agent.

CATHEDRAL STRINGS .. SUMMIT STRINGS ..

OF ALL MUSIC DEALERS.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS:

BRITISH MUSIC STRINGS, LTD.,
MONSELL ROAD, FINSBURY PARK, LONDON, N. 4.

Telephone: North 2594.

Telegrams: "Cello, Finspark. London."

ACTUAL MANUFACTURERS OF 150 DIFFERENT KINDS OF STRINGS FOR ALL INSTRUMENTS.

THE "DISCUS" REGD. ORGAN BLOWER

Introduced in 1906, and now installed in nearly a thousand Cathedrals and Churches at home and abroad. A thoroughly efficient, soundly constructed mechanical blower, designed on approved scientific principles. The absence of complicated parts makes the "DISCUS" a trustworthy machine, and with ordinary attention it can be used for years without requiring repairs.

The "DISCUS" dispenses with manual labour, which, for this class of work, is often difficult to obtain, and is instantly available for use. It requires remarkably small space, is very quiet in action, not affected by damp, and can be adapted to any type of organ, large or small. We guarantee its efficiency, and can undertake to give satisfaction no matter how modest the equipment desired. A "DISCUS" Installation is always a sound financial investment.

AS SUPPLIED TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY, YORK MINSTER, ETC., ETC.

ILLUSTRATED PARTICULARS FREE.

WATKINS AND WATSON

SOLE MAKERS OF THE "DISCUS" BLOWER

Designers and Manufacturers of Hydraulic Engines, Gear, and Fittings for Organs for the past thirty years.

17, WHITE LION STREET, LONDON, N. 1.

Telegrams: "HYDISBLOW, ISLING, LONDON."

Telephone: NORTH 2039.

CHAPPELL & CO.'S LATEST SONG PUBLICATIONS.

GUY D'HARDELOT—

SOMETIMES IN MY DREAMS.
MIDSUMMER MADNESS.
IN ENGLAND NOW.

TERESA DEL RIEGO—

HOMING.
RECONCILIATION.
THE MERRY HEART.

MONTAGUE F. PHILLIPS—

YOU AND I AND THE MOON.
SING, JOYOUS BIRD.
THE SILVER LAMPS.
SING, SING, BLACKBIRD.

EDRIC CUNDELL—

IN THE SILENCE OF THE NIGHT.
A VAGABOND'S SONG.
SUMMER DAYS AND NIGHTS.

SAMUEL LIDDLE—

FULFILMENT.
FALL, SNOWFLAKES.

FRANK BRIDGE—

WHEN YOU ARE OLD.

R. CONINGSBY CLARKE—

MADONNA LILIES.
GOLDEN DANCING DAYS.
REAPING.
YOU IN A GONDOLA.

HERMANN LÖHR—

THE WAY I CALL MY OWN.
THE PORTALS OF THE FOREST.
THE ROAD OF LOOKING-FORWARD.
DARLING.
THREE LITTLE SPANISH SONGS.

HAYDN WOOD—

LITTLE YVETTE.
MY GARDEN OF DREAMLAND.
THERE'S A SONG DOWN EV'RY ROADWAY.
FLEURETTE, I SHALL NEVER FORGET.

ERIC COATES—

THROUGH ALL THE AGES.
THE WHITE WINDING ROAD.
AT SUNSET.
SINCE YESTERDAY.

GRAHAM PEEL—

THE CHALLENGE.

GERALD CARNE—

PROVENCE.

H. LYALL PHILLIPS—

THE FOUR CROSS ROADS.
A DEVONSHIRE WEDDING.
WIMMEN ! OH, WIMMEN !

LAO SILÉSU.

UNDER THE MAY MOON.

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

And may be had of all Music Sellers.

NEW YORK, MELBOURNE, AND SYDNEY

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD.

MUSIC LENDING LIBRARY

ORCHESTRAL DEPARTMENT

CONTAINING SCORES AND PARTS OF

ALL THE MOST IMPORTANT CLASSICAL AND MODERN ORCHESTRAL WORKS

Symphonies, Symphonic Poems, Suites, Overtures, Miscellaneous Pieces, Oratorios, and other Choral Works, Concertos, Arias, and Songs with Orchestral Accompaniment, &c., &c.

Which may be obtained on Hire at moderate Fees. Terms on application.

IMPORTANT ORCHESTRAL MANUSCRIPTS by FREDERIC AUSTIN, GRANVILLE BANTOCK, LORD BERNERS, WILLIAM J. FENNEY, EUGENE GOOSSENS, JOSEF HOLBROOKE, G. FRANCESCO MALIPIERO, POLDOWSKI, IGOR STRAVINSKY, VINCENZO TOMMASINI, JOHN GERRARD WILLIAMS, and others.

11, GREAT MARLBOROUGH STREET, LONDON, W. 1.

This Supplement is part also of the December issue of THE SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, and can be obtained with the REVIEW, price 3d.

The

Competition Festival Record

No. 149.

BLACKPOOL FESTIVAL.—October 19-23.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Resuming at the point reached in the November issue; making some allowance for the effects of nervousness on those who took part in the Rose Bowl Solo Competition, nine vocalists of definite promise emerged. Only one of them revealed that personal magnetism which enabled her to impose her emotional will on the vast audience—Miss Read, of Blackpool, in the 'Salce' aria from Verdi's 'Otello'—but even she failed to take fullest advantage of her undoubted gift. The winners, Messrs. Widdop (tenor) and Grant (bass) combined fine vocal accomplishment with style and interpretative insight; rarely do professionals exhibit with such certainty a really authoritative style in Bach as did Mr. Widdop. The ladies who sang in Schumann's 'Frühlingsnacht' and Elgar's 'Swimmer' both became over-sentimental; all the judges in the solo classes throughout the week had unsparingly condemned this tendency. In former years, soloists have been quick to assimilate advice such as was freely bestowed each afternoon, and their evening performances frequently embodied the hints supplied. Not so now; these good people had apparently forgotten nothing and learned nothing, and whilst there is unquestionably better average quality in vocal material there would appear to be a deplorably lower average in brain power. Candidates will not have to remain content with a study of their composer; the poet, too, even if in a foreign tongue, must engage their attention.

THE CHILDREN'S DAY.

This is usually the tit-bit of the Festival for all who are keen on music for children.

The Foreword to this year's programme remarks:

In only one of the departments of our syllabus have we to acknowledge defeat, and strange to say, it is in that department upon which we have always relied with the utmost confidence in the past, and where our efforts have probably displayed the most successful results—the Elementary School Choirs. The reasons given for non-participation have been many and various; the regrettable fact remains that the children have been deprived of the benefits which provided so much pleasure and profit to the children of seven years ago.

Mr. Rathbone's cantata 'Singing Leaves' was sung by a choir of a hundred and twenty children of the Blackpool Victoria C.E. School under the direction of Mr. J. Wedgwood; all sang from memory (the work lasts twenty-five minutes)—quite a considerable feat in itself.

The bright little eager upturned faces of the kiddies in the Village School section, conducted by Mr. T. H. Myles, of Wrea Green, was inspiration in itself; they gave Percy E. Fletcher's 'Zephyr' with such verve and unconscious charm. While choral distinction was in abeyance, compensation was found in the groups of Old English Dances. The large crowd in the Pavilion on Friday afternoon testified to an eager interest in this revival; Blackpool has known nothing of the sort before. To the uninitiated spectator these folk-dances are apt to be a trifle monotonous and uninteresting, and look very easy of accomplishment; but those acquainted with the art know how difficult they really are, and must have been delighted with the skill displayed by the children and their instructors. Folk-dancing is not at all intended as a spectacle; in its essence it is a means of self-expression—a language, in fact—and the joy of the art is not in watching but in participation. Regarded in any other way it is meaningless.

These dances are traditional, and through the slow growth of countless years have found means of expression. Certainly in the quaintly-formal music one could visualise the quieter, simpler days gone by, and could not help wondering if in our jazz-craze of recent times the restless spirit of this age had found an unmusical expression? Mr. Cecil Sharp was unavoidably absent, but Miss Maud Karpeles was an excellent and most enlightening substitute. The school selected for special commendation was that of All Saints', Blackburn, which brought an excellent team and faithfully interpreted the spirit of absolute spontaneity and sincerity, with no idea of a performance for the benefit of onlookers, which would inevitably lead to developments in artificialities, the very thing to be steadily avoided. Miss Karpeles suggested that for infants nursery-rhyme dances were much more suitable, as at a tender age they had not the necessary balance and control for the Old English Dances.

THE FINAL DAY.

Saturday (October 23) closed a week which had opened under the shadow of the coal strike and the feared withdrawal of trains; but mercifully all facilities were maintained, only one choir out of seventy-five failing to appear, whilst the continued fine weather brought crowds bigger far than at any previous Festival. The big pavilion accommodated thousands, and a horse-shoe promenade surrounding it held crowds four or five deep. Chatter between the items was miraculously silenced at the tinkle of the bell, when there ensued that pin-dropping silence—it was good to be under the old spell again.

The day's singing clearly revealed the fact that, compared with 1914, the best of the old choirs are nearly at the old standard, notwithstanding an admixture of fresh voices that would seem to vary from 15 to 30 per cent., so far as could be gathered from general conversation. In the male-voice work, however, this was not so. Their tests were severe, and when one reflects that every choir must have had at least a third of its strength out of action for seven years and that voices occasionally showed even yet traces of gas and exposure, one marvelled that technically they were as good as they proved. Still, one must face the fact that a gripping, masterly reading in either Cornelius's 'Old Soldier's Dream' or Bantock's 'Lucifer in Starlight' was not to be found; evidently the blended old and new material, even in choirs of repute, is not yet sufficiently plastic to take the imprint of the conductor's model conception.

Female-voice choirs began the day, one from Grimsby leading the way and at once setting a high standard of conception and accomplishment. The West Coast choirs mostly sang about mid-morning with all their wonted beauty and purity of tone. Holst's 'Ave Maria' makes no concessions to vocal imperfections—it ranges from F and G (bass clef) to sustained high Bflat—while the musicianship necessary for Vaughan Williams's 'Sound Sleep' is of a different but not a lower order. To balance two four-part choirs effectively among thirty-five voices in the Holst motet, and then to distribute the same voices over a three-part (occasionally divisi) work, calls for exceptionally neat adjustment; yet not one choir in the fifteen participating failed to produce really deep contraltos who could sing the low F's and G's in the 'Ave Maria' with effortless ease. The Blackpool Orpheus choir was clearly the finest in quality and execution—a great suavity in its style, although not rising to the full height of the big moments as did the Blackpool Glee and Madrigal, nor realising the incense-laden atmosphere of the motet as 'did still another Blackpool group conducted by Mr. Dayman—but in all-round ability the palm was clearly borne by Mr. Warburton's Orpheus singers, closely run by the Sale and District (Manchester) and Grimsby contingents. Yet, save in the Mixed-Voice Challenge Shield work, nowhere throughout the day was the 90 per cent. mark passed, which is very significant.

The only conspicuous absentee from the Challenge Shield work was the old Southport choir formerly under Mr. Tattersall's conductorship. Halifax, under Mr. Shepley, was the holder in 1912 and 1913, and of course defended its title. Lancaster, Barrow, Blackpool Glee and Madrigal, Sale and District, Morecambe (under a new conductor, Mr. James Cooper), were among those who were deemed veterans in 1913. Every choir singing must have undergone considerable reconstruction, and the whole question of precedence was necessarily a very open one.

Weelkes's madrigal 'As Vesta was' and Elgar's 'Love's Tempest' were used in the afternoon, the four finalists singing Cornelius's 'Surrender of the Soul.'

The madrigal in the old Glee Hive edition was metronomed crotchet=80; a newer issue prescribed for this Festival was crotchet=132. Listening, one wondered how many conductors had experimented with these and other rates of movement. 'Vesta' is essentially a pastoral madrigal, and shepherdesses never came 'tripping down amain' in such a clodhopper manner as some of these well-intentioned conductors made their singers do. Should it not be in the Pavlova manner?—graceful and nimble freedom of rhythm instead of this square-toed heavy tread, and four beats to the bar only accentuated the tendency to lumpiness.

Halifax sang dead on 132, and Gledholt (Huddersfield) a few bars slower. Quite arbitrarily Halifax introduced a very distinct ritard. at 'leaving their goddess all alone,' then picking up their original rate of movement. Why? Does either the poetic or the musical sense call for such treatment? Surely not. For years judges have been lamenting these indulgences on the part of conductors, and dinning into the ears of all and sundry that part-song-y treatment of madrigalian music is an offence against cardinal principles. However well it may be done it is fundamentally wrong and not to be tolerated. Any suggestion of emotional expression must never be gained at the expense of strict rhythmical movement of the music. Climaxes of this kind can be bought only at the price of an anticlimax elsewhere, and buyers in such transactions are aesthetically out of pocket on the deal.

After these two Yorkshire choirs, which sang Nos. 1 and 2, there was a steady succession of capable if not superlative singing until Blackpool Glee and Madrigal appeared. Its pace was somewhat quicker than 132; clear, sprightly, yet steady, no suggestion of racing in the 'running down amain,' and a richly-organized, finely cumulative effect in the 'Fair Oriana' refrain. That slight quickening galvanized the whole thing, and made it live where otherwise it would have dragged. One might hazard the personal view that, given a technical mastery sufficient to obviate any tendency to acceleration, a conductor beating two to the bar might secure magical results by a still faster movement. Northern singers, at any rate, should have learned a few wrinkles on this head from Beecham.

Sale and District and Gledholt did not secure the same spontaneity as Blackpool, the marking being 90, 89, and 88 respectively.

In Elgar's 'Love's Tempest' opening stanza we get wonderful sea-imagery in tone. Male-voices open with a suggestion of the ground-swell always audible after a gale. Wave after wave of tone falls on the ear in rich bass chords, and gently recedes, and then an ejaculatory burst from the men, 'Till a tempest,' &c., plunges us into a swirling tide of tonal waters, wildly heaving in the contralto and bass voices, with sharp, stabbing chords like lightning flashes from the sopranos and tenors divisi, followed by a magnificent Allargando in which all voices roll onwards as mighty breakers, till we reach:

Quiet was my heart within me,
Till your image, suddenly rising there,
Awoke a tumult
Wildier than the storm at sea.

A subtle harmonic change (at the words 'within me') in the chords otherwise similar to those of the opening stanza gives the clue to the emotional content; to the grandeur and majesty of nature's tumult must be added this human emotion raised to a devastating intensity 'wildier than a storm at sea.'

The sense of strain was tremendous; many choirs weathered the first stanza, but foundered suddenly in the second. Only three had a reserve of emotional steam sufficient to drive them through this waste of waters.

Barnoldswick (Yorkshire) had done very moderately in the madrigal, but in this was pictorially vivid; its realism was perhaps more subdued than on a famous occasion in Blake's 'Tyger, Tyger burning bright' in the Bantock setting. But along with others it will have to get its imaginative searchlights to work, for if Elgar's works do not strike emotional fire out of responsive souls they are nothing worth. Luckily for the listener the readings by the Sale and Blackpool singers transfigured poem and music; here was the great illumination flashing out from men and women in the grip of their vision, and in its presence one sat dumb, thankful for such revelation. Where others had merely conveyed an impression of a choppy, cross-channel tossing, these two were big in the ocean-fulness sense—the difference between an Irish Sea and an Atlantic.

A word of warning, to those who study the Elgar song, as to an inaudible opening. The sea in its most placid mood is not as a lake, still less as a quiet stream, and it is wrong to sing it as though it were in the same key of emotion as, for example, the same composer's 'Evening Scene.' Of the sixteen choirs the four chosen ones were:

	Marks.
(11) Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society	90, 93 (183).
(14) Sale and District Musical Society ..	88, 93 (181).
(2) Gledholt Vocal Society ..	89, 88 (177).
(7) Barnoldswick Choral Society ..	83, 90 (173).

Hebburn-on-Tyne (171) and Halifax Madrigal (170) narrowly escaped inclusion. The figures in parentheses before the choirs' names indicate the order in which they appeared.

The Cornelius Motet tested quite another side of choral versatility. Here serenity of style, exaltation of mood, a rapt, devotional attitude almost of supplication, were demanded, but these qualities had to be joined to a note of confident strength in the fine D flat passage to the words, 'The mantle of Thy glory round me throw.' The recurring chorale episode in constantly changing keys knits together the whole work. Great variety of tonal colour is used, and one recalls especially a lovely episode where contraltos, tenors, and baritones sang the refrain. Formerly the 'Grave of mortal woe' passage proved troublesome, but not particularly so to-day.

Gledholt at once attuned the mind to the essential calm and serenity, the voices taking on a most appropriate softened tone. They did not give us the full splendour of the great D flat passage, but they had as no other choir the mood of true devotional surrender in the closing page. Blackpool and Sale again rose to sublimer heights in the climaxes. Both these bodies possess gorgeous tone, a tremendous asset in this Motet, and memory treasures the luscious ensemble of the Sale people in the above-mentioned passage for altos, tenors, and baritones, but in neither case did the reverential treatment quite approach the Gledholt standard. One of the judges commented on the intellectual qualities of the Blackpool reading. Choirs, as well as soloists, will in the future have to strengthen this aspect of their interpretations. It will not suffice to rely, as, apparently, did Barnoldswick, on emotional instinct of a sentimental type. Its ineffectiveness could hardly have been more glaringly revealed than by these four performances. The brain of every singer must nourish and animate the emotions. Most choirs pass through this phase, much as kiddies do measles. The evening result was:—Gledholt, 92 marks; Sale and District, 90 marks; Blackpool, 89 marks; Barnoldswick, 85 marks. Blackpool thus retained their afternoon lead (total, 272), separated by one point from Sale and district. Full details are appended on p. 4.

It was impossible to keep in touch with all that happened in those four crowded halls, and very possibly in one's peregrinations good things were missed and so cannot be recorded. Of the male-voice 'alto-lead' work I heard nothing, nor could I glean any information beyond the result. In the sight-test nine of the sixteen Challenge Shield choirs and four of the eight secondary choirs took part. Some day, perhaps, at all Festivals, in determining the challenge shield awards competence in sight-reading will be added to the results in prepared work, much as viva-voce examination results are taken into account along with written answers. It ought to be a matter of course that excellence in both should alone entitle any choir to the coveted honour. It happened this year that the first and third choirs in the challenge shield class gained first and second places in the sight-test, so that one could feel that justice had been done to the claims of sound musicianship—but it has not always been so.

The evening singing in the secondary mixed-voice class reversed the afternoon positions, the Kendal singers doing moderately well in madrigal work but excelling in Elgar's 'The Shower.'

Very possibly Festival authorities will have to reconsider the best means of stimulating interest in amateur orchestral playing. It cannot be said that the results this year either in the smaller class or the full band class have been satisfactory compared with previous experience here or elsewhere. The absence of bands from Colne and Nelson was severely felt. The Slaithwaite Orchestra—conducted, like the Colne Valley Choir, by Dr. Pearson—played reasonably well in Elgar's 'Froissart' Overture, but it lacked real cohesion.

The day's adjudicators were Messrs. F. Austin, Granville Bantock, W. S. Nesbitt, and Ernest Newman, the sight-test being supervised by Madame Edith Hands and Mr. W. Granger.

The smoothly-working organization throughout the week, and especially the handling of Saturday's throng, must have been the envy of many a similar authority. Every helper in the humblest capacity shared in these 'developments according to plan.'

THE RESULTS.

SOLO SINGING.

Girls (Open Class), 39 entries.—Bessie Morphet.
Girls (Local Class), 28 entries.—Edith Dodd.
Boys (Open Class), 9 entries; (Local Class), 8 entries.—Robert Southern (winner of both classes).
Soprano (Dramatic), 83 entries.—Miss Lily Allen.
Soprano (Operatic), 67 entries.—Miss Marjorie Brooks.
Mezzo-Soprano (Lyric), 76 entries.—Miss Hilda Read.
Contralto (Lyric), 122 entries.—Miss Marie Sykes.
Contralto (Dramatic), 133 entries.—Miss Emily Wilkinson.
Tenor (Lyric), 86 entries.—Mr. John W. Widdop.
Choir-boys, 20 entries.—J. H. Wilkinson.
Tenor (Dramatic), 93 entries.—Mr. Irvine H. Haworth.
Baritone (Operatic), 35 entries.—Mr. Douglas Gamble.
Baritone (Lyric), 125 entries.—Mr. Douglas Gamble.
Baritone (Dramatic), 44 entries.—Mr. Theodore L. Grosvenor.
Bass (Dramatic), 57 entries.—Mr. Douglas Grant.
Sight-reading.—Mr. Edward Ormerod.
'Rose Bowl' Competition.—Mr. Douglas Grant (bass) and Mr. J. W. Widdop (tenor).

QUARTETS.

Mixed-Voice, 10 entries.—Tests by Brahms and Parry.
1st, Oriana Quartet, Blackpool; 2nd, St. Cecilia Quartet, Blackpool.
Male-Voice, 11 entries.—Tests, a madrigal and a glee.
1st, Excelsior Quartet, Mexborough; 2nd, The New Meistersingers, Silverdale.
Operatic Quartet, 3 entries.—Test from 'Rigoletto,' 'The Crotchets,' Burslem.

PIANOFORTE PLAYING.

Under twelve (Open), 42 entries.—Constance D. Makinson.
Under fourteen (Local), 37 entries.—Dora Sanderson.
Under fourteen (Open), 56 entries.—Bessie Leach.
Under sixteen (Local), 15 entries.—Vera Donald.
(Open), 28 entries.—Marian Mitchell.
Under eighteen, 43 entries.—Fanny Walsh.
Sight-reading, under eighteen, 21 entries.—Norah Howard.

VIOLIN PLAYING, CHAMBER MUSIC, &c.

Violin, under sixteen (Local).—Gilbert Mitchell. (Open) 20 entries.—Jessie May Hinchcliffe.
Violin, under eighteen (Local), 3 entries.—Gilbert Mitchell. (Open), 10 entries.—Eva Walker.
Violin, no age limit, 15 entries.—Miss Jessie May Hinchcliffe.
Violoncello (Open), 4 entries.—Roger Briggs.
String Quartet. Test: Quartet in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4 (Beethoven). One entry.—Huddersfield Ladies' Quartet.
Pianoforte Trio. Test: Trio in C minor, Op. 1, No. 3 (Beethoven). Two entries.—1st, The Hinchcliffe Trio.

ORCHESTRAS.

String Orchestras. Tests: 'Sally in our Alley' and 'Cherry Ripe' (Frank Bridge). One entry.—Padiham (Mr. Harry Tate).
Full Orchestras (B). Test: Three dances from 'Henry VIII.' (German). One entry.—Osssett Orchestral Society (Mr. Harval Leach).
Full Orchestras (Open). Test: 'Froissart' Overture (Elgar). Two entries.—1st, Slaithwaite Philharmonic (Yorks) (Dr. T. E. Pearson).

CHILDREN'S CHOIRS.

- Public Elementary Schools, 1 entry.—Victoria School, South Shore (Mr. J. Wedgwood).
 Village Schools, 1 entry.—Wrea Green (Mr. T. H. Myles).
 Public Elementary Schools (Cantata Class), 1 entry.—Victoria School.
 Boys' Choirs, 4 entries.—1st, St. Paul's Church, North Shore (Mr. Frank Hill).
 Sunday School Choirs, 1 entry.—The Drive Wesleyan S.S., St. Anne's (Mr. Harry Cooper).

OLD ENGLISH DANCES.

- Adjudicator, Miss Maud Karpeles.
 Ellerslie Girls' School, Blackpool (Mr. Harold Gregory).
 Blackpool Municipal Gymnasium (Mr. Harold Gregory).
 Highfield College Dancing Class, Bispham (Miss E. W. Gee).
 1st. All Saints' School, Blackburn (Mr. Edward Briggs).
 2nd. Palatine Central School (Girls), Blackpool (Mr. Harold Gregory).
 St. Paul's Infants School, Adlington (Miss Ida A. A. Croston).

CHURCH CHOIRS.

- Men and Boys, 2 entries.
 1st. Holy Trinity, South Shore (Mr. J. W. Leach).
 Mixed-voices (open to Lancashire), 4 entries.
 1st. Claremont Congregational, Blackpool (Mr. Percy Dayman).
 2nd. United Methodist, Adelaide Street, Blackpool (Mr. J. S. Warburton).
 Mixed-voices (prizewinners since 1911 excluded), 6 entries.
 1st. Springfield Road U.M.C., Blackpool (Mr. Percy M. Dayman).
 2nd. Alexandra Road Congregational, Blackpool (Mr. J. E. Nicholson).

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS, TENOR LEAD (B).

- Test: 'Lament for Prince Llewelyn' (Cyril Jenkins).
 Five entries.
 1st. Hebden Bridge (Mr. Herbert Greenwood).
 2nd. St. Anne's-on-Sea Orpheus Glee Society (Mr. F. J. Evans).

LADIES' CHOIRS (B).

- Tests: 'Aspiration' (Elgar).
 'When the green woods laugh' (Julius Harrison).
 Three entries.
 1st. United Methodist Church, Blackpool.
 2nd. The 'Margaret Hadfield' Choir, Droydsden.

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS, ALTO LEAD.

- Tests: 'Harmony' (Beale).
 'The Mad Dog' (Parry).
 Eight entries.
 1st. Mr. Aldous's Choir, Lancaster.
 2nd. Millom (Mr. James Bond).
 3rd. Hadley and District Orpheus (Mr. Raymond Lewis).

MIXED-VOICE CHOIRS (B).

- Tests: Madrigal, 'Cynthia, thy song' (Croce).
 'The Shower' (Elgar).
 Eight entries.
 1st. Kendal Competitive Choir (Mr. Paul Rochard).
 2nd. Todmorden Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. John Crowther).
 3rd. Ryecroft Vocal Society, Ashton-under-Lyne (Mr. J. Ramsden).
 MIXED-VOICE CHOIRS (SIGHT-READING).
 Thirteen entries.
 1st. Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. Herbert Whittaker).
 2nd. Gledholt Vocal Union, Huddersfield (Mr. J. Fletcher Sykes).
 3rd. Blackpool Orpheus (Mr. J. S. Warburton).

LADIES' CHOIRS (A).

- Tests: 'Ave Maria' (8-part) (Holst).
 'Sound sleep' (Vaughan Williams).
 3rd. Oriana Ladies' Choir, Grimsby (Mr. Percy Wilson).
 'The Students' Choir, Blackpool (Mr. Frank Hill).
 Mr. W. E. Robinson's Ladies' Choir, Birmingham.
 Blackpool Lyric Ladies' Choir (Mr. Percy M. Dayman).
 5th. Mr. Aldous's Choir, Lancaster.
 1st. Blackpool Orpheus Ladies' Choir (Mr. J. S. Warburton).
 Huddersfield Municipal High School for Girls (Miss E. Spikes).
 4th. Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. Herbert Whittaker).
 Boots' Ladies' Choir, Nottingham (Mr. Charles E. Riley).
 6th. Barrow Madrigal Society (Mrs. T. M. Bourne).
 2nd. Sale and District Musical Society (Mr. Alfred Higson).
 The 'Manfield' Choir, Northampton (Mr. W. F. Marshman).
 Morecambe Orpheus Female Choir (Mr. Bale).
 Ancoats Girls' Institute Choir, Manchester (Miss Say Ashworth).

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS, TENOR LEAD (A).

- Tests: 'The old soldier's dream' (Cornelius).
 'Lucifer in starlight' (Bantock).
 St. Helens Glee Club (Dr. S. B. Siddall).
 Colne Orpheus Glee Union (Mr. Luther Greenwood).
 Crossley Motors, Manchester (Mr. Walter Harris).
 Dodworth, Yorks (Mr. Herbert Riding).
 Black Heath, Birmingham (Mr. E. Parker).
 4th. Todmorden (Mr. H. Lees).
 Blackpool Orpheus (Mr. J. S. Warburton).
 1st. Nelson Arion Glee Union (Mr. Lawson Berry).
 Barnsley (Mr. Fred Ward).
 Barnoldswick Glee Union (Mr. Frederic Lord).
 3rd. C.W.S. Male-Voice Choir, Manchester (Mr. Alfred Higson).
 Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. Herbert Whittaker).
 Rochdale (Mr. George Whitaker).
 Habergham Glee Union (Mr. E. Hitchon).
 2nd. The Stourbridge Institute (Mr. G. Harry Woodall).
 Brighouse (Mr. Harry Shepley).

MIXED-VOICE CHOIRS (A).

- Tests: Madrigal, 'As Vesta was from Latmos' hill descending' (Weelkes).
 'Love's Tempest' (Elgar).
 'The surrender of the soul' (Cornelius).
 Halifax Madrigal Society (Mr. H. Shepley).
 Colne Valley Vocal Union (Dr. T. E. Pearson).
 3rd. Gledholt Vocal Union, Huddersfield (Mr. John Fletcher Sykes).
 Preston Lyric Choir (Mr. Arthur Brierley).
 May Bank and District Choir, Stoke-on-Trent (Mr. Arthur Dutton).
 Cleckheaton Central Choir (Mr. Harry Bennett).
 4th. Barnoldswick Choral Society (Mr. Frederic Lord).
 Mr. Aldous's Choir, Lancaster (Mr. J. W. Aldous).
 Blackpool Orpheus Glee Society (Mr. J. S. Warburton).
 Hebburn Mixed-Voice Choir, Durham (Mr. T. E. Simpson).
 1st. Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. Herbert Whittaker).
 Morecambe Madrigal and Festival Choral Society (Mr. James Cooper).
 Barrow Madrigal Society (Mrs. T. M. Bourne).
 2nd. Sale and District Musical Society (Mr. Alfred Higson).
 Nottingham Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. C. E. Riley).

THE
ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, N.W.1.

INSTITUTED 1822.

INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER. 1830.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

PRINCIPAL—SIR ALEXANDER CAMPBELL MACKENZIE, Mus.D., LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.A.M.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC offers to students of both sexes (whether amateur or professional) a thorough training in all branches of music under the most able and distinguished Professors. In addition to receiving individual lessons in the various branches of the Curriculum, students have the advantage of attending the Orchestral, Choral, and Chamber Music Classes, and the weekly Lectures on music and musicians. Evidence of their progress is given at the Fortnightly and Public Concerts and by periodical Operatic and Dramatic Performances.

There are three Terms in the Academic year—viz., the Michaelmas Term, from Michaelmas to Christmas; the Lent Term, from early in January to Easter; and the Midsummer Term, from early in May until the end of July.

A large number of Scholarships and Prizes are founded and are competed for periodically.

Students who show special merit and ability receive the distinction of being elected by the Directors, Associates of the Institution, and are thereby entitled to the use after their names of the letters A.R.A.M. Students who distinguish themselves in the musical profession after quitting the Institution may be elected by the Directors, Fellows of the Royal Academy of Music, and are thereupon entitled to the use after their names of the letters F.R.A.M.

Subscribers have the privilege of attending the Lectures and Public Concerts and of introducing friends in proportion to the amount of their subscriptions.

An examination of persons trained independently of the Academy is held twice a year—viz., during the Summer and Christmas vacations—successful candidates at which are elected Licentiates of the Academy, and are thereupon entitled to the use after their names of the letters L.R.A.M. The syllabus is issued annually at Easter.

A Special Teachers' Training Course, to meet the requirements of the Teachers' Registration Council, has been instituted, prospectus of which is now ready.

A JUNIOR DEPARTMENT is now open.

Prospectus, entry form, and all further information may be obtained on application.

J. A. CREIGHTON,

Secretary.

Marshall & Rose

SUPERB GRAND & UPRIGHT PIANOFORTES

THE PIANOS WHICH INSPIRE

THOSE who purchase the Superb Marshall and Rose Pianoforte can always be confident that their instrument will win the highest measure of praise on account of its superlatively sympathetic qualities. The Marshall and Rose Pianoforte in the making has been treated with the same care and tenderness as a rare violin; it is the supreme outcome of years of experience and steady striving after an ideal; every part of it has literally been trained towards perfection, and the result is an instrument which is almost human in its responsiveness.

The artist who avails himself of this wonderful instrument as a means of self-expression will find that his message never fails in its appeal when given to an audience in such an exceptional manner. Real connoisseurs of Music are convinced that the magic and beauty of the immortal works of the great Composers can only be adequately realised when interpreted on the Piano of Perfection—the instrument which bears the name of MARSHALL AND ROSE.

The Marshall and Rose Grand and Upright Pianofortes can also be obtained containing THE WORLD-FAMED ANGELUS, PIANO-PLAYER, which gives you a Piano possessing every musical quality and the ability to play it.

Kindly call or write for Illustrated Catalogue No. 112 to the Manufacturers

SIR HERBERT MARSHALL & SONS, LTD.,
Angelus Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent St., London, W.

Chappell Pianos

GRAND & UPRIGHT

Not to be excelled for

TONE, TOUCH,
AND DURABILITY.

*Acknowledged by a discriminating
Public throughout the world as the
FINEST ENGLISH MAKE.*

Chappell Player-Pianos

GRAND AND UPRIGHT.

Agents in all the Principal Towns.

CHAPPELL PIANO CO.,
LIMITED.,
SHOW-ROOMS—
50, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 9999 08819 010 1

SEP 30 1921

